OPPOSITION SEEKS TO STOP 21 JUN PROCLAMATION

OW020351 Tokyo KYODO in English 0337 GMT 2 Jun 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 2 KYODO -- The Japan Socialist Party and other opposition groups Monday decided to seek a court injunction to prevent the government from making a proclamation on June 21 to call national election of the lower house of the diet. The proposed suit concerns a revised election law passed on May 22 which requires 30 days notification before the government can call an election. In announcing the three-party decision, Dietman Sadao Yamahana of the JSP, the largest opposition party, said the suit will be filed under the names of residents in Ehime, Wakayama and Oita Prefectures, where constituency boundaries were changed as a result of the law. The two other parties joining the JSP move are Komeito and Democratic Socialist Party.

The parties claim that the residents in these three prefectures were not properly notified when the government promulgated the law on May 23. The May 23 promulgation was timed to set balloting day on July 6 for simultaneous elections of the upper and lower houses of the Diet, with June 21 slated as the proclamation date to comply with the 15-day lower house campaign law.

The government has insisted there was no irregularity in the promulgation procedure for the revised election law. Apart from redrawing the boundaries of three electoral constituencies, the legislation also created one additional seat for the 511-member lower house and transferred seven seats from comparatively sparsely populated rural areas to the big cities.

LDP, OPPOSITION PARTIES COMMENT ON ELECTION

[Text] Tokyo, June 2 KYODO -- The ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) and opposition parties strongly attacked each other in statements made Monday on the dissolution of the lower house and the simultaneous elections of the upper and lower houses on July 6. The LDP issued a statement in which it pledged itself to win a victory in the forthcoming election and fulfill its responsibility as the party of government. The statement read as follows:

"The dissolution of the lower house Monday and eventual general election on July 6 are aimed at rectifying the unconstitutional state (resulting from unfair distribution of seats) of the House of Representatives and at opening up a new path for the progress of national politics by refreshing the public consciousness and appealing to the consensus of the nation at this historical turning-point with the 21st century just around the corner.

"The opposition parties, denouncing the dissolution of the lower house as an LDP move in pursuit of party interests, boycotted the plenary session of the House of Representatives -- an outrageous act which no political party should take. The attitude of the opposition parties, which fear the judgement of the people and which have forgotten the noble cause of parliamentary democracy, reflects nothing but their own party interests.

"The LDP is firmly resolved to win the forthcoming general election at any cost and fulfill its responsibility as the ruling party."

On behalf of the New Liberal Club, whose eight lower house members have been in coalition with the LDP, Secretary-General Toshio Yamaguchi made the following statement:

"The principal aim of the dissolution of the lower house is rectification of the unconstitutioinal state of the House of Representatives following the enactment of the lower house seats redistribution law. The steps taken by the LDP to dissolve the lower house are not necessarily justifiable, and we believe that the voters will hand down a proper judgement on this matter. The forthcoming election is the first general election to be held since our party entered into coalition with the LDP.

"We are confident that our New Liberal Club has contributed greatly to stabilizing the political situation in Japan and improving the nation's economy through coalition with the LDP."

Pledging to put an end to the LDP's 30-year rule, the No 1 opposition Japan Socialist Party said:

"The forced dissolution of the lower house is an outrageous act which leaves the greatest blot in the history of Japanese constitutional politics. Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, believing that his LDP will be able to win a general election if it is held simultaneously with the House of Councillors election, is forcing upon the people the unconstitutional simultaneous elections of both houses in an attempt to build up a system of power politics. He is trying to escalate reactionary politics by effecting a big indirect tax increase, a sharp increase in defense expenditure and mal-revision of the constitution.

"By joining hands firmly with other opposition parties, we will do our utmost to deal a lethal blow to Porime Minister Nakasone and the LDP in the forthcoming general election. We are resolved to take the opportunity offered by the forthcoming election to realize political reform and a sweeping change in policies."

The No. 2 opposition party, Komeito, did not issue a statement. But the other main center party, the Democratic Socialist Party, echoed the JSP's criticisms in the following statement:

"The dissolution of the House of Representatives is an outrageous act, unprecedented in the history of constitutional politics. The general election to be held simultaneously with the upper house election is a vicious election quite outside the constitution. We severely criticize the Nakasone cabinet's reckles action. No political vacuum can be allowed at this time of economic slump caused by the sharp appreciation of the yen. We will fight resolutely in order to establish political ethics and to bring about policy changes.

"We will fight the election campaign by proposing powerful measures to cope with the abnormal rise of the yen, and stressing the need to prevent increased taxation."

Chairman Tetsuzo Fuwa of the Japan Communist Party denounced the other opposition parties as well as the LDP:

"The dissolution of the lower house at the start of the extraordinary Diet session is clear proof that the Nakasone cabinet and LDP place party interests above all else.

"All the recent developments shows that Japan's parliamentary politics is turning into Japanese-style fascism. Our party calls on all voters to hand down a clear-cut judgement on the maladministration of the Nakasone cabinet and LDP, as well as on the anticommunist opposition parties which are assisting the reactionary government by advocating 'alliance' with the LDP."

Secretary General Shogo Abe of the small United Social Democratic Party also issued a strongly-worded statement: "The crime committed by Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nadasone in pursuit of his egoistic interests and ambition denies the universal course of democratic politics. As long as the Nadasone administration which exercises power unlawfully continues, Japan will remain on course to becoming a new totalitarian nation."

NAKASONE DISAVOWS THIRD LDP PRESIDENTIAL TERM

[Text] Tokyo, June 3 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nadasone Tuesday denied that he will seek a third two-year term of office as leader of the Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP). Nadasone, in a brief exchange with reporters at his office, said that a third term is impossible in reply to a question on whether he would aim at staying on after October if he scored a major victory in the July 6 elections for both houses of the Diet. Nakasone, whose second two-year term of office as LDP president expires in October, has so far maintained that he will abide by party rules which preclude a consecutive third term.

ABE 'VOWS' TO REGAIN NORTHERN ISLANDS

[Text] Tokyo, June 3 KYODO -- Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe vowed Tuesday Japan will tenaciously negotiate with the Soviet Union for the return of four Soviet-occupied northern islands to Japanese control. He made the statement during a regular cabinet meeting in reference to his recent trip to Moscow.

Abe reported to his fellow cabinet ministers that Japan is negotiating with the Soviets on resumption, possibly this summer, of visits to family graves on the northern islands by former residents. The foreign minister also told the cabinet session that his talks with Soviet leaders in Moscow were beneficial in that he underscored the importance of dialogue rather than confrontation in international politics.

Abe discussed with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze the territorial dispute, East-West relations and regional conflict, among other topics. These talks, Abe told the cabinet meeting, represented the first full-scale political dialogue between a Tokyo summit member country and the Soviet Union.

RALLIES TO OPPOSE NEW JERSEY CALL AT SASEBO

OW301425 Tokyo KYODO in English 1420 GMT 30 May 86

[Text] Nagasaki, May 30 KYODO -- Labor organizations in Nagasaki Prefecture decided Friday to organize a mass rally of at least 10,000 people on July 20 to oppose port calls by the reactivated U.S. battleship New Jersey, which is expected to visit Japan this summer.

The 45,000-ton New Jersey is fitted with Tomahawk cruise missiles which can be loaded with nuclear warheads.

Representatives of the labor organizations opposed to port calls by nuclear-armed vessels, who met in the port city of Sasebo Friday, decided to organize a rally of 10,000 people on July 20, to hold mass protest rallies and sea demonstrations at the time of the New Jersey's call at Sasebo, and to ask citizen's organizations to join in the campaign.

A senior U.S. Navy officer who visited Sasebo in April expressed a wish for the New Jersey to call at Japanese ports, and sources close to the U.S. Navy reportedly have disclosed that it will call at Sasebo and Yokosuka, near Tokyo, in the middle of August.

TAKESHITA SCORES YEUTTER EXCHANGE RATE COMMENTS

[Text] Tokyo, June 3 KYODO -- Finance Minister Noboru Takeshita Tuesday severely criticized comments by U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter on the yen-dollar exchange rate. Takeshita said at a press conference following a cabinet meeting, "I don't think (Yeutter's) comments were responsible. Such remarks merely trigger speculative dealings (on the foreign exchange market)."

Yeutter hinted Monday in Boston that the main cause of the dollar's recent upturn against the yen is the Bank of Japan's intervention on the foreign exchange market to drive up the dollar ahead of the upcoming simultaneous election in July 6 of both houses of the Japanese Diet (parliament). Yeutter also suggested in the international monetary conference, an annual meeting of commercial and central bankers, that the dollar's recent appreciation is likely to be temporary and it will resume its downward momentum after the snap general election.

Takeshita said, "Japan's economic measures worked out to cope with the yen's rise will help restructure the Japanese economy" from its heavy dependence on exports to an emphasis on domestic demand, indicating that the government will implement measures to stimulate the domestic economy to cushion the adverse effects of the yen's rise.

Bank of Japan Governor Satoshi Sumita, speaking in Kyoto, said he cannot understand why Yeutter made such remarks.

Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone agreed in a meeting last week with Masayuki Fujio, policy board chairman of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) that the LDP in its election campaign would pledge to take stimulative economic measures to counter the adverse effects on the national economy of the yen's rise.

The dollar closed at 176.30 yen in Tokyo Monday, up 4.25 yen from 172.05 yen at Friday's finish. But it held rather weak in New York, partly due to Yeutter's remarks the same day and fell back sharply in Tokyo Tuesday morning.

'SUMMARY' OF KIM IL-SONG LECTURE ON PARTY

[Text] Pyongyang June 2 (KCNA) -- Follows a summary of "Historical Experience in the Building of the Workers' Party of Korea," the text of a lecture authored by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea, on the occasion of the 40th anniversary of the founding of Kim Il-song Higher Party School (June 1, 1946):

Our party has covered over the past 40 years and more a proud road of victory and glory and accomplished great exploits which will shine long in history. Through a protracted revolutionary struggle, our party has gained undisputed support and trust of the popular masses and has grown in strength and developed into an invincible party united like a monolith and possessed of rich experience and tested leadership.

Our revolution has entered a new, high stage where the whole of society is being modelled on the chuche idea and our party has laid solid organisational and ideological foundations for carrying the noble and cause of chuche to accomplishment through generations. On the occasion of the 40th anniversary of the founding of the higher party school, I am going to elaborate on a few questions on the historical experience in our party building to be a help for the instruction and education at the school.

1. The Struggle of the Korean Communists for Founding the Party

Ours is a party which has grown out of deep historical roots. It was founded in 1945. But the struggle for the founding of a party had been going on from long ago in our country. The communist movement was steered into the orbit of development in our country when Marxism-Leninism was disseminated and the working class actively proceeded into the arena of struggle under the influence of the October Socialist Revolution in Russia. But the early communist movement in our country was handicapped by serious drawbacks and limitedness.

The participants in the early communist movement, far from going among the popular masses and rousing them to the revolutionary struggle by educating and rallying them, engaged themselves in rhetorical exercises never helpful to the revolution and in power strife for "hegemony," divorced from the popular masses. Captive to flunkeyism, they busily ran about to get the recognition of the Comintern, each section claiming its being "orthodox group" and true "Marxist group," instead of thinking of firmly building the party by their own efforts. So the early communist movement in our country did not take a smooth road of development but suffered throes and turns and twists. The Korean Communist Party founded in 1925 could not properly play the function of a vanguard organisation of revolution and, worse still, could not exist long under suppression by the Japanese imperialists.

Our young communists of new generation drew the serious lesson that they could never make revolution, if they followed in the footsteps of the early communists and chose a new road of revolution quite different from this.

We were firmly convinced that, if we were to make revolution, we should go deep among the masses of the people and struggle in reliance upon them, and build a party and lead the revolution by our own efforts and in conformity with the conditions of our country and then we would naturally win recognition and sympathy from the people of other countries, and we struggled with this conviction. This was the new revolutionary line chosen by our young communists of new generation and the policy of founding a revolutionary party.

We hewed the path of revolution and waged struggle independently by creatively applying Marxism-Leninism to the specific conditions of our country and, in this course, acquired the chuche idea, a new revolutionary idea. The chuche idea, along with Marxism- Leninism, became the unswerving guiding compass of our revolution.

The Down-With-Imperialism Union (DIU) we organized in 1926 was a forward organization for leading the revolutionary cause of chuche to victory and the first true communist revolutionary organisation in our country. The formation of DIU marked the starting point of the building of a revolutionary party of new type in our country and the glorious roots of our party began to grow from it.

At the historical Kalun meeting in 1930 we laid down a chuche-oriented revolutionary line and, according to it, we launched into a struggle for forming the basic party organisations and formed the first party organisation with young communists of new generation, while making preparations for an armed struggle. The first party organisation formed in Kalun was the glorious origin of our party and the prototype of the party organisations brought into being in succession in the ensuing period. We rapidly expanded the party organisations with the first one as the mother body.

The struggle for founding the party took on more full-fledged dimensions with the start of the anti-Japanese armed struggle. The anti-Japanese armed struggle opened a new decisive phase in the struggle for party founding. It became possible to massively train the organisational backbone for the founding of the party and to achieve unbreakable unity and cohesion of the communist ranks and lay a solid mass foundation for party founding in the flames of the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

With the rapid expansion of the party organisations and intensification of the armed struggle, we formed the party committee of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army (KPRA) for a unified guidance of the party organisations at various levels and successful party leadership of the anti-Japanese armed struggle. We expanded the party organisations to broader areas at home and abroad with the KPRA party committee as its core.

Thus we waged a strenuous struggle for founding a revolutionary party of the working class in the whole period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle. In this course the essential drawbacks that had marred the early communist movement in our country were overcome and solid foundations for founding a revolutionary party were laid. The organizational and ideological foundations for party founding were built in the course of the arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

What is important in laying the organisational and ideological foundations for party founding is to form party organisations, set up a strict system of the organisational guidance of the party and build up a strong organisational backbone of the party by rearing communist hardcores.

In the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, we formed party organisations at various levels including the basic ones and established a unified organisational guidance system for them. We indicated a policy of founding the party in such a manner as to form its basic organisations first after sufficient preparations and expand and strengthen them, not by proclaiming a party centre, and struggled to implement it.

We reared many communist core elements in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

A large number of core communists we brought up in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle became a strong backbone force for the founding of our party. What is also important in laying the organisational and ideological foundations for the founding of the party is to firmly guarantee the purity of the communist ranks and their unity in ideology and will.

We waged a tireless struggle for this purpose during the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

Building a solid mass foundation is important in laying the organisational and ideological foundations for the founding of the party. The Association for the Restoration of the Fatherland was founded on May 5, 1936. This was a historic event of epochal significance in strengthening the mass foundation of the party. With its founding, it became possible to closely unite broad segments of the masses under the banner of national liberation.

As a result, a new turn was effected in realising party leadership over the masses of various strata and the mass foundation for party founding was consolidated still further. With the firm organisational and ideological foundations for founding the party built in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, full preparations were made to found a revolutionary party of the working-class any time when a favourable situation was created in our country.

The brilliant revolutionary traditions of our party were established in the process of the hard-fought anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle. The ideological system of chuche was established, and undying revolutionary feats and experiences of struggle were achieved and the revolutionary method of work and popular style of work created in the bloody struggle of anti-Japanese revolution.

After the liberation of the country the revolutionary traditions of the anti-Japanese struggle served as powerful assets for founding our party and developing and strengthening it and as stout historical roots of our party and revolution.

We hastened the preparations for founding the party by sending communist hardcores trained in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle to all parts of the country to readjust and expand the local party organisations and unite the communists who were active dispersedly and at last founded the Central Organising Committee of the Communist Party of North Korea, a powerful central guidance body of the party, on October 10, 1945, and declared its birth to the whole world.

The foundation of our party was the birth of the first revolutionary party of chuche-type in history and a shining fruition of the protracted struggle of the Korean communists for founding a revolutionary party of the working-class.

2. The WPK Is a Revolutionary Party of Chuche Type.

The Workers' Party of Korea is a Marxist-Leninist party of chuche type, a working class party of new type. It may be characterized in one word as a revolutionary party of chuche. The WPK is guided by the chuche idea and struggles to accomplish the cause of chuche. It is a revolutionary party of the working class, a mass party of the working people.

Its guiding idea is the chuche idea.

The chuche idea is a man-centred revolutionary world outlook and a revolutionary doctrine for the chajusong of the popular masses.

The main mission of the WPK is to struggle for the victory of the cause of chuche.

The cause of chuche is the cause of the popular masses which was pioneered and has developed under the banner of the chuche idea and it is a noble cause of realising the chajusong of the popular masses by applying the chuche idea.

The immediate revolutionary task facing our party at present in accomplishing the cause of chuche is to win the complete victory of socialism in the northern half of the republic and achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

For the complete victory of socialism, it is essential to hasten the revolutionization, working-classization and intellectualization of the whole society and further solidify the material and technical foundations of socialism and consolidate and develop the socialist system still further.

To achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country is the most urgent fighting target of our party.

For this purpose, we must struggle to further strengthen the revolutionary forces in the northern half of the republic, powerfully support the just, patriotic struggle of the South Korean people and create an international climate favourable for our revolution.

The ultimate revolutionary task of our party in carrying the cause of chuche to completion is to build communist society by modelling the whole society on the chuche idea. Our party set this as its supreme programme and has dynamically pushed ahead with the work for transforming man, society and nature as required by the chuche idea.

Our party struggles for the victory of the world revolution, while successfully fulfilling the Korean revolution. Making the whole world independent is an important task for accelerating the world revolution. An independent world is a world completely freed [of] imperialism and colonialism, a world where all the countries and nations enjoy full sovereignty.

Another important task for the victory of the world revolution is to forcefully push ahead with the international communist movement. For the victory of the world revolution the working class and people of different countries of the world should strengthen international solidarity and cooperation and wage a powerful struggle against imperialism.

Under the banner of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism and the banner of independence against imperialism our party will closely unite with the fraternal communist and workers' parties and other progressive political parties in the world and continue to vigorously struggle against imperialism and colonialism and all manners of aggression and subjugation and for the chajusong of the people.

Either in view of its nature and mission or in view of its mode of activity and socio-historical position, the working-class party is fundamentally different from other political parties. Therefore, it should be built on the basis of fundamentals and principle proper to its nature and character.

The working-class party should conduct the party building and party activity in such a manner as to fully ensure the political leadership of the whole of society, always keeping a tight hold on the work with people. This is the fundamental principle of the building of a working-class party. From the beginning, our party defined the work with people as the main point of the party work and has solved all the problems arising in the party building and party activity through work with people.

In the past our party firmly ensured the political leadership of the whole of society, with main stress on the work with people. By applying the principle of the building of a revolutionary party, and thereby it has been able to truly defend the independent rights and interests of our people and victoriously advance the revolution and construction.

The revolutionary principle must be firmly adhered to in the building of a party, if it is to be strengthened and developed organisationally and ideologically into a solid and mighty invincible party, a revolutionary party leading to victory the cause of the chajusong of the masses of the people.

The basic principle maintained by our party in party building is, firstly, to establish a monolithic ideological system in the party, secondly, for the party to form a complete whole with the masses and, thirdly, to ensure inheritance in party building. The revolutionary party of the working class should establish a monolithic ideological system in the party.

To establish a monolithic ideological system in party building means to imbue the whole party with one revolutionary idea and ensure unitary leadership on this basis. The working-class party should under all circumstances be organised and guided on the basis of one idea.

By realising the uniformity of the idea based on the guiding idea of the party, it should make entire party members think and act only in accordance with the idea and intention of the party and make the whole party act as one under the undivided leadership of the party Central Committee.

The working-class party should be united in one body with the masses of the people.

For this purpose, it is required to build the party into a mass party of the working masses, thoroughly defend their interests in its activities and faithfully serve them. The working-class party should ensure the inheritance in its building. This means to purely carry forward the party's lineage in the whole course of party building and consistently adhere to the important principles of party building.

What is basic in carrying forward the cause of party building through generations is to inherit the uniformity of the party's idea and leadership.

The unitary nature of the idea of the party and its leadership should be invariably carried forward and ensured in the whole course of the development of the party and society.

It is very important to defend, inherit and develop the revolutionary traditions of the party in carrying forward the cause of party building through generations. The working-class party should set it as an important task for the building of the party to carry forward and develop the revolutionary traditions and comprehensively carry forward all contents of these traditions achieved, developed and enriched in the long course of the revolutionary struggle since the beginning of the revolution.

Our party has in the past been able to pioneer a new road of party building and strengthen and develop our party into a revolutionary party of chuche as today by firmly adhering to the fundamentals and principle of the building of a revolutionary party and strictly applying them to the building and activities of the party.

3. Organisation and Ideological Consolidation of the Party Ranks.

To consolidate the party ranks organisationally and ideologically is the main content of the building of a party and a central task of its work. What is most important in the organisation and ideological consolidation of the party ranks is to establish a monolithic ideological system in the whole party.

From the first days of its foundation, our party set it forth as the basic line of party building to establish a monolithic ideological system and has tirelessly fought to this end. The main struggle waged by our party for the establishment of the monolithic ideological system was to establish chuche.

Our party's struggle to establish chuche was a struggle to apply the chuche idea in all domains of the revolution and construction and, at the same time, a struggle to overcome all descriptions of evil ideas including flunkeyism and dogmatism and to dye the whole party in the chuche idea, the revolutionary idea of our party.

The tendencies of flunkeyism and dogmatism once manifested themselves to no small measure in our party for the peculiarities of the historical development of our country and its complicated circumstances. Those tainted with flunkeyism and dogmatism tried to mechanically model after others' thing, not relying on the lines and policies of our party, and to depend on others, not believing in our own strength.

Since the first days of leading the revolution and construction, our party has strenuously struggled to repudiate flunkeyism and dogmatism and establish chuche and, in the post-war period in particular, put forward a decisive policy to establish chuche and fought resolutely to implement it.

Our party has strengthened ideological work so that all cadres and party members might deeply study the specific conditions of our country and work in reliance upon our party's line and policy and strove to establish among the functionaries the traits of solving all problems from an independent and creative stand. Through the struggle to establish chuche, a great turn took place in setting up the monolithic ideological system of the party.

The main struggle of our party for the establishment of this system was also a struggle against all hues of sectarian tendencies including factionalism. With the object of uniting with as many people as possible, our party maintained the policy of magnanimously enlisting, educating and remoulding even those who had participated in the sectarian strife or been influenced by it, if they repented their errors and refrained from a factional act. But factionalists gravely obstructed the unity and cohesion of the party, continuing their sectarian acts, not giving up their past evil practice, in disregard of the party's constant education and repeated advice.

We waged a powerful all-party ideological struggle to root out the ideological after-effects of factionalism, while removing the factionalists organisationally.

The fifth plenary meeting of the party Central Committee which was held during the Fatherland Liberation War, in August, 1956, its plenary meeting held in the post-war period and the conference of the party in March 1958 were meetings of historical significance in repudiating factionalism and strengthening the unity and cohesion of the party.

After liquidating factionalism, our party fought relentlessly against anti-party revisionists to lift the unity and cohesion of our party to a new stage. Through the protracted struggle to establish the monolithic ideological system, our party has become a mighty party the whole of which is dyed in the chuche idea and closely united ideologically and purposefully on its basis, and a revolutionary party all the organisations and members of which act as one under the undivided leadership of the party centre.

We should further intensify the work of establishing the monolithic ideological system of the party in keeping with the deepening and developing revolution, and continue it generation after generation. The core in establishing the monolithic ideological system of the party is to make the cadres and party members cherish loyalty to the party as their firm creed.

We should make all cadres and party members cherish loyalty to the party as the revolutionary faith, wholeheartedly uphold the party in any complicated situation and adversity, defend it politically and ideologically, unconditionally accept and carry to accomplishment the lines and policies of the party. And we should make them firmly arm themselves with the world outlook of chuche, resolutely safeguard the unity and cohesion of our party achieved on the basis of the chuche idea, and loyally uphold the unitary leadership of the party centre.

In view of the practical experience of party building, we should continue to successfully conduct the work of firmly building the party ranks organisationally, educating cadres and party members ideologically and enhancing the function and role of the party organisations. It is highly important to consolidate the party ranks organizationally.

The ranks of cadres should be solidly built up for this purpose. Primary attention must be directed to increasing the proportion of cadres of working-class origin in building the ranks of cadres. And it is important to properly combine old and young cadres.

What is important in personal affairs is to thoroughly revolutionize the cadres and steadily improve their political and practical qualifications. What is also important in personal affairs is to properly establish a cadre training system and rear reserve cadres under a far-reaching plan.

If the party ranks are to be organizationally consolidated, they should be made a crack unit. Making the party ranks a crack unit means to build the party ranks as a collective of elite revolutionaries. The important points in this are to guide all the party members work and live as required by the party rules and bring up all the party members to be hand-picked elements by solidly building the hardcore ranks of the party cells and enhancing their role. Proper growth of the party is important in making the party ranks a crack unit.

The party organizations should understand and pick up the reserves of the party members among the working class and other strata of working masses, systematically educate them and admit qualified persons to the party in time according to the individual procedure of admission. In particular, the party organizations should admit many people of young generation firmly armed with the chuche idea and overflowing with revolutionary fighting spirit and vigor. Democracy should be given play and revolutionary discipline be established within the party in order to organizationally strengthen its ranks.

For consolidating the party ranks organizationally and ideologically the party life of its members must be intensified. For this the party organizations should correctly organize the party life and well guide it. Ideological education should be intensified among the cadres and party members in order to consolidate the party ranks organizationally and ideologically. Education in monolithic ideology is what our party always grasps as the main point in ideological work. The monolithic ideology of our party is the chuche idea. We should strengthen education in the chuche idea among the party members and working people to make them thoroughly establish the revolutionary world outlook of chuche and deeply grasp the revolutionary theory and leadership method of chuche. Education in party policy should be deepened to let all the party members and working people correctly understand the essence and validity of the party policy and make it their unshakable faith.

We should strengthen education in the revolutionary traditions among the party members and working people so that they may firmly arm themselves with the revolutionary traditions of our party and thoroughly apply them in their work and life. Revolutionary and communist education should be deepened to train all the party members and working people to be true communists.

We should educate the party members and working people to warmly support and encourage the revolutionary struggle of the world progressive peoples for peace and democracy, national independence and socialism, strengthen the friendship and solidarity with them, and actively struggle to make the whole world independent and win the victory of the world revolution.

By waging a powerful struggle against the ideological and cultural infiltration of imperialism, we should prevent our life from being infected by the reactionary bourgeois ideas and corrupt capitalist way of life spread by the imperialists. Ensuring the unitary guidance of the ideological work by the party Central Committee is very important.

The party organizations at all levels should organize and conduct all the ideological work in conformity with the intention and demand of the party under the unitary leadership of the party Central Committee. The function and role of the party organizations should be raised for the organizational and ideological consolidation of the party ranks.

Success of the party work in thoroughly establishing the monolithic ideological system of the party, organizationally consolidating the party ranks and educating the cadres and party members entirely depends on how the party organizations perform their function and role. Only when the function and role of party organizations at all levels are raised, can the revolutionary struggle and constructive work be successfully pushed forward.

In order to raise the function and role of the party organizations, they, at all levels, should admirably conduct their work to suit their positions and duties. To raise the leading function of the party committees is important in enhancing the function and role of the party organizations.

4. Unity and Cohesion of the Party and Popular Masses.

To achieve the unity and cohesion of the party and the popular masses is an important principle in the building of a working-class party and a decisive guarantee for the strengthening of the party and the revolutionary ranks. We have successfully achieved the unity and cohesion of the party and the popular masses by vigorously struggling to apply the principle of the party building on making the party a harmonious whole with the popular masses.

An important matter in achieving this unity and cohesion is to build the party to be a mass party of the working people.

We put forward the policy of developing the Communist Party into a mass party of the working people as required by the situation which prevailed in our country after its liberation and by the development of the party itself, and successfully put it into effect in a short time.

We merged the Communist Party with the New Democratic Party to found the Workers' Party in August 1946. As a result, our party has been developed and strengthened into a mass party organized with progressive elements of workers, peasants and working intellectuals.

The merger of the two parties made it possible for our party to strike roots deep among the broad masses and unite the revolutionary forces more closely around it. The founding of the Workers' Party prevented the split of the working masses, strengthened the alliance of workers, peasants and working intellectuals and further enhanced the role of the popular masses in the revolutionary struggle and constructive work. This is a vivid manifestation of the validity and vitality of the line of building a mass party and a valuable success of weighty significance in the history of our party building.

It is important in achieving the unity and cohesion of the party and the popular masses to form working people's organizations, peripheral organizations of the party, and steadily enhance their function and role.

After liberation our party, basing itself on the experience gained in building organizations of the masses in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, advanced the policy of forming working people's organizations according to different classes and circles and embracing them in a uniform way. We formed working people's organizations in a short time according to different classes and circles and united factory and office workers into the trade union, peasants into peasants' union and women into the women's union in disregard of their party affiliations and religious beliefs. In particular, our party directed great efforts to organizing a democratic youth union and uniting young people, the future master of the country, in a uniform way.

After the formation of working people's organizations, it is important to develop and strengthen them in keeping with the developing revolution. Our party, as required by the changed reality, dissolved the peasants' union, an organization of private peasants, for further advance, organized the Union of Agricultural Working People and developed and strengthened the democratic youth union into the League of Socialist Working Youth.

Our party has constantly strengthened its leadership over the working people's organizations in conformity with their characteristics. We have guided the working people's organizations to thoroughly establish the party's monolithic ideological system within them and steadfastly defend and thoroughly implement the party's line and policy.

Our party has always indicated correct directions of their work and ways of their implementation in conformity with their character and encouraged the party organizations to boldly entrust work to them, actively help them and properly provide them with working conditions. An important thing in achieving the unity and cohesion of the party and the popular masses is to do well the work of the united front.

Our party set it as its main political line to form a united front in alliance with other political parties and social organizations, patriotic and democratic, and founded a democratic people's republic on this basis, and struggled for its implementation.

In establishing a people's government and carrying out democratic reforms, our party took a joint action on its own initiative with other democratic political parties and social organizations and, on this basis, formed the Democratic National United Front, a standing united front body, in July 1946. Our party invigorated the work of the united front in keeping with the change of the situation in the country.

Our party formed the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland in June 1949 for the purpose of rallying into a democratic force all the progressive political parties, social organizations and patriotic people in the North and the South of Korea who love the country and desire its reunification.

In strengthening the work of the united front, our party has invariably adhered to the principle of maintaining independence and playing a leading role. Our party held fast to the principle of directing main efforts to the united front of the rank and file and achieving, on this basis, the united front of the upper strata. In this way it could achieve the united front smoothly.

The experience of our party in the work of the united front is a most priceless wherewithal in the struggle to achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country by the concerted efforts of democratic political parties, social organizations and people of all walks of life in the North and the South of Korea and all the compatriots abroad.

To properly conduct work with the masses of various circles is also important in achieving the unity and cohesion of the party and the popular masses. Our party has firmly built up the ranks of the working class organisationally and ideologically and energetically struggled to revolutionize them.

It has strengthened work with peasants, taking roots deep in the countryside. It has directed deep attention to work with working intellectuals including scientists and technicians.

As the revolution and construction deepen and develop onto a higher stage and the role of science and technology grows in the development of society, work with intellectuals becomes a more important problem.

What is important in this work is to correctly solve the problem of old intellectuals who had served the old society. Our party put forward the policy of remoulding them to be intellectuals who serve the party and the working class, and persistently educated them.

We educated and tempered intellectuals in a revolutionary way by strengthening ideological education and the life among them and made sure that they always found themselves in the reality and received the revolutionary influence of the working class through active education and has turned the whole society into a bright and harmonious, big family.

The mass line should be implemented in the party's activities in order to steadily ensure the unity and cohesion of the party and the popular masses. Our party has always defended the interests of the working masses and devoted everything to their wellbeing, putting it up as the supreme principle of its activities to defend their interests. Our party took into consideration the demand of the people first in adopting a decision and thought of their convenience first in building a factory. The country was very short of steel right after its liberation. But we thought first of the health and life of workers and blew up the oven of the first-stage iron processing of the Songjin steel works.

The role of the working masses should be lifted in the revolution and construction for the implementation of the mass line. Our party has fulfilled vast tasks of the revolution and construction of lifting [the] creative role of the masses at all times and overcome difficulties and trials on the road ahead of it in reliance upon their strength. We should thoroughly implement the revolutionary mass line, firmly grasping it as ever.

5. The Party's Leadership Over the Revolution and Construction.

The working class party is the general staff of the revolution. The destiny of the revolutionary struggle and constructive work hinges entirely upon the leadership role of the party and the party's leadership is the basic factor for victory in the revolution and construction. The party's leadership over the revolution and construction is political leadership.

The essence of the political leadership of the party lies in leading the revolutionary struggle and constructive work according to the policy, and leading them by the method of rousing the people to activity through political work.

From the first days of its founding, our party has correctly led our revolutionary struggle and constructive work and garnered precious successes and experience in this course. Our party has mapped out all lines and policies independently in conformity with the specific conditions of our country. Our party has particularly guarded against subjectivism in working out lines and policies.

Our party has always found itself deep among the masses, correctly grasped their aspiration and demand and comprehensively analyzed concrete realities and drawn up lines and policies to suit them. Our party not only correctly worked out lines and policies but also correctly organized and directed the struggle for their implementation.

What is important for the party in leading the revolution and construction is to correctly solve the problem of power and push forward the revolutionary struggle and constructive work on its basis. The problem of power is the basic one in the revolution. The revolution is the struggle for chajusong and chajusong is ensured by the state power.

As far back as in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle we, basing ourselves on a scientific analysis of the task of our revolution and the socio-class relations in our country, put forward the chuche-oriented line on building the people's government on the basis of the worker-peasant alliance led by the working class and relying on the united front of broad popular masses.

After liberation our party creditably settled the problem of power by establishing the people's government.

With the founding of the people's government our people became the genuine masters of the state and society with power in their hands for the first time in history and came to have a powerful weapon of the revolution and construction. Our party has correctly led the revolutionary struggle and constructive work taking the people's government as a weapon.

After liberation we were faced with the task to carry out the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution.

Considering the class relations and land ownership in our countryside and the age-long desire of our peasants for land, our party correctly defined land to be confiscated and carried out the agrarian reform by the method of confiscating landlords' lands free of charge and sharing them to landless or land hungry peasants free of charge.

In the wake of the agrarian reform our party nationalized the main industries and enforced all other democratic reforms to comprehensively ensure the democratic freedom and rights of the working people and, thereby successfully fulfilled the tasks of the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution and solidly laid the revolutionary democratic base in the northern half of the country.

Our party put forward the line of pushing ahead with the socialist revolution in full swing in the April theses of 1955. After the war our party advanced the policy of reorganizing the form of economy on socialist lines prior to the technical transformation of the rural economy and powerfully pushed ahead with the agricultural cooperativisation movement.

Our party made sure that the principle of voluntariness was strictly abided by in leading the agricultural cooperativisation movement. There we rejected a coercive method and set an experimental stage to show the peasants the superiority of the cooperative economy through practical examples while strengthening ideological education among them so that they may join the cooperative economy voluntarily.

In admitting peasants of various circles to the cooperative economy on the principle of voluntariness, our party enforced the class policy of relying firmly on the poor peasants, strengthening alliance with the middle peasants, restricting and gradually remoulding the rich peasants.

The agricultural cooperativisation movement in our country was successfully completed in a short period of 4-5 years.

Considering the characteristics of the capitalist trade and industry of our country in realising the socialist transformation of private trade and industry, our party advanced the policy of not expropriating the capitalist traders and industrialists but transforming them and successfully realised the socialist transformation of the private trade and industry by the method of embracing them into various forms of cooperative economy.

With the successful realisation of the socialist transformation of the old production relations in town and country an advanced socialist system free from exploitation and oppression was established in the northern half of our country.

After the establishment of the socialist system, survivals of the old society remain in the ideological, technical and cultural domains and, due to this, various differences including distinctions in classes and labour remain in the socialist society.

Our party defined the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural, as the main content of the revolution which must be carried out in the socialist society and as the task of the uninterrupted revolution which must be fulfilled till the building of communism and has vigorously carried on those three revolutions. An important matter in the party's leadership over the revolution and construction is to strengthen the party guidance of economic construction.

Economic construction is one of the most important revolutionary tasks confronting the party of the working class in power.

Our party put forward the line of building an independent national economy, applying the chuche idea in economic construction, and has correctly guided the struggle to implement it. In the building of an independent national economy our party has firmly adhered to the basic line of economic construction on giving priority to the development of the heavy industry, while upgrading light industry and agriculture simultaneously.

As we held fast to this line, we have been able to lay the solid foundation of an independent national economy and convert our country, once a backward agrarian state, into a socialist industrial power in a short time.

In the future, too, we should wage a vigorous struggle to realise the chuche-orientation, modernisation and scientisation of the national economy, while firmly adhering to the basic line of economic construction -- giving priority to the growth of the heavy industry, while simultaneously developing light industry and agriculture.

An important task facing the working-class party to push ahead with economic construction after the establishment of socialist relations of production is to correctly solve the question of economic management. Our party has successfully solved the question of economic management by creating the taean work system in conformity with the characteristics of the socialist society and the demand of the developing reality.

Along with the system of industrial management, our party has established a new system of agricultural guidance and a scientific planning system. What is important in the party's leadership over the revolution and construction is to build revolutionary armed forces and realise its guidance of them.

An important problem arising in the building of revolutionary armed forces is to build armed forces to be those of the party boundlessly loyal to the party and the revolution. The fundamental principle which must be consistently adhered to in the building of revolutionary armed forces is to realise self-reliance in defense.

Our party has energetically struggled to build revolutionary armed forces by applying the revolutionary principle of self-reliance in defence. Basing ourselves on the experience gained in the building of revolutionary armed forces in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, we organized the People's Army, a reliable defender of the party and the revolution, to develop and strengthen the Korean People's Revolutionary Army into a regular Army after liberation.

Our party set forth a military line, the keynote of which is to turn the entire Army into an Army of cadres, modernise it, arm all people and fortify the whole country and has implemented it, thereby building up our People's Army to be a one-beats-a-hundred revolutionary Army, arming the entire people and turning the whole country into an impregnable fortress.

In order to realize self-reliance in national defence, it is imperative to properly combine economic construction with defence upbuilding. We are able to produce and supply by ourselves necessary weapons and combat and technical materiel as we have constantly cemented the material and technical foundations of [the] defence industry.

The working-class party should conduct external activities and ensure a uniform guidance of the foreign affairs of the country as a whole. The consistent basic idea of our party in external activities is independence, friendship and peace.

It is of momentous importance to hold fast to the chajusong in relations with foreign countries. We have used our own brain in independently shaping all foreign policies in the interests of our people and in conformity with the demand of the revolution, solved all problems arising in international relations according to our own judgement and opinion and developed relations with other parties and countries on the principle of complete equality and mutual respect.

We have made tireless efforts to strengthen the unity and cooperation of the socialist forces and the international communist movement.

We are actively striving to strengthen the Non-Aligned Movement and develop the friendly and cooperative relations with the third world countries.

We have been on good terms even with the capitalist countries which respect our sovereignty and are friendly towards our country and are developing economic and cultural exchange with them.

We resolutely support the struggle of the peoples of all countries against imperialism and for independence. Our party is waging a struggle for durable peace and security of the world.

It will constantly strengthen international solidarity with our revolution in the future, too, by actively developing the unity and friendly and cooperative relations with all the progressive countries of the world including the socialist and non-aligned countries, holding aloft the banner of independence, friendship and peace.

6. The Party's Art of Leadership.

Ensuring the leadership art carries weighty significance in the party building and activities, leadership of the masses in particular. The leadership art of the party is the mode of the party activities and leadership ability in rousing to activity and leading the organizations and the masses. The leadership art of our party is the chuche-oriented leadership art which is based on the chuche idea and embodies the revolutionary mass line in itself.

The important content of the leadership art of our party is the revolutionary party work system and revolutionary and popular work method and work style. For a party to correctly discharge its leading function, it is necessary to establish a revolutionary work system in the party. The party work system is the order and system to organize and conduct the party work and party activities.

An important point in the work system of our party is firstly the revolutionary system and order whereby the whole party moves as one under the unitary leadership of the party Central Committee.

Our experience shows that only when a revolutionary system and order whereby all the party organizations and party members move under the unitary leadership of the party Central Committee is thoroughly established, can the unity of the party ranks in ideology, purpose and action be achieved and the revolution and construction pushed forward with success.

In order to make the whole party move as one under the unitary leadership of the party Central Committee, we should establish in the party a well-regulated work system whereby the party's lines and policies and decisions and instructions of the party Central Committee are correctly brought home to all cadres and other party members and working people in time and the lines and policies of the party unconditionally accepted and thoroughly implemented by them. At the same time, we should establish the centralistic discipline and order to concentrate important matters of principle arising in the party work and activities on the party Central Committee and execute them according to its decision.

An important point in our party's work system is secondly to get party committees at different levels guide all work in a uniform way as the supreme leadership bodies at respective units. From the first days of its birth as a ruling party our party has set forth the policy of realizing the overall leadership of the party and thoroughly implemented it in conformity with the development of the revolution and construction in depth.

An important point in our party's work system is thirdly to have the party Central Committee and other party organizations at all levels systematically grasp and guide the party organizations at lower units. To do this work well, officials should make it a rule to go down to the lower units. For the party to discharge its leadership function properly, it is necessary to establish a revolutionary party work method. To establish this work method is particularly important for a party in power.

Therefore, our party raised it as one of the important questions in the party building to establish a revolutionary party work method and has waged a vigorous struggle for doing away with the old method of work and applying the traditional work method of our party among its officials. The traditional work method of our party was created during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

We created the chongsan-ri spirit and chongsan-ri method in the stage of building socialism by applying and developing the traditional work method established in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle to suit the new reality of socialist construction.

What is most important in the work method of our party is to keep political work definitely ahead of all other work. Doing so makes it possible to give full play to the voluntary enthusiasm and creative zeal of the masses and vigorously push forward the revolutionary struggle and constructive work.

Political work should be conducted by the method of persuasion and education.

This work should be conducted tirelessly and patiently till the masses fully understand the party's policy and intention and are awakened ideologically. Political work should be done in close combination with revolutionary practice and converted into a work of the masses themselves.

Another important point in the work method of our party is that upper bodies help lower ones and guiding officials carry out revolutionary tasks, going down always among the masses and relying on them. Also important in the party's work method is to do the party work scientifically and creatively in conformity with the objective reality and specific conditions.

Correct combination of general guidance and specific guidance is a scientific and realistic work method which makes it possible to give uniform and detailed guidance to the masses. An effective method in this is to create an example at a unit and generalize it.

To find out the main link in all work and direct efforts to it is a scientific work method to achieve the greatest success with small forces and successfully carry out revolutionary tasks as a whole. The party organizations and party officials must go into the thick of the reality, correctly find out the main link, organize the forces well and concentrate efforts on the main link and apply the finish-one-by-one method.

We should do the party work creatively, applying diversified forms and methods. What is important in the work method of our party is to actively wage the mass movement to attain the fighting goal of the party. In each stage of the developing revolution, our party has initiated mass movements of various forms and actively propelled them in accordance with the demand of the revolutiom and revolutionary aspirations and readiness of the masses.

According to our experience, it is important in organizing and guiding the mass movement to properly define its forms in conformity with the objective demand of the developing revolution and with the political and ideological preparedness of the masses and set forth a clear fighting goal and task.

To present a correct fighting slogan is very important in particular in the organization and guidance of the mass movement. To establish a proper work style is very important in ensuring the leadership art of the party.

In the past period our party has tirelessly striven to do away with the old style of work and establish a revolutionary and popular style of work among the party workers. What is most important in the work style of our party is the fighting spirit of continuous innovation and uninterrupted advance. The party of the working class must not permit stagnation and marking time and only the revolutionary traits of constant innovation and advance should prevail in the whole party.

What is important next in the work style of our party is the revolutionary trait of self-reliance and hard struggle and the spirit of working and living full of vigor and passion. An important matter in the work style of our party is the principled and fair trait of work and the popular spirit, and virtue which make people regard the bosom of the party as genuine mother's bosom.

Party workers should always have a motherly heart toward people and become their faithful and sincere servants. It is important next in the work style of our party that party workers and members should devote themselves to the party and the revolution and personally set examples in work.

Party workers and members should have the noble virtue of thoroughly fulfilling revolutionary tasks assigned to them with a high degree of party spirit and revolutionary spirit by displaying boundless devotion and self-sacrificing spirit.

The revolutionary work trait is now being established among our party workers to thoroughly implement unconditionally their revolutionary tasks with a strong revolutionary will that they have no right to die before discharging the revolutionary duty assigned by the party, without any slight reason or excuse or talking about conditions.

An important thing next in the work style of our party is that party workers and members should have a modest and simple trait and be upright and clean in life. Party workers and members should never misuse authority or put on airs no matter what they may do at any post, but lead a simple life and act modestly and politely whenever and wherever as people do. And they should be honest and true and frank, without affectation in the work and life, should not seek self-interest or special benefits, but reject useless formalities and display and degradation and lead a noble life in accordance with the socialist way of life.

The struggle to establish the leadership art of the party is a serious ideological struggle to root up the old ideological survivals from functionaries and apply the churche idea of our party and its revolutionary mass line. Our party has energetically struggled to correctly establish the leadership art of the party in party building and at each stage of the developing revolution and thereby ensured a revolutionary and popular leadership art in the whole party.

7. The Party Is a Guide in Socialist and Communist Society.

The struggle of the popular masses for chajusong is the historical cause to be continued from generation to generation under the leadership of the party. To lead the cause of the chajusong of the popular masses to final victory, it is essential to continuously develop and strengthen the party, the vanguard organisation of the working class, as the revolution advances and society develops.

In order to develop and strengthen the party to be a guide in socialist and communist society, the cause of the party should be correctly carried forward generation after generation. An essential matter in carrying forward the cause of the party is to correctly solve the problem of heir to the political leader. The problem of heir in the building of the working-class party is one of inheriting the position and role of the political leader.

By whom and how the cause of the working-class party which continues generation after generation is carried forward is an important problem related to the destiny of the party, the destiny of the revolution. The working-class party should have as a heir a leader of the people who is boundlessly faithful to the party and the revolution and has personality and qualifications to fully realise political leadership over the whole society.

In order to correctly carry forward the cause of the party, it is imperative to lay a solid organisational and ideological foundation and thoroughly establish the leadership system to realise the leadership of an heir, while correctly choosing him.

Only when work is done well to lay the foundation of the party and establish its leadership system, can the militancy of the party and its leadership ability be enhanced, the political and ideological unity and purity of the party ranks be defended and the revolution and constructiohn be led to victory. Therefore, the working-class party should grasp this work as an important problem in party building.

Our party has satisfactorily solved the problem of carrying forward the revolutionary cause. The leadership of the party has been firmly built up, the organisational and ideological foundation of the party laid as firm as a rock and guidance system of the party firmly established so as to carry forward the idea and guidance of our party. This is a shining success and a great victory in the building of our party.

We should, in the future, further consolidate the organisational and ideological foundation of the party. In particular, we should pay deep attention to cementing the political and ideological unity and cohesion of the party around the party Central Committee.

We should also establish more thoroughly the leadership system of the party Central Committee. If the leadership system of the party Central Committee is weakened even slightly, the party cannot be an organized militant unit nor the cause of the party be accomplished successfully.

One of the important problems in carrying forward the cause of the party is to correctly inherit the revolutionary traditions established by the party. The revolutionary tradition to be inherited by our party is those of chuche. We should resolutely defend and carry forward the glorious revolutionary traditions of our party generation after generation.

What is most important in inheriting the revolutinary traditions is to ensure their purity. We should not tolerate any attempt to mar or obliterate the revolutionary traditions of our party but purely inherit them from generation to generation. The cause of the working-class party will be continued even after the building of communism and, accordingly, the party should be developed and strengthened as demanded by communist society.

The struggle of the popular masses for chajusong will go on even in communist society. In communist society, the work of educating people and improving social relations will be waged on a higher level and the struggle for transforming nature and creating material wealth be waged on a more gigantic scale. Therefore, there should be such leading political organisation as party even after the building of communist society. This alone can correctly lead the struggle of the popular masses for chajusong.

In communist society, too, there should be a social function to organize and command the activities of the people in a uniform way.

There should be a social function, a political leadership to put forward a common fighting goal of society and orientation of activity and coordinate and gear in a uniform way activities of people to each other in order that social movement is conducted and society developed in keeping with the common demand and interests of society in communist society. Naturally, there should be a leading political organisation in charge of this work.

Communist society is a highly organised society. Communist society is one where unity and cooperative relations among people are highly developed. It is a society, the whole of which is firmly united organisationally and all social activities are conducted in an organised way. The development of unity and cooperative relations, the organisational unity of society should be realized by a certain political organisation.

Communist society is a society in which people enjoy a more valuable life with full socio-political Chajusong.

In Communist society, people regard it as the greatest happiness and worth to lead a political life with a most valuable socio-political integrity and to fight for the common interests of society. To meet such desire and demand of people in communist society, there should be a developed political organisation which will give a most valuable socio-political life to them and lead them to glorify it on the road of carrying out the common cause of society.

The working-class party should be constantly developed and strengthened in conformity with this lawful demand of social development. In order to build our party under a far-reaching plan to be a guide in socialist and communist society, we should model the whole party on the chuche idea and further develop the idea and theory on party building in keeping with the essential demand of socialist and communist society.

We should thoroughly apply our party's chuche-oriented idea and theory on party building in the building and activities of the party and, at the same time, continue to develop and perfect them in line with the deepening of the revolutionary struggle and the constructive work and the development of society.

TOKYO SUMMIT, SOUTH AFRICAN ATTACKS VIEWED

SK021222 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1150 GMT 31 May 86

[Talk by KCNA reporter Pak Kuk-song: "The Imperialists' Maneuvers of Aggression and War Are Becoming Undisguised With Each Passing Day"]

[Text] The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Because of the imperialists' maneuvers of aggression and war, which intensify with each passing day, the international situation is becoming tense to an extreme degree and the danger of a new world war, a thermonuclear war, is heavily hovering over the globe.

Of late, the U.S. imperialists, while infringing upon the sovereignty of other countries, are further intensifying the maneuvers of aggression and provocation in order to aggravate the tense international situation.

The Tokyo summit participated in by the seven Western industrial countries, held from 4 to 6 May, once again clearly showed such maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists. Originally, the summit of the seven Western industrial countries was started as one to discuss economic difficulties and seek necessary measures among the heads of such capitalist countries as the United States and Japan. Since the first summit was held in France in 1975, it has been annually held and, this year, the 12th summit was held.

However, at the 12th summit held this year, through the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their closest allies, the Japanese reactionaries, such sensitive international political issues as the situation on the Korean peninsula and the prevention of acts of terrorism were despotically presented by breaking the rule of mainly discussing economic issues.

Originally, the question of the situation on the Korean peninsula was not included on the agenda of the summit, which Japan, as the host country of the summit, officially announced in mid-April. Nevertheless, after conspiring with the U.S. authorities, Japanese Premier Nakasone announced that the question of the situation on the Korean peninsula would be adopted as an important agenda item on the forthcoming Tokyo summit, and forced the summit to discuss this question.

What is particularly noteworthy is that Nakasone, releasing the so-called (?joint communique) at the joint press conference held following the summit, raved that the summit had decided to support North-South dialogue, to make efforts to create an environment for it, and to render cooperation and support for the success of the 1988 Olympic Games, and had affirmed that entry into the United Nations by North and South Korea would be profitable for the alleviation of tension.

This vividly shows that the Tokyo summit, under the baton of Reagan, the head of the U.S. imperialists, and in accordance with the trick of Nakasone, his closest ally, turned into a political plaything to conceal and support the U.S. policy of aggression and war. In other words, this shows that the Tokyo summit hatched a grave plot for two Koreas.

The simultaneous entry into the United Nations and the support for the Seoul Olympic Games which the Tokyo summit had reportedly affirmed are the U.S. imperialists' wicked schemes concocted to create two Koreas. This time, the U.S. imperialists were seeking their vicious meneuvers not only with regard to the Korean question but also in other areas. Under Reagan's strong pressure, the Tokyo summit adopted the so-called statement for the prevention of acts of terrorism and attacked Libya by name.

The result of the Tokyo summit showed that the U.S. imperialists had utilized the summit as a means to force their reactionary and despotic foreign policy on other countries, and as a means to entangle those countries into implementing their world strategy.

All the facts clearly prove that the U.S. imperialists are indeed the ringleader of the Korean division and the main obstacle to the peaceful reunification of Korea, and that they are the disturber of world peace and the ringleader of international terrorism.

What is also noteworthy in the recent international situation is that the South African racist clique carried out undisguised armed attacks against the African front line nations. At daybreak on 19 May, the South African racist clique, by mobilizing aircraft, dropped bombs and fired machine guns on the capitals of Zimbabwe, Zambia, and Botswana. Thus, it committed an undisguised act of aggression by even hurling its commandos into Zimbabwe and Botswana.

The act of aggression which the South African racist clique committed this time was an open encroachment upon the sovereignty and territorial integrity of sovereign and independent countries, and was an undisguised act of war wildly violating international laws.

This act of aggression by the South African racist clique was a replica of the atrocious act of state terrorism which the U.S. imperialists committed some time ago against sovereign Libya. By copying the way in which the U.S. imperialists carried out the bestial bombardment of Libya under the so-called signboard of anti-terrorism, the South African racist clique, on the pretext of annihilating the so-called terrorists' bases, mobilized aircraft and attacked the three countries.

It is a well-known fact that the U.S. imperialists have actively instigated the aggressive maneuvers of the South African racist clique and its acts of terrorism against the sovereign South African countries. This time, however, the U.S. imperialists expressed regret over the South African racist clique's act of aggression and lodged a protest denouncing it, thus staging a farce. However, the U.S. imperialists cannot conceal their nature as the ringleader of acts of terrorism with such a clumsy trick.

(Lilly), the one in charge of the intelligence service of the South African racist clique, blatantly raved that they followed the U.S. imperialists' act against Libya. The ringleaders of instigating the South African racist clique are, precisely, the U.S. imperialists, and the ones who made it copy the act of aggression are also the U.S. imperialists.

The incident that occurred this time once again disclosed to the world, along with the outrageousness of the South African racist clique, the nature of the U.S. imperialists as the ones who train puppets and the trash of the world and use them as disturbers of world security and peace. At the same time, the incident has aroused strong protest and denunciation of the peoples of the world.

The peoples of Southern Africa, including the peoples of Zimbabwe, Zambia, and Botswana, are strengthening their determination to defend their countries from the aggression of the South African racist clique and to extract the price of the blood shed by their peoples.

On 20 May, the foreign ministers of the six front line nations -- Angola, Botswana, Mozambique, Tanzania, Zambia, and Zimbabwe -- held an emergency meeting in Harare, the capital of Zimbabwe, and pledged to counter aggression by achieving the firm unity of the six front line nations and to further increase various means of support for the South African peoples and those who are struggling.

The U.S. imperialists' new war provocation maneuvers have also been intensified of late. On 19 May, along with Japan, Canada, Australia, and England, the U.S. imperialists mobilized some 50 naval vessels of various kinds, 250 aircraft, and 50,000 troops and staged the "Impact-86" joint military exercise, the one known as the largest war exercise ever staged in the Pacific. Nearly coinciding with this, a joint military exercise between the U.S. forces and the Japanese Self-Defense Forces was staged in Japan. All these war exercise commotions staged by the U.S. imperialists were acts of grave provication threatening the peace and security of Asia and the Pacific region.

The U.S. imperialists' war preparation maneuvers have also been disclosed in their nuclear tests, which they continued in defiance of the strong protest and denunciation of the world peoples. Last 21 May, the U.S. imperialists carried out their fourth nuclear test for this year at the nuclear test site in Nevada. This fact clearly showed that the U.S. imperialists, though they rave about the liquidation of nuclear weapons, are indeed the nuclear maniacs who are never interested in the liquidation of nuclear weapons and in the elimination of the danger of nuclear war.

The incidents that have occurred of late are demanding that vigilance be ever heightened with regard to the aggressive maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists, the ringleader of aggression and war and the ones causing all misfortunes and agonies of the world peoples, and that the struggle against them be more unyieldingly waged throughout the world.

NODONG SINMUN ON USE OF CHEMICAL WEAPONS IN SOUTH

[ANODONG SINMUN 31 May commentary: "The Barbarous and Tyrannical Act of Revealing the True Nature of the Butcher"]

[Text] In an attempt to suppress the demonstration struggle of the South Korean students, the fascist Chon Tu-hwan clique has committed the atrocious and barbarous act of having riot-suppressing police forces use even chemical bombs. When citizens raised their voices protesting against the great damages they sustained from the explosion of chemical bombs, the puppet clique, simultaneously holding neighborhood meetings to suppress these voices, was eager to make an excuse by distributing printed materials on chemical bombs and among them. However, by making such an excuse, the puppet clique will never be able to conceal its anti-people crime.

Using even chemical bombs against the fellow countrymen who have waged a peaceful demonstration struggle constitutes a cursed and barbarous act that could only be committed by a human butcher, the fascist tyrant of the century, like the Chon Tu-hwan ring.

The anti-U.S. and antifascist demonstration struggle steadily waged by the South Korean students is not a radical and violent riot that creates chaos and disorder. This struggle is a righteous struggle designed to change the colonial and tryrannical order strangling the people's dignity, democracy, and civil rights into a democratic order that provides the people with the rights to existence and with democratic freedom. This struggle is also a nation-saving struggle to seek the country's reunification -- the desire of all the peopole.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring's act of running amok by using checmial weapons after supprssing the demand of the students with bayonets is an unpardonable act of strangling the people and democracy. It is very natural for all the peopole and just and fair public opinion at home and abroad to label and bitterly condemn and denounce the Chon Tu-hwan ring's atrocious and barbarous act of tyranny as a fascist fuss committed by rogues, discarding man's rudimentary reason and conscience.

Facing seething protests at home and abroad, the puppet clique is busy clinging to the base trick of concocting and spreading the fiction that the North has developed great quantities of chemical and bacterial weapons and has deployed them for a real war.

Those who are threatened by chemical and bacterial weapons are not the United States or South Korea but us -- the target of U.S. chemical and bacterial weapons. It is not a secret that having built 11 poisonous gas plants in South Korea, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets have produced and stockpiled more than 3.4 million tons of chemical weapons capable of attacking all of the northern half of the Republic by charging with these weapons, South Korean-type ground-to-ground missiles and various field guns, including 8 inch howitzers and 155 mm guns. It is well known to the world that at the security consulttive meeting held recently, they decided to introduce new binary weapons into South Korea.

They caused the South Korean people to undergo great disasters and sufferings, by staging a chemical warfare exercise, along with carrying out offensive tactical operations as part of the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise. Despite this fact, they are raising a fuss by concocting and spreading a theory on the North's deployment of chemical weapons for a real war. This reminds us of a proverb in which a thief cries, stop thief. They needed such a fiction to make our people the victims of thermonuclear and chemical wars by diverting the people's attention by misleading public opinion and to conceal their criminal act of using chemical bombs against the fellow countrymen who staged a peaceful demonstration.

A foreign news report said that it would be much more correct to say that the Chon Tu-hwan ring's concoction of a lie on the threat of a chemical attack from the North is aimed at suppressing increasing discontent with the puppet adminstration's tyrannical policy against the South Korean people.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring should realize that it cannot suppress, with bayonets or with chemical weapons, the anti-U.S., antiwar, antinuclear, and antifascist trend that has prevailed in all of South Korea. The puppets' atrocious act of tyranny will only pour oil on burning flames. The South Korean students and people will never leave intact the Chon Tu-hwan ring, which is wielding even chemical weapons after wielding bayonets against the fellow countrymen.

PRC OLYMPIC COMMITTEE SPOKESMAN ON COHOSTING

[Text] Pyongyang June 2 (KCNA) -- The spokesman of the Olympic Committee of China answered questions raised by reporters in connection with the proposal of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea that the 24th Olympic Games in 1988 be cohosted by the North and the South Korea, according to a XINHUA report on May 31.

Noting that the Olympic Committee of China regards the proposal of the DPRK Olympic Committee as one worthy of serious consideration, the spokesman said that the realisation of this proposal reflecting the common desire of the entire Korean people would be favourable to the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea and the proposal would record a significant page in the modern Olympic history.

Saying that the Olympic Committee of China has supported the DPRK's proposal from the beginning, he recalled that the chairman of the Olympic Committee of China sent a letter to the president of the International Olympic Committee expressing the attitude of the Olympic Committee of China, and the minister of the State Physical Culture and Sports Commission of China sent a letter to the chairman of the Korean Physical Culture and Sports Guidance Committee reaffirming the stand of the Olympic Committee of China toward the co-hosting proposal.

REPORTAGE ON CHON'S 3 JUN MEETING WITH YI MIN-U

YONHAP Report

SK030722 Seoul YONHAP in English 0713 GMT 3 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 3 (YONHAP) -- South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan said Tuesday that the sooner his nation's Constitution is revised, the better, if the rival political parties are able to reach agreement on the issue. Chon made the remark in an exclusive meeting with Yi Min-u, president of the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP), at Chongwadae, the presidential residence, according to Chon's spokesman, Chong Ku-ho.

The talks were arranged by No Tae-u, chairman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), at Yi's request. Yi and Chon discussed a wide range of political issues, including the release of imprisoned dissidents, and the granting of amnesty and reinstatement of those dissidents, the spokesman said. Opposition forces in Korea have demanded the release of dissidents as a precondition to solving the current political impasse. Chon said that most of the arrested dissidents should be severely punished under the law but that he plans to give leniency to some of them if possible in the course of enforcing the law. He also said he will give positive considerations if the law enforcement agency recommends amnesty and reinstatement for those who show signs of repentance.

Regarding the opposition partys request for the suspension of the investigation into the "Mintongnyon," a dissident coalition led by the Rev Mun Ik-hwan, Choin said the suspension should not be carried out and that the time has not yet come to discuss the release of Mun because the investigation into his activities is still under way.

Chon reiterated his position not to oppose the constitutional revisions and stressed that the revision issue should be agreed in the National Assembly through dialogue between the rival parties.

The meeting, which lasted for two hours from 10 a.m., was the second between them in only one month. Chon and Yi, together with No and minor party leader Yi Man-sop, had met on April 30 when the president said he will not oppose the revision of the Constitution if the rival parties agree on the issue in the National Assembly.

On Yi's opinion that it would desirable that the Constitution should be revised to adopt a direct presidential election system, Chon said he, as the incumbent president, had better not say this or that system is good. Chon said that the revised constituion, if amended, should be a one which should be kept intact until the nation is unified. Chon said there are some people who suspect if the NKDP has a link with procommunist forces, and therefore it is necessary that the NKDP clarify its characteristic to the people if the party is a conservative party or a radical party.

The granting of amnesty and the restoration of civil rights for Kim Tae-chung and others "cannot be conducted of the Presidents own volition" although they come under the presidential authority," Chon said. "There are certain standards and practices applied by the law enforcement agency," he added. Chon emphasized that amnesty and reinstatement should be applied to all people equally, in accordance with the balance of related standards and laws, and should be dealt with in a way respecting the authority of the judicial branch of the government.

Regarding the recent surge of campus unrest, Chon said that, as a father, he considers the acts of suicide committed by the students who burned themselves to be "lamentable and heartbreaking things that should not have happened." He said that school authorities, parents and society should make united efforts to prevent the recurrence of such incidents. "However, radical and violent leftism that would encourage the North Korean communists can never be tolerated, and attempts to agitate and use the young people are criminal acts against the nation and its history," Chon said.

Spokesman Chong announced that President Chon and NKDP President Yi discussed overall political and social developments "in an open-minded atmosphere." "The meeting was the first tete-a-tete between the president and the leader of the opposition party since the inauguration of the Fifth Republic and an expression of President Chon's will to carry out the politics of dialogue," the spokesman said. Chon is also scheduled to hold similar talks with Yi Man-sop, president of the minority opposition Korea National Party, at Chongwadae on Wednesday.

Yi Min-u Comments

SK030918 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0700 GMT 3 Jun 86

[Text] Speaking with reporters at the NKDP office building after concluding his exclusive meeting with the president [ROK President Chon Tu-hwan] today, NKDP President Yi Min-u said that he had conveyed his opinion to the president that the government should set free those imprisoned on the strength of a great resolve by the president in order to give people confidence in the government's will to revise the Constitution. He also said that he had told the president that he was convinced that those who are freed will not do anything running counter to the public will, because not only the people, but also their fellow students [as heard] will turn their backs on agitation and other radical acts.

Following this, President Yi said that he had made it clear to the president that the constitutional revision in favor of a direct presidential election system should be carried out with a view to returning to the people their rights to choose their own government on their own free will and that the NKDP is convinced that this is the public aspiration as well as hope.

President Yi also said that he had explained to the president that if the government is determined to revise the Constitution, it should set free Mr Mun Ik-hwan at an early date and that the government should stop investigating the United Mass Movement for Democratization and Unification [Mintongnyon], saying that in this case the government will be welcomed by a great number of people.

President Yi continued to say that the ruling and opposition parties exchanged memorandum to the effect that they would do their best for the issue of amnesty and restoration of civil rights before the opening of the National Assembly last year, even to the point of delaying the opening for a full month, but it has failed to bring about any realization to date. He said that he had made it clear that this corresponds to the public will to go ahead with this issue when the constitutional revision is carried out.

President Yi also said that he had told the President that the students' self-immolation is a problem which not only the politicians, but also the ruler who has taken charge of the current era should give serious thought to, even if they are not parents themselves. Therefore, it should be dealt with at an early date in such a way as to prevent it from repeating itself.

President Yi also said that he had stressed that President Chon should become an honorable president by effecting the constitutional revision and realignment of the system for the firm establishment of democracy in this country and see to it that the vicious cycles never again repeat themselves in the future, arguing that many people are talking about the late President Syngman Rhee as a president who paved the way for the national foundation and about late President Pak Chong-hui as a president who made economic growth possible, even though he had made some mistakes.

In conclusion, President Yi said that although he had talked for 2 hours on various subjects, his conclusion is no more or less than he had expected. He then said that even the president had no other choice but to say that the issue of amnesty and restoration of civil rights for some people will have to be dealt with according to legal procedures. Therefore, nobody could have said that those imprisoned will be freed immediately.

President Yi said that is it necessary to meet with president as frequently as possible to talk candidly about all problems to resolve them.

Yi Urges Dissidents Release

[Text] Seoul, June 3 (YONHAP) -- Yi Min-u, president of the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP), said Tuesday that he urged President Chon Tu-hwan, in an exclusive meeting on Tuesday, to release dissidents detained for "political reasons" before forming a special National Assembly committee to revise the Constitution. In a meeting with reporters at NKDP headquarters shortly after the meeting, held at Chongwadae, the presidential mansion, Yi said, "I told him emphatically that he should release under his own decision those who are detained for their activities on behalf of democratization in order to show his will to rewrite the constitution to the people."

The NKDP president also said, "President Chon, however, expressed his concern about whether detaineees will repeat seditious and destructive activities, despite such generosity, after they are released." "In this regard," he continued, "I stressed that the detainees will not be able to engage in such activities against the will of the people when they are freed and if democratization is brought about."

Regarding the matter of constitutional revision, Yi said that the people want to take back the right to choose their government-- a right of which they have been deprived since 1972--and that his party is working for the adoption of a direct presidential election system because his party has a commitment to the people, Yi said.

The opposition leader also said that he had requested Chon to suspend the investigation into the "Mintongnyon," a dissident coalition led by the Rev. Mun Ik-hwan, and to release Mun as soon as possible if the will for democratization has been consolidated. He pointed out that Mun has conducted various activities on behalf of democratization and that his organization is working toward that goal.

On the issue of releasing dissidents and granting them amnesty, Yi said, "I told President Chon that conducting such actions at this time will satisfy the people's wishes."

"President Chon said that the Constitution, if amended, should be based on the national consensus, so that it could be kept intact until national unification," Yi said. "It will apparently take some time to revise the Constitution, considering the fact that there is a difference between the rival parties' concepts of the term "national consensus." "However, the president and I almost agreed on the need to amend the Constitution as soon as possible if the rival parties agree," the opposition leader added.

FREEZING PROTECTIONISM AGREED ON AT GATT MEETING

SK020750 Seoul YONHAP iun English 0614 GMT 2 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 2 (YONHAP) -- Trade ministers and officials from 19 countries and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) agreed that world-wide protectionist measures should be forzen at the present level before the new round of multilateral trade negotiations opens in Punta del Este, Uruguay, in September, South Korean Trade and Industry Minister Kum Chin-ho said Monday. In a press statement, Kum who chaired the three-day closed-door meeting here, said that the participants also agreed that the freezing of protectionist measures must be implemented through political will in order to carry out their commitment to a "standstill" and an eventual "rollback" in protectionist measures. "The commitment to a 'standstill' should be implemented by all countries participating in the new round and should be applicable to measures inconsistent with the GATT as well as those not covered by the GATT," according to the press statement.

The participants also expressed strong interest in strengthening the GATT's surveillance mechanism as a way of ensuring the implementation of the "standstill." The participants decided to set up a trade policy committee in the GATT for the specific purpose of surveillance during the new round negotiations, Kum said. The commitment to a "standstill" will be adopted at the GATT ministerial conference in Punta del Este and will serve as a precondition for the new round negotiations, Kum said.

Although the trade ministers of India and Brazil, which oppose the inclusion of the service trade in the agenda of the Punta del Este meeting, did not attend, those participating in the Seoul meeting agreed that service trade, as well as the "old issues," could be included in the agenda of the new round. Developing countries as a whole oppose the idea that agricultural trade should be covered by trade (?rules bilateral). Trade should be an integral part of the agenda of the new round, Kum said.

Among the participants at the Seoul meeting were Clayton Yeutter, U.S. trade representative; Willy de Clercq, the European Economic Commission's commissioner for external relations and commericial policy; and Enrique V. Iglesias, the Uruguayan foreign minister. In view of the need to contine the series of informal trade ministers' meetings, the participants were invited to the next meeting, scheduled for February 1987 in Wellington, New Zealand.

U.S. BANK CLAIMS OF ROK CAPITAL FLIGHT DENIED

[From the "Press Pocket" column]

[Text] Amid mounting concern among the people over the overseas flight of Korean capital, claimed by a U.S. bank to amount to some $12 billion, a weekly meeting of the ruling DJP yesterday lasted about an hour longer than ususal, because of discussion on the matter. Party spokesman Sim Myong-po told reporters after the meeting that Rep. Na Ung-pae, director of the Office of Policy Coordination, explained the reported flight of domestic capital to key DJP oficers. The former finance minster alleged that the "flight of such a tremendous amount of capital is out of the question in our country, where the central bank, the Bank of Korea, is in charge of the managment of foreign currency."

He refuted a recent report on the flight of capital in developing countries, including Korea, by U.S. Morgan Guaranty Trust Bank which claimed that some $12 billion has "fled" the country, from 1976 to 1985. korea was the fifth among the world's countries in the amount of alleged property flight, after Mexico, Venezuela, Argentina and South Africa, according to Morgan Guaranty Trust.

COURT LINKS SANMIN IDEA TO NORTH PROPAGANDA

[Text] The Supremen Court yesterday ruled that the "Sammin" ideology advocated by members of a radical student group Sammintu is similar in content to the North Korean propaganda against Seoul. With the ruling, the court upheld prison sentences ranging from three to seven years for four Chonnam University students convicted of violating the National Security Law for inciting a series of anti-government demonstrations. The four defendants are members of the school's chapter of Sammintu. The ruling was the first one ever made by the highest court on a case involving Sammintu members.

The group adopted a three-point principle as its platform in its professed struggle against the current government. They are national unification, liberation of the masses and struggle for democracy. "The Sammin ideology has something to do with the phrase of Communist North Korea in its anti-Seoul propaganda," a four-member panel of the Supreme Court ruled. The panel added the four defendants subsequently served the interest of North Korea by engaging in antigovernment activities based on the anti-Seoul Sammin ideology.

Under the ruling, Kang Ki-chong, 22 a senior majoring in electronic engineering, had his seven-year sentence reaffirmed. Han Kyong, a coed, also drew a seven-year term while another defendant, Kim Ki-song, received a five-year jail sentence. The fourth defendant, Yu Un-suk, also a coed, was sentenced to three years in prison with her civil rights suspended for the same period.

POLICE TO DETER ACTIVISTS APPEALING TO YOUTHS

[Text] The National Police Headquarters (NPH) yesterday warned that some college activists are attempting to indoctrinate middle and high school students with leftist-oriented ideologies. In a special directive to police across the nation, the top police agency said it received information that some college students sneaked into middle and high school campuses and distributed leaflets and plastered posters promoting leftist movement.

The directive called for increased police patrol in and around secondary school campuses and removal of such seditious materials to keep innocent students from being tainted by leftist ideologies. The NPH analyzed that radical collegian activists were trying out a new strategy to expand their antigovernment struggles because their campus protests have failed to arouse public support.

According to the directive, police will urge middle and high schools to strenghten ideology education to help protect the students from being misled by student activists.

In another move, the NPH ordered police thoughout the country to be on guard against the possible seizure of Japanese-related buildings by radical students. The police said it obtained information that some radical students plan to take over Japanese-related buildings in Korea, including the Japanese Embassy, to mark the 22nd anniversay of the "June 3 incident." The incident stemmed from massive violent student demonstrations in 1964 against Korea-Japan negotiation for diplomatic normalization. According to the police, universities have designated June 2-4 as a "period of anti-Japanese struggle."

265 PROFESSORS ISSUE JOINT DECLARATION

SK021340 Seoul TONG-A ILBO in Korean 2 Jun 86 p 11

[Text] A declaration on current situation, written in the name of 265 professors at 23 universities and colleges across the country, including Seoul National University, Korea University, Yonsei University, Chonnam University, and Pusan University, was read by a group of 7 professors, including Professor Mun Tong-hwan, of Korean Theology College, and professors from Methodist Theology College, on the morning of 2 June at the Suyuri campus of the Korean Theology College located at No. 5 Suyu-dong, Tobong-ku, Seoul.

In the declaration, the professors said that "since the origin of the crisis now facing our country derives from the existence of the present regime, which lacks legitimacy, the emergence of a legitimate civilian government, a civilian government in the true sense of the words, is a question far more pressing than anything else."

After calling for the emergence of a civilian government in the portion of the declaration that dealt with political affairs, the professors stressed the following 5-point assertion: a) that a democratic constitution should be established in a way that favors a direct presidential election system; b) that restriction of basic rights and suppression of human rights should be brought to an end, and that there is concern about the current situation in which people have no other means to turn to except violence; c) that radical forces should be recognized; d) that a systematic device capable of legalizing the existence of such radical forces should be instituted; and e) that the students' antinuclear movement and movement against outside forces should not be judged on the basis of black-and-white logic on the assumption that they are pro-communist elements; instead, it should be judged in the context of the national right to exist and self-reliance.

In a portion of the declaration dealing with economic affairs, the professors also placed emphasis on 5 points, asserting: a) that the policy of growth dependent on foreign debt should be abandoned; b) that a policy of equal distribution of wealth should be put into practice; c) that domestic wealth amassed illegally by a privileged class should be returned to society, along with wealth smuggled out of the country; d) that the government not try to beautify the current economic policy under the pretext of protection of capitalism; and e) that the government instead seek a new independent economic system.

In a portion dealing with social affairs, the professors asserted that people should reflect genuinely on themselves with regard, in particular, to their tendency to depend on alien forces, to curry favor with those in power, and to remain passive and subordinate. The professors called on them to strive to become people who take due responsibility before history through democratization of the society and through turning the people into individuals who are imbued with independence. In this portion, the professors again asserted 5 points, calling for an end to the suppression of the press and to the policy of trying to stupefy the people through the mass media.

In a final portion of the declaration, which dealt with campus affairs, the professors lamented their position in which they had to deal with the self-immolation of the students and workers with nothing but an effort to reduce the shock caused by such self-immolation.

They then expressed their condolences to those who set themselves on fire and said that it is their hope that no more students and workers would try to kill themselves by setting themselves on fire, but instead respect human life, the highest among moral values.

A professor from every university and college, representing his fellow professors who signed this declaration, had been expected to appear on the Suyuri campus at 1000 this morning to read the declaration. However, only seven professors from Korean Theology College and Methodist Theology College could show up because the rest were placed under house arrest.

The 23 universities and colleges to which the 265 professors who signed the declaration belong include Methodist Theology College, Kyonggi College, Korean University, Tong-a University, Pusan University, Pusan Industrial College, Sogang University, Seoul National University, Songgyungwan University, Sungmyong Women's University, Ulsan College, Yonsei University, Ehwa Women's University, Chonnam University, Chonbuk University, Chongang University, Chongju University, Chongju Teacher's College, Chungnam University, Chungbuk College, Hannam University, Korean Theology College, and Hoso College.

The majority of the signatories of this declaration are individuals who have already signed similar declarations on the current situation made public by each individual college and university.

[Text] At 1630 on 31 May, some 350 teachers of middle and high schools in Seoul and members of such educational organizations as the YWCA Association of Employees, the YMCA Association of Middle School Teachers, the YMCA Association of Elementary School Teachers, and the Hungsadan Education and Culture Studies Institute held a memorial service at the commoners' auditorium on the second floor of Myongdong cathedral for students who, unable to stand the growing academic burden on their shoulders, have killed themselves recently. After the meeting, the participants announced a letter of resolution critical of the reality prevailing in educational circles.

In this letter of resolution, the teachers called on their fellow teachers and parents of the students to clearly refuse today's education which encourages dehumanization and stated their determination to call for free activities of the teachers as well as their right to freely form any kind of teachers' organization. In the letter of resolution, the participants also said that they will positively help students outside campus and that they will press for the restoration of teachers who had been dismissed unjustly.

POLICE STEP UP INVESTIGATION OF INCHON CASE

[Text] Police yesterday stepped up the ongoing investigation into the massive disturbances in Inchon on May 3, issuing a special instruction for the arrest of 45 people who are on a wanted list and searching the office of Mintongnyon and homes of its key officials. The National Police Headquarters directed police nationwide to intensify their search for the wanted; including several officials of Mintongnyon, or the United People's Movement for Democracy and Unification.

Those Mintongnyon officials, including Pak Kye-tong and Chong Tong-nyon, are blamed for having led violent antigovernment demonstrations which pitched downtown areas of the western port city into extreme chaos for several hours.

In the instruction, the police headquarters set a special period of June 1-10 for the arrest of the wanted. "Those who wirepulled the Inchon rioting are pro-Communist elements striving to topple the current state," the instruction said.

Meanwhile, the Seoul Metropolitan Police, armed with court warrants, searched the Office of Mintongnyon in Changchung-dong, central Seoul, early Sunday morning and homes of its officials yesterday morning. Those who homes were searched included vice chairman Kye Hun-che spokesman Kim Chong-Chol and Kwak Tae-yong, chairman of its human rights committee. During the search, police investigators seized various kinds of anti-government publications and copies of blacklisted books, according to the police.

The police, meanwhile, published pamphlets to explain about the arrest of Rev. Mun Ik-hwan, chairman of Mintongnyon, condemning him for "inciting campus unrest." "Rev. Mun has been praising those students or workers who burned themselves to death during antigovernment protests as democracy fighters, thereby fanning radical student activism," the police said.

Rev. Mun was put under arrest for possible indictment on charges of having delivered a speech at a students rally on the campus of Seoul National University. Authorities announced Saturday the indictment of 57 persons for their active roles in the Inchon incident. More than 10,000 demonstrators had staged a fierce street battle with riot police, forcing the opposition New Korea Democratic Party to call off its scheduled Inchon rally to muster support for election reforms.

SEDITIOUS ITEMS FOUND IN MINTONGNYON HOUSES

[Text] Police, equipped with court-issued warrants, combed the houses of six key members of the "Mintongnyon" or United Minjung (Masses) Movement for Democracy and Unification early Sunday morning. A police officer said yesterday that searches were also carried out on the dissident group's office in Changchung-dong.

The police action resulted in the seizure of a large number of antigovernment books and leaflets, he said. The printed material will be presented as evidence of alleged offenses by Mintongnyon chairman Mun Ik-hwan, who has been in police custody on charges of taking part in illegal rallies and inciting student unrest, he said.

The homes on which searches were undertaken included those of Mintongnyon vice chairman Kye Hun-che, chief policy planner Yi Pu-yong and spokesman Kim Chong-chol. A team of three to four plainclothesmen conducted the search on each of the six homes, police sources said. There were no staff members present in the Mintongnyon office when the search was under way, the sources said.

The items impounded from the houses of the six key Mintongnyon members and the organization's office comprised 146 volumes of books, 6,284 copies of 57 kinds of antigovernment fliers, two placards, three tapes and 20 headbands, according to the sources. One of the booklet is titled "New Theological Movement in the Third World."

2 KIMS DEMAND RELEASE OF 'FIGHTERS FOR DEMOCRACY'

[From the "Press Pocket" column]

[Text] Opposition leaders Kim Tae-chung and Kim Yong-sam yesterday met dissident religious leaders and some parents of arrested student activists and demanded that the authorities stop the practice of torture, in regard to "fighters for democracy" and immediately release them.

In a meeting of the Joint Committee against Torture and Fabrication of Communists, they also urged the government to stop "suppressing" the United Mass Movement for Democracy and Unification or "Mintongnyon," led by the arrested Rev. Mun Ik-hwan.

The participants included NDP vice president Choe Hyong-u, Rep. Pak Chan-chong, and pastors Pak Hyong-kyu and Kim Tong-hwan. The meeting was held at the Korean Church's Centennial Building at Chongno 5-ga, for about two hours.

Making their assertions through a statement, Kim Tae-chung placed much emphasis on the "prompt release of all prisoners of conscience, whose number is reaching about 1,000.

Meanwhile, Kim Yong-sam showed a sensitive reaction to some wordings in the statement. He came up with a strong objective to the phrase, "the scheme for a union of conservative forces." Kim got angry and demanded the phrase be changed to "an anti-national and anti-democratic scheme..." on the spot. Kim was recently accused by dissidents and student activists of attempting to compromise with the ruling camp.

KIM TAE-CHUNG URGES ARRESTED DISSIDENTS FREED

SK300144 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 30 May 86 p 4

[Text] Lawmakers of the Tonggyo-dong faction led by Kim Tae-chung in the new Korea Democratic Party asserted yesterday that the release of arrested students and dissidents should be made "to satisfy action of the oppositionists." "Otherwise, it will be difficult to create an ad hoc parliamentary committee on the Constitution," faction spokesman Kang Chun-sik said.

Observers noted that the second largest faction in the NDP was in effect driving a wedge into the softening stance of Kim Yong-sam, leader of the largest faction, and party president Yi Min-u. Kim Yong-sam was far more flexible on the matter. He told reporters, "It would be very good for the government to release them before the opening of the already-scheduled extra House session (on June 5)."

He went on, "It will be all right, however, to set them free during the Assembly session since it may involve some complicated procedures." But he made it clear that those who were arrested calling for democracy, such as Rev. Mun Ik-hwan, should be released immediately.

Presiding over a regular meeting of his faction at an office in Kongdok-dong yesterday morning, Kim Tae-chung said, "Their release will help clear the atmosphere of repression." About 20 lawmakers attended the breakfast meeting.

Explaining why he softened his stance by endorsing NDP's joining in the house panel of the Constitution, Kim Tae-chung said, "We will now be able to confirm the ruling party's position on the constitutional revision through the activities of the ad hoc committee." He noted then that the opposition party felt it necessary to impress the ruling camp that "we don't always follow tough lines."

According to a spokesman, Kim reiterated his earlier firm assertion that the NDP's basic position to reintroduce a direct presidential election system should be in no way changed. He warned that if the NDP swerves from that position, it cannot exist.

Meanwhile, NDP president Yi Min-u said he hoped that his meeting with Democratic Justice Party chairman No Tae-u would "serve as a starting point for a big compromise." Yi noted, "It is desirable to iron out a compromise prior to the opening of the regular House session on Sept. 20. I also want to see a revision draft passed by the National Assembly and a referendum at the earliest possible date."

POLICE RELEASE VICE CHAIRMAN OF MINTONGNYON

SK310137 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 31 May 86 p 8

[Text] The Seoul Metropolitan Police Bureau released Kye Hun-che, a vice chairman of Mintongnyon, Thursday evening, but it plans to summon two more leading members of the activist group. Kye, who was taken away to police Wednesday afternoon in connection with the violent demonstrations in Inchon May 3, was freed around 10 p.m. Thursday in consideration of his poor health, police said yesterday. Police said, however, that he will continue to be under probe without physical detention.

Rev. Mun Ik-hwan, chairman of the group, has been under police custody on suspicion of agitating students and attending illegal rallies. Police plan to refer him to the prosecution today.

Two more Mintongnyon members to be questioned are Yim Chae-chong, a standing committee member, and spokesman Kim Chong-chol. They are suspected of playing leading roles in contributing to the riotous nature of the demonstrations.

Police investigation showed that Kye was one of those who participated in a meeting held at the Mintongnyon office April 30 to plot the Inchon riot. He was also involved in drafting the contents of antigovernment leaflets and providing a shelter at his home for Chang Ki-pyo on three occasions.

Chang, chief policy researcher of Mintongnyon, is presently also under police custody along with Rev. Mun.

Police said they released Kye because he did not go to Inchon May 3, although he plotted the Inchon incident, and because of his poor health.

THAI 'SLANDERS' ON CAMP ATTACK REJECTED

BK310554 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0411 GMT 31 May 86

[Text] Phnom Penh, 31 May (SPK) -- Reports alleging that Vietnamese artillery had shelled a refugee camp in Thai territory were entirely invented by the ultrarightist circles in Bangkok.

As VNA stressed, these accusations are aimed at covering up conflicts within the ranks of the Khmer reactionaries and at diverting public opinion from the fifth withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia, which has just been completed.

Therefore, these latest slanders are merely added to the "Logex 29" logistics exercise that Thailand has just conducted with the United States and to their forthcoming large-scale maneuver codenamed "Cobra Gold" to prove the Bangkok always sticks to its policy of maintaining and aggravating tension at the common border with Cambodia.

PRACHEACHON LAUDS SRV TROOP WITHDRAWAL

BK270920 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 2300 GMT 27 May 86

[Text] It is stated clearly in the statement of the Cambodia-Vietnam-Laos summit conference held in February 1983 that each year a part of the Vietnamese Army volunteers will be withdrawn from Cambodia, taking into consideration the situation in Cambodia. Pursuant to this statement and the communiques of the 10th, 11th, and 12th regular meetings of the Cambodian, Vietnamese, and Lao foreign ministers and in accordance with the growth of the Cambodian revolution, the Governments of the PRK and SRV have decided to withdraw another part of the Vietnamese Army volunteers from Cambodia.

The volunteer forces to be withdrawn this time are the 98th Divisional Group made up of an infantry division, an infantry brigade, an infantry regiment, and a number of subordinate units. This is the fifth withdrawal within the past 4 years. This clearly proves that the Cambodian Armed Forces have grown rapidly and the forces for defending the country and national security of the PRK have been firmly strengthened.

Under the correct leadership of the KPRP, the three categories of the Cambodian Armed Forces have grown and developed quantitatively and qualitatively. Shoulder-to-shoulder with the Vietnamese Army volunteers, the regular units have always been on the front-line and fought successively and effectively. The regional and self-defense militia units have conducted sweeping operations against the enemies and stook shoulder-to-shoulder with the people in defending production, agricultural fields, and enterprises.

Entering 1986, our forces for defending the country and national security have developed more rapidly than in the previous years. Comparing our forces with those of the enemies, we can see that our revolution is becoming more powerful and poised for victory. The Armed Forces and our people have gained mastery both along the border and inside the country. As for the enemy forces, they are declining and becoming weaker every day. After the Cambodian Armed Forces and the Vietnamese Army volunteers attacked and seized the 17 large enemy positions along the Cambodian-Thai border, the routed enemy soldiers have been compelled to split up and hide themselves in the interior of the country. They have no footing nor people's support. Their transportation has become more difficult. Their combat will has worsened and their activities have dwindled. The scale and volume of their acitivities have kept decreasing and the rate of their surrender has increased. Compared with the 1985 dry season, the number of the returnees has doubled since last dry season. The enemies have suffered more serious internal rifts. The three Cambodian reactionary groups have kept scrambling for power. They killed each other and sought every means to attack and kill each other. On the contrary, we have become more closely united. Our people's triple revolutionary movement to attack the enemies, persuade enemy soldiers to surrender, expand our production, and build genuine revolutinary forces has been successful and we have scored great victories in all fields -- military, political, economic, cultural, and diplomatic. This all-round development of the Cambodian revolution has created favorable conditions for us to continue to withdraw and repatriate another part of the Vietnamese Army volunteers this year. The decision to allow the 98th Division of the Vietnamese Volunteer Army to return home this time is another proof of the just stand and good-will attitude of the governments and peoples of the two countries -- the PRK and SRV which have made unreserved effort for peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

The statement of the three Indochinese countries' summit conference and the communiques of the three countries' 10th, 11th, and 12th foreign ministrial meeting stressed that the annual parties withdrawal of the Vietnamese Army volunteers from Cambodia is due to the development and growth of the Cambodian revolution and that all Vietnamese Army volunteers will be withdrawn by 1990.

We have firmly and strictly kept our promise. No reactionary force can distort this fact. For the cause of peace and stability in Southeast Asia, the PRK, SRV, and LPDR have confirmed their readiness to hold negotiations with the parties concerned in order to reach a joint solution, that is the withdrawal of the Vietnamese Army volunteers from Cambodia must be done simultaneously with the elimination of the genocidal Pol Pot clique, respect for Cambodia's rights to self-determination, particularly the right to live without threats from the genocidal clique, and a free election with presence of foreign observers. This is in order to turn Southeast Asia into a zone of peace and stability in which countries of different political systems will coexist peacefully and will not use their territory to oppose another. The countries outside this zone must respect the national rights of the Southeast Asian countries. There must also be an international guarantee and observation on all accords agreed upon. The three Indochinese countries reiterate their proposal for an international conference to discuss all problems involving peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

After fulfilling their lofty international duties, the most profoundly valuable souvenirs that the repatriating cadres and combatants of the 98th Division left behind for us are the heroic model of the revolutionary army, their sincere assistance, and their wholehearted contributions to the brilliant internationalist spirit, the loyalty that binds the two peoples together, Cambodia's revolutionary cause, and peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

On this occasion, our entire party, all people, and all Cambodian Armed Forces would like to express our profound gratitude to the party, government, and fraternal people of Vietnam, and the Vietnamese mothers whose sons are serving in the Vietnamese Volunteer Army and who have been carrying out the noble internationalist duties in Cambodia in order to help our Cambodian people defend and build our Cambodian fatherland. We sincerely wish the repatriating cadres and combatants of the 98th Division good health, happiness, and firm will to forever expand the heroic traditions of the Vietnam People's Army in fulfilling your new tasks for the cause of defending and building Socialist Vietnam.

LPRP Press Release

[Text] On 2 June the LPRP Central Committee issued a press release on the 10th plenary session of the third party Central Committee held between 15 and 31 May to study the spirit and main contents to be included in a political report of the party Central Committee to the forthcoming fourth party congress.

The session heard reports by some key economic units that have effectively carried out their businesses in line with the new economic management mechanism.

Based on objective analysis and strict criticism through studying the lessons drawn from congresses of fraternal parties, particularly from the 27th CPSU Congress, the session examined and evaluated the all-round situation in our country and the party leadership in the past 10 years of entry into the new period of revolution, for example, following the third party congress.

The session also studied and analyzed the world situation relating to the revolution in our country. The session once again affirmed that the line, policies, and strategic policy and plan adopted by our party for the period of transition to socialism in Laos, and approved by the third party congress, is basically correct and constructive.

The session reached complete unanimity on the Political Bureau's guidance ideas and main spirit and contents proposed by Comrade General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan, aimed at further concretaizing the overall line of the transitional period. They are, for example, the tasks, direction, and strategic policy of our country's revolution starting from now until the year 2000, and the direction, tasks, expected figures, and measures contained in the Second 5-Year State Plan ending in 1990.

The session assigned the Political Bureau and the Secretariat of the party Central Committee to study and collect various detailed issues debated and discussed by the session in order to compile a draft political report and to map out advisory plans which will be studies, debated, and used by party committees at various levels so that the entire party and people can contribute their views to the political report and turn this into a constructive study campaign involving the collective intelligence of the entire party and people. Based on this, additional views on the draft political report will be studies and discussed more profoundly at the 11th plenary session of the third party Central Committee, which will be held in the immediate future.

The session called on party committees at various levels, various branches of services, and all mass organizations to highten their sense of responsibility, firmly grasp the party Central Committee's leadership ideas, promote and develop collective democracy, and effectively organize and guide political courses in the immediate future that are aimed at mobilizing party cadres and members, workers, the peasants, socialist intellectuals, and ethnic people of various strata to promote and develop freedom in their way of thinking and contribute their high quality views to the draft political report. In addition, they should constantly and enthusiastically compete in all spheres of work in order to effectively fulfill the 1986 plan, thus scoring achievements to welcome the fourth party congress.

ATHIT DENIES HAWAII TRIP, DENOUNCES RUMORS

[Text] Supreme Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek yesterday urged 60 visitors who have passed Internal Security Operations Command courses to be patient in the face of injustices. The visitors, representing patriotic groups from agencies including the Port Authority of Thailand, Thailand Tobacco Monopoly, Communications Authority of Thailand, State Railway of Thailand and Provincial Electricity Authority, turned up to give Gen Athit moral support at the Supreme Commander Headquarters. Gen Athit thanked them for being sympathetic and said there would be no problems following his dismissal from the top Army post.

"Being in the armed forces, we must comply with the rules. Our country wants peace. We have to think of the majority, not individuals," he said. Urging them to consolidate for national peace, he said: "Our ideas may be different. But everybody is bound to do everything for national solidarity and development and the people's well-being."

Gen Athit said the rumours circulating in various circles were intended to create confusion and cause damage, directly or indirectly. "In order to uphold what is right, we must be patient towards what is wrong. You all have passed the training. So you should know well how to preserve what is right," he said.

Gen Athit said he was familiar with the rumours against him. "I have to stay indifferent. They are all intended to damage my reputation. But I think the people are reasonable enough to judge by themselves what is right. "They are attacking me in every way, with unknown intentions. I have intended to make peace, but some people want to disrupt it . If we want to maintain peace and uphold what is right, we must be patient.," Gen Athit said.

The Supreme Commander declined to say if knew the people responsible for the leaflets and rumours, saying there was no point in creating further confusion. He said he had no plans to leave for Hawaii or for any other foreign destination after he turned over his duties to Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut. It was not yet necessary for him to visit his daughter since they can talk on the telephone, he said.

ATHIT DSMISSAL PREEMPTED PLANNED TRANSFERS

[Text] Supreme Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek issued an order to transfer 190 regimental and battalion commanders before he was dismissed as commander-in-chief, a source said yesterday. The source said Gen Athit's order was thwarted when Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon relieved him of the position.

Among officers who would have been affected by the order were First Infantry Regiment commander Col Somphap Attanan and 11th Infantry Regiment commander Col Amphon Sawetserani. The regiments are the Army's main combat force in Bangkok.

Col Amphon is closely associated with officers of Chulachomklao Royal Military Academy's Class 5 and enjoyed a cordial relationship with Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Thawalit Yongchaiyut.

The transfer orders had been sent separately to the officers affected, but were suspended when Gen Chawalit took over the top post from Gen Athit, said the source.

The Army chief has full authority to transfer officers from the rank of colonel downward without seeking approval from the Defence Minister, Gen Prem. Gen Chawalit indicated on Saturday that he would delegate power to a committee to work out the annual reshuffle list to preclude favouritism and enhance unity in the Army.

'YELLOW RAIN' SAMPLES SAID TO BE POLLEN

[Text] Chanthaburi -- Yellow pollen and not toxic chemicals caused the so-called "Yellow Rain" in a border village here last week, Governor Somphong Phansuwan said yesterday. The governor told THE NATION that illnesses suffered by some villagers during the rain in the village in Tambon Makham of Makham District were a coincidence.

At least four villagers had to be hospitalized for serious headaches and vomiting after taking food cooked in rain water. Governor Somphong said the Ministry of Defence's Chemical Department analyzed samples of the rain and found that its yellowish content was caused by harmless yellow pollen.

Canadian scientists recently found that poisons cited as proof of Soviet use of chemical weapons in Kampuchea and Laos was caused naturally in the areas by a fungus that apparently infests food. The scientists, taking blood samples found that just two percent of people tested near the war zones in Kampuchea and Laos had tricothecenes, the toxins associated with Yellow Rain chemical warfare, in their blood. But the substance was believed to be from infested food, not chemical attacks.

[Text] Loei -- Laotian troops crossed the border into this northern province last night and burned down a school building before escaping, a Border Patrol Police source said today. No one was hurt in the incident which took place in Kaengmuang Village of Tambon A-hi in Thali District. The school building was located on the bank of the Mae Nambuang River which borders Thailand and Laos.

A villager, Thong Kumphapan, 59, told a BPP team who went to investigate the incident that he and his neighbours tried to put out the blaze after the Laotian intruders crossed the river back to Laos. The fire raged for one hour and the whole building was burnt down.

The villagers said the attack might have been an act of revenge. They said a Kaengmuang villager a few days ago crossed the river to Laos and stole a buffalo he had sold to a Laotian.

INDUSTRY MINISTER COMPLAINS ABOUT U.S. RICE

[Text] Thailand must now consider taking protective measures against the U.S. Farm Act, particularly by no longer blindly cooperating with the United States on world economic issues in which Thailand has no specific interest.

The Committee on Thailand-U.S. Economic Relations reported after its recent meeting that the U.S. rice prices for the past seven announcements in as many weeks have been gradually lowered, especially the fifth one which was as much as 11.7 lower than the fourth announcement.

The committee, chaired by Industry Minister Dr Chirayu Itsarangkun na Ayutthaya, announced that the U.S. action, in addition to going against President Ronald Reagan's policy on "free and fair trade," is a deliberate attempt to take over Thailand's rice markets -- an action which could have severe repercussions. According to the U.S. announcement, the weekly rice price quotations will take as the main consideration the prevailing world prices. But the fact is that while the world prices are stationary, the announced U.S. prices have been going down.

One direct result from such an unfriendly action on the part of the U.S. was that exports of top-grade Thai rice had dropped by as much 200,000 tons since the start of this year. Dr Chirayu told reporters that the Thai side has done everything to remedy the situation, but there has been no reply from the U.S. authorities. He added that in this case, the matter will be left to the Foreign and Commerce ministries to act upon through their highest channels.

A source said Thailand will submit protest notes to the United Nations' Food and Agriculture Organisation, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, and other organisations of which Thailand is a member. The Government will seek from these institutions justice and economic cooperation and directly submit the results to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. In the past, the U.S. Government only received information form the U.S. Rice Mills Association.

The source said the meeting agreed not to directly sanction the U.S., but will instead consider future requests for economic cooperation. "From now on, Thailand will first take into consideration the benefit Thailand may derive from such cooperation," he added. Thailand and the U.S. may have been good friends, but in the past, the U.S. always used Thailand as a tool in raising questions in international forums.

Since last April 11, the U.S. rice price announcements for the first and second lots were not much different, but the fourth lot was 1.47 percent lower than the third. The fifth lot took a nosedive of 11.7 percent, and there were drops of 1.2 percent and 0.87 percent in the sixth and seventh lots, respectively. The U.S. prices now are 5.78 cents per lb for long-grain rice and 4.79 cents for medium- and short-grain.

Views Protective Responses

BK021127 Bangkok NAEO NA in Thai 2 Jun 86 pp 7, 10

[Text] Caretaker Industry Minister Chirayu Itsarangkun, who is also chairman of the working committee concerning the U.S. Farm Act, disclosed that the committee met on 30 May to discuss and consider ways and means to prevent the U.S. Farm Act from harming Thai rice trade. Protective measures will later be submitted to the cabinet for its approval.

The minister said that it is noticeable that all parties concerned have already lost their patience in talking nicely with the United States because they have come to realize that political pressure inside that country regarding the legislation is quite forceful. Even President Reagan, who has pledged not to let the U.S. Farm Act affect Thai rice trade, cannot honor his own words.

Chirayu said: "Everyone agreed that we should resort to stronger retaliatory measures. But we must also avoid any action that can harm relations between the two countries." He said Thailand will lodge its complaint with the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. However, it does not expect any concrete solution to the problem. This action will improve Thailand's bargaining position in future bilateral negotiations with the United States.

A source in the working committee revealed that the United States only declared its rice export expansion measures to GATT and failed to give any detail concerning the subsidization program which was designed to reduce its rice production cost. If the United States refused to give any more information about the Farm Act, Thailand will request negotiations with the United States in accordance with Articles 22 and 16.3 of GATT. If no solution is reached during the negotiations, Thailand will officially lodge its complaint with GATT as permitted by Articles 23 and 16.3 and Section 4 of GATT. However, it is unlikely that Thailand would succeed in shielding itself from the impact of the U.S. legislation.

Other retaliatory measures discussed during the meeting include declaring the U.S. agriculture attache persons non grata, recalling the Thai agricultural attache from Washington, regularly summoning the U.S. ambassador to Thailand to hear the complaints against the Farm Act, condemning the United States at meetings of international organizations such as the United Nations, FAO, ESCAP, and GATT. Thailand will ask EEC members and Japan during the meeting between ASEAN and developed countries to be held in Manila in June to exert pressure on the United States since they also detest the U.S. trade reform bill. Australia is another country affected by the U.S. Farm Act.

The committee came up the an idea of collecting donations from people nationwide to buy space in THE NEW YORK TIMES to tell the Americans that the U.S. Farm Act is only aimed at giving subsidies to a small group of some 30,000 people and is unfair to the majority of the people. Most Americans do not know exactly what the U.S. Farm Act means since lobbyists have been trying to conceal the fact that only some 30,000 people will benefit. Besides, the collection of contributions from across the country will convince the U.S. Government that the Farm Act has adversely affected and the hurt the feelings of the Thai people.

UN AMBASSADOR PROTESTS SRV ATTACK ON CAMP

BK310700 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1500 GMT 30 May 86

["Text of protest note to the United Nations to be submitted by Thai Permanent Representative to the United Nations M.L. Phiraphong Kasemsi", dated 30 May -- read by Announcer]

[Text] Upon instructions of my government, I have the honor to draw your attention to the deliberate acts of aggression and inhuman crimes committed by the Vietnamese forces in Kampuchea in violation of Thailand's sovereignty and territorial integrity and against lives of innocent Kampuchean displaced persons as follows:

On 29 may 1986 at around 8:30 a.m. 15 rounds of artillery shells fired by Vietnamese forces landed to much space onto the middle of UNBRO [United Nations Border Relief Operation]-supervised Site 8 camp, which houses some 30,000 Kampuchean civilians kat Tambon Thai Udon, Khlong Hat District, Prachin Buri Province, about 4 kilometers deep inside Thailand. As a result, 11 Kampucheans -- 2 men, 7 women, 1 boy, and 1 girl -- were killed, and some 47 seriously wounded -- 8 men, 7 women, 14 boys, and 18 girls. The shellings also destroyed a number of thatched houses and forced thousands of Kampuchean civilians to flee the area. It was the civilian which was target of attack. The pinpoint accuracy of Vietnamese gunners lobbing shells over the Ta Ngoc Hill lying between the camp and the border clearly indicated the ill intention of the Vietnamese to attack Kampuchean civilians under humanitarian care of UNBRO.

These premeditated acts of atrocities underline and reaffirm further the true nature of Vietnamese forces who have no regards whatsoever for human lives and sufferings. The Vietnamese act of aggression constitutes a serious breach of Thailand's sovereignty and territorial integrity contrary to various pronouncements by Vietnam to respect Thailand's sovereignty and territorial integrity. Not only be the hardships and miseries befall the Kampuchean displaced persons as a result of this Vietnamese assault, but the shelling also posed threat to the lives and livelihood of innocent Thai citizens as well as other international relief workers in the area. It is a blatant violation of the international law and the principles of the United Nations Charger and of fundamental human rights.

The Royal Thai Government strongly condemns this unprovoked and deliberate hostile act by the Vietnamese forces against Thailand and innocent Kampuchean displaced persons and reaffirms its legitimate right to safeguard Thailand's sovereignty and territorial integrity as well as the lives and properties of innocent civilians in Thailand by every means, for which the Vietnamese Government must bear full responsibility and consequences.

I have the honor to request that the text of this letter be circulated as an official document of the General Assembly and of the Security Council

'SLANDEROUS' THAI BORDER SHELLING CHARGE DENIED

OW301514 Hanoi VNA in English 1503 GMT 30 May 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA May 30 -- VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY is authorized to categorically reject the slanderous charge made by the Thai military on May 29 and spread by Western media that Vietnamese artillery based in Kampuchea had fired on a Kampuchean refugee camp on Thai territory, causing many casualties.

Although on-spot international relief workers expressed doubt about the charge and assumed that it was Khmer Rouge troops who opened fire on the camp, the Thai military deliberately tried to put the blame on Vietnam in a bid to cover up the strifes within the various reactionary Khmer factions and at the same time, divert public attention from the fifth partial withdrawal of Vietnamese Army volunteers from Kampuchea.

U.S. ALLEGATIONS AGAINST USSR, SRV REFUTED

OW030121 HANOI Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 2 Jun 86

[From the Press Review]

[Text] On the U.S. Department of State's recent reiteration of its shopworn story about the use of Soviet-made chemical weapons in Southeast Asia to odiously slander the Soviet Union and Vietnam againa, today's QUAN DOI NHAN DAN commentary says:

The United States has launched an odious slander campaign as part of a scheme to collude with the Chinese hegemonists and expansionists, and the reactionaries in the Bangkok ruling circles, to overshadow the three Indochinese countries' goodwill proposals and lower the increasingly high prestige of the PRK.

Washington's replay of the cracked record "Yellow Rain in Southeast Asia" at the very moment of the fifth partial withdrawal of the Vietnamese Volunteer Army from Cambodia is aimed at playing down the significance of this troop withdrawal.

Seemingly, in a fairly close coordination of effort, the Beijing authorities on 30 May repeated the prosy allegation that Hanoi is intensifying its Vietnamization of Cambodia by dispatching hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese to that country, according to a new plan to raise the Vietnamese population there to 700,000, and that the total of Vietnamese emigrants has now reached 60 percent of the Phnom Penh population.

At the same time, Bangkok shouted that the Vietnamese Armed Forces had shelled a Cambodian refugee camp and caused many civilian casualties, despite many internatinal aid officials' expressions of doubt about the Khmer Rouge's [as heard] involvement in this shelling. Even more insolent was the fact that Bangkok had addressed a protest note to the UN slandering Vietnam.

The chorus of slander by Washington, Beijing, and Bangkok has been negated by reality. It only shows that they are the worst enemies of the Southeast Asian peoples.

SPECULATORS, SMUGGLERS ARRESTED IN KIEN GIANG

BK011405 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 30 May 86

[Text] In the recent past, speculators and smugglers of export goods have stepped up their activities in the sea area of Kien Giang Province close to the Cambodian border and the Gulf of Thailand, along the Rach Gia-Ha Tien highway, and on various land and water routes linking this province with An Giang and Hau Giang Provinces and Ho Chi Minh City. They have established contacts with speculators in foreign countries and smugglers in neighboring provinces to siphon off from Kien Giang hundreds of metric tons of export shrimps, tens of metric tons of pepper, and large quantities of other valuable commodities.

In March and April alone, taking advantage of unstable prices on the market and the province's decision to reduce the number of tax stations and with the cooperation of some truck drivers and bad officials at certain state agencies, these dishonest traders plundered and siphoned off large quantities of goods without being checked by various responsible state organs.

Determined to punish speculators and smugglers in order to help stabilize prices on the market and place all sources of export goods under state management, in April and early May, the Kien Giang provincial Public Security Forces, Customs Office, and Tax Bureau coordinated with other management sectors in launching many drives to track down and wipe out smugglers.

To date, Kien Giang has arrested and brought to trial 207 cases involving 366 speculators and smugglers. The province has also recovered 10.46 metric tons of dried shrimps, 730 kg of pepper, 62 metric tons of grain, 1,359,590 dong, and large quantities of other valuable commodities and farm products. These include dozens of cases involving cadres and personnel of some state agencies who have cooperated with dishonest traders in the speculation and smuggling of goods.

Thanks to prompt action against the speculation and smuggling of maritime products, in recent days many localities -- such as Phu Quoc, Ha Tien, Chau Thanh, and Rach Gia -- have been able to procure larger quantities of shrimp. The shrimp procurement station in An Binh ward of Rach Gia City alone has purchased a quantity of shrimps seven times larger than in the past.

HEAVY RAINS FLOOD CROPS IN NORTHERN PROVINCES

[Text] The month of May has seen continuous moderate to heavy rainfalls in the northern provinces. Rainfalls in the Bac Bo Delta provinces have averagedd from 300 to 500 mm, far exceeding the average rainfall in the past 30 years. Heavy rains have flooded 53,792 hectares of rice, 1,295 hectares of corn, 453 hectares of tobacco, 273 hectares of soybeans, and hundreds of hectares of vegetables and subsidiary food crops, crops. In particular, some 9,500 hectares of rice, subsidiary food crops, industrial plants, and vegetables have been heavily inundated.

Ha Bac has had 16,200 hectares of rice, vegetables, subsidiary food crops, and industrial plants under water, including 5,000 hectares of seriously flooded rice. Hai Hung and Ha Nam Ninh each have had 11,000 flooded hectares; Hanoi, 5,300 hectares; and Vinh Phu, 2,000 hectares. The mountainous province of Hoang Lien Son has also had hundreds of hectares submerged rice.

Along with the floods caused by rains, harmful insects and diseases continued to spread on the 5th-month spring rice area last week. Despite a shortage of labor the Ministry of Agriculture has tried by every means to control the situation. Efforts have been made to distribute 235 metric tons of insecticides to the various localities. The various provinces and municipalities have also used hundreds of metric tons of oil, spent hundreds of thousands of man-days, and employed all methods available to minimize the damage caused by insects to the 5th-month spring rice crop.

Many localities and units, considering caring for and protecting the rice crop toward the end of the season as the central emergency task, have concentrated on guiding and organizing laborers to work on the ricefields day and night.

The northern provinces have begun to reap the early plantings of the 5th-month spring rice. Reaping work has been carried out on 51,398 hectares or 5 percent of the cultivated area.

To make up for the spring rice and subsidiary food crop output shortfalls caused by natural calamities, provinces and municipalities throughout the country are now mobilizing all the material and technical resourcces available and making their best efforts to surpass the plan norms for area, output, and production volume during the summer-fall and 10th-month crop seasons. By 25 May, the entire country had plowed 1,141,986 hectares of land for planting the summer-fall and 10th-month crops -- 11.9 percent faster than in the same period last year -- and had transplanted the summer-fall and early 10th-month rice on more than 638,000 hectares.

MALAYSIA

COMMENTARY VIEWS SRV SHELLING OF REFUGEE CAMP

BK021239 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 2 Jun 86

[Text] The Malaysian foreign minister, Tengku Ahmad Rithauddeen, has expressed Malaysia's indignation over the shelling of a regugee camp on the Thai-Kampuchean border by Vietnam last week. The minister has drawn attention to the serious implication that this episode will have, not only for the security of the refugees, but also for peace and general stability in Southeast Asia. Barely a fortnight ago, Vietenam was publicizing its so-called troop withdrawal from Kampuchea and telling the world of its desire for living in peace with all its neighbors. The attack on the refugee camp was obviously intended to terrify the Kampucheans, who would rather stay in a refugee camp than in their own land dominated by an aggressor.

The international community, with the exception of the Soviet Union and a few nations that want its goodwill, has shown its stand on the Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea in successive sessions at the UN General Assembly. None of the leading democratic and even neutral nations of the world have any sympathy with Vietnam's present economic plight, which is jeopardized by its costly adventure in Kampuchea.

If Vietnam were to persist in its aggressive policy toward the people of Kampuchea, it will find itself increasingly isolated and for all intents and purposes it will become a dependency of the Soviet Union. Already, the Soviets are exploiting Vietnam by the [word indistinct] possession of some of its military facilities such as the naval base at Camh Ranh Bay. It is ironic that a country which has often talked about how to liberate the Kampucheans from the excesses of the former Pol Pot regime has allowed itself to be a pawn in the Soviet grand design for geopolitical advancement in Southeast Asia.

The recent shelling of the Kampuchean refugee camp constitutes grave provocation to Thailand. For some years now, Thailand has had to play the role of a frontline state [words indistinct] over the uneasy Thai-Kampuchean border and yet assuring Vietnam of its own and ASEAN's desire for peaceful coexistence.

The international community will agree with the Malaysian foreign minster's view that Thailand should not be left to face the Vietnamese aggression alone. Thailand, through no fault of its own, has become the first line of defense for the whole of Southeast Asia. The Malaysian foreign minister has also said the coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea has his country's support for any application that Prince Sihanouk may be making (?for admission) into the UN. Such a move will have both political and diplomatic value, but it is possible that the Soviet Union will use its power of veto to frustrate Democratic Kampuchea's aspiration to a UN membership. However, the fact remains that year after year, the General Assembly has voted in support of the credentials of the coalition government rather than for the Heng Samrin group, that is Vietnam's ally and collaborator. Malaysia will continue it support for the coalition government headed by Prince Sihanouk.

'TEXT' OF AQUINO 23 MAY SPEECH IN DAVAO

HK310641 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 29 May 86 p 4

["Text" of Speech Given by President Aquino before leaders of Davao City and Eastern Mindanao on 23 May -- place not given]

[Text] I try always to keep my word and, therefore, I am circumspect in making commitments. But I made a commitment to visit you again. I pledged to govern by consultation. I said that in God's appointed time, we shall be free again. Now we are. And I am here, your President, come to consult with you on the problems of this region as you see them and to work out with you the solutions you feel are the best and that you can bear.

I said that I believe in the power of prayer to work miracles. It has. For we prayed not for freedom, but for the strength to persevere in the fight for it without hate or rancor until freedom came without doing violence to our call for reconciliation. And we found the strength and the courage to face down a dictatorship. We prayed for wisdom in leadership even as we committed ourselves to genuine democratic government. And the miracle has happened: No sooner was democracy restored than the people of this region, taking the event at face value, assumed their own leadership as befits a democracy and convened to arrive at an understanding of their problems and work out the appropriate solutions in the proud spirit of self-reliance and people power that had carried the country through to freedom. Our prayers are answered in part: we have a democracy in its full sense and dignity in this region.

What am I saying? That we pray to God and then we work so that deliverance from our tribulations will come through our efforts and singularly to our labor.

The struggle of the Filipinos down the centuries has not been for independence, democracy and progress but for the dignity they confer upon the race that wins and keeps all three. We rejected the economic security of continued colonial servitude when we demanded independence in the midst of the ruins of World War II. We might have had an easier time of it if we had swallowed our pride and delayed. We rejected the irresponsible condition of citizenship in a dictatorship that offered to assume all the power and all the responsibility for our lives. We have occasionally strayed from the path of democratic pride that is native to us but inevitably we have returned to it. I applaud the people and the natural leadership of Davao for taking the leading step in this direction.

You, the people of Davao and Eastern Mindanao, farmers and workers, businessmen and professionals, teachers and students, churchpeople and urban poor, have opened your hearts and minds. The experience has been enriching and leaves me so encouraged. The task of governance cannot be the task of one person or a few people if it is to be done well. We as a people made a revolution together. Am I not right to expect therefore that we as a people must now consolidate the gains of that revolution and work together to make it work for each one of us? You are the first to meet that expectation. You have truly earned the right to call this government your own and a true democracy.

Therefore, commend Minister Ramon Mitra for vindicating this right by appointing a deputy minister for agriculture and food particularly for Mindanao. I shall ask my Cabinet to consider similar appointments in other pertinent ministries. I want nothing to stand between the presidency and areas that have shown such political maturity in the appreciation of their problems.

The single deterrent to recovery and progress in Mindanao you are telling me is the peace and order problem. The problem encompasses not only the insurgency but, shall consult with [as published] the minister of defense on the feasibility of a regional ceasefire immediately for a period of 60 days during which regional leaders can establish contact with the insurgents in this region and negotiate, if not for the end of insurgent activity then for a longer truce during which greater trust might develop between the insurgent leadership and ranks and the government. A trust that can be the foundation of a permanent peace.

I met with 168 rebel returnees at the Carmelite convent this morning. I was struck by the extreme youth of these former insurgents and their obvious bravery and acute sense of justice. It is tragic that such youth and virtue have been wasted in fighting that could be harnessed for the greater good of our country. I assured them of their safety and declared General Magno personally responsible to me in that regard.

Knowing that poverty is a main cause of insurgency and that even the weary insurgent must believe he can have a start before he will consider returning to civil life, I shall consider the feasibility of an arms exchange program. Not cash for guns, but guns for rehabilitation and skills training to permit a smooth reintegration into society. In this regard, I have learned here that there are 33,000 hectaries of military reservations which could be used for land reform and rehabilitation.

All human rights abuses, whether committed by the Armed Forces or the Communists, will be prosecuted equally vigorously. For, on a par with basic material needs, is the hunger for justice. Although I hope that with this new beginning we have achieved, forgiveness will figure greatly when we calculate a better future for ourselves.

Because the peace and order problem is chiefly one of common criminality, I direct the minister of defense and the chief of staff to prepare and immediately implement a disarmament campaign against the warlords in the countryside and the criminal syndicates in the cities. I cannot believe that the main force of the republic cannot eradicate this problem with dispatch. I do not want the warlords around to distort the democratic process that will take place soon after the ratification of a new constitution.

Since criminality is a police problem, to which a police force that is not directly responsible to the community is a main contributor, I shall consider, in consultation with the chief of staff, devolving the authority over police forces back on to the local communities they serve. I shall test this proposition first in Metro Manila. I will not accept as an assumption that the CHDF [Civilian Home Defense Force] are a necessary component of rural security in Mindanao and expect the chief of staff to submit to me a justification for its continued existence.

You raised the issue of political stability as it is affected by the insecurity of third-level civil servants. You should know that on my directive the Civil Service Commission has already issued guidelines regarding the first and second levels. Since the third level involved the need for trust and confidence, we allowed greater discretion in the retention or relief of civil servants in this level. But now that you have pointed out to me that there is a problem hereto, I shall refer the matter to the civil service commissioner for restudy and a report to me within 30 days from today.

Local elections will be held as soon as possible after the ratification of the new constitution. I shall urge the members of the Constitutional Commission, whose full complement I shall have appointed this Sunday, to complete the drafting of a new constitution within three months.

On the issue of the appointment of OICs [Officers-in-charge], we have tried to carefully evaluate all nominees. I ask you now to give them a chance to prove themselves. I have heard unreasonable comments about their lack of experience. I beg you to consider that if they had too much experience they would have been the men of Marcos, who was in power for the past 20 years. I had no experience. If I had had experience it would have been in Marcos politics and I would not have led you to freedom.

Just the same, I encourage those who feel aggrieved over the OIC process to bring your cases to my attention and these will be acted upon with dispatch.

I am in the process of fulfilling my pledge to dismantle the coconut monopoly. While the PCGG [Presidential Commission on Good Government] is working to unearth the anomalies and unravel the complex structure of that body, we shall reconstitute the various boards of the major instruments of the monopoly to restore public confidence in this major sector of our agricultural economy. These bodies are nowhere representative of the coconut farmers or industry. The elections in the Cocofed [Philippine Coconut Producer's Federation] were rigged. The officers were elected in a manner repugnant to our new democratic ethic. I shall protect the coconut farmers from any scheme that stifles their enterprise or steals their chiefly common criminality abetted by warlords and even the military. [sentence as published]

With regard to the insurgency, I have said that I shall call for a ceasefire for a definite and inextendible period during which I hope negotiations to take place that will result in an honorable and lasting peace that will address the legitimate demands of the insurgents without detracting from the security of the people, the stability of their new democracy or the honor of the New Armed Forces. This will be a ceasefire-in-place so that the armed forces shall be positioned to ward off any threats to the security of the people during the period of negotiations. Let me make myself clear on this point. There will be no ceasefire with return of the troops to the barracks that will leave the insurgents a free zone within which to operate with impunity. I shall assume that the insurgent leadership exercises complete control over their men in the field so that any gross violation of the ceasefire will be taken by my government as a deliberate act and a signal of the failure of negotiations and the resumption of hostilities.

While I am considering the time when to call for a general ceasefire, taking the cue from this consultation I rightful share of a major sector of our economy. [sentence as published]

I have heard other more specific issues and have not had time to consider the solutions you propose. I shall seriously consider your proposals and respond to them as soon as I can.

Although we have not made decisions on all the issues you have raised with me, I think a great deal has been achieved already, not least the successful experiment at consultative government that has taken place here.

I beg you to recall that we fought the dictatorship, first and foremost, for democracy and its mature exercise is what you have demonstrated here today. The campaign and the revolution made me proud to be a Filipino. What I have seen here today has made me proud to be your President. Thank you.

15 RESOLUTIONS FILED ON FIRST CON-COM WORKDAY

[Text] The Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] immediately buckled down to serious work to draft a new constitution for the country immediately after its inaugural ceremony and the election of a president and other officials. Fifteen resolutions were filed with the commission with the first hour of the actual session yesterday afternoon.

In the morning's inaugural ceremony, President Aquino keynoted the event with a call for a constitution broad enough to meet present and future exigencies facing the country. She also reminded the commission of the 90-day mandate to draft the new constitution. Mrs Aquino reminded the commission members that the new constitution should protect all the essentials of a true democracy.

Following the president's inaugural address, the commission unanimously elected Justice Cecilia Munoz Palma as president. Palma accepted the post, saying that the challenge to the commission is to write a constitution found on equality, justice, liberty and peace, and to bring about stability in the country.

The 15 resolutions filed on the opening day of the constitutional Commission include, among others, a limit to the president's emergency powers, including the declaration of martial law. The proposals embodied in Resolution No 9 was filed by Con-Com member Hilarion Davide Jr who also introduced into the assembly the measure enjoining Philippine sovereignty over Sabah and the bodies of water recognized as Philippine territorial seas under the United Nations convention of 1982.

In another development, Con-Com member Abraham Sarmiento filed a petition seeking the ouster of former Labor Minister Blas Ople, Teodolo Natividad, Regalado Maambong, and Rustico de los Reyes from the commission. Sarmiento's petition said the three were former KBL leaders whose record of probity, independence and patriotism are questionable. He also accused them of violating Proclamation No 6 which provides for the filling of proper documents.

AQUINO APOLOGIZES FOR 'PRESS FREEDOM' JOKE

[Text] Manila, June 3 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino has publicly apologized for saying she regretted having restored press freedom in the Philippines and explained that the controversial remark was just a joke.

The lively Manila press has criticized Mrs Aquino for telling members of a Catholic women's club who called her Saturday that "maybe it was my mistake to bring press freedom back."

In a statement published by local dailies Tuesday, Mrs. Aquino said that "the fact that I was laughing when I said it, I thought it would be taken as a joke." "I am sorry that I made a joke without saying it was a joke." The 53-year-old widow added that "I just have to remind myself that now that I am a president, I am not supposed to make jokes."

Mrs. Aquino, who was swept to power by a revolt in February, had been denied the traditional "honeymoon" with the press in which the new chief executive is spared from strong criticism in her first 100 days in office.

The largely English-language Philippine press, which was repressed during the latter part of the 20-year rule of deposed strongman Ferdinand marcos, has regained its status as one of the freest in the world.

POLITICAL PARTIES STEP UP UNIFICATION DRIVE

HK310243 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 30 May 86 pp 1, 14

[Text] Three major political parties stepped up their unification drives yesterday in an effort to retrieve their respective traditional bailiwicks and regain their strengths in the coming elections.

The 30-man central committee of the Kilusang Bagong Lipunan (KBL) has called for renewed efforts to unify all political groups not identified with the Aquino administration. However, the 79-year-old Nacionalista Party (NP) said it expects to have the so-called Laurel and Roy wings agree on uniting their forces soon and make it the biggest political party under existing conditions.

The Liberal Party (LP) announced that negotiations for unifying the Salonga and Kalaw factions are underway and that unity is expected to be attained in a few weeks.

KBL leaders were hopeful of unifying the KBL, NP, PNP [Partido Nacionalista ng Pilipinas] and resigned LP members. They claimed that independent political groups led by former Sen. Alejandro D. Almendras, who declined his appointment to the Constitutional Commission, and former Cebu Rep. Ramon Durano have signified their intention to rejoin.

In yesterday's NP meeting, the 21-man NP central committee expressed optimism that the ongoing reorganization campaign will succeed and that many new members have signed up with the party.

THe Partido Nacionalist ng Pilipinas (PNP), meanwhile, has scheduled a meeting of PNP leaders in Baguio City today. Former Labor Minister Blas F. Ople, acting PNP chairman, will preside over the meeting.

The NP central committee reported that the nationwide revitalization drive was boosted by the creation of an organizing committee that will work for the revival of its youth arm, the "Young Nacionalistas."

Metro Manila chapters have reportedly been organized at the University of the Philippines [UP] college of law, Ateneo law school, and San Beda college of law. The three chapters will act as coordinating centers for other chapters to be established in north-eastern, south, and western Metro Manila, respectively. Target for the convention is mid-August.

The organizaing committee is composed of Jose Bayani Baylon, Ariel Salvador Magno, Gabriel de la Merced, and Marlon Alexandre Cruz of UP, and Noel Ostrea of the Ateneo law school.

Almendras and former Deputy Prime Minister and Samar MP Jose A. Rono were constituted into a KBL special committee to pursue the unification efforts and finding a new name for the party.

The KBL central committee confirmed the denial by former Manila MP Arturo M . Tolentino of reports that he had accused the United States Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and the U.S. government of manipulating the selection of Con-Com members. KBL Secretary General Manuel Garcia said: "What Tolentino actually said was that the Aquino administration insisted on the appointment and not the election of Con-Com delegates on the pretext that they could not have people like Jose Ma. Sison, Communist Party founder, and Bernabe Buscayno, New People's Army leader, elected to the constitutional body." What happened is that President Aquino did not appoint Sison and Buscayno, proving that the Aquino administration only used them as an excuse for not calling for election of delegates, Garcia said.

KBL ADVOCATES FEDERAL FORM OF GOVERNMENT

[Text] The Kilusang Bagong Lipunan says the new Constitution to be drawn up by the Constitutional Commission should be one for a federal form of government. According to former Member of Parliament [name indistinct], such a form of government would ensure that the president would not exercise excessive control over the government.

DEVELOPMENT OF LOYALIST MILITARY FACTIONS VIEWED

HK020955 Quezon City WE FORUM in English 27 May - 2 Jun 86 p 13

[By Nora O. Gamolo]

[Text] Upon her accession to office, and with Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, President Aquino retired almost a hundred generals and replaced them with some of the top Reformists of the AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines]. But the saga of the retired loyalist generals did not end there. Some of these generals and officers are believed to be behind the emergence of new groups within the military, a disturbing development considering that more that the insurgency, the pro-Marcos comeback actions are disrupting the normal flow of political life in the country.

Jose Ma. Sison, self-confessed founding chairman of the Communist Party of the Philippines first bared the existence of an apparent split in the military's ranks in a recent forum on the "Prospects of the Left" at the University of the Philippines Asian Center. One camp, Sison said, professes loyalty to the present administration and the other reins loyalty to the former strongman, Marcos.

According to Sison, the pro-Marcos military group has banded together into an organization called I.R.O.G. The acronym stands for the "Integree Reserve Officers Group", an organization of military officers who are not products of the elite Philippine Military Academy [PMA]. It is common knowledge that Marcos' top followers in the military sector, such as former AFP Chief Fabian Ver, are not PMA graduates.

As such, IROG is opposed to the Reformist camp. Some of the key people behind the latest surge of anti-Aquino campaigns are soldiers and officers, particularly from Marcos' bailiwick, the Solid North.

The rift stemmed from the Reformists' dominance of the new AFP. "IROG wants to neutralize, even end, the RAM's [Reform the Armed Forces Movement] hold under the new set-up. But the RAM, fortunately, is for the professionalization of the military. IROG wants the new image out, and logically, its old image back," Sison told his audience composed mostly of students in the University of the Philippines.

However, he discounted the possibility that IROG and other like minded organizations can erode the Aquino administration's popularity. They are "ill-equipped and ill-advised" to stage a government take-over, Sison said.

There are other organizations apart from IROG. Military officers who are not graduates of the PMA had formed their own group called the Brotherhood for Equality and Reforms in the Service (Brothers) in a meeting held in San Fernando, Pampanga last May 10.

Claiming a membership of 10,000 commissioned and non-commissioned officers, Brothers' organizers said "non-PMA'ers feel left out in promotions, assignments and other benefits in the military service."

In Regional Unified Command 3 alone, which hosted the meeting, it was reported that out of nine provincial and Metropolitan District Command officers, six are PMA graduates while the rest are reserve or integree officers. Col. Lorenzo Mateo, for instance, who is RECOM [Regional Command] 3 head, is not a PMA graduate.

Brothers spokesmen said that the group seeks equal treatment in the promotion quota, representation in the promotions board, foreign schooling, assignments and designation in key AFP positions. They also demanded that reserve officers who have served for 10 years should enjoy regular officer status.

The Brothers' organizational meeting was not something to sneeze about. Among the associations represented were the Reserve Officers Legion of the Philippines, Corps of Professors of the Philippine Military Academy, Union of Reserve Officers of the Philippines, Integree Reserve Officers Group or IROG, Movement of Naval Reserve Officers, Philippine Air Force Flying Academy Alumni Association, Direct Commission 1971 and other groups in the New AFP.

Analysts believe that even with Marcos gone, loyalists could still wield considerable influence. Interestingly, the IROG and Brothers' position may not sit well with the Reformists' position to professionalize the Philippine military establishment.

A puzzling development for instance, is the persistent report about the situation in Fort Bonifacio, a known loyalist bailiwick. One such report says that 67 tanks are still missing and 40,000 soldiers are unaccounted for, remaining on AWOL (absence without leave). Observers note that these men can be readily absorbed into the loyalist mainstream.

Factionalism within the military fold and how the various cliques in the sector look at their current mission now would be a point that bears watching in the coming days.

RAMOS ALLEGES MARCOS LOYALIST TERROR PLOT

[Text] Armed Forces of the Philippines Chief of Staff General Fidel Ramos yesterday bared an alleged Marcos loyalist plot to sow terror through assassination and sabotage. General Ramos alerted all military and police units against the loyalists' terror plot. General Ramos said the Marcos loyalists terror plot is to be carried out this month and dubbed Operation June Bride. Among those marked for assassination were Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, the president's brother Jose Cojuangco, Natural Resources Minister Ernesto Maceda, Trade and Industry Minister Jose Concepcion Jr. and Capital Regional Command chief brigadier General Ramon Montano. Bombing targets include the bank of the Philippine Islands, the Manila Cathedral, Cojuangco Building in Makati, and other business, military and public installations.

LOYALIST MARCHERS CITE MARCOS BENEFICENCE

[By Reporter Raissa Lamson Espinosa]

[Text] The 15-day march for Marcos's comeback climaxed with a rally at the Quezon Memorial Circle in Quezon City yesterday. As of presstime Marcos's supporters claimed that former assemblyman Arturo Tolentino would be taking his oath of office as acting president of the Philippines on the strength of over five million signatures collected nationwide.

Two Sundays ago, Tolentino had been proclaimed acting president at the Quirino grandstand, at the Rizal Park. But tolentino chose not to take his oath.

Yesterday, the crowd was estimated to be from 20,000 to 25,000 by Capt. Eduardo Crispino, deputy for operations of the Northern Police District. (Crispino compared the size of the crowd to the one million during Pope John II's visit in the same place.)

From random interviews, BUSINESS DAY learned that the supporters want deposed president Marcos to return so that he could defend himself from the charges of hidden wealth and graft.

A supporter who refused to give her name because her relatives are all pro-Cory, said Marcos's hidden wealth was the love hidden for him in the hearts of his supporters.

Various supporters all had a wealth of stories to tell about the good things the former first family and their men have done. Brigida Ortega, 65, a former barangay chairman at the Bagong Silang relocation site in Caloocan City, spoke proudly of the 19 plaques of recognition she received pursuing Marcos's projects. She was particularly proud of the title bestowed her by the president last November 22, 1985, as the "Most Outstanding Unsung Heroine of the Philippines."

Nanay Silvester said she merely had to approach the relatives of former Caloocan mayor Macario Asistio to get funding from Marcos for the 17 completed public faucets, and four deep wells for her community. Over 1,000 of her neighbors are attending the rally, she claimed.

Another Marcos supporter who declined to be named said she could never forget how a simple letter of hers written to Mrs. Imelda Marcos in Malacanang enabled her seriously ill son to get free hospitalization, drugs, medicine and blood. She also recalled that as a Nacida (National Cottaged Industry Authority) member, she and other members were handed by Mrs. Marcos P500 each as "calamity aid" in 1971, 1972, 1974 and 1976. They were even told not to pay the aid back.

"And what has Cory done?" they asked.

Emiliana Peralta, 53 volunteered the answer with her own story. She said her two sons Jaime and Alfredo and her daughter Cynthia, had all been dismissed from the Bureau of Lands for lack of civil service eligibility, although they had been working there for seven years. She alone, a widow working also in the Bureau of Lands, was left to feed the family.

Meanwhile, the PHILIPPINES NEWS AGENCY reported that thousands of supporters of deposed president Ferdinand Marcos marched from Valenzuela, Metro Manila, yesterday morning on their way to the Quezon Memorial Circle in Quezon City, and converged into what could be the biggest rally for the return of the ex-president.

The marchers, some of them coming all the way from the Ilocos region, were shouting the phrase Marcos pa rin (We are still for Marcos) along the way; as they traversed Eipifanio de los Santos Avenue (EDSA) from the Bonifacio Monument in Caloocan City.

The Metropolitan Police Force (MPF) and the PC [Philippine Constabulary] capital regional command (Capcom) were placed on alert to prevent violent confrontations between the loyalists and sympathizers of President Corazon C. Aquino.

At least three persons, including a photojournalist, were injured in sporadic stoning incident that marred the march of the loyalists as they reached Balintawak in Quezon City on their way to the Quezon Memorial Circle.

Injured were Roger Margallo, a photographer of the PHILIPPINES NEWS AGENCY a two-year-old girl identified as Janney Sosa, and Roman Henandez, a stallholder at the family market in Balintawak.

The loyalists' march actually began in Ilocos Norte, home province of the former president, last May 17. The marchers from the North, numering about 3,000 arrived at the Bulacan provincial athletic grounds in Malolos shortly before Friday midnight. They continued their march Saturday morning and reached Valenzuela, Metro Manila Saturday night.

COMMUNIST JOURNAL CALLS BOYCOTT 'MAJOR' BLUNDER

[Text] Manila, June 3 (AFP) -- The banned Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) has openly admitted that its boycott of the February presidential election was a blunder that sidelined the left during a successful popular uprising.

Election frauds triggered a civilian-military revolt that toppled President Ferdinand Marcos and swept opposition candidate Corazon Aquino to power

In an unusual public admission of error, the party nevertheless said in its organ THE NATION that "the future is bright" for the CPP, saying its forces were still intact and enjoyed popular support. The May issue of the party organ, delivered to news agencies here Tuesday, blamed the party Executive Committee for opting for a boycott and said the higher Politburo recently declared the move a "major political blunder."

"Where the poeple saw in the February 7 snap presidential election a chance to deliver a crippling blow on the Marcos regime, a memorandum by the Executive Committee...saw it merely as a "noisy and empty political battle." "The boycott policy erred in its overall assessment of the political situation at the time of the snap election," it said.

The organ confirmed that "we missed out on important political as well as military opportunities and suffered other negative effects as a result of our erroneous boycott policy." THE NATION said that following the boycott debacle "steps are being taken to encourage and develop the democratic spirit and democratic ways of doing things in the party."

While in Tokyo, Finance Minister Ongpin said the Philippines is preparing its 6-year economic plan to be completed in September. Ongpin forecast a 1 and 1/2 percent growth rate this year for the country's economy.

PHILIPPINES' LAUREL ASKS ABE FOR INCREASED AID

[Text] Tokyo, June 4 KYODO -- Philippine Vice President and Foreign Minister Salvador Laurel called Wednesday for an increase in Japan's economic assistance to restructure his country's debt-ridden economy. Laurel made the request in a 90-minute meeting with Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe, Japanese officials said.

Abe told the visiting Philippine leader Japan is ready to send a mission to the Philippines if the Southeast Asian country has "specific requests" for Japanese financial aid, a Japanese Foreign Ministry official said.

The two countries signed an agreement last December on a 49.5 billion yen aid package. Japan's quasi-governmental Overseas Economic Cooperation Fund (OECF) and the Philippines last week concluded a contract for 16.5 billion yen of the total package for seven economic development projects. The official also said Abe told Laurel that the Japanese Government is prepared to increase grants and technological assistance to the Philippines, which has external debts of 26 billion dollars.

Laurel noted that his country's interest payments for the mammoth debt has reach two billion dollars a year, or roughly half of the country's annual foreign currency revenue. During a two-day meeting sponsored by the World Bank, Philippine officials sought emergency financial aid from the United States, Japan, West Germany and Australia, as well as the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, to ride out their country's fiscal crisis.

While pledging self-help measures to avert the nation's bankruptcy, the officials warned that the fiscal deficit this year may skyrocket to 39.2 billion pesos or 6 percent of GNP, up from 11.2 billion pesos last year, unless "drastic new measures" are taken. In reference to alleged payoffs involving Japanese companies and the ousted Marcos Government in connection with Japan's official development assistance ODA, Abe [said] the ODA to the Philippines had been intended for its people and had been beneficial to them, the official added.

Laurel said the new Philippine Government of President Corazon Aquino is dealing with armed members of the communist New People's Army (NPA) through negotiations and military means. The vice president speculated that 90 percent of NPA members are foes of ousted President Ferdinand Marcos, and said that the Aquino Administration has been trying to encourage them to support the new government, the Japanese official told reporters after the meeting. The vice president predicted that "time will settle" the political conflict with Marcos loyalists and "prospects are bright" for a solution to the issue of Islamic opposition in the southern Philippines.

Abe proposed regular consultations by deputy foreign ministers over political issues and diplomacy between the two countries. Japanese officials said details of the new forum will be worked out through diplomatic channels. He also told Laurel he is looking forward to talks in Manila later this month with Laurel and other Philippine leaders at the annual consultations with foreign ministers from member countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and dialogue partners, including Japan and the United States.

The visiting vice president thanked Japan for conveying ASEAN requests and views to leaders of the world's seven major industrial democracies at their annual gathering in Tokyo May 4-6.

Laurel arrived in Tokyo Tuesday on an official visit, the first by a member of the Aquino Cabinet. He was to meet with Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and Finance Minister Noboru Takeshita in the afternoon.

Meets Nakasone

[Text] Tokyo, June 4 KYODO -- Philippine Foreign Minister Salvador Laurel told Japan's Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone Wednesday his ministry is responsible for overseeing entire foreign aid to facilitate inflows of assistance from abroad. Laurel said the new foreign aid policy was adopted by the new Philippine Government of President Corazon Aquino during a recent cabinet meeting, officials said. The cabinet took tne step to simplify procedures for foreign aid and receive and monitor financial aid from Japan and other countries, an official said Laurel told Nakasone.

The official in the Japanese Foreign Ministry said Laurel, who is also vice president, explained to Nakasone the cabinet decision to ensure a continuation of economic assistance from the Japanese Government, which has been under fire from the opposition parties for its financial aid to the former Manila government under former President Ferdinand Marcos.

The prime minister said his government is making efforts to increase official development assistance (ODA) despite fiscal difficulties, Japanese officials related. Noting the Aquino Government marked its 100th day Wednesday, Laurel was quoted as thanking Japan for its support "at this important juncture."

Nakasone and Laurel discussed Japan's economic aid to the Philippines, which has become a controversial subject over alleged bribes involving Japanese companies during the Marcos regime. Laurel told Nakasone that his country hopes to discuss trade through subcabinet consultations by deputy foreign ministers, which were proposed by Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe during his Wednesday morning meeting with Laurel.

The Japanese officials said Nakasone hailed the Aquino Government's "liberal policy" to deal with the Communist New People's Army (NPA). Laurel contended that 90 percent of NPA soldiers are not Communists and that the Philippine Government considers the nation's economic recovery important to prompt them to surrender their weapons and return home, according to the officials.

As in his meeting with Abe, Laurel requested an increase of economic aid from Japan in his talks with Nakasone.

SEMICONDUCTOR TRADE TALKS WITH U.S. END 4 JUN

[Text] Tokyo, June 4 KYODO -- Japan and the United States Wednesday ended a two-day subcabinet-level talks on semiconductor trade to iron out details of a broad agreement reached a week ago, according to an official of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI). Osamu Watanabe, director of the America-Oceania Division, said the talks between Deputy U.S. Trade Representative Michael Smith and MITI Vice Minister for International Affiars Kazuo Wakasugi focused on the issue of U.S. firms' access to the Japanese market.

Watanabe refused to disclose the contents of the talks at strong request of the U.S. Administration. Both sides, the MITI official said, have almost finished the work to select elements involving the share of U.S. microchips in Japan in a document to be jointly announced by them. "Substantial progress has been made toward final agreement in the Smith-Wakasugi talks," Watanabe said.

Yuji Tanahashi, deputy director of the Machinery and Information Bureau, is leaving for Washington Wednesday night to cement the details of the other issue -- alleged "dumping" of Japanese semiconductors in the U.S. Market.

Michio Watanabe, international trade and industry minister, and U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter reached a broad agreement last Wednesday.

YEUTTER URGES OPEN BIDS FOR KANSAI AIRPORT

[Text] Tokyo, June 3 KYODO -- U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter has delivered a letter to the Japanese Government urging it to ensure open international bidding for work on the new 1 trillion yen Kansai Airport project, government sources said Tuesday. The letter was handed to Transport Minister Hiroshi Mitsuzuka by Yeutter during his recent visit to Japan to discuss bilateral trade friction, they said. It renewed a request made in working-level consultations in February, and apparently stems from a lack of action by Japan since then, the sources said.

Kansai International Airport Corp. plans to start work this fall to build the airport -- to be open 24 hours a day -- on reclaimed land off the Senshu coastal area in Osaka. It is due to open in spring 1993.

A total of 6,600 firms have already shown interest in participating in three sectors of the project -- engineering, consulting and commodity distribution. Among them are over 30 foreign firms, includng Bechtel Corp., a major U.S. engineering firm. Noting that many U.S. firms are very interested in such a large-scale project, the letter specifically asks Japan to reconsider foreign firms' participation in the project just as Japanese firms are allowed to take part in construction projects in other countries.

The Japan Civil Engineering Contractors' Association expressed its opposition late last month to foreign participating in the project, saying it would cause confusion and citing such technical difficulties as accomplishing the work in a limited time.

BANK OF JAPAN PAYMENTS PRODUCE BUDGET SURPLUS

[Text] Tokyo, June 3 KYODO -- A huge increase in the Bank of Japan's payments into the national treasury will prevent a revenue shortfall in the government's general account for fiscal 1985 ended in March this year, and will even produce a surplus. The Finance Ministry made this clear Tuesday in announcing tax revenues for April this year.

The Central Bank's payments into the state coffers showed an increase of 312.5 billion yen compared with the government's estimate in its supplementary budget. This, coupled with a leftover in reserve funds and expense savings, will more than offset an expected drop of 200 billion to 300 billion yen in tax revenues compared with an estimate in the supplementary budget, the ministry said.

That portion of tax revenues received in April, which were included in the revenues of the previous fiscal year, amounted to 3.62 trillion yen, up 29.2 percent from a year before. As a result, the cumulative total of fiscal 1985 tax revenues came to 33.67 trillion yen, up 10.8 percent from the like period of the previous year, exceeding a 9.3 percent growth estimated in the supplementary budget.

However, the total tax revenues for fiscal 1985 are likely to post a decline compared with an estimate in the supplementary budget because of a substantial drop in corporate tax revenues to be paid by those companies which ended their business year in March. Corporate taxes of these firms were to be paid in May and included in the fiscal 1985 tax revenues. Major export-oriented firms, such as automakers, suffered sharp profit drops owing to the yen's appreciation against the dollar.

JOINT ELECTRONICS VENTURE IN SAN DIEGO BEGUN

Mepcopal will prodice cermet trimmers, wire-wound trimmers, dual in-line pin (pin) switches, precision potentiometers and turn-counting dials at a 12,800-square-meter plant which will employ 100 people. Initial investment in the first year will amount to 6 billion dollars, which will be borne equally by the two partners. The company's sales target for 1987 is 10 million dollars.

The appreciation of the yen and the perfection of an automated production line are the key factors behind Copal's signing of the joint venture agreement, Copal officials said.

KIM IL-SONG SAYS DPRK SUCCESSOR ISSUE 'RESOLVED'

OW020131 Tokyo KYODO in English 0124 GMT 2 Jun 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 2 KYODO -- North Korean President Kim Il-song has declared that the issue of who will succeed him has been satisfactorily resolved. A Pyongyang Radio broadcast monitored in Tokyo Sunday said Kim's remark was contained in a transcript of lectures he issued Saturday on the 40th anniversary of the founding of the Kim Il-song School for North Korean Workers' Party Cadres.

It quoted him as saying that there has been a satisfactory solution" [quotation marks as received] to the question of the succession of revolutionary achievements in the Workers' Party.

He said a leadership capable of taking over the party's thought and guidance has been consolidated, adding that the foundation of the party's system and thought has been solidified "as firmly as a rock." Kim said that the correct solution to the succession issue is a brillilant achievement and a great victory for the party.

LDP HANDS OUT ELECTION FUNDS TO CANDIDATES

[Text] Tokyo, June 3 KYODO -- The ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) Tuesday handed out 10 million yen each in campaign funds and a promise of another 20 million yen for some of the first batch of candidates running on the party ticket for the July 6 Diet elections. The hand-out took place at the LDP headquarters as Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, acting as president of the governing party, delivered certificates of candidacy to the 20 candidates.

They are all members of the 10 rural constituencies where the number of the lower house seats were cut or which had their boundaries redrawn as a result of the revised election law enacted last May. In distributing the election war chest -- in cash -- the LDP election managers also promised to make available up to 20 million yen in additional party campaign funds for LDP candidates without cabinet experience. The candidates are also expected to get financial support from their own faction leaders, who traditionally take care of a substantial part of the campaign costs.

The list of candidates who got the 10 million yen cash Tuesday included Koichi Kato, the Defense Agency director-general, who represents the No. 2 electoral district in Yamagata Prefecture. The number of Diet seats in Kato's constituency, a rural district in northern Honshu, was reduced by one, from four to three, by the new election law aimed at correcting discrepancies of representation between rural and urban districts.

Kato, who has been returned to parliament five times from the same district, is not expected to have trouble in the upcoming election. Kato came out on top in the previous December 1983 lower house election, garnering nearly half of the 298,472 votes cast in the then four-member district.

The LDP is expected to endorse a total of 320 candidates for the lower house in the upcoming elections -- each of them expected to get the same financial backing from the party as those who collected their war chests Tuesday. Apart from dishing out campaign funds, LDP managers Tuesday also decided to ask all cabinet members and party senior officers to spend at least five days on election tours to back LDP candidates in the upcoming double election -- a crucial test for Nakasone's political strength in the remaining five months of his second two-year term as party president and hence prime minister.

Speaking at a party caucus meeting Tuesday, Nakasone vowed to capture "a majority in parliament sufficient for carrying out government policies" in the upcoming elections. The vaguely worded statement apparently reflected Nakasone's efforts to avoid a backlash among party rivals for giving overly ambitious campaign promises.

RELEASE OF ROK POLITICAL PRISONERS URGED IN TOKYO

[Text] Tokyo June 1 (KNS-KCNA) -- A meeting of Japanese people for rescuing Japan-resident Korean political prisoners in South Korea was held on May 27 in Tokyo under the co-sponsorship of the "Society of Families and Overseas Koreans for Rescuing Japan-resident Korean Political Prisoners in South Korea" and the "National Council of the Society for Rescuing Japan-Resident Korean Political Prisoners in South Korea". At the meeting the reporter bitterly denounced the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique for having imposed "care and custody for the preservation of public peace" five times upon So Chun-sik, a Japan-born Korean student in South Korea, and called for struggling as ever for the release of all political prisoners.

Criticizing the unjust acts of the U.S. and Japanese authorities in encouraging the fascist clique, he said that the tour of the Japanese "crown prince" to South Korea slated for this fall must be checked.

Solidarity speeches were made by representatives of many organisations for rescuing political prisoners and Japanese civic organisations and a resolution was adopted at the meeting.

VNS URGES PAN-NATIONAL ANTI-U.S. STRUGGLE

SK031325 (Clandestine) Voice of National Salvation in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 1 Jun 86 "Let Us All Advance Along the Road of National Salvation Hand in Hand With Each Other, Regardless of Differences in Ideologies, Ideals, Beliefs, Political Views, Factions,and Assertions" -- [Talk entitled From the "Our Assertion" program]

[Text] As you know, the active anti-U.S. and antigovernment struggle of the students and the masses of all strata opposing the U.S. colonial rule and the Chon Tu-hwan ring's fascist rule has been waged daily across the country, taking on various aspects and drawing the attention of people at home and aborad. The masses of all strata, having launched into the struggle, are crying out, "Down with the fascist dictatorship" and "The United States should withdraw its troops," and are waging a daring struggle, risking their lives.

The U.S. aggressors and the Chon Tu-hwan fascist group, extremely flustered by the vigorous struggle of the students and the masses of all strata, which is expanding and heightening daily, are viciously maneuvering to divide and demolish this struggle. They are resorting to all sorts of tactics and machinations to divide and demolish the student struggle and to create division, hostility, and jealousy among the students, workers, religionists, and the opposition figures. The United States and the Chon Tu-hwan ring are resorting to the mean tactics of creating division adn dissension as well as to fascist suppression to obliterate the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle of the students and the masses of all strata and to maintain the fascist colonial rule continuously.

In order to win victory in the anti-U.S. and antifascist resistance under such circumstances, our South Korea masses, who are aspiring for independence, democracy, and reunification, should realize unity among ther masses of all strata. As our masses are waging a struggle against powerful imperialist aggressive forces like the United States and an atrocious and brutal fascist group like the Chon Tu-hwan ring, it is most urgent that the entire people are united and wage a struggle as one united force. In order for all the people who are aspiring for the anti-U.S. struggle and who are yearning for democracy to be firmly united under the banner of independence, democracy, and reunification, they should trascend ideologies, ideals, political views, beliefs, factions, and assertions. The differences in ideologies, ideals, political views, beliefs, factions, and assertions should not obstruct the unity of the anti-U.S. and antifascist patriotic forces.

No doubt, even those who are living in one country and under the same social system can hold different ideologies, ideals, political views, beliefs, factions, and assertions. Yet such differences should not prevent them from forming a joint front in the cause of the nation and the masses. The problem is how to make the differences in ideologies, ideals, political views, beliefs, factional interests, and assertions serve the sacred cause of the interests of the nation.

The sacred cause of the nation and the masses for our South Korean people today is to realize the anti-U.S. struggle for national liberation, the democratization of society, and the reunification of the country. The misfortune and pain resulting from the U.S. colonial rule, the fascist oppressive rule of the Chon Tu-hwan ring, and the division of the country are not suffered by a certain faction or individuals alone. Because of the U.S. colonial rule, prolonged for more than 40 years, and because of the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist dictatorship, the entire masses are suffering from the misfortune and pain, and this is worsening with each passing day.

In view of the situation, if the masses fail to unite their will for national salvation and place excessive emphasis on ideologies, ideals, political views, and factions and advocate assertions and factional interests, they will never be able to bring an end to the U.S. colonial rule and the Chon Tu-hwan fascist regime, nor will they accelerate the cause of reunifying the country, the long cherished desire of the masses. Furthermore, if they turn away from and oppose the anti-U.S. and antifascist movement for national salvation, which is the demand of national history, while placing excessive emphasis on the differences in ideologies, ideals, political views, and beliefs, absolutely adhering to the interests and assertions of a certain faction, they will not be able to escape the stern trail of history and the masses.

Our South Korean National Democratic Front warmly calls upon everyone who truly loves the country and the nation and who desires independence, democracy, and reunification to transcend ideology, ideals, political view, beliefs, faction, and assertions and to launch into the road of national salvation all together hand in hand, and will wage a daring anti-U.S. and antifascist movement for national salvation in the future as well together with the masses of all strata. By so doing, we will certainly bring about a new world of the masses free from foreign forces' domination and interfernce and fascist oppressive rule.

DJP'S CALL FOR POLITICAL DIALOGUE TERMED 'TRICK'

[NODONG SINMUN 3 June commentary: "A Wothless Trick for Placation and Deception"]

[Text] Traitor Chon Tu-hwan's DJP has recently been employing various forms of tricks to weaken and obliterate the will to revise the constitution of the off-stage democratic forces and people of all walks of life in South Korea. The DJP's scheme to this effect is well expressed in its unprecedentedly frantic babbling that it will take the lead in developing democracy and its calling for a great compromise with regard to the issues related to the constitutional revision and for discussion of the constitutional revision within the framework of the National Assembly with no preset conditions in this regard.

Although the DJP is noisily advertising as if it were willing to revise the Constitution in a democratic way, it is nothing but a hollow slogan. If indeed the DJP has a modicum of willingness to take the lead in democratic development in South Korea, it should change the disposition prevailing in the party itself before doing anything else. Nevertheless, a fellow holding the chairmanship of the DJP is now emphasizing that the party should ready itself to adapt to the reality based on its past disposition and to play the leading role in shaping the political situation. It is common knowledge that the DJP is, and has been, a private political party serving a dictator and that it is a fascist party more flagrant than Hitler's Nazi Party.

That a group of thugs which has not so much as one aspect worthy of a political party is now determined ot take the lead in democratic development in South Korea on the basis of its fascist disposition is an intolerable mockery and challenge to the people's will for democracy.

Has the DJP ever committed itself to democracy after declaring that it will do so? Although it has put up a nameplate reading "Democratic Justice Party," a seemingly good name, the only thing the dictatorial party has done to date is despotic bayonet wielding. It is nothing but a deceptive trick that the DJP is now prattling as if it were ready to commit itself to politics based on dialogue, while claiming that it will tackle the issue related to the constitutional revision within the framework of the National Assembly without attaching strings to it. Has a bill for democratization advanced by the oppositon party ever been once passed in the National Assembly?

The DJP coteries babble about political development and parliamentary government whenever they open their mouths. However, politics are becoming violence-oriented with the passage of time. The National Assembly has been turned into a stage which the DJP dominates. In the National Assembly, even the activity of the members of the DJPs opponent party is subject to legal restrictions.

Expecting that the DJP, which has already prepared a bill called amendment to the National Assembly law whose aim is to make the House speaker grab suppressive power over the National Assembly by equipping him with sword, would participate in politics based on dialogue is a foolish act similar to hoping for a rose to blossom in a garbage can. It is no accident that the venom-fanged DJP is deceptively trying to make itself appear as if it were interested in South Korea's democratic development. It is nothing but a trick designed to placate the South Korean people's enthusiasm for constitutional revision by conjuring up in their hearts an illusion about the party. It is also, perhaps more important, a trick to cajole the opposition party into the National Assembly and bury it under its own arbitrariness and despotism after playing the game of empty talk with it.

In South Korea, even under grave circumstances in which fascist bayonets are being wielded, the anti-U.S. and antidictorial struggle by the youths, students, and workers is being carried out vigorously. On 31 May, some 30,000 people staged a demonstration struggle for the sake of a rally held for constitutional revision in Chonju.

The more relentless the violence becomes, the more strongly the people fight against the violence, doubling their energy. This is nothing but an ominous sign for the Chon Tu-hwan ring which is scheming to prolong its stay in power. While exerting its last-ditch effort to find a way out in political machinations and bayonet-wielding, the Chon TAu-hwan ring and its DJP are clinging fast to a trick designed to cloak their traitorous nature. Because of their own inherent fascist disposition, traitor Chon Tu-hwan and the DJP ar the incarnation of dictatorship which can no longer continue to exist even for a moment without bayonet-wielding terrorism. They are also a political party made up of thugs.

Even at this moment, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is suppressing with bayonets a great number of youths, students, and people who are calling for independence and democracy, suffocating them by the use of even chemical bombs, and is now wickedly attempting to punish the Mintongnyon after branding it as an antistate organization.

The DJP's wicked plot to realize their ambitions for long-term office by the divide and rule of the democratic forces can never fool anybody. The South Korean people are spitting on the DJP's placating trick which is so transparent that its core can be seen and are now determined not to tolerate or connive with it.

NKDP ASSEMBLYMEN'S COOPERATION WITH DJP DEPLORED

SK040546 (Clandestine) Voice of National Salvation in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 1 June 86

[Talk by commentator Yu Chong-won: "We Call For Self-Reflection" -- from the feature program "Holiday Reception Room"]

[Text] As you know, the word party is explained in the dictionary as follows: The etymology of the word party is (parus) in Latin, which means part. Therefore, parties are of a confrontational nature. It has become very basic common knowledge that the opposition parties, confronting the ruling party, check and criticize its blunders, and wage a struggle against it. However, there are some opposition figures who act in concert with the ruling DJP even in the National Assembly. Moreover, even while the Chon Tu-wan ring is making it its business to indiscriminately trample underfoot fundamental democracy, to brutally massacre thousands or tens of thousands of its peaceful countrymen, to continuously arrest, imprison, and torture numerous democratic figures and patriotic youths and students, they are continuously urging the patriotic masses and NKDP figures -- who are waging struggles -- to make a compromise with the ruling party.

They are trying to persuade NKDP National Assemblymen, who are waging a struggle to revise the Constitution, by saying that politicians must promote a political atmosphere in which President Chon Tu-hwan will be able to resign honorably after completing his term in office as he has promised; and that if some hardline opposition figures unilaterally demand that President Chon Tu-hwan resign before his term in office expires, or if they continuously attempt to overthrow his regime by any abnormal means before his term of office expires, they must calmly think what sort of influence their attempt would exert upon our future political situation; and that they hope to pass the politically critical moments in 1986 and 1988 without the discontinuation of constitutional politics and will make efforts to do so. It is remarkable that what they are saying is the same as the proposal by the DJP that the revision of the Constitution be discussed in 1989. It is no wonder their remarks and acts are the same as those of the DJP spokesman.

All this clearly shows that such opposition figures who act in concert with the DJP are bogus oppositionists who oppose democracy and nationalism and who thoroughly serve the Chon Tu-hwan dictatorship. They have also lost the character of intellectuals as well as politicians. If their instinct and the capacity to be conscious of facts, they should have acutely perceived the meaning of reigning in a dictator and his committing atrocious violence after the death of Yusin master Pak Chong-hui and the great injustice and irregularities in this, even belatedly. How can one talk about intellectuality if one does not have the intelligence capable of seeing wrongs through lessons and of (?anticipating) the fate that is coming? It is a natural law that a bud sprouts, grows, and bears fruit. In a social movement, as in natural law, the aspirations of the masses for independence and democracy are destined to be realized.

Those who are living must have heard the numerous anti-U.S. and antifascist slogans for independence and democratization continuously ringing out in Seoul, Pusan, Kwangju, Taegu, Inchon, Masan, and all across the country. Although the ringing of the slogans is like a bud just emerging, it is a sign that it will certainly come into full bloom as reality and bear fruit in South Korea.

Some opposition figures who act in concert with the DJP should, though belatedly, listen, reflecting on at an early date such vigorous voices of justice and demands of the times and history as "Let us revive the country, which is ruined by pro-U.S. flunkeyism, through anti-U.S. struggle" and "Down with the military dictatorship."

SEOUL SAID NOT APPROPRIATE VENUE FOR OLYMPICS

[Unattributed talk: "The Olympics Should Be Held in A Place Where Democratic Freedom and Peace Are Guaranteed"]

From the beginning, the Olympics have been an international festival assuming the promotion of peace, harmony, and cooperation among peoples of the world through sports as its sacred ideals. For this reason, the venue for the Olympics should be selected, as a matter of course, among such places where no political troubles exist and where democratic freedoms and lasting peace are guaranteed, in accordance with the ideals of the Olympics. In view of the Olympic ideals, Seoul can never become a place of festival for peace, friendship, and joy for the youths of good-will of both sexes.

Foremost among the reasons as to why Seoul of South Korea cannot become a venue for the Olympics is related to the fact that the Korean peninsula is heavy with the danger of war more than anywhere else in the world. As a matter of course, the Olympics, a festival of joy and friendship for the youths of both sexes from all over the world, must be held in a place where peace and security are firmly guaranteed. Only when the Olympics are held in such a place where peace and security are firmly guaranteed. Only when the Olympics are held in such a place where peace and security are guaranteed can the athletes from all over the continents in the world with great hope and aspirations conduct the sports events in peace with their hearts filled with friendship and amity, while giving all to their athletic talents and special abilities.

However, the situation prevailing on the Korean peninsula is very tense. The U.S. imperialists are shipping a great number of war means into South Korea where they have already deployed some 1,000 nuclear weapons, while clinging to their war maneuvers and conducting powder-reeking war exercises almost daily in the air, on the ground, and at sea.

The U.S. imperialists are also making it a daily business to commit military provocations in areas close to the military Demarcation Line. Because of this, a dangerous situation is being created where any accidental incident can cause an outbreak of a terrible war. In such a place it is absolutely impossible to hold the Olympics, a festival of peace and friendship, in peace and in security. Another reason as to why seoul of South Korea cannot become a venue for the Olympics in that South Korea, a total U.S. colony which is ruled by a fascist military dictatorship, is the most reactionary society where even the most basic human rights and democratic freedoms are ruthlessly trampled underfoot.

The Olympics, a festival of friendship for the sportsmen and youths of both sexes from all over the world, should be held in such places where democracy is in practice, human rights are respected, and fair lawful order and social morality are dominant. Only in this way will the young athletes of both sexes from all over the world be able to compete with one another with the talents and special abilities in the athletic games, with joy in their hearts, in accordance with the noble Olympic ideals, without any fear or uneasiness.

South Korea, however, is a total U.S. colony. Practically all power in South Korea -- political, military, economic -- are in the hands of the U.S. imperialist aggressors and the puppet regime in South Korea, which enjoys no independence, is nothing but a camouflage designed to disguise the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression.

Consequences of the U.S. imperialists' nefarious colonial rule have reduced South Korea to the most tragic living human hell in the 20th century which is nearing its end. Because of the U.S. imperialists' and the puppet South Korean clique's antipopular maneuvers, the people's democratic freedoms and rights are being ruthlessly trampled underfoot and atrocities of mass slaughter are being openly committed.

Instigated by the U.S. imperialists, the puppet South Korean clique is brutally suppressing the patriotic struggle by the South Korean youths, students, and people, while punishing their political opponents and patriotic and democratic personages on various charges. Thus, South Korea has now become a place of outlaws where neither law nor morality exists, a fearful place where agents, stool pigeons, thugs, and imposters are dominant, where all sorts of crimes such as murders, abductions, robbery, and terrorism are raging on, and where all sorts of virulent diseases, including AIDS, are rampant, as well as a land of sufferings were honest people and people of conscience cannot live in peace even for a moment.

If the Olympics were to be held in such a place, what would happen to the athletes in terms of their personal safety? Nobody can guarantee whether or not personal safety and life would be guaranteed in such a place.

Another reason why Seoul is not an appropriate place to hold the Olympics is related to the fact that the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets have already begun to show ominous signs of a wicked plot to fraudulently use the sacred Olympics for their political and commercial purposes. A few years remain before the 24th Olympiad.

While forcing down various conditions on the South Korean puppets, the U.S. imperialists have already begun to revise rules governing the Olympic games that have not yet been finalized in their favor. The U.S. imperialists are scheming to monopolize the TV rights to cover the Olympic Games on the spot. If the South Korean puppets sell the monopolized rights of the games to the U.S. masters, the participants in the Olympic games will have to begin all the game finals at designated American time for American TV viewers who have a 14-hour time difference from Seoul, and cameramen will have to focus on the American athletes only ahead of anybody else.

This will be an intolerable insult to the athletes and officials from the Asian, European, and other continents, as well as to the tens of millions of viewers all over the world. Also, if the Olympic games were to be held in the southern part of the Korean peninsula on which the North and South are in an acute confrontation [chemyehage taegyolhago innun] it will only result in accelerating the confrontation between the North and South and the two Koreas as the U.S. imperialist and the Korean puppets wish it to be.

As has been said, Seoul of South Korea is absolutely not a place to host the international Olympic festival whose ideals are friendship and harmony in correspondence to the Olympic charter. The Olympic movement should be pure and it should never be allowed to be used for political purposes. Once they begin to trifle with in such a manner, they will never be able to avoid their own division. Their noble ideals will lose it color. For this reason, the 24th Olympaid should be held in such a place where it can become an international sports festival promoting peace for mankind as well as friendship and harmony in the true sense of the word.

MEETING MARKS POCHONBO BATTLE ANNIVERSARY

SK040454 Pyongyang June 4 (KCNA) -- A Yanggang provincial meeting was held in Pochon County on June 3 to mark the 49th anniversary of the victory in the Pochonbo battle organized and commanded by the great leader President Kim Il-song in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle. Kim Won-chon, chief secretary of the Yanggang provincial party committee and chairman of the Yanggang provincial people's committee, delivered a report at the meeting. The report said:

The flames of the anti-Japanese struggle which flared up in the nocturnal sky over Pochonbo on June 4, 1937, was a torchlight of the revolution which brought the dawn of national resurrection over the dark land of the country, dealt a heavy political and military blow at the nefarious Japanese imperialist aggressors and led to a great upsurge the Korean revolution as a whole centering around the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

The men of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army under the command of President Kim Il-song mercilessly crushed the Japanese imperialists and their stooges and set fire to the bulwark of the enemy through their bold combat action in the Pochonbo battle, thereby wreaking the bitter vengeance which had been pent up in the hearts of the people. The operation of advance into the homeland which was crowned with shining victory under the superb command of President Kim Il-song showed the whole world that the Korean people were alive, not dead, and demonstrated their revolutionary will to fight the brigandish Japanese imperialists, liberate the country at any cost and build a people's country free from exploitation and oppression in the country after its independence.

OFFICIAL DENIES SOUTH-NORTH SUMMIT PLANNED

[Text] Seoul, June 1 (AFP) -- There are no plans for a summit meeting between the North and South Korean presidents, a senior South Korean Government official said here Sunday.

(The KYODO NEWS SERVICE had reported in Tokyo earlier Sunday, citing diplomatic sources, that the summit, the first of its kind since the 1945 division of the Korean peninsula, would be held in the autumn and would confirm an agreement to hold some events of the 1988 Seoul Olympics in Pyongyang.)

The South Korean official said the Japanese report was "totally untrue and speculative." "We have absolutely no knowledge whatsoever" about such a summit meeting, the official told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE.

The official also dismissed as "simply far from the truth" a KYODO statment that North Korean Prime MInister Kang Song-san and his South Korean counterpart No Sin-yong met in Panmunjom April 18 and agreed to cooperate with each other to make the 1988 Olympics a success. "These unfounded speculative reports do not help in any way our efforts to keep up dialogue with the north," the South Korean official said. "We want to put an end to these continuous and baseless speculations by the foreign press media once and for all," he added.

The Japanese newspaper SANKEI SHIMBUN, citing informed foreign sources, said Friday that North Korea was likely to agree to a north-south summit and that a formal announcement was expected in June. However, South Korean Unification Minister Pak Tong-Chin said later the same day that he did not believe that the inter-Korean dialogue suspended by North Korea would be resumed in the near future.

The Tokyo correspondent of a Washington newspaper was recently expelled form Seoul for reporting "without foundation" that South Korean President Chon Tu-Hwan and his North Korean counterpart Kim Il-song had secretly held talks at the truce village of Panmunjom in the Korean demilitarized zone.

North Korea broke off talks between the two countries in January to protest annual military manoeuvres by U.S. and South Korean troops, but hinted that it would resume dialogue when the exercise was over in April.

However, Mr. Pak said Friday that "it will be a self-contradiction for Pyongyang if it resumes the dialogue on the one hand while instigating anti-government turmoil here on the other hand." Political analysts here said that the atmosphere is at present far from conducive to holding a top-level meeting between Seoul and Pyongyang.

South Korea had denied Monday a report in the London WEEKLY OBSERVER newspaper that it had agreed to allow North Korea to host some events in the 1988 Olympics. The observer also said that North Korea would have a share in hosting September's Asian Games under an agreement to be announced at the International Olympic Committee (IOC) headquarters in Lausanne June 10. "Nothing of such an agreement was reached since the two sides met in Lausanne last January to discuss the matter," Lee Jae-hong, chief spokesman of the Seoul Olympic Organising Committee, told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE. Mr. Lee stressed the IOC's support for Seoul's position that North Korea's proposal to "co-host" the 1988 Seoul Olympics was out of the question.

South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan has repeatedly called for a summit with his North Korean counterpart Kim Il-song since 1981, most recently May 12. North Korea, describing President Chon as a fascist and a dictator, had consistently rejected the proposal.

But President Kim, in his New Year message this year, said he would make efforts to realize an inter-Korean meeting at the highest level, implying a summit between President Chon and himself.

Throughout last year, the two sides held talks at parliamentary, economic and Red Cross levels, but made little progress except for an agreement under which a small group of separated family members were exchanged between Seoul and Pyongyang for a brief reunion for the first time since the country was divided 40 years ago.

YI WON-KYONG HOLDS TRADE TALKS WITH MOKHTAR

[Text] Seoul, June 4 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Foreign Minister Yi Won-kyong and his Indonesian counterpart, Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja, Wednesday agreed to organize an annual joint meeting involving high-ranking Korean and Indonesian Foreign Ministry officials to discuss bilateral economic cooperation and the exchange of manpower. They also agreed in a meeting here that their two countries should continue to cooperate in promoting mutual security.

During the meeting, which lasted for an hour and a half, Yi briefed Mokhtar on the inter-Korean dialogue, relations with the superpowers surrounding the Korean peninsula, and North Korea's military build-up through Soviet assistance. Mokhtar pledged to Yi that Indonesia would continue to support South Korea's position in meetings of the non-aligned nations.

The two foreign ministers agreed to make efforts to conclude bilateral agreements on aviation, double taxation avoidance, investment guarantees and shipping at an early date and to boost private-level cooperation.

Yi, expressing concern about the trade imbalance between Korea and Indonesia, suggested that the Southeast Asian country engage in counter-trade, using flexibility. Korea imports two million tons of liquefied natural gas (LNG) per year from Indonesia. In response, Mokhtar said it is desireable for the two countries to resolve their trade imbalance by expanding their bilateral trade. The two foreign ministers agreed to arrange a meeting in Jakarta in July between Korean and Indonesian officials to resolve the matter of readjusting the price of Indonesian LNG.

The decline of crude oil prices on international markets has triggered a renewal of negotiations over the price of imported LPG under a 20-year contract signed between Korean and Indonesian officials in 1983, the price of LPG imported into Korea is linked with the international price of oil. Korea has insisted that the price of LPG shold be linked to the spot market price of crude oil, which ranges from 12 to 13 dollars per barrel, while Indonesia asserts that the base price of cude oil be 20 dollars per barrel. Under the 1983 contract, Korea should begin importing the Indonesian LNG late this year.

U.S. INTENSE PRESSURE TO OPEN MARKETS PROTESTED

SK040055 Seoul CHUNGANG ILBO in Korean 31 May 86 p 2

[Editorial: "The U.S. Pressure To Open Markets"]

[Text] At a time when our country is undergoing labor pains with a difficult democratization work at hand, the United States is intensifying economic pressure on us. With the working level trade committee meeting scheduled for 19-20 June approaching, the United States requested our government to lower the tariffs for 50 items with higher added value and to abolish the import approval system for other 50 items, and to complete the process by the end of the year. Besides this, we were also asked to allow the participation of foreigners in the advertising market and to open financial markets. As a small country, we cannot but be perplexed at this pressure from a powerful friendly country. It is a general principle of the free economy that all the world's countries extensively open their markets and ensure free economic activities with each other, and we are actively heading toward such a direction. The problem is that the United States is trying to impose its policy compulsively in disregard of the spirit and principle of GATT, the general practice of international trade internationally agreed upon.

The United States, prompted from a self-centered motive, has made unfair standards in disparity with international principles, and, while engaging in indiscriminate issuance of arbitrary dumping findings on our goods, is unilaterally pressuring us to open markets, disregarding our economic conditions.

The United States should first acknowledge the fact that its trade deficit is attributable to its deterioration of international competitiveness and make efforts to make up for it. It is not objectively convincing that the United States should ascribe its trade deficit to its trading partners' trade policy toward the United States and attempt to impose its policy in a compulsory manner. Opening of markets should come about through discussions and negotiations between the two countries within the scope of limitations of our economy so that the interests of both countries can be ensured.

It is far from reasonable for the United States to exercise continuous pressure on us to open markets, putting us in the same category as Japan by reason of our being one of the countries in the black in trade with the United States. Japan, an advanced industrialized country, is the largest creditor country in the world with $130 billion, keeping $60 billion in the black every year, and its burden of defense expenditure is less than 1 percent of its GNP.

We have barely succeeded in attaining a balance in the field of international trade, but, on the overall, we are still in the red with foreign countries, and our defense spending is 6 percent of the GNP. In addition, we have to pay over $1.1 billion each year for the stationing of U.S. troops. Needless to say, we are a debtor country of nearly $50 billion.

It is a well-known fact that our defense effort is a panregional peace effort to ensure the national defense of Japan and to contribute to the U.S. world military strategy. The ROK-U.S. economic cooperation should not be considered without regard to this stern reality. Moreover, we are pushing ahead with our plan of opening markets, increasing the scope of opening every year, publicly announcing and informing foreign countries of such a plan in advance.

Despite the anti-U.S. pressure from the radical groups, our government has been doing its best to maintain cooperative relations with the United States. With continued U.S. economic pressure, the government's position will inevitably be weakened in convincing the radical groups. Furthermore, we have begun a difficult long journey toward democratization. Establishing the tradition of a peaceful transfer of power and restoring a democratic order is both the urgent objective of our people and the desire of the United States.

It is far from an attitude of a friendly country or an attitude befitting a big country that the United States, leader of the Western world, should attempt to impose its policy compulsorily on us, turning away from the aforementioned conditions and pursuing only the physical interests of its own.

VIGILANCE AGAINST JAPANESE REVIVALISM URGED

SK032330 Seoul CHOSON ILBO In Korean 30 May 86 p 2

[Editorial: "Past Mistakes Cannot Be Beautified -- We Should Be Vigilant Against A Revival Mood in Compiling School Textbooks in Japan"]

[Text] A strong tendency to revert to the old ways is prevalent in Japan. Although this is not something new, we should not overlook this -- the tendency toward revivalism. The problem has been raised by a new school textbook whose use next year was approved on 27 May by the School Textbook Review Committee of the Japanese Ministry of Education. A high school textbook on the history of Japan newly compiled by an organization called the National Association Protecting Japan, which is discontented with the peace constitution adopted after the war, is filled with contents advocating the idea of respecting the emperor, reviving the imperial rescript on education proclaimed by the past Japanese emperor -- the scripture of the militarist aggressors -- and justifying the Greater East Asia War.

After winning victory in wars against the Qing Dynasty and Russia at the end of the 19th Century and in the early part of the 20th Century, Japan emerged as an imperialist force while trying to continuously advance on the Chinese continent and into Southeast Asia. After colonizing the Korean peninsula and Manchuria, it clashed with the great European and American powers. In this course, Japan faced resistance from the Korean and Chinese peoples on many occasions. There are materials and records verifying that when the 1 March independence movement occurred in Korea, Japanese police slaughtered more than 7,000 Koreans in suppressing this movement. It is reported that the Japanese aggressive forces killed some 200,000 people in Nanjing, China.

Conscientious Japanese textbook compilers, who tried to record history on the basis of these materials and records, were forced to rewrite their manuscripts and distort facts, due to the government's nationalist standard of examination, which is unique in Japan. This phenomenon became most acute in the summer of 1982 in the form of a text book crisis. The issue occasioned protests from the Asian countries, including South Korea, posing a diplomatic problem. As a result of this, the Japanese Government pledged to show consideration for neighboring countries in compiling and reviewing textbooks. It appears that after the elapse of 4 years since that time, the Japanese Government's consideration for neighboring countries has disappeared completely.

We need not be concerned about how the Japanese people record their history. We also need not be concerned about what historical view their government develops and how it instills this view into the people. We are not in the position of complaining about their singing of the song of a revival mood.

However, all these acts should be committed on the basis of admitting the disasters and damage wrought on Korea -- the admission made in September 1984 by Japanese Prime Minister Nakasone while welcoming the official visit to Japan by the South Korean President for the first time in history.

The Japanese Government and people decline to make such an admission. Fascinated by continuous prosperity, the Japanese people are trying to ignore their past crimes as much as possible. The National Association Protecting Japan, which is trying to legalize the army and to restore the conscription system, is merely one of many similar organizations. In a newly compiled textbook, those concerned described the emperor in the context of an unbroken line of sovereigns as the general superintendent of state sovereignty; the Great East Asia War as one designed to liberate East Asia; and the imperial rescript on education as one that received high praise. After making a little change, the Japanese Government has approved the use of this textbook in high schools next year.

The reason why we are exercising vigilance against Japan's revivalism is because it is one designed to justify and praise the great Japanese empire's violence that usurped our independence and violated our freedom. While carrying out charity work, former convicts should not beautify their past crimes. By the same token, Japan should not forget its past, even though it has become wealthy and powerful. This is because national arrogance is liable to develop into imperialism.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON CHON-YI MIN-U MEETING

YONHAP Analysis

["News Analysis"]

[Text] Seoul, June 3 (YONHAP) -- The meeting between President Chon Tu-hwan and Yi Min-u president of the opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP), was meaningful in that it laid a foundation for the improvement of the relations between the ruling and opposition parties and for the promotion of political negotiations over the revision of the Constitution. Chon and Yi have agreed, in principle, on an early revision of the Constitution during the two-hour meeting, which was the first tete-a-tete between them since the inauguration of the Fifth Republic in 1981.

Although there are some discontents among NKDP lawmakers over the Chon-yi meeting, especially with regard to the lack of Chon's promise for the release of imprisoned dissidents, the meeting was significant as it further developed the idea of revising the Constitution during Chon's tenure, political observers said. In an April 30 meeting, Chon told opposition party leaders that he would not oppose the idea of rewriting the basic law before his tenure ends in 1988 if the rival parties agree in the National Assembly.

During the meeting, Chon said that the sooner Korea revises its Constitution, the better it would be for the nation. Therefore, there is handsome possibility for the revision within this year, depending on how the rival parties negotiate, they observed. At any rate, there is no need to argue on the timing of the constitutional revision.

Chon clarifed his stand that he would let the political parties set the direction of the revision through negotiations in the National Assembly in accordance with the people's wishes. "As president, I had better not mention my views on either a direct or an indirect presidential election system," Chon said.

Chon also explained the government's stand on such issues raised by Yi as the release of dissidents arrested for "political reasons," the suspension of investigation into the activities of Rev. Mun Ik-hwan and the "Mintongnyon," a dissident coalition headed by Mun, and the recent student demonstrations. In particular, Chon suggested he would solve the problem of arrested dissidents on a gradual basis on the bottom of the grand compromise between the ruling and opposition camps.

Accordingly, most of the major issues, raised by the opposition party, were handled in the meeting, the observers said. The observers, however, fear that the negotiations for the constitutional revision would not necessarily be smooth, considering the mixed reaction of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) and the NKDP to the outcome of Tuesday's meeting.

In a statement the DJP said that President Chon comprehensivelly accepted the opposition demands concerning the revision of the basic law. On the other hand, some NKDP officials asserted that their party should not accept the ruling party's proposal of forming the parliamentary committee on the constitutional revision because the developments involving the release of dissidents detained for political reasons were behind their expectations. The officials showed the response that the meeting did not produce anything new.

In particular, NKDP floor leader Kim Tong-yong said that with these results, his party could not comply with the ruling party's proposal for the inauguration of the special parliamentary committee on the constitutional amendment. In addition, the opposition party cannot not [as received] attend even floor leaders' meetings with the ruling party, Kim said. However, he did not say his party will not attend the special National Assembly session scheduled to open Thursday.

NKDP President Yi said, "Even President Chon could not help saying more than that much," adding that the president seemed to have taken into account the fact that there is still time for form the parliamentary committee.

In consideration of the NKDP's contradictory responses over the release of dissidents, negotiations between the rival parties over the constitutional amendment are likely to face a lot of difficulties, the observers said. Such expectations are partly based on the fact that the opposition party should unify its opinions before sitting together with the ruling party over the issue of constitutional revision.

DJP Comments

[Text] Seoul, June 6 (YONHAP) -- South Korea's ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) said Tuesday that President Chon Tu-hwan "comprehensively accepted" the opposition camp's demand for constitutional revision in his meeting with Yi Min-u, president of the New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP). The exclusive meeting between Chon and Yi was held for two hours from 10 a.m. Tuesday at Chongwadae, the presidential residence.

A DJP spokesman Sim Myong-po said that Chon expressed his support for constitutional revision through compromise between the ruling and opposition parties, based on national consensus. "As for the constitution, President Chon presented such a clear direction that no one would question his firm determination as the head of state," Sim said.

He said that the NKDP should not further "hesitate or wander" outside the National Assembly, but should gladly participate in the special constitutional committee within the assembly as soon as possible. The NKDP should recognize that dialogue within the Assembly is the correct way to respond to the aspirations of the people, who want the stabilization of the nation's political situation and the people's livelihood, and he said it is also a responsible behavior on the part of politicians, he added.

NKDP Members Dissatisfied

[Text] Leading officers of the major opposition New Korea Democratic Party yesterday expressed their dissatisfaction over the content of the meeting between President Chon Tu-hwan and NDP president Yi Min-u. They said that they were pessimistic about forming an ad hoc parliamentary committee on constitutional revision now that the government showed a negative attitude towards the NDP's demand for an early release of "political detainees," including Rev Mun Ik-hwan.

NDP leader Yi told reporters after the meeting, "to sum up, the meeting was no less or no more than what I had expected. Today the President and I just had an occasion to get things off our chests." By so saying, he admitted that there was no satisfactory and concrete agreement on the NDP's demand, which the opposition party held out as a precondition for the creation of the parliamentary committee.

Yi noted, "I had the impression that the government will not set them free immediately. President Chon said there are legal procedures to follow. Of course, it will be difficult to do so promptly." "There is some time left until the formation of the special House panel. Things can go well by then... However, if the imprisoned persons would not be freed, it will be difficult to establish the constitutional special committee," Yi added.

Yi explained the content of his meeting with Chon to leading officers of the party at his room in the party office. Vice president Yang Sun-chik told reporters that the presidential remarks on the matter of the release of political prisoners were "unsatisfactory" and he has a pessimistic view about the possibility of the creation of the constitutional panel. He is a follower of the Tonggyo-dong faction, led by Kim Tae-chung.

Another vice president, Choe Hyong-u, who is a supporter of Kim Yong-sam, expressed a similar opinion. But he added, "We should make efforts to tackle the problem through talks between floor leaders."

As to the timing of the envisaged constitutional amendment, Yi Min-u revealed, "We agreed to rewrite the Constitution at the earliest possible date if an accord on the content of the revision is reached at the House special committee." Yi said that he emphasized the necessity of freeing political prisoners before the establishment of the committee, "to show the government's will to revise the basic law and plant trust in people's minds." "I said emphatically that the lenient step should be taken prior to the creation of the ad hoc parliamentary panel," Yi stressed.

"I also maintained that if those imprisoned were freed and their hopes for democratization are realized, they will never repeat their wrongdoings," he said.

As to the NDP's call for direct presidential elections, Yi said, "I made it clear to President Chon that the request is our party's official position and we can never change it because we promised it to the people as an election pledge."

Yi also revealed that he urged President Chon to make up his mind to grant amnesty to "fighters for democracy" and return them their civil rights, alleging, "To do so is to comply with the people's wishes."

Yi also gave a briefing on the content of the meeting with Chon to opposition leaders Kim Tae-chung and Kim Yong-sam, at 5 p.m. at the house of Kim Tae-chung. It was originally planned to hold the briefing session at the party headquarters but the police physically prevented Kim Tae-chung from heading for any other place but his home from a relative's home, where he was visiting yesterday. Kim Tae-chung has not visited the NDP head office yet.

Kim Tae-chung and Kim Yong-sam revealed that the NDP will attend the already-scheduled extra House session starting tomorrow and make its best efforts to "foster an atmosphere" conducive to an early release of the political prisoners. They also made it clear that only after their release will the NDP take part in negotiations with the ruling party over the formation of the special House panel.

THE KOREA TIMES Editorial

[Editorial: "Chongwadae Political Talks"]

[Text] Yesterday's meeting between President Chon Tu-hwan and Rep. Yi Min-u, president of the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party, was notable in its format itself as it marked the first tete-a-tete the President has had with an opposition leader, without the presence of his aides, since he took office nearly six years ago.

President Chon, who concurrently heads the Democratic Justice Party, is set to have a similar get-together today with Rep. Yi Man-sop, president of the minor opposition Korea National Party. Yet, keener attention was inevitably directed on yesterday's meeting for its obviously greater impact on the future course of national politics.

Though there was no joint announcement, accounts given separately by the presidential spokesman and the NDP leader indicate that the Chongwadae talk yesterday was devoted to an exchange of "candid views" between the two conferees on the political situation, rather than to producing a concrete agreement on specific issues. In particular, the exclusive meeting apparently provided an opportunity for the opposition leader to expound his party's position in depth with regard to the desirable formula of constitutional amendment -- namely, its long-standing demand for direct presidential elections -- and other related problems, including the release of "political detainees," which it asserts as a prerequisite to the formation of a special parliamentary committee on the Constitution.

One highlight of the two-hour meeting was the president's expression of his preference to see early constitutional revision through compromise between the government and opposition parties within the framework of the National Assembly.

The President was reported as having made no comment as to the specific timing of such amendment, while reserving his own views concerning the future form of government and means of electing the chief executive. However, his position underlining a "the-sooner-the-better" approach raised the possibility of undertaking a constitutional revision within the year, if a relevant bipartisan accord is achieved in time, an attitude that is more forthcoming and precise than the one he had taken five weeks ago that the basic law could be rewritten during his tenure in office, which ends in February 1988.

Also noteworthy was President Chon's readiness to take magnanimous steps toward what the opposition party calls "political prisoners" and the restoration of civil rights for some political figures, although he was emphatic on the need for maintaining law and order.

To hard-line oppositionists and radical elements, the Chongwadae talks may be viewed as less than satisfactory. However, it must be stressed that the meeting undeniably marked progress in promoting all-important mutual accommodation between the government and opposition camps, and that the task of democratization cannot be attained at one stroke but requires an evolutionary process of sustained dialogue and compromise.

CHON MEETS WITH KNP PRESIDENT YI MIN-U 4 JUN

YONHAP Report

[Text] Seoul, June 4 (YONHAP) -- Korean President Chon Tu-hwan said Wednesday that a revised Constitution could be approved by the National Assembly in its next regular session, which is scheduled to begin in September. "The bill to amend the Constitution could pass the National Assembly this fall if the ruling and opposition parties agree on it," presidential spokesman Chong Ku-ho quoted the president as saying. Chon made the remark in a meeting with Yi Man-sop, president of the minor opposition Korea National Party (KNP), at Chongwadae, the presidential residence.

Chon and Yi exchanged views for two hours, beginning at 10 a.m. on overall state affairs, including constitutional revision, the release of imprisoned dissidents and campus problems. In their meeting, Chon said that the rival political parties should hold candid negotiations paving the way for the revision process as soon as possible, the spokesman said.

On Tuesday, Chon held similar talks with Yi Min-u, president of the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party. They agreed that it would be desirable for Korea to revise the Constitution as soon as possible.

In response to Yi's demand that those imprisoned for "political causes" be released, Chon said that he would take lenient measures affecting those who show repentance, on a gradual basis, but that most of those now imprisoned would be "resolutely dealt with under the law."

Chon and the KNP leader agreed that the next president should be elected under a new constitution. The president said that the new Constitution should not be drafted for the sake of a certain political faction or a certain person. The revision should be made on the foundation of national consensus, he added.

Regarding the recent outbreak of campus unrest, Chon expressed optimism, saying that the campus problem will be settled if school authorities, students' parents and society cooperate. Fortunately, he added, the number of leftist students is extremely small and school authorities are doing well in coping with them.

[Text] Seoul, June 4 (YONHAP) -- Yi Man-sop, president of the minor opposition Korea Nationl Party (KNP), said that Korean President Chon Tu-hwan made clear again, in their meeting on Wednesday, his determination to establish a new Constitution and to step down after his single, seven-year term expires in 1988. Yi made the remarks after holding an exclusive meeting with Chon at Chongwadae, the presidential residence, on Wednesday. Chon held similar talks with Yi Min-u, president of the leading opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP), on Tuesday.

The KNP president said that he made more progress in his meeting with Chon than Yi Min-u made in his meeting with the Korean president on Tuesday. Chon reportedly told Yi Man-sop that the ruling and opposition parties should make efforts to pass the revised constitution in the regular National Assembly session, which is scheduled to open in September, and that he would take lenient measures toward those imprisoned for "political causes." Yi said in the meeting that the special constitutional committee should be organized without fail during the special Assembly session scheduled June 5-24.

BCP POLITICAL REPORT ON 'PROBLEMS' IN PARTY LINE

["Continuation of the Political Report of the Burma Communist Party, presented at the Third National BCP Congress" -- read by announcer]

[Text] Chapter 3: Some problems regarding the party line in the party's history. The history of ouf party, like other Marxist-Leninist parties, is a history that integrates the universal truth of Marxism-Leninism with the concrete conditions of the revolution in Burma. It is a course of history that has evolved and matured while waging the struggle against left and right opportunism within the party, particularly against right opportunism.

From 1939 and until the beginning of 1945, our party existed as an underground party organization and led the resistance movement against Japanese fascists. Between 1945 and 1948, it primarily waged struggles within the framework of law while providing leadership to the armed uprisings by the peasants.

The People's democratic revolutionary line laid down by the party in 1948 was basically correct, and our party was able to lead the armed struggle in accordance with that line. Despite the twists and turns and obstacles strewn along the course of the armed struggle waged by the party, there has never been a period in which the armed struggle was disrupted. Hence, in other words, the history of our party is primarily a history of armed struggle.

It is imperative to make a comprehensive analytical study of the experiences gained and the lessons learned from fighting left and right opportunisms in the course of party's history (?at a given opportune time). This report will mainly only deal with the lines of left and right opportunism which are exemplary in nature. There, these are the cases that will be mentioned: The line of peaceful evolution which became the official party line at the second Burmese Communist Party [BCP] Congress in 1945; the 1955 line which was put into force in and practised 1955 onward; and the intraparty revolutionary line laid down and practised in 1967.

By studying the examplary lines of left and right opportunism our intention is to prevent similar errors from being made in the future and then to make the whole party politically and ideologically united on the basis of a correct line and successful in carrying out the historic task of our party.

A. The Browderist Line of Peaceful Evolution

The 1945 line of peaceful evolution was based on Browderism. Browder was the general secretary of the Communist Party of the United States of America [CPUSA] from 1930 to 1944. During World War II, the right deviationist ideas in the CPUSA, of which Browder was the chief exponent, developed into an anti-Marxist revisionist-capitulationist line. From December 1943 onward, Browder advocated his revisionist-capitulationist line through many of his speeches and writings.

THAI 'FABRICATIONS' ABOUT SRV SHELLING SCORES

BK031248 Phnom Penh SPK in English 1117 GMT 3 Jun 86

["Allegations" -- SPK headline]

[Text] Phnom Penh SPK, June 3 -- Thailand's recent allegation that Vietnam's artillery in Kampuchea fired on the "refugee camp 8" located in Thai territory are familiar groundless fabrications cooked up by Bangkok to defame the Vietnamese Army volunteers.

By playing the thief-crying-stop-thief trick, the Bangkok authorities have attempted to cover up their crimes against Kampuchea's revival.

Just in the week ending May 2, Thailand on 40 occasions sent its L-19, F-111, A-37 aircraft and helicopters to spy over many areas along the Kampuchean-Thai border, up to 15 km deep inside Kampuchean territory.

Thai armed vessels also made incursions almost every day into areas off Koh Kong, Koh Tang and Poulo Wai islands. Thai gunners also made from 20 to 500 shellings a day on Kampuchean soil to cover Khmer reactionaries infiltrations from Thailand for sabotage activities against the peaceful life of the Kampuchean people.

However, Kampuchea and Vietnam always respect Thailand's sovereignty and territorial integrity. They always show restraint not encroaching one inch into Thai territory during their mopping-up operations against the remnants of the so-called "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea". They have times and again expressed their good will to establish a common border of peace and friendship with Thailand. Yet Thailand always turns a blind eye to Kampuchea's and Vietnam's wel-meaning gesture.

With its slanders, Thailand has hoped to kill two birds with one stone: Diverting the public opinion on the one hand, from the just-ended joint U.S.-Thai logistic exercise (Logex-29) near the Kampuchean-Thai border and the upcoming manuever codenamed "Cobra Gold-86" with the participation of some 13,000 U.S. and Thai troops; and on the other hand distraction the public opinion from the fifth partial withdrawal of the Vietnamese Army volunteers from Kampuchea and the good will of the three Indochinese countries as expressed in their ministerial conferences.

Noticeably, the Chinese expansionists, the U.S. imperialists and the ultra-rightists in the Thai ruling circles always try to maintain tension along the Kampuchean-Thai border in order to fish in troubled water.

Well-informed and impartial observers and even many Thai people demand that the Thai authorities put an end to their hostile policy vis-a-vis Kampuchea and the Indochinese countries, reconsider their position and positively respond to the good will of the latters in order to reduce tension in the region and make Southeast Asia a zone of peace, friendship and cooperation.

SIHANOUK CLARIFIES STAND ON PEACE PROPOSAL

BK310216 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 31 May 86 p 3

[Text] Prince Norodom Sihanouk has said that he will always continue to support the eight-point peace proposal of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, despite his statements earlier last month that the Khmer Rouge were, and would remain, the real masters of Kampuchea.

The Khmer leader issued the statement to the Indonesian Foreign Ministry recently explaining his comment which appeared in his May bulletin.

In the monthly bulletin, Prince Sihanouk had said that following the eventual withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, he and the leader of the Khmer people's National Liberation Front, Son Sann will only be "leaders on paper" while the Khmer Rouge will be the real master of Kampuchea.

In the statement received by the BANGKOK POST yesterday, Prince Sihanouk said that these comments did not mean that he renounced the Khmer eight-point proposal nor does it mean that he wished the Vietnamese to remain in Kampuchea.

"As a patriot I have always been fighting along side with other Khmer patriots to liberate Kampuchea from foreign troops and from Vietnam's colonialism," said the former monarch.

His handwritten comment on the bulletin earlier this month has been criticised as being contradictory to his public position as President of the CGDK.

The eight-point proposal calls for negotiations with Hanoi on the two phased United Nations supervised withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops and to set up a quadripartite government which included the Heng Samrin regime but the Prince Sihanouk as president and Son Sann as prime minister.

However, no specific post was assigned to the Khmer Rouge, the largest military wing of the Khmer resistance.

"The Khmer Rouge need not frighten people by putting Khieu Sampan's name on paper. It is more reassuring for the whole world just to put down the names of Sihanouk and Son Sann, Prince Sihanouk had written in the bulletin.

He also commented that "the non disarming of the Khmer factions would make the (possible) elections hardly legitimate because our people would have to vote under the threat of arms."

Prince Sihanouk has several times in the past expressed personal opinions which differ from those he holds officially in his capacity as heard of the resistance coalition.

However, countries which support the United Nations recognised Khmer resistance coalition government have said that they will continue to persuade Hanoi to discuss the eight-point peace proposal which Vietnam has repeatedly rejected.

INTERNAL RIFTS UNDERMINING CGDK DIPLOMACY

BK310824 Hong Kong AFP in English 0754 GMT 31 May 86

[By Michael Adler]

[Excerpt] Bangkok, May 31 (AFP) -- A planned diplomatic offensive by the three-party Cambodian resistance coalition could be short-circuited by continued rifts in the uneasy alliance, according to key resistance figures and analysts.

With the three-party resistance coalition now shifting from dry season fighting in Cambodia to preparations for the United Nations General Assembly in September, the movement is still plagued by deep divisions, they said.

Key figures in the anit-Vietnamese resistance coalition said in private conversations that the two non-communist factions fear their powerful allies, the pro-Chinese Khmer Rouge, so much that they are committed to disarming them in any negotiated settlement.

This is in sharp contrast to the public show of unity the resistance has tried to display since the two nationalist factions joined with the Khmer Rouge in 1982 to form the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea (CGDK), recognized by the United Nations as the legitimate government of Cambodia.

The most recent manifestation of this unity was the presentation in March of an eight-point peace plan which for the first time allowed for only a partial Vietnamese withdrawal before peace talks would begin.

But the plan failed to address the crucial issue of what will be done to control the overwhelming military power within the CGDK -- the Khmer Rouge, held responsible for the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Cambodians during their bloody rule from 1975-79.

Khmer Rouge leader Khiev Samphan told reporters recently that his group would not disarm, even for a peaceful steelement, since as independent Cambodia would need to be able to protect itself.

He also refused to disown the Khmer Rouge general responsible for repeated clashes between non-communist and Khmer Rouge resistance forces. Those clashes have marred the resistance's military successes during the just-ended November-May dry season. Khieu Samphan said the general in question, Ta Mok, was a "patriot" of whom the Khmer Rouge were proud.

A source close to CGDK Prime Minister Son Sann, leader of the major non-communist faction, the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), said privately that if Cambodia were ever to hold elections, the prime criterion would be "to oblige everyone to disarm and be equal before the elections and leave the final decision to the population of Cambodia." The source said disarmament would be crucial if Vietnam were to withdraw the estimated 150,000 troops in Cambodian propping up the Heng Samrin regime Hanoi installed in 1979 after driving out the Khmer Rouge. "I suppose that Vietnam would want some guarantees," he said, adding that the non-communists would "disarm if the others disarm for real."

CAMBODIA'S SON SANN ON SITUATION IN PRK

[Text] Paris, June 2 (AFP) -- Vietnam will eventually be forced to withdraw its estimated 15,000 troops from Cambodia because Hanoi's "economic situation is catastrophic," according to Son Sann, leader of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF).

In an interview here Monday with AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE, Mr Son Sann added that more than 40 countries support a Cambodian peace plan drawn up by the tri-partite opposition coalition comprising the Khmer Rouge, the KPNLF and supporters of Prince Norodom Sihanouk. The peace plan was rejected by both the Vietnamese-installed government in Phnom Penh and Hanoi which contended it would bring the Khmer Rouge back to power. The eight-point plan, unveiled in Beijing last March, calls for a U.N. monitored cease-fire, a two-step withdrawal of Vietnamese troops and a coalition government including representatives from the three opposition allies as well as from the current Phnom Penh government. Mr Son Sann said Hanoi's announcement of partial troop withdrawal last week was "only a troop rotation," and that two fresh divisions had already arrived in Cambodia.

Mr. Son Sann said that Hanoi "wants to make the world believe" that a civil, rather than Vietnamese-Cambodian, war is going on in the country because it hopes to "colonize" Cambodia. More than 700,000 Vietnamese settlers have come to Cambodia since Hanoi captured Phnom Penh from Khmer Rouge leader Pol Pot in 1979 and installed the government of Heng Samrin, he said. Mr. Son Sann, who is officially prime minister of the coalition, said that its greatest difficulty was obtaining arms. "Only China provides us with military aid," he said. Referring to Hanoi's refusal to negotiate with any coalition that includes the Khmer Rouge, Mr. Son Sann said that it was up to the Cambodian people, in free elections, to choose their government. "If they chose Pol Pot, I would abide by the decision, but I doubt they would," he said.

CEREMONY MARKS TRANSFER OF MILITARY POWER

Gen Chawalit also took over as director of the Internal Security Operations command.

Strigent security was taken with heavily-armed troops surrounding the Chunlachomklao Academy as well as on the top of nearby buildings.

A farewell party will be held for Gen Athit at the Army Auditorium.

The ceremony started at 10.15 a.m. although most of the officers were at the academy by 10 a.m.

Gen Athit started by laying a wreath in front of the statue of King Chulalongkorn, after which His Majesty the King's order appointing Gen Chawalit Commander in Chief of the Army was read out. This was followed by a Prime Minister's order appointing him director of the Internal Security Command (ISOC).

Gen Athit then made a brief speech handing over the two commands to Gen Chawalit. He said that after he had received the orders he had tried to make the hand-over as early as possible.

Gen. Chawalit also made a brief speech which was followed by a parade by four battalions.

ARMY HELICOPTER CRASHES; ALL ON BOARD SAFE

[Text] The commander of the Burapha force and seven other officers miraculously escaped death when their helicopter lost its rear rotor and crashed yesterday on the way back from excorting Supreme Commander General Athit Kamlang-ek and Army Commander General Chawalit Yongchaiyut to inspect the border and visit a Cambodian refugee camp, Site 8, where dozens of people were killed and wounded during recent attacks by Vietnamese troops.

On board the helicopter of the UH-1-D type belonging to the rotating wing division of the Lop Buri army aviation center were Burapha force Commander Major General Choetchai Thiratthanon, Deputy Commander Colonel Akkhadet Sasiphrapha, Colonel Prachum Chuloet, and unidentified officer, Pilot Major Narong Thiphayaphipbat, the co-pilot, and two mechanics.

Only 15 minutes after taking off and at an altitude of about 700 ft, the copter lost its rear rotor after an explosion was heard. The pilot managed to reduce the altitude to 300 ft before the aircraft shook violently and dropped to the ground.

When the copter touched the ground, its tail fell off and all passengers rushed out safely. Col Prachum has a cut on the head that requires three stitches; Maj Gen Choetchai suffers from elbow pain.

Maj Gen Choetchai said that a copter will always explode if it loses its tail rotor in the air. He said he could hardly believe that they had survived because the aircraft just had its fuel tank filled. The cause of the accident is still unknown. The helicopter was commissioned 7 years ago.

ATHIT PREFERRED OVER PREM IN BANGKOK POLL

[Text] Supreme Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek is the public's choice for the premiership, followed by Gen Prem Tinsulanon and M.R. Khukrit Pramot, according to a Democrat Party survey. The survey was conducted last month before Gen Athit was dismissed as Army Commander-in-Chief. The Democrats, together with Chulalongkon University's Social Research Institute, took the opinions of about 700 Bangkok residents.

Support for the Democrats was 35 per cent, followed by the Social Action Party with 26.7 per cent, and Prachakon Thai with about 20 per cent, according to the survey.

Democrat sources said the findings indicated the party would have to do more to increase its popularity in Bangkok to secure a sweeping victory on July 27.

Most of the respondents were found to have supported the Government's decision to dissolve the Lower House, and they also wanted a change in leadership. About 80 per cent of the respondents were found to be satisfied with the work of Bangkok Governor Chamlong Simuang.

Party deputy secretary-general Akhom Sonsuchat said the Democrats will launch another survey to measure party popularity in the election. A survey would be conducted after the Democrats reveal their final list of election candidates, and a final survey will be made about two weeks before the election to find weak points. Information from the surveys would be used to formulate a strategy to ensure good results in the election, Mr Akhom said.

USSR PLACES ANOTHER ORDER FOR THAI RICE

BK031054 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1500 GMT 2 Jun 86

CENTRAL BANK PREDICTS LOWER TRADE DEFICIT

[By The Chongkhadikit]

[Text] The Bank of Thailand has forecast that the country's 1986 trade deficit will be the lowest in years at only 36,000 million baht, against an earlier projection of 57,100 million baht.

The prediction was revealed to BANGKOK POST by Bank of Thailand Governor Kamchon Sathirakun and Deputy Governor Chawalit Thanachanan in an exclusive interview yesterday.

Mr Chawalit also assured that the public is very confident in the stability of the baht.

Projecting the country's balance of trade this year, he said the performance in the first four months of the year showed a favourable result.

"Our projection, revised from several factors, shows that the trade deficit this year will be only 36,000 million baht," he said, adding that the 1985 trade deficit was about 62,000 million baht.

The predicted deficit of 36,000 million will be the lowest in years. The country's trade deficit reached the highest level in 1983 at 91,000 million baht.

To slash the extremely high deficit that year, several measures, including the controvervial 18 percent credit restriction, were implemented. The measure effectively reduced the defecit to 68,800 million baht in 1984.

Regarding to the balance of payments on the current acccount, the central bank forecase that the deficit this year will be only 17,000 million baht, more than half the 1985 deficit of 42,000 million baht, and the overall balance is expected to have a surplus, Mr Chawalit said.

Mr Kamchon added that the central bank is confident in its forecast.

"Last year-end, many pessimistic forecasts were given by several economists, and only the Bank of Thailand and the Governor predicted that it was not so bad," Mr Chawalit said.

"At that time, nobody believed us, and some economists scorned us and said the forecast would make nobody believe us in the future. I jut smiled," Mr Kamchon said.

And now, he said, it has been proved that the Bank of Thailand is right and the economy is recovering.

Regarding the Baht's stability, Mr Chawalit said the "new basket" has been successful in stabilising the Thai currency.

"But it can't be fixed; if we want the exchange rate to be stable as in the past, we must go back to the old system, that is, fixing the baht only with the dollar," he added.

After unpegging the baht from the U.S. dollar in 1984, the central bank used the basket of currencies as the instrument to stabilize the baht until its value last year was around 26 baht to the dollar.

"The value caused speculations that the baht would be devalued. Meantime, we lost a lot of foreign reserves. So finally, we had to depreciate the baht by 50 satang on December 3, after which we announced that we would use a new basket. But nobody seemed to believe us then," Mr Chawalit said.

"But now the public is so confident in the baht that the forward cover premium in the foreign exchange market is now quoted at zero or even at a discount rate on some days," he added.

Regarding the inflation rate, Mr Chawalit said it will be lower than 2 percent likely to in the 1-1/5 percent range.

Concerning the general situation in the local banking system, he said he believes that the liquidity will continue to be high because there are capital inflows. "This is due to the low interest rates abroad when compared to the local rates," he added.

But Mr Kamchon said this should be good as the situation will force local commercial banks to adjust their interest rates to be in line with the situation.

One of the improvements, he said, is that several banks have begun to improve their fund management systems. In the past, provincial branches of several banks would keep a lot of idle funds in their portfolios, "but now the head office will send a management team to the branches to manage the idle funds," he said.

As for credit demand, Mr Chawalit said it is still low. In the past two years, the economy was in repression and several bank customers were bankrupt or failed in their businesses, so banks are currently very careful in extending credits. "At the same time, they cannot let their clients go under, so they have to extend additonal loans to their customers and restructure the loans," he said. The central bank itself, Mr Kamchon said, has prepared measures to prevent banks from extending loans for unnecessary investments, such as in condominiums which proliferated in the past few years. "We would like to see more investments in housing projects for low- and middle-income earners instead. This policy will be make clear," he added.

MIA TALKS TO RESUME 11 JUNE IN HANOI

[Text] Hanoi, June 4 (AFP) -- Vietnam and the United states will resume talks next week on the U.S. soldiers Missing In Action (MIA) from the Vietnam war, official sources here said Wednesday. A U.S. team will be in Vietnam from Wednesday through Saturday for technical discussions on returning the remains of an undisclosed number of MIA's, the sources said.

The MIA talks are to take place every two months according to an agreement last year, but the last session scheduled for April was cancelled by Vietnam in protest against the U.S. air raid on Libya.

Hanoi has also reproached Washington in recent weeks for its refusal to officially cooperate in a Vietnamese offer to resolve the issue within two years, and for statements by U.S. officials raising the possibility that Americans were still being detained in Vietnam.

Vietnamese Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs Hoang Bich Son met May 31 in New York with a U.S. delegation including Richard Childress, who heads Asian affairs in the U.S. National Security Council. The sources Wednesday declined to say if this meeting had influenced the resumption of talks.

"Vietnam considers the question of the missing as a humanitarian problem and had already made great efforts" to resolve the issue, one official said. "Solving the problem depends on cooperation from the American party," the official added.

Vietnam said in April that the search for remains would be fruitless unless the United States offered better cooperation.

Hanoi has returned the remains of 128 U.S. troops, the latest on April 10. The United States says 1,792 troops are still missing.

Vietnam began cooperating with the United States a year ago on the issue -- one of Washington's conditions for normalizing relations.

THANH TRI DISTRICT CONDUCTS CRITICISM DRIVE

OW021431 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 30 May 86

[Text] According to HANOI MOI [NEW HANOI], the executive committee of the Thanh Tri District party organization has just held a conference in the course of its self-criticism and criticism drive.

The conference participants contributed many frank and practical views pointing to shortcomings at the collective, individual, district level, and village level. Despite the difficult and complex general situation, most of the members of the district party committee have been able to maintain their qualities. However, there still are comrades who fail to set an example in their activities and lifestyle, who care more about their self-interest than those of the collective. The most obvious negative manifestations are relaxed labor discipline, infrequency of trips to the grassroots level, being divorced from reality, failure to set an example in implementing views and policies of the party and the state, and obtaining government jobs for wives and children in violation of set policies. A number of comrades have bought such commodities as motorbikes, radio sets, desks, and chairs at cheap prices, or made decisions on distribution of commodities within units under their command.

These acts of abuse of privileges have raised questions among the masses and lowered their confidence. Most of the district cadres rarely go to the grassroots level. If they do go there, it is for gathering data, not for actually giving guidance. The work method of overly relying on directives from higher echelons, meetings, and reports have made the districct leadership bureaucratic, authoriatarian, and out of touch with reality. This type of leadership has badly influenced the contingenet of village leading cadres who, though residing in the localities, are also bureaucratic and authoritarian.

Emulating one another, many cadres have built large houses and bought expensive motorbikes and radio sets. They have overbearing, patriarchal, and authoritarian attitudes. They give short shrift to the people's right to mastery. Disregarding policy, they misappropriate other people's lands and paddies, contract debts without paying them, indule in gambling, and throw sumptuous funeral and wedding parties. Capitalizing on their position and power, they establish connections and use bribes to get soft jobs for their children or secure overseas study or work assignments for them. An obvious shortcoming in the implementation of the cadre policy is that guilty comrades are not disciplined in a timely manner, thus rendering educational measures useless.

After pointing out the deficiences, the participants agreed on the remedies: Some of the remedies must be carried out in the immediate future, others completed by the end of 1986. After the self-criticism and criticism drive, all party members must accept the tasks assigned to them in line with their capabilities, health conditions, and qualities. Lands misappropriated by cadres and cooperative members must be returned to their owners. Families' debts in paddy to the collective must be settled. From this spring crop on, no more borrowings are allowed before old debts are settled. The old debts are categorized, and measures must be devised to collect them beginning with this crop. The quality of meetings must be upgraded in terms of agenda and timing, and a new uniform conference spending system must be devised. District offices and committees must be perfected. Cadres of weak capabilities must be replaced. Units with no trade functions must not engage in trade activities. Enterprises must deliver their products to the state. Bonus funds must be used in accordance with set regulations, not as presents, in violation of set principles. Distribution of commodities by organs at cheap prices must be stopped. Those cadres who are allowed to buy motorbikes must pay for them at market prices. Those who fail to pay the prices must return their vehicles. Those who get their wives or children appointed to government jobs in violation of the set criteria must get them out. Other criticisms by the masses must be investigated and examined, and conclusions must be drawn. Once shortcomings are clearly exposed, they must be immediately remedied. The principle of the district party committee is that higher-echelons cadres must remedy their shortcomings first, for then other cadres will follow suit.

OPPOSITION CRITICIZES DIBB REPORT ON DEFENSE

[Text] The federal opposition has criticized the Dibb report on Australia's defense policy, saying any attempt to introduce its recommendations would be a gamble with Australia's security. The report, tabled in Parliament yesterday, was prepared for the government by Mr Paul Dibb, an academic and former intelligence officer.

The defense minister, Mr Beazley, described the document as the most comprehensive and significant analysis of Australia's defense requirements since the Second World War. However, the opposition spokesman on defense, Mr Sinclair, said the document contained major flaws and any attempt to implement it would be a gamble. He said it showed little concern for the growing Soviet influence in the Pacific. Mr Sinclair said new frigates recommended in the report would not be able to move troops in the region, the F-111 fighter bombers would lose their deterrent value through not being upgraded, and the Army would be short of strength.

The basic conclusion of the Dibb report is that while low-level threats could emerge relatively quickly, it would take many years for any country other than a superpower to launch a major attack on Australia. It proposed that Australia's defense be based on what it described as a military interest zone extending up to 1,000 nautical miles from the Australian coast.

Construction of Base 'Definite'

[Text] The defense minister, Mr Beazley, says several sites are being considered on Cape York Peninsula in northern Queensland for a proposed air force base. A recommendation for an air base on the cape was made in a new report on Australia's defense which was recently tabled in Parliament. The report was prepared for the federal government by Mr Paul Dibb, an academic and former intelligence officer.

The defense minister said that even though a white paper was still to be drawn up from the Dibb report the construction of an air force base in northern Queensland would definitely go ahead. He said the base would accommodate both F-111 and FA-18 warplanes. Mr Beazley said construction of the base would boost the economy in Cape York Peninsula.

One of the major recommendations in the Dibb report is based on what it described as a military interest zone extending up to 1,000 nautical miles from the Australian coast. The federal opposition spokesman on defense, Mr Sinclair, has criticized the report saying it contained major flaws and any attempt to implement it would be a gamble.

LEGISLATION ON NUCLEAR MATERIAL TO BE INTRODUCED

[Text] The federal government is going to introduce legislation today providing for controls over the possession and transport of nuclear material. At the moment, the Department of Resources and Energy relies on customs legislation and the goodwill of mining companies and the Australian Atomic Energy Commission to exercise such control.

Under the proposed legislation, permits will be need for the possession and transport of nuclear material. The foreign minister, Mr Hayden, will also introduce legislation banning the testing, production or stationing of nuclear weapons in Australia. The bill will give effect to Australia's obligation under the Nuclear Free South Pacific Zone Treaty.

FRANCE TESTS 20-KILOTON NUCLEAR BOMB AT MURUROA

The blast, the fourth and largest this year, brought to 82 the number of underground tests at Mururoa since French underground testing began there 11 years ago. New Zealand government seismologist Warwick Smith said the blast was the "biggest of the present series," with a force yield equivalent to 20,000 tonnes of TNT. "We have now had four tests in this present series, and that could be the total of tests planned by France," in this series, Mr Smith said. In each of the past two years, France has tested four devices early in the year and another four in the October-December period.

New Zealand's acting Prime Minister Geoffrey Palmer said that continued French nuclear weapons testing in the South Pacific "strengthens our determination to bring the testing to an end." Mr Palmer said the lastest blast was about the same size as the nuclear device which devastated the Japanese city of Hiroshima, in August 1945. He said the explosion indicated that "France is committed to an equally extensive testing programme this year" as it had carried out at the Atoll test site over the past few years. "New Zealand considers that nuclear testing by any state accelerates the arms race," said Mr Palmer.

SARAWAK'S FIRST DIVISION FREE OF COMMUNIST THREAT

BK011005 Kuala Lumpur BERNAMA in English 0804 GMT 1 Jun 86

[Text] Kuching, Malaysia, June 1 (BERNAMA) -- The First Bureau of the North Kalimantan Communist Party, which posed a security threat to the east Malaysian Sarawak state the last 14 years, has been wiped out with the capture of 16 of its members last month by Indonesian authorities. In announcing this in this Sarawak capital Sunday, Inspector-General of Police Mohamed Haniff Omar said three other members of the Kalimantan-based unit which operated mainly in Sarawak's First Division had also surrendered. "This means the threat from the bureau has been completely wiped out, he told newsmen before returning to Kuala Lumpur after a two-day visit to Sarawak. Among those captured was the overall commander of the unit, Chong Ah Wah, 46. An assortment of weapons were also seized.

In thanking the Indonesian authorities, Haniff said the success helped make Sarawak's First Division free of any communist terrorist threat. He also said there were now only 46 known communist terrorists operating at the Rajang Security Command (RASCCM) area in Sibu. At the height of their struggle about 14 years ago, the terrorists numbered about 500 in Sarawak.

"We hope the just treatment we have accorded former communists who returned to society would induce the remaining terrorists to forsake their futile struggle," he said. He said security forces would keep up the "relentless" pressure on the communist terrorists.

Haniff also said the police force was well geared to assist in the coming general election. "I have directed the men to be not only impartial but also seen to be impartial," he said. He said he did not foresee any problem at all in the coming general election and also in the by-election by the Oya state seat here next month.

AQUINO ADDRESS TO CONSTITUTIONAL COMMISSION

HK031551 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 3 Jun 86 pp 1, 6

["Text" of 2 June speech by Philippine President Corazon Aquino to the Constitutional Commission at Batasang Pambansa session in Quezon City]

[Text] You are here today vested with the full authority and the complete independence to write our country's new Constitution. Nobody, not even I, your President, can interfere with, or overrule you, in this great task. Our nation has placed its trust in you. Do not let it down.

I join you today only to honor your beginning. What happens from here on is a matter for you and you alone.

Today, apart from wishing you well and saying the hopes and prayers of our whole nation are with you, I want only to make two points. The first is, please be quick. Nobody can imposed a deadline on your deliberations but you know that our whole nation is eager for a new Constitution, and the subsequent elections as soon as possible. The people expect a constitutional draft for their sovereign acceptance or rejection within three months, so eager as they have in the shortest time possible, a full-blown democratic republic.

Second, limit yourselves to your constitutional mission. Your task is to design a Constitution that will provide for a new legislature. Not to do that legislature's work for it. That is for the people's elected representatives to do.

You must define and protect our individual freedoms and rights. You must decide how our different institutions of state will relate to each other. Do not be distracted by political debates and matters of policy that do not belong within your constitution-making exercise. You are here appointed, by the people's wish, to write a Constitution. You are not here as elected politicians.

Bear in mind that you shall be pondering, debating and writing a Constitution not only for our contemporaries with their present concerns but also for succeeding generations of Filipinos whose first concerns we cannot presume to know beforehand. Future Filipinos must always be free to decide how to address these concerns as they arise. Even the wisest cures for present maladies should not be imposed on succeeding generations that will have their own unique problems and priorities.

True and long-lived Constitutions, a wise justice has told me, should be broad enough to be able to meet every exigency we cannot foretell and specific enough to stoutly protect the essentials of a true democracy. In short, open-minded documents that will always be relevant. Remember that constitutional changes are not safe or easy to come by. Our first attempt at constitutional revision was followed by a dictatorship. And this, our second endeavor, was preceded by a revolution.

Future Filipinos and their legislatures and supreme courts can best assess and address the challenged they will meet if they enjoy the widest latitude of thought and action. In writing a Constitution, have the fullest confidence that the wisdom of our race has not exhausted itself in us. Our race has grown in wisdom over time. I believe it will continue to do so. Yours is indeed no easy task. On the other hand, depending on the result, yours will be no small glory. Our people have suffered much. Thank you and Godspeed.

AQUINO MEETING WITH CATHOLIC WOMENS LEAGUE REPORTED

[By Vincente B. Foz]

[Text] President Corazon C. Aquino said yesterday a new general registration of qualified voters will be held before the next local and national elections to purge the registry of fake, non-existent, or dead voters. The new registration will be the first since more than a decade ago. With new voters being registered through the years, the books of voters now bulge with more than 29 million names. But Commission on Elections quarters doubt whether this figure corresponds with the actual number of qualified voters.

Mrs Aquino made the announcement in an extemporaneous speech before some 3,000 members of the Catholic Women's League (CWL) attending their 3rd national convention starting tomorrow.

Meeting the CWL members at the Malacanang ceremonial hall, President Aquino said the new registration will be "a very expensive and costly procedure." But, she said, "I think it will be well worth it because this will be a list that will be good forever."

The next election are expected to be called after the ratification of the new constitution that will be drafted by the Constitutional Commission in November.

Meanwhile, President Aquino appointed Businessman Jesus V. Ayala as part-time member of the Monetary Board of the Central Bank (CB) to represent the private sector. Ayala's appointment raises to two the number of private-sector representatives in the monetary-fiscal planning body. The other private sector man is Cesar Buenaventura.

The others on the CB board are CB Gov Jose Fernandez, chairman; Finance Minister Jaime V. Ongpin, NEDA [National Economic Development Authority] Director-General Solita Colas Monsod, Budget Minister Alberto G. Romulo, and the chairman of the Board of Investments.

In her talk with CWL members, Mrs Aquino reacted to criticisms that the new government is unstable and thus it has not been able to attract foreign investors. She pointed out that her government will just be completing its 100th day on June 5. In the past, she said, incoming administrations were given at least six weeks or even up to March as transition period. In her case, Mrs Aquino said, there had been no smooth transition because of the February revolution which toppled the Marcos regime.

She reiterated her appeal to the people to give her government a chance and some time to perform well. "In this government, we're all working very hard," the President said.

Recalling her trip to Davao last week, the President said that she was happy to meet with all sectors and to know that people there were trying their best to solve their own problems, with the least help from government.

In another development, the President thanked the more than 100 Malacanang Palace museum volunteers after the temporary closing of the museum yesterday. Mrs Aquino suggested that the volunteers visit the Constitutional Commission once it starts its sessions next week.

The museum will undergo repairs. The President said most of the items on exhibit, such as the personal things of ex-President Marcos and the former First Lady, Mrs Imelda Marcos, will be removed from display. She said these items were "negative" since they refer to the Marcos regime.

To make the museum more "positive," Mrs Aquino said, "people power" items and the memorabilia of former presidents will be exhibited.

Ayala finished liberal arts and law at the Ateneo de Manila University and took up graduate studies in business at the Cornell University. He taught at the Far Eastern University and Assumption Convent School and served as vice president of the Commercial Bank and Trust Co. from 1956 to 1968. At present he is chairman of the board of JVA Management Corp., Madaum Arrastre, Panabo Agricultural & Development Corp., Reyna Integrated Cereal Enterprises, and Insurance Services & Commercial Traders.

NATIONAL SERVICE LAW SUSPENDED BY PRESIDENT AQUINO

[Text] President Aquino has suspended the controversial National Service Law [NSL] except the provision requiring students to render military service. The suspension was issued to Education Minister Lourdes Quisumbing who was also asked to review the law and make the necessary recommendations. The NSL or Presidential Decree No 1706 provides that a student in high school and college should render civic work, law enforcement or military services. They could not graduate without those services.

President Aquino, in ordering the suspension of the law, noted the opposition to it by various sectors. The law was an expansion of the commonwealth Act No 1 which provides compulsory military training.

LAUREL'S PROPOSED EXECUTIVE ORDER VIEWED

[By Victor Agustin]

[Text] President Aquino herself had issued the order to publicly answer the public potshots made by Vice President Salvador H. Laurel on the alleged inaction by Aquino aides on Laurel's proposal for increased funding and staffing for his office, the INQUIRER confirmed the other night.

The President herself, after assessing the vice president's proposal, rejected to sign the Laurel-proposed executive order, the INQUIRER also gathered. "We better answer this," the President was reported to have ordered Executive Secretary Joker P. Arroyo upon reading for the third time Wednesday of Laurel's grumblings.

The President, the INQUIRER gathered, scans all the newspapers -- reading the top three dailies cover to cover -- before she starts work.

The President was puzzled why the Vice President and his publicity men had to publicly press his claim for increased funding and staffing for the vice president's office when Malacanang had already informed Laurel's office why the palace could not grant his request, the INQUIRER gathered.

That afternoon, Assistant Executive Secretary Mariano Sarmiento III was ordered to meet with the Malacanang reporters to transmit the President's position on the vice president's petition. Sarmiento was ordered to strictly confine his answers on why Malacanang could not approve the Laurel-proposed executive order and "not to stray into politics," the INQUIRER gathered.

Malacanang announced that the proposed executive order that Laurel wants Ms Aquino to sign would create a "shadow government" and usurp some powers of the presidency including "offices parallel to that of the President as well as a network of regional offices not even the Office of the President has."

The Office of the Vice President, which has 14 staffmen as patterned after the 1935 Constitution, would swell its staff to 400 under the Laurel proposal.

The following day, Malacanang, feeling that a Cabinet member was needed to impress upon a fellow cabinet member (Laurel), the presidential perspective, ordered Budget Minister Alberto Romulo to publicly answer Laurel.

That afternoon, deputy presidential spokesperson Alicia Villadolid assembled a press conference for Romulo, who had to cancel a meeting with the government panel on the Bataan nuclear plant. Romulo belied Laurel's claim that Malacanang had failed to release the funds for the vice president's office -- Laurel claimed that he had to dig deep into his pocket because of the delay just to pay for salaries of his staff. A total of P763,179 had been released by the budget ministry, enough to cover the salaries and office budget of Laurel men up to the end of June, Romulo said.

LAUREL SAYS MALACANANG DENIAL OF PROPOSAL 'OKAY'

HK031601 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 3 Jun 86 p 1

[By Vincent M. Tanedo]

[Text] Vice President Salvador H. Laurel said yesterday that if Malacanang does not wish to approve the executive order defining his functions and powers it is still all right with him. "Kung ayaw nilang aprobahan.... di okay lang (if they -- Malacanang officials -- do not want to approve the executive order it is okay with me)," this was how Laurel voiced his apparent disappointment.

Laurel, who is also the foreign minister, is leaving for Tokyo today as the quest of the Japanese government for three days. An aide said that Laurel is departing with a "heavy heart." With Palace inaction on the draft of the executive order, Laurel cannot appoint a permanent staff. Difficulties are also foreseen in fund releases.

Malacanang said that the completion of the draft of the new Constitution in three months' time eliminates the need for such an executive order. Moreover, it is too early to determine whether the present parliamentary system which does away with the position of Vice President will be retained or not in the new charter, it was pointed out.

As this developed, former Senator Rene Espina, Unido secretary general, invited Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo to a debate on the issues of the controversial executive order in any public forum of Arroyo's choice. Espina said that while it would be a one-on-one debate, Arroyo is free to bring along his assistants.

LAUREL DEFENDS GOVERNMENT RECORD ON PRESS FREEDOM

[Text] The Aquino government has upheld press freedom as one of the most basic rights in a democratic society despite predictions that the new regime would go all-out after the so called crony press with a vengeance, Vice President Salvador H. Laurel said yesterday. "The new administration has not stopped any of these publications nor has it even tried to influence their editorial policies," Laurel, who is also foreign affairs minster said.

His remarks were made in a speech read for him by Batangas Gov Jose Laurel, a nephew, before the Southern Tagalog Association of News Disseminators (STAND) at the Intercontinental Hotel.

Laurel explained that some publications were sequestered to protect the government's proprietary interest that may exist these newspapers, either by way of ill-gotten wealth acquired by Marcos cronies or through loans from government-owned banks that were used to finance these dailies. "Beyond such possible proprietary interest, the government has clearly no interest to run any of these newspapers," he said.

Laurel said the objective is merely to establish whether there is basis for such interest and then find the most equitable way for the government to divest itself of the proprietary interest. He recalled that when marital law was declared in 1972, the Philippine press was one of its foremost victims since the free press presented the "most formidable obstacle to the machinations of Marcos to plunder the nation's patrimony."

The Philippine press, he noted, became a "controlled and inhibited tool in mass miscommunications." There was marked reversal of roles between what was termed before the February revolution as the crony and the alternative presses, Laurel said.

The new publications overtook the older newspapers in terms of circulation figures, especially after Mrs Aquino called for a boycott of the "crony press," Laurel noted. "But what is more significant is that during the last wo months, there has been a perceptible drift that the older publications are bouncing back and regaining their previous grounds," Laurel said. "For with the same determination exhibited by the alternative press during their struggle, the older papers are fighting it out with the more recent ones in the now open and free market of ideas among the reading public."

PIMENTEL FORMS COMMITTEE TO REVIEW OIC's

[By E.T. Suarez]

[Text] The Ministry of Local Government (MLG) said yesterday that it is reviewing the designation of 30 municipal Officers-In-Charge (OICs) in view of mounting protests filed against them before the ministry. Local Government Minister Aquilino Q. Pimentel Jr said the protests range from grave abuse of authority by the OICs ti their being non-residents of the towns where they are designated. Pimentel said he will not hesitate to replace the OICs if it is found that the protests against them are well-founded.

He said he had already replaced at least 15 OIC mayors after investigation showed that the protests against them had sufficient basis. He said two governors-designate are presently under fire for offenses ranging from grave abuse of authority to falsification of their bio-data. Pimentel declined to identify the two provincial officials but said one of them comes from Luzon while the other is from the Visayas.

The MLG has created a committee headed by Deputy Minister Djalmar Quintana to resolve the controversial appointments of local OICs, according to Pimentel. MLG Deputy Ministers Nenita Cortez Daluz and Ciriano Alfelor are the members of the review committee.

The Quintana committee is shceduled to hear this week the protests against Jose Grapillon, OIC for Crigara, Leyte. Those who protested against his designation said he is not a registered voter in Carigara.

The creation of the committee to review the designation of OICs facing protests by their constituents have been hailed by the people in the towns affected. They said the creation of the committee by Pimentel showed that he is determined to replace OICs who are not voters or residents of the town where they are designated to fortify the people's confidence in President Aquino.

CABINET APPROVES ECONOMIC RESTRUCTURING PROGRAM

[Text] Manila, June 4 (AFP) -- The Philippine Cabinet Wednesday approved an economic restructuring program designed to restore growth after two years of sharp decline, a government minister said.

Minister of Economic Planning Solita Monsod told reporters after a cabinet meeting at the presidential palace here that the program was the "result of tremendous consultations" with the private sector. She said President Corazon Aquino, whose three-month-old government has been criticized for failing to come up with a detailed economic plan, would formally announce approval of the restructuring program shortly.

The economy shrank by at least five percent in 1984 and 1985 under former President Ferdinand Marcos, deposed by a revolt in February. Mr Marcos left behind a depleted treasury and a foreign debt currently estimated at 27 billion dollars, for which the Aquino government is seeking easier terms to allow it to achieve economic growth.

The economic program, unveiled last month as the joint effort of government officials, businessmen and economists, includes plans to:

-- Encourage foreign investment under clear-cut rules;
-- Promote exports and lift import controls;
-- Dismantle agricultural monopolies awarded by Mr Marcos to close allies, particularly in the vital sugar and coconut industries;
-- Restructure the foreign debt, and obtain grants and concessional loans instead of commercial loans;
-- Trim and reorganize the government for greater efficiency;
-- Launch emergency rural employment projects through public works;
-- Improve the internal revenue system;
-- Control the growth of the population, now placed at 55 million;
-- Maintain a "realistic" exchange rate.

Meanwhile, BUSINESS DAY newspaper said here Wednesday that the government was considering in increased budget to spur economic growth but would have to violate a pledge not to raise taxes if it ws to trim a huge deficit.

Quoting unnamed officials, the newspaper said Mrs. Aquino's government was eyeing a 1986 budget of 110 billion pesos (5.36 billion dollars), up from 80 billion pesos (3.9 billion dollars) set by Mr. Marcos. Official estimates showed that the budget deficit could reach 35 billion to 38 billion pesos (1.7 billion to 1.85 billion dollars) if the government did not raise taxes, the newspaper added.

ONGPIN URGES STEPS TO RESTRUCTURE FOREIGN DEBT

U.S. Debt Payment Moratorium

[By Jun Concepcion]

[Text] The government has requested the United States government for a moratorium on the payment of all loans extended to the Philippines by American government institutions, like the U.S. Export-Import Bank, as a way of easing up the country's heavy debt service burden.

The request was relayed last week by Finanace Minister Jaime V. Ongpin, through the foreign affairs ministry, to U.S. Congressman Stephen Solarz who is now spearheading efforts within the U.S. Government to increase American economic assistance to the Philippines.

Ongpin batted for such moratorium on all Philippine loan payments to U.S. Government institutions "including the U.S. Export-Import Bank as this would certainly ease our debt service burdens considerably."

The Commericial Credit Corporation [CCC] is another agency the loans of which should be covered by a moratorium.

The U.S. Eximbank provided the bulk of the foreign loans to the controversial $2.3 billion Bataan nuclear plant while CCC provided over $100 million to finance wheat importations of the National Food Authority from the U.S.

It was learned that a declaration of a moratorium on Philippine payment of its loan incurred with various American government institutions will save the country about $30 to $60 million annually which will ease up its debt service burden. It was earlier reported that the government needs to shell out about $2 billion to service the principal and interest payments of its $26 billion foreign debts.

The government is now exploring various ways and means of trying to reduce the burden of paying back its huge foreign debts. Schemes like a selective debt repudiation, debt recapitalization and pegging payments of foreign debts to certain percentage of the country's annual export earnings have been discussed within the cabinet.

Government sources have said that there was a consensus within the cabinet on the great need to lighten the burden of paying back the country's debt burden so that the government would have enough financial resources to pursue and stir up economic growth.

Announces Agreement With Japan

Ongpin upon his arrival from a four-day mission to Tokyo which included a meeting with the subcommittee of the World Bank-sponsored consultative group of countries.

The seven project loans will be financed by the Overseas Economic Cooperation Fund (OECF) with 30-year repayment terms inclusive of a 10-year grace period at 3.5 percent per annum.

The agreements which were signed by Ongpin and Takashi Hosemi, OECF chairman, covered the following projects: improvement of the Makati-Mandaluyong road to alleviate traffic congestion in Metro Manila, P173.5 million; improvement of selected airports and sites throughout the country, P915.8 million; improvement of existing dams and reservoirs for flood control, power generation and irrigation, P480.9 million; rural water supply, P308.1 million; engineering service for a nationwide ice plant and cold storage system, P21.1 million; engineering service for maritime communication, P17.8 million; and engineering service for the Pampanga delta development, P85 million.

Three rescheduling agreements covering debts of the Philippine Government and the Central Bank [CB] due to the OECF and the Expert Import Bank of Japan were also concluded. These involve loans with maturities falling due from Jan 1, 1985 to June 30, 1986 amounting respectively to about P1.712 billion of Philippine Government obligations due OECF; P868 million of CB obligations due OECF arising from past commodity loans; and P156 million of government obligations due Eximbank.

The rescheduled debt shall be repaid according to Paris Club terms of 10 years inclusive of a five-year grace period, at 3.5 percent per annum on OECF credits and 5.125 on Eximbank credits.

The Philippines and the Soviet Union established diplomatic relations on 2 June 1976.

CONSTITUTIONAL BODY RESOLUTIONS DETAILED

[Text] President Corazon C. Aquino said yesterday she will not interfere in the task of the 48 appointees to the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] to come out with a new constitutional draft for the people's acceptance or rejection.

Reminding the Con-Com appointees that they were appointed "by the people's wish" to write a constitution and that they were not elected politicians, the President emphasized that their mission is to design a constitution that will provide for a new legislature and not to do that legislature's work for it. "That is for the people's elected representatives to do," she said.

According to the President, while no one can impose a deadline on the Con-Com's deliberations, the commission must bear in mind that "the people are expecting a constitutional draft for their ratification in three months' time and local elections to follow soon afterwards."

Former Supreme Court Justice Cecilia Munoz-Palma was elected yesterday president of the Constitutional Commission of 1986. Palma, 72, will preside over the commission's day-to-day deliberations.

In a closed-door meeting, Palma gernered 31 votes as against seven votes for former Speaker Jose P. Laurel Jr, six for former senator Ambrosio Padilla and four votes for Francisco "Soc" Rodrigo.

Former Senator Ambrosio Padilla was elected vice-president. Elected Permanent secretary-general was Flerida Ruth Romero; sergeant at arms, Roberto San Andres. The 48 delegates to the Con-Com did not elect a floor leader. Napoleon Rama will be the acting floor leader with Jose Calderon as his assistant.

Palma, in an interview with newsmen immediately after her election, said that the Con-Com will eagerly keep on working to write a new constitution because it will bring immediate political and economic stability in the country. "This is the urgent, crucial and vital step toward stability," she said.

Palma said the 48-man Con-Com will address itself to the following critical issues: nature of government whether presidential, parliamentary or any modification or mixture; bill of rights; and declaration of principles.

The election of officers was the first order of the day, after formal inaugural ceremonies started at 10 a.m. with President Corazon C. Aquino as the keynote speaker. Mrs. Aquino urged the Con-Com to "please be quick in the designing a new constitution... not to be distracted by politics." She promised not to intervene in the commission's deliberations.

The 1986 Con-Com is the fifth time the Philippine constitution will be written. The first was the Malolos Constitution of 1896, the second the Commonwealth Constitution of 1935, the third the Japanese occupation Constitution of 1943, and the fourth was the Marcos regime Constitution of 1971.

Vice-President Salvador Laurel who temporarily presided, said 1986 constitution "will be one for all times, which will be binding for all people - for the rulers and the governed. It will be binding in times of peace and war."

After the President's speech, varied reactions were registered by the members of the Commission. Jose B. Laurel whose father and his namesake was the chairman and president of the 1935 and 1943 Constitutions said, "It's good that we will be independent for we are not politicians."

Former labor minister Blas F. Ople, one of the political opposition members to the Con-Com said it was brief and eloquent but especially the part where the president stated that the umbilical cord of this constitution to the appointing power is cut.

"The commission will be able to act in complete independence from anyone. This is reassuring but subject to proof. There is a pledge that Malacanang will not interfere. I do not want to doubt the sincerity of this statement especially when we take up the transitory provisions, that sincerity is subject to proof," he added.

Fr. Joaquin Bernas observed that what is important is that the Con-Com should establish its own identity that "we are not working for anyone but for the welfare of the people."

Rustico delos Santos, also representing the opposition, said, "It is nice that President Aquino recognized the independence of the Con-Com, but when she says that we limit ourselves to constitutional making as if she wants only general ideas, I beg to disagree because there are some provisions which will be detailed. [no closing quotes as published]

The first resolution filed with the Con-com was made by Jose N. Nolledo who filed an urgent motion to constitute the whole Constitutional commission as an ad hoc committee to conduct public hearings on th form of government that the country should adopt.

He said public hearings shouald take place for a period not exceeding six days and that plenary sessions should discuss each proposal on the form of government after which the questions shall be immediately decided by the body. He said should the presidential system or a modified form be adopted, he suggested that the basis for revision should be the 1935 and 1971 Constitutions.

In a related development, the Nationalist Alliance for Justice, Freedom and Democracy filed a petition before the Con-Com for the disqualification of all opposition appointees led by Ople. The petition questioned the probity, independence and nationlism and patriotism of the opposition members.

Other resolutions filed with the Con-Com were:

-- Resolution No. 1 seeking the adoption of a resolution to decide on th issue of the system, type and form of government.
-- Resolution No. 2 seeking the incorporation in the new constitution a preamble.
-- Resolution No. 3 seeking the incorporation in the new constitution an article on declaration of principles and state policies.
-- Resolution No. 4 seeking the incorporation in the new constitution an article on the bill of rights.
-- Resolution No. 5 seeking the incorporation in the new constitution an article on duties and obligations of citizens.
-- Resolution No. 7 seeking the incorporation in the new constitution an article on citizenship.
-- Resolution No. 8 seeking the incorporation in the new constitution an article on suffrage.
-- Resolution No. 10 seeking the incorporation in the new constitution a provision reserving to Filipino citizens or to corporations or associations whose capital is wholly-owned by Filipino citizens alone the privilege and right to dispose, explore, develop, exploit or utilize the natural resources of the country.

-- Resolution No. 11 limiting the powers of the president to declare martial law and other emergency powers.
-- Resolution No. 12 defining the national territory and upholding the sovereignty of the Philippine over the territory of Sabah. [Resolution numbers as published]

CON-COM SHELVES MOVE TO OUST KBL LEADERS

[Text] The Constitutional Commission yesterday shelved the move to oust former KBL leaders led by former Labor Minister Blas Ople, in order to concentrate on the more urgent matter of the form of government for the country. The Constitutional Commission suspended its rows to get an early consensus on the form of government.

In its first working day, the Con-Com assigned various committees 29 resolutions on proposed matters to be incorporated in the new constitution. Deliberations were interrupted for 30 minutes following a protest letter of Abraham Sarmiento seeking the disqualification of opposition members of the Con-Com headed by Blas Ople. Con-Com president Cecillia Munoz-Palma, Ople and other commissioners claimed they have not received copies of the previous letter which was included in yesterday's agenda. Ople and other opposition commissioners reserved their right to defend themselves at the appropriate time. They refused to stand up on the floor to defend themselves, saying it would delay the work of the body. Ople warned that for the Con-com to entertain the letter might set the dangers of precedent because then anybody can malign a Con-Com member if the body will give it importance.

'PEOPLE'S BATASAN' URGES CORDILLERA AUTONOMY

HK030753 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 2 June 86 p 26

[Text] President Corazon C. Aquino was asked to establish a fourteenth region, the Cordillera autonomous region, comprising the provinces of Ifugao, Benguet, Mountain Province, Kalinga-Apayao, Abra and Baguio City.

The creation of a 14th region was contained in a resolution approved during the "People's Batasan" held Saturday in Baguio City by the Partido Nacionalista ng Pilipinas. The resolution said the Cordillera region is in response to the aspiration of the people in the mountain provinces to determine, direct and sustain their development in a manner and pace appropriate to their natural and social realities.

DISSENSION IN POLITICAL OPPOSITION EXAMINED

HK030901 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 2 June 86 p 28

By Tara S. Singh]

[Text] The political opposition -- The Kilusang Bagong Lipunan, the Partido Nacionalista ng Pilipinas [PNP] and the Nacionalista Party [NP] -- is in dissaray because of internal dissension.

The first victim is the less numerous but articulate PNP, when 11 members defected fom the camp of PNP chairman Blas F. Ople on the issue of participation in the Constitutional Commission. Former MP Manuel Collantes, leader of the breakaway group, said they would join another opposition group which is being formed by various factions of the KBL and the NP.

On the other front, the NP often manifested that there could be no unification with the KBL if the KBL continues to espouse that deposed president Marcos and Arturo Tolentino are still the legal president and vice-president, respectively, of the country. The NP position is a death knell to the reunification effort of the various opposition groups. The KBL, NP and PNP have "links" with the deposed president Marcos.

The conflicting positions of the opposition will definitely precipitate a realignment among the opposition parties.

Among the opposition groups, the NP has considerable attraction. "It has the name, guns, and logistics," Ople said. The NP has been quite busy mending its political forces throughout the country. It has revitalized its leadership reacently, and elected former M.P. Rene Cayetano secretary-general. Cayetano is known close associate of Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile. Ople told newsmen that the NP hopes to emerge "a bigger and better NP."

Some political observers have tagged a Cabinet minister of President Corazon C. Aquino as behind the "rash of activities in the Nacionalista Party." A few opposition members are now realigning themselves to protect their respective "political and business interests," observers noted

This was strongly indicated in a press statement of Ople yesterday. He said the resignation of 11 PNP members "was a mere pretext to bolt the PNP and join another party offering better protection and more immediate rewards."

Ople also said "at least there is a principle on which the opposition parties can realign." He added tht the current opposition may be divided into three groups according to their respective perception of the political situation.

Ople said these perceptions ere:

-- Former president Marcos and his running mate Arturo Tolentino are the duly-elected and qualified leaders of the country under the 1973 Constitution which continues to be in force and in effect, and that therefore they should be returned to power. If the first option is not realizable, the second position should be to bring down the Aquino government through a coup d'etat, exploiting the internal instability of a revolutionary government, so that a military junta would be in pwoer.

-- The opposition should adhere to a policy of "critical cooperation" with the Aquino government, fiscalizing its policies and proposing alternatives to them, while preparing to oust the Aquino government through legal and constitutional means, that is to say, through elections.

OPLE TERMS MISHANDLING FUND CHARGES 'OLD HAT'

[Text] Former Labor Minister Blas Ople said the charge that he used nine million pesos in cash advances from the Bureau of Rural Workers for the period January to February this year is nothing new. He said the Commission on Audit must be allowed to finish its audit of the fund before any judgement is made.

[Begin Ople recording] This is old hat, as you know. The Commission on Audit has not completed processing the facts of this case. I think the Commission on Audit, under chairman Tito Guingona is, uh, has the jurisdiction. It is an orderly and fair forum for resolving doubts concerning me. I suggest that we allow the Commission on Audit to finish its task. [end recording]

KMU 'AMENABLE' TO 6-MONTH STRIKE MORATORIUM

[By Gethsemane M. Selirio]

[Excerpt] In a sudden change of heart, the militant Kilusang Mayo Uno (KMU) has declared that it is amenable to a six-month strike moratorium to help usher in national recovery.

The KMU National Executive Council (NEC) agreed over the weekend to "consider favorably" the proposal of President Aquino for a strike moratorium. However, the decision on a moratorium will still be subject to ratification by the KMU national council which meets this week.

Rolando M. Olalia, KMU chairman, told BUSINESS DAY that he is personally in favor of the six-month moratorium as a "gesture of our principled support for and cooperation with the Aquino government."

The KMU-NEC, which is the implementing arm of the labor alliance, also agreed to a proposal to give the new government the "chance" to prove that it is determined to improve the living and working cconditions of the people. "The basis of the decision is that we believe in the sincerity of Mrs Aquino," Olalia said, as he pointed out that KMU and Mrs Aquino were together in the streets to overthrow then president Marcos.

Olalia declined to project how the national council will vote on the proposal. While the NEC is only composed of 15 executive officers, the national council counts 34 members (the executive officers plus the leaders of the labor federations under KMU).

Olalia's personal stand, however, is expected to strongly influence the rest of the council members by virtue of his being chairman of the labor alliance. Even then, Olalia stressed that he will not "dictate" his views on the council.

Olalia also said that if the KMU national council agrees to the strike moratorium, it will make a formal recommendation to the rest of the Labor Advisory Consultative Council (which groups together the major labor federations of the country) to issue a similar stand.

MILITARY SECOND IN COMMAND DISCUSSES INSURGENCY

[Text] Brig Gen Salvador M. Mison, armed forces vice chief of staff, explained recently the three pronged thrusts of the AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] to counter insurgency and to make the armed services effective instruments in maintaining a just, stable-and progressive democratic society.

Mison said the AFP goals are geared toward an improved strategy in counter-insurgency that is focused on the protection of the people; development of a new AFP that is trimmed, but efficient and effective, highly motivated, morally upright, and people oriented; and reorganization with the proper mix of forces for peace and order and security operations.

Speaking during the monthly "Bicol Forum" at the Sizzler's Steak House in Makati, sponsored by the Philippine Federation of Pagiribang Bicolano Inc, Mison emphasized that the new thrusts would enable the new AFP to play its supportive role to the political department of the government. In short, "we will always be subordinate to civilian authority," he said.

He said the emphasis in the counter-insurgency strategy is on the people which he claimed to be a shift from the original strategy which protected the presidency and the seat of government.

Mison stressed that the emphasis on the people give stress on the defense and protection of the citizens and contains three basic elements, namely: national reconciliation, development and security.

As a people-oriented strategy, Mison said, the prime concern of the new AFP is the protection of the people from encroachments of the NPAs and the defense of the community. To accomplish its mission, Mison said, the new AFP is being reorganized to insure its development into a unified organization to assure the actual implementation of the AFP restructuring to jibe with the attainment of the objectives of the people-oriented strategy.

Mison also said that it is also important that the command structure be changed. As now composed, the command structure is composed of a mix of forces from all armed services of the government.

MILITARY UNITS, EQUIPMENT MOVED FROM MANILA

BK030717 Manila PNA in English 0341 GMT 3 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 3 (PNA) -- Armed Forces Chief Gen Fidel V. Ramos Tuesday said five maneuver Army battalions and 100 armored vehicles formerly stationed in Metro Manila have been redeployed for counter-insurgency operations.

Ramos made the disclosure to assess the first 100 days performance of the New Armed Forces of the Philippines (NAFP) [words indistinct] February revolution. He said the redeployment of five battalions to critical areas would bolster government forces in fighting the [word indistinct] Army.

Ramos said these forces were formerly utilized solely to guard Metro Manila and Malacanang Palace during the Marcos administration. He also noted that before the February uprising, there was a heavy concentration of armored vehicles in the metropolis, although they were more needed in the countryside where a guerrilla war has been going on for [words indistinct].

Transport vehicles were also redistributed to the field for more (?mobility) to the troops. Forty mini-cruiser, jeeps and 10 staff cars were recalled and distributed to the field.

RAMOS SAYS WARLORDS EMERGING AS THREAT

HK040336 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 3 June 86 pp 1, 20

[By Jose De Vera]

[Text] Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, Armed Forces chief of staff, said yesterday that political warlords, cronies of the old regime who maintain private armies, are emerging as a threat to national security.

Ramos said the threat posed by the political warlords' forces is next to that posed by the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) and its military arm, the New People's Army (NPA), and the secessionist Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) and its military arm, the Bangsa Moro Army (BMA), in that order.

This assessment, he said, was made by the military high command on the Armed Forces' performance during the first 100 days of the Aquino administration.

Ramos is scheduled to enumerate in detail the AFP's performance during a scheduled conference with local and foreign media tomorrow in Camp Aguinaldo.

In its assessment, the AFP high command said that in spite of their seemingly positive response to the government's call for national reconciliation, the CPP-NPA and the secessionist movement remain the serious threats to national security and stability.

It said that the CPP-NPA is steadfast in pursuit of its objective to seize power through the violent overthrow of the government. The MNLF, likewise, has not renounced its separatist goal for Mindanao, Sulu and Palawan, the AFP general staff said.

The present CPP-NPA strength was placed at 16,000 regulars with 11,200 firearms. The communists were deployed in all the regions but their biggest concentration are in the Cagayan Valley, the Bicol region, Western Visayas, Eastern Visayas, Western Mindanao, Northeastern Mindanao and Southeastern Mindanao.

At least 17 percent, or 7,019 of the total 41,615 barangays and 373 municipalities and cities in 62 out of the 72 provinces are categorized as either CPP-NPA "influenced" or "infiltrated." Official records also show that from Feb. 26 to April 30, the CPP-NPA was involved in 495 violent incidents.

The MNLF strength was estimated at about 5,300 armed regulars, 65 percent of whom belongs to the faction of Nur Misuari. The Misuari group is the strongest of the three MNLF factions. It operates mainly in Western Mindanao and controls 10 of the 13 revolutionary committees in the region.

The second faction is under Hashim Salamat. This is the so-called Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MNLF) [acronym as published] with 800 members operating in Northern and Central Mindanao.

The MNLF presence remains strongly felt in the southern part of Tawitawi, western part of Sulu, particularly around Mt. Tumatangis, southern part of Mt. Malindang and southern coastal areas of Zamboanga peninsula, some areas in southern Palawan and in several towns of Cotabato and Lanao provinces. The military said the situation in the South remains "tenuous" despite the peace feelers of the secessionist leaders.

On the political warlords, or "Marcos loyalists," the military said that their private armies are using highpowered guns issued from Armed Forces stockpiles and guns smuggled through the southern backdoor. If left unchecked and allowed to consolidate their ranks, they can become a formidable force to contend with, the high command said.

It also said that 5,900 high-powered firearms, 335 low-powered guns, 2.3 million rounds of ammunition and 700 fragmentation grenades have been collected from the warlords of "loyalists." The biggest haul of 1,274 highpowered assorted guns, one million rounds of ammunition, gun accessories and reloading equipment and accessories were seized from four places where former Ambassador Eduardo Cojuangco, Jr. reportedly hid them, according to the military.

NPA LEADERS RULE OUT SURRENDER, AMNESTY

[By Roy S. de Guzman]

[Text] Communist guerrilla leaders ruled out the surrender of its 15,000-strong rebel army. They also rejected the government's proposed amnesty and rehabilitation program intended for dissident "returnees."

They also insisted that military personnel who figured in abuses against civilians should not be pardoned, but instead tried in the courts and then punished for the atrocities they committed.

In the April-May 1986 issue of the LIBERATION, the official organ of the outlawed National Democratic Front (NDF), two members of the New People's Army (NPA) general staff -- identified only as "Ka [Comrade] Ronnie" and Ka Miguel" -- presented their views on the issues of ceasefire, amnesty and the armed forces.

"This call for surrender and amnesty is an effort to split and demoralize the ranks of the revolutionary forces," the two NPA leaders said. They said that President Aquino's offer of amnesty is meant only for the rank and file in the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), quoting AFP reformist officers.

In rejecting the President amnesty proposal, the NPA leaders also said that regional ceasefires will not work and could not possibly lead to a lasting solution to the 17-year insurgency problem. "When you enter into a ceasefire with an opposition party, you recognize it as a force to reckon with -- a force you deal with on equal footing. There is no amnesty involved as it means pardon for a political offense," LIBERATION reported.

"Why should we surrender and be given amnesty? Just like the Opposition, we fought hard against the Marcos fascist dictatorship. Why should our efforts against the Marcos regime be considered as a political offense under the present dispensation?," the two NPA officials were quoted as saying.

They instead called for negotiations on the national level, saying the talks could lead to a truce or an armistice. Ka Ronnie and Ka Miguel, speaking as one in the two-page interview, said they prefer a negotiated ceasefire instead of a unilateral ceasefire or one arrived at after the grant of several conditions.

The NPA leaders said no pre-conditions should be made before the negotiations, like the laying down of arms by the Communist guerillas. They said the President's amnesty program could also be a way out for erring military officials and soldiers. "Amnesty is also a trump card for reactionary and criminal torturers and elements in the Armed Forces of the Philippines."

"But the people demand justice for their crimes," they said. "Ang utang sa dugo ay dapat bayaran. Managot ang dapat managot." ("Blood debts must be paid. Those responsible should be held accountable.")

The two also said that "in deference to new developments" and "as an expression of our respect for the temper of our people," they have acted with restraint in carrying out ambushes and raids against AFP detachments. LIBERATION reported that from an average of nine tactical offensives a week in 1985, the rate dropped to twice a week following the February revolt that toppled the Marcos regime.

Ka Ronnie and Ka Miguel also charged that the military and the civilian government President Aquino heads have opposing views concerning the ceasefire. They said that even as Ms Aquino extended a call for the rebels to engage in talks with the government, AFP officers said ceasefire is not possible. "At present, we are unsure as to which view will prevail."

The latest issue of the LIBERATION, mailed to the INQUIRER offices, focused on the gains achieved by the NPA in its 18 years of armed struggle of capture political power. LIBERATION said that the peasantry still comprises majority of the 15,000 fulltime and 20,000 part-time guerilla fighters in the 59 guerilla fronts operational in the country's 74 provinces.

The average amount needed to maintain an NPA company comes to around P30,000 a month, while a "red fighter" -- the term it used to describe an NPA guerilla -- spends four to 17 pesos "depending on the conditions in an area."

Ka Miguel admitted there is a high casualty rate among NPA officers in the field, because unlike the AFP. NPA officers are at the forefront, instead of merely commanding the troops.

He said the main problem facing the NPA fight now is the question of resources, which Ka Miguel said cannot cope with the advancing stage of the Communist-led rebellion. He cited the problem of bullets, which he said are cheaper bought than manufactured, and the lack of medical personnel, whom they hope to train for work under battlefield conditions.

LAUREL MEETS TAKESHITA, DISCUSSES LOANS

[Text] Tokyo, June 4 KYODO -- Philippine Vice President and Foreign Minister Salvador Laurel said Wednesday that the Philippines wants Japan to further proceed with economic cooperation projects in a way which will assist the country's political and social stability. Laurel made the remark during a 30-minute meeting with Finance Minister Noboru Takeshita at his office, officials said. Laurel said the Philippines, which has external debts of 26 billion dollars, wants Japan to speed up the signing of loan agreements on remaining projects under the 13th yen credit plan and to begin studying a 14th loan plan.

The 49.5 billion yen 13th credit line consists of 33.03 billion yen for financing of 11 projects and 16.47 billion yen for commodity loans. Of the project financing, loan contracts were concluded last month for seven projects totaling 16.6 billion yen.

Takeshita said Japan will further study the signing of loan contracts on the four remaining projects by maintaining close consultations with the Philippines. He said he understands that the Philippines is faced with difficult fiscal deficit problems and that Japan will extend as much assistance as possible.

NAKASONE ASKED TO STOP S. KOREAN'S DEPORTATION

[Text] Tokyo, June 4 KYODO -- A South Korean student group in Japan sent an appeal to Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and two cabinet ministers Wednesday urging them to intervene to stop the deportation of a member student who has refused to be fingerprinted for his alien registration certificate. Kim Myong-sik, 42, who is taking a doctoral course in sociology at the International Christian University in Tokyo, has been ordered to leave Japan by June 19. He came to Japan three years ago with his Japanese wife, 32, and four-year-old daughter, and refused to be fingerprinted for the renewal of his certificate last September.

The Union of South Korean students in Japan, which has some 8,000 members, sent letters to Nakasone, Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe and Justice Minister Hitoshi Shimasaki asking them to have the order revoked. They said Kim refused to be fingerprinted due to his strong beliefs on the subject, and the government's compulsory departure order will break up his family and ruin his studies. They asked for the decision to be reconsidered from a humanitarian point of view rather than on a legal basis.

The requirement under the alien registration law for non-Japanese residents over the age of 16 to provide the print of an index finger when applying for or renewing a certificate has aroused an international controversy, especially since last year, with Korean residents the most vociferous protesters.

One of the group members, a student at Tokyo University, said Kim is a well known researcher of traditional Korean poetry. He was arrested twice in South Korea for actions against the government, and is still recovering from injuries caused by torture while in detention, he said. Kim could be subject to restrictions by the authorities if he returns to South Korea, the group member said. It would also fuel anti-Japanese feelings among students in South Korea, he added.

On Japan's recent defense buildup, 69 percent of the students said it is posing a threat to South Korea and only 6 percent said it benefits South Korea's security, the poll said.

On Japan's 1910-45 colonial rule of the Korean peninsula, 58.5 percent siad they can forgive but never forget it while 25 percent said they will never forgive it. The poll also showed 58.5 percent believe Japan and South Korea will never achieve permanent friendship and 14.5 percent said the two countries are now friendly but may be hostile in the future.

On marriages between South Koreans and Japanese, however 54.9 percent of the students said they approve of such marriages when the couple love each other, irrespective of their nationalities.

[NODONG SINMUN 2 June editorial: "The Great Classical Work Which Has Synthesized the Experiences in Building the Chuche-Oriented Party"]

[Text] The WPK is boasting of being a revolutionary party with profound experience, tested leadership, and invincible combat capabilities. At a time when the might of our party has been ever strengthened and an even brighter vista has opened for the future of our revolution, we have come to have "The Historical Experience in the Building of the WPK," a lecture authored by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The work, which has illuminated the way to the victory of the cause of building our party and the cause of the revolutionary cause, is now firmly seizing the hearts of our party members and people and vigorously encouraging them to new victories.

The publication of this classical work by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song this time is a great event for the development of our party and revolution. The work has vigorously affirmed the greatness of our party, and displayed the invincibleness of the revolutionary cause of our people advancing under its leadership, and their bright future. Through the publication of the work, the achievements won along the course of the long and arduous struggle which the Korean communists and the Korean people have waged for building a revolutionary party have been proudly summed up, and it has become possible to vigorously push ahead with the chuche revolutionary cause by developing the cause of building our party to a new high stage and by strengthening the combat capabilities of the party and enhancing its leading role.

Our party has a long history and has brilliantly accomplished countless revolutionary tasks along the road of advance. Along this course taken by our party, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has published many immortal and historical works which are of great significance for building the party and for the revolutionary struggle. Among them, the work published this time, which has comprehensively elucidated the historic struggle and experience in building our party and provided a programmatic guiding principle for building a revolutionary party, takes a prominent place.

The historic victories and experiences won and gained in achieving the cause of building our party ever since the mid-1920's have been summed up ideologically and theoretically, and a path to consummate the cause of building a revolutionary party has been clearly illuminated. This is precisely the great significance of the work published this time by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song for the communist movement and for our people's social and political lives. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's lecture "The Historical Experience in the Building of the WPK" is a monumental work which has been published by reflecting the demand of the historical period in the development of our party.

Our party is a tested party which has traversed the path of the long and arduous struggle, and is a great party which has won immortal achievements along this course. Today, our party is in the most glorious period in its long history of development. Under the leadership of the party, our revolution has reached a new high stage where the society is being imbued with the chuche idea and our party has established a firm foundation to consummate the chuche cause generation after generation. This is a great achievement won in the history of our party and the revolutionary development, which cannot be exchanged with anything.

Reality demands that the profound experiences and achievements won in building our party be summed up and, based on this, the party be further strengthened and developed as a great party to inherit and consummate the revolutionary cause and as a perfect chuche-oriented party. Presently, for the future of our revolution, for the destiny of our people, and for the prosperity of the era, nothing is more important than this task. All sections and contents of the work show this urgent demand put forth by our revolution. The work is brimming over with the spirit to carry out the cause of building our party, which started at the time of founding the Down-With-Imperialism Union, to defend the revolutionary character of the party through all eternity, and to consummate the chuche revolutionary cause.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's lecture "The Historical Experience in the Building of the WPK" is an unprecedentedly great work in terms of the richness of its contents and sections, its profoundness, and its truth.

The content and richness of the experience in the building of the party of the working class are linked with the greatness of the leader who founds and leads the party. Ever since the time when he set out on the road of the revolution in his early days, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has found the key to victories always in building and strengthening the party and, thus, has placed the greatest emphasis on this. It is precisely along this course that a new path has been pioneered for building a revolutionary party in our era and a unique experience in the building of the party has been gained.

Our party has been strengthened and developed as powerful and invincible combatant ranks leading the Korean revolution and the cause of independence to victory. This is the greatest achievement which the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has won in achieving our revolutionary cause. The work is a record of this glorious path, and is its generalization. The work is boundlessly shining and great, because its contents cover the history of the revolutionary activities and achievements of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who is the leader of the cause of building a chuche-oriented party. Above all, the work is an immortal classical work which has synthesized the theories and experiences of the revolutionary party of the working class in all phases and in all areas.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Over the past period, our party has gained truly rich experience in the party work and in the party activities. The experience which our party has gained in the building of the party is a precious asset to further strengthen and develop our party in the future. Ever since the time when its historic root started to grow, our party has traversed a unique path of its development. Our party has blazed an absolutely unfamiliar path in accomplishing the task of building the party and, along this course, has won great victories.

The struggle to grow the historic root of the party, the strengthening and developing of the party as the guide of the socialist and communist society, and all other struggles waged by our party have been glorious ones which have been waged in accordance with the demand of the era and in accordance with its level. Thus, every historic experience gained in the building of our party is boundlessly precious, and has great attraction and vitality. The work has synthesized and analyzed this rich experience in seven sections. By so doing, it has proved the greatness of the history of the building of our party.

What is important in the historic experience in the building of our party is that a firm foundation for founding a revolutionary party has been established and, based on this, the cause of building the party has been achieved.

Providing a historic root of the party and strengthening the organizational and ideological foundation for the founding of the party are a fundamental demand for building a revolutionary party. The work of building the party of the working class must begin with the struggle to establish the organizational and ideological foundation for the founding of the party.

Based on his analysis of the serious lesson from the early communist movement of our country and the international communist movement, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song struggled to establish a foundation for the founding of the revolutionary party throughout the entire period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle ever since the establishment of the Down-With-Imperialism Union. It is precisely in this course that the organizational backbone of the party has been formed, the purity of the communist ranks and their unity in ideology and will have been guaranteed, and a firm mass foundation has been established.

The history in the building of our party shows that, only when the organizational and ideological foundation is established for the founding of the party, can a revolutionary party be established in time even under the difficult circumstances, as was the case in our country, and can the party smash the offense of the counter-revolutionary elements and play its role as the headquarters of the revolution. The work has clearly proved this great truth. By so doing, it has showed the inevitability of building a revolutionary party.

What is also important in the historic experience in the building of our party is that the work of building a new-type revolutionary party, a chuche-oriented revolutionary party, has been successfully completed. In building a new-type party of the working class, it is very important to specify its character and mission and to strengthen the party based on this.

The work has clearly showed the reason why our party is the new-type party of the working class, a chuche-type party. Our party's pride is that it is the popular political party of the working people, it is led by the chuche idea, and it struggles for the consummation of the chuche cause. Because of this, the chuche-oriented nature of our party will never change.

The work has comprehensively formulated the rules and principles of building the party in accordance with the intrinsic nature and trait of the party. By so doing, it has paved a way to strengthening and developing our party as a chuche-oriented revolutionary party.

The theory of realizing the political leadership over the entire society by adhering to the work with the people as a main task -- the fundamental principle of building the party, the implementation of which has been ensured by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song ever since the first day of the founding of the party -- is a precious and unique theory. In particular, the proclamation of the revolutionary principle of the building of the party for establishing a unitary ideological system in the party, for uniting the party and masses as a single body, and for guaranteeing the continuity in the building of the party is of great significance. The historic experience in the building of our party has been gained precisely by embodying the rules and principles of building the chuche-type party in all areas of the party work and activities. Thus, it is precisely by these rules and principles that our party will be ever-victorious in the future.

The historic experience in the building of our party is also that the organizational and ideological consolidation of the ranks of the party has been most successfully achieved. The organizational and ideological consolidation of the ranks of the party is a basic requirement for building the party, and is a main task of the party.

Our party has always placed preferential efforts on consolidating the ranks of the party organizationally and ideologically, and has ceaselessly deepened this task in accordance with the demand of the developing revolution. In this course, the experience in establishing a unitary ideological system in the party and the experiences in the forming of the ranks of the party organizationally, in educating cadres and party members in a revolutionary manner, and in enhancing the functions and roles of the party organizations have been gained.

In particular, as has been elucidated in the work, the theory of the experience in regarding it as a basic line of the building of the party to establish a unitary ideological system in the party and the theory of and the experience in establishing chuche in all areas and strengthening the organizational unity take a very important place in the building of our party. Only when we advance by adhering to this revolutionary theory of and the experience in the building of the party, can our party be strengthened and developed as an invincible party which will not waver in any storms and trials.

What is also important in the historic experience in the building of our party is that the unity and cohesion of the party and the people have been firmly achieved. Achieving the unity and cohesion of the party and the people is an important principle for building the party of the working class, and is a decisive guarantee for strengthening the party and revolutionary ranks. Our party has actively struggled to embody the principle of the building of the party to unite the party and the people as a single body. Thus, it has become a powerful revolutionary party which has achieved the great unity and cohesion with the masses of the people.

The work has comprehensively summed up the experiences gained in achieving the unity and cohesion of the party and the people, the experience gained in building the party as the popular political party of the working people, the experience gained in organizing the working organizations -- the affiliates of the party -- and enhancing their functions and roles, the experience in the united front, and the experiences in carrying out the work with the masses of all walks of life and in implementing the mass lines. Based on these precious experiences, our party will continue to strengthen its mass foundation, and will continue to display its might as the great party which has deeply rooted in the masses, and is boldly advancing as a single body with the masses.

Our party has also gained profound experiences in the struggle to lead the revolution and construction. Leading the revolution and construction is an important mission of the party of the working class and the party's leadership is a basic factor of the victory in the revolution and construction. In its early days, our party elucidated the essence of the party's leadership over the revolution and construction and its fundamental principle. At the same time, it has worked out correct lines and policies at every stage of the revolution, and has competently organized and led the struggle for their implementation. By so doing, it has firmly realized its leadership over the revolution and construction.

The work has specifically elucidated our party's proper settlement of the question of the sovereignty, its successful anti-imperialism and antifeudalism democratic revolution carried out by using the people's regime as a weapon, and its vigorous three revolution -- ideological, technological, and cultural. The work has also specifically elucidated the party guidance over the economic construction, its leadership over the work of building the revolutionary armed forces, and its proper unified leadership over the overall external work.

As has been proved by history and reality, our party is an invincible revolutionary party which leads the work in all areas of the revolution and construction along the single road of victory and glory without any deviation and vicissitude.

As long as we have such a party which enjoys a lofty leading authority and thoroughly exercises the leadership over all areas of the revolution and construction, we can occupy any fortress in the socialist and communist construction.

The noble historic experience in the building of our party is also that the art of the revolutionary leadership has been created, and has been brilliantly embodied. The party's art of the leadership is the party's way of activities and its leading ability to mobilize and lead organizations and masses. The art of the competent and tested leadership is an important factor of the might of the working class party. Our party has created the art of the chuche leadership on the basis of the chuche idea and the revolutionary mass line, and has advanced by firmly adhering to it. By so doing, it has organized and mobilized the masses of the people, and has led the revolution and construction along the single road of victory.

As has been elucidated in the work, the important contents of our party's art of leadership are the revolutionary working system of the party and its revolutionary and popular working style and fashion. The revolutionary system and order under which the entire party acts as one under the unitary leadership of the party Central Committee, the system under which the party committees at all levels render a uniform guidance over all the work as supreme guidance organizations in the concerned units, the system under which the party organizations at all levels render a systematic and comprehensive guidance over the subordinate party organizations, and all other revolutionary systems established in our party are the most superior working systems which firmly guarantee the unitary nature of the party's ideology and leadership and fully mobilize the revolutionary zeal of the people. At the same time, our party's working style which was formed in the flames of the anti-Japanese struggle, and has been deepened in accordance with the new reality in the socialist construction and our party's working fashion which has reflected the noble spirit and popular trait of the revolutionaries are the tools to strengthen and develop the party as a revolutionary party with powerful combat capabilities.

Under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the struggle to secure the art of the party's leadership has been waged for a long period. As a result, the appearance of our party has been further renewed and all its work is being carried on vigorously and ambitiously. This is a firm guarantee to continue to strengthen our party as one which will continue its revolution and struggle.

The party has been futuristically built as the guide for the socialist and communist society. This is a very important and precious experience gained in the building of our party. The revolutionary cause of the working class is a historic one which is carried on generation after generation under the leadership of the party. Strengthening and developing the party as a guide for the socialist and communist society are a fundamental question related to the destiny and future of the revolution. The work has proudly summed up the experience which our party has gained in accomplishing this important historic task. The work has illuminated the future of the party.

What is most glorious and magnificent in the experience of our party, gained in settling the question of the inheritance of the revolution, is that the question of the successor of the political leader [suryong] has been correctly settled and the organizational and ideological foundation and the leadership system to realize his leadership have been established. Based on his scientific analysis of the inevitability of the revolutionary struggle, the historical lesson and experience from the international communist movement, and the demand of the prevailing situation, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song elucidated the need to inherit and consummate the revolutionary cause, and has seen to it that this question be brilliantly settled in the building of our party.

The work of futuristically building the party to consummate the revolutionary cause pioneered in the flames of the anti-Japanese struggle has been brilliantly carried on. This is the most shining achievement and great victory won in the building of our party. The historic experience in the building of our party shows that, when a leader of the people [inminui chidoja], who is boundlessly loyal to the party and revolution and who possesses character and talent to properly exercise the political leadership over the entire society, is selected as the leader [yongdoja] of the party, the cause of the party can be firmly defended, inherited and developed, no matter what situation may be created on the road of the revolution.

The work has elucidated the need to correctly inherit the revolutionary tradition of the party to inherit the cause of our party. The revolutionary tradition which should be inherited by our party is the chuche revolutionary cause. A firm guarantee for the final victory of our revolution lies in firmly defending and inheriting generation after generation the chuche revolutionary cause, which was created in the flames of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, which has been further enriched in the course of carrying out the revolutionary tasks of many phases, and which is constantly being developed today under the leadership of our party center.

The experience gained in the building of our party is extraordinarily rich and diverse, and comprehensively encompasses the questions arising from the work of building the revolutionary party. This is a boundlessly precious asset for the development of our party, revolution, and era, which is incomparable to anything. Because of this great experience, our party is enjoying the authority and honor as the tested headquarters of the Korean revolution and as the vanguard unit of the international working class.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's work is a chuche-oriented library filled with the chuche idea. The chuche idea is our party's firm leading ideology. The cause of building our party has been achieved in the struggle to embody the chuche idea in the building of the party and in party activities. For our party, the beginning of the building of the party and the struggle of providing its historic root have been inseparably linked with the creation of the chuche idea and the course of its embodiment. At the same time, the consolidation and development of the party have been achieved also under the banner of the chuche idea.

The chuche idea was the origin of the building of our party and its activities, has been the base of the organizational and ideological consolidation of the party, and is the party's guiding principle in the leadership over the revolution and construction. The ideas and theories which our party has put forth for the building of the party have been all based on the chuche idea, and the experience gained by our party is also gained in building a chuche-oriented party. The chuche idea is vigorously pulsating in each section, each content, each theme, and each phase of the work.

The question of the struggle for the founding of the party, the question of the party's character and mission, the question of consolidating the ranks of the party organizationally and ideologically and realizing the unity and cohesion with the masses of the people, the question of guaranteeing the party's leadership over the revolution and construction, the question of securing the art of the party's leadership, and the question of building the party as the guide for the socialist and communist society have all been comprehensively elucidated and systematized on the basis of the chuche idea.

At the same time, the successes and gains earned in the building of the party and in the revolutionary struggle and construction under the leadership of the party have been described as the complete victory of the chuche idea.

Thus, the work makes our party members and working people deeply realize the correctness and vitality of the chuche idea, and is a powerful encouraging banner for embodying the chuche idea more thoroughly.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's work is not only the ideological and theoretical summing up of the historic struggle to build a chuche-oriented party, but also a militant banner illuminating the future of the party and revolution. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: We must futuristically build the WPK as a political organization suitable to the natural law-governed demand of the development of the people's cause of independence and as a guide for the socialist and communist society.

The cause of building the party is carried on generation after generation and, thus, the struggle of the past waged for the building of the party and the experience gained in it are an asset for the building of the party in the future.

The course of the long and arduous struggle for the building of our party and the rich experience gained in it, which have been encompassed in the work, are not a mere record or generalization of historical facts but are the precious ideological and theoretical asset showing the future of the cause of the building of the party, including the distant future of communism.

The work has profoundly elucidated the principle of the party work of the revolutionary party, the principle which should be maintained in the founding of the party and in its organizational and ideological consolidation and development, and the questions which are of basic significance to the building of the party. In particular, the question of futuristically building the party as the guide for the socialist and communist society has been comrehensively elucidated. This is indeed of great theoretical and practical significance for the future of the party. Thanks to these theories, a firm guarantee for consummating the cause of building a revolutionary party, for accelerating the revolution and construction under the leadership of the party, and for accelerating the future communist society has been provided. This is precisely the prominent position the work takes in the history of the struggle to brilliantly shape the future of our party.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's work is the immortal work which can be produced only by a truly popular leader. The work has thoroughly embodied the party spirit, the people-mindedness, and popular (?trait) in particular. In the work, the difficult and complicated theoretical and practical questions which are of significance to the building of the party and the revolution and construction have been systematized so that everyone may understand clearly. This is an important trait of the work. The work has been written in such a way that all people, including the cadres, ordinary workers, elderly party members, and the party members of the new generation, will easily understand and deeply realize its profound and rich contents.

Indeed, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's lecture "The Historical Experience in the Building of the WPK" is an extraordinarily classical work. The work is an encyclopedia to build a revolutionary party, and is a basic textbook for the building of the party which the entire party should study and be armed with.

Studying the work deeply is an important work which should be adhered to in further strengthening the unitary ideological system of the party and consummating the chuche revolutionary cause under the leadership of the party.

Today, our party and people are facing a heavy revolutionary mission to accelerate the chuche-ization of the society and achieve the independent reunification of the fatherland in accordance with the revolutionary line put forth at the sixth party congress. The path of the revolution which should be traversed by us is still distant and rugged. By overcoming all difficulties and trials, we must reunify the divided fatherland without fail and consummate the chuche revolutionary cause initiated in the forest of Mt Paektu generation after generation. To this end, the organizational and ideological consolidation of our party must continue and its leading function and role must be enhanced. In strengthening the party, it is very important for all party members to deeply grasp and glorify the party's history, its achievements, and its experience.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: In order to strengthen and develop our party as an everlasting chuche revolutionary party, in all areas of the party's activities, the revolutionary principles for the building of the party should be maintained and embodied and, to this end, the party functionaries must be fully aware of the historical experience in the building of our party.

Through the study of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's work, above all, we deeply realize the greatness of the founder of the party and its leader [yongdoja]. The greatness of the party is the greatness of its founder and leader. The cause of building the chuche party was brilliantly pioneered and has been brilliantly achieved in our country. This is because we have had a great leader [Yongdoja] at the front of the party.

The respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song is an outstanding leader who created the new and unique theory of building the party, and has embodied it. The cause of building a new-type party suitable to the demand of our era, the era of independence, and to the aspiration of the people has been brilliantly achieved by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The history of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's long struggle for the building of our party has been embroidered with unyielding sacrificial struggle to lead the cause of building a revolutionary party to victory, and with proud victories. In the history of building our party, the period in which the party and society have been imbued with the chuche idea has been a shining historic period. In this period, the important ideas, theories, and policies to strengthen and develop our party in accordance with the demand for the building of the party and for the inheritance and consummation of the revolutionary cause have been put forth and embodied.

Dear Comrade Kim Chong-il, who is brilliantly leading the struggle to consummate the cause of building the chuche party, has led our party so that it could display a clear appearance of the chuche revolutionary party, and enhance its might and leading role by all means. Our party, which has successfully traversed the arduous and rugged path, has become a powerful party with a bright future, as it is today. This is inseparably linked to such leadership.

The authority and prestige of the WPK is precisely the lofty authority of its founder and leader. Through the study of the work, our functionaries and party members will more fully realize the greatness of the founder and leader of the new-type chuche revolutionary party, and will deeply grasp the achievements won by the party and the leader. This is the importance of the study of the work.

Through the study of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's work, with pride and self-confidence in having the great party, we will also further strengthen the determination to consummate the revolution by following the party.

Pride and trust in the party grow in accordance with the might of the party and its achievements. In terms of its organizational and ideological might and purity, and in erms of its strength and achievement, our party is indeed a great party. Our party, which has been built, has acted in accordance with the demand of the era and the aspiration of the people, and has successfully accomplished its mission as the vanguard unit of the working class and working people and as the headquarters of the revolution, is now advancing along a magnificent path and, thus, its future is endlessly bright.

Through the study of the work, all party members and working people will hold deeply in their hearts the great pride in having the great guide who will lead the future of the revolution and their destinies, and will more vigorously carry out the revolution and construction under the leadership of the party. At the same time, they will absolutely trust and follow our party, will depend on the party for all their destinies, and will strengthen their determination and resolve to consummate the revolutionary cause by overcoming all storms and trials.

Deeply studying the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's lecture "The Historical Experience in the Building of the WPK" is an honorable task of our functionaries and working people. The theories, concepts, and experiences encompassed by the work are the guiding principles which our functionaries and working people should embody in their work and lives. All functionaries and working people should establish a self-conscious spirit of studying the work with a sincere and inquisitive attitude. By so doing, they should make the ideas, theories, and policies of the work their flesh and blood. All sectors and units should meticulously plan the study of the work in order to conduct the study in close relation with the history of our party and with factual materials and in accordance with the level and situation of those participating in the study.

Firmly protecting, defending, and embodying the experience and achievement the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has gained and won in building the chuche party are an important task arising at present in the work of our party. Party organizations and functionaries at all levels should adhere to the experiences in the building of our party by regarding them as the textbook in their daily party work and activities, and should settle the problems arising in the party work on the basis of them.

The WPK is the organizer and guide for all our victories. Under the banner of the chuche idea, we should further glorify the success won in the building of the party. By so doing, we should continue to strengthen and develop our party as an everlasting chuche revolutionary party, and ceaselessly consolidate the party's leadership over the revolution and construction.

All functionaries, party members, and working people, by firmly uniting around the party Central Committee headed by the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song, should more vigorously advance for the consummation of the cause of socialism and communism.

[Article by Shih Hua [2457 5478]: "A trend of North Korea Setting Foot in Hong Kong and Macao" two paragraphs printed in boldface]

[Text] NORTH KOREA WANTS TO FOLLOW IN CHINA'S FOOTSTEPS AND TO SET UP A NEW STRONGHOLD IN MACAO. A RESTAURANT BEARING ITS NATIONAL IDENTITY HAS STARTED BUSINESS IN MACAO.

OVER THE PAST 2 YEARS, WITH THE AIM OF ENTERING HONG KONG, NORTH KOREA HAS REPEATEDLY INVITED PUBLIC FIGURES FROM HONG KONG AND MACAO TO VISIT NORTH KOREA.

The DPRK (called North Korea hereafter) reportedly had had a growing interest in Hong Kong and Macao in recent years. The chief indication is that it has set up official organs in Macao and Shenzhen and a semiofficial trade institution in Hong Kong. It has also signed a contract with a travel agency, which is responsible for organizing tour parties to North Korea. Last year and in April this, delegations from both Macao and Hong Kong were invited to Pyongyang, capital of North Korea, to attend the "Mid-Spring Friendship Art Festival" held to mark the birthday of North Korean President Kim Il-song.

Setting Up New Organs in Shenzhen and Macao

YOMIURI SHIMBUN was the first to disclose North Korea's of setting foot in Hong Kong and Macao. On 11 May, the newspaper's Hong Kong correspondent, Tobari, reported that North Korea has set up in Shenzhen an institution called the "DPRK Shipping Office in Shenzhen." The organ has three office staff, sent directly from North Korea, and two local employees. The office subscribes to many Hong Kong newspapers and magazines in order to collect and study political and economic information on Hong Kong. Moreover, YOMIURI SHIMBUN also reported that the "Hoi Fu Garden Restaurant," claiming to be a "subordinate organization of the Koreal Trade Society of the DPRK," started business in Macao on 8 March this year. The restaurant is on the seafront of Macao's high-class residential area. On the day it started business, pro-Chinese Macao newspaper AOMEN JIHAO (MACAO DAILY) and several other newspaper frontpaged advertisments of joint congratulations.

As we understand it, North Korea's previous institution in Macao was the "Chiu Kwong Trading Company." This organization did not bear the name of the "DPRK," and so was regarded as a semiofficial organization. However, the advertisement for the "Hoi Fu Garden Restaurant" carried in various Macao newspapers on 8 March officially called it a "subordinate organization of the Koreal Trade Society." The units joining in extending congratulations included the "Nam Kwong (Group) Co., Ltd," the "Nam Tung Bank," "China Travel Service (Macao) Ltd," and other Chinese institutions in Macao, as well as the "Guangzhou Representative Department of the DPRK Import and Export Society." In Hong Kong, 13 organizations joined in extending congratulations, with "Asia Television Ltd" listed first. There were also five Japanese organizations. It is also learned that although the advertisement used the words "jointly extending congratulations," all the advertisement expenses were paid by the "Hoi Fu Garden Restaurant."

A person who has been to the restaurant said that although the restaurant styled itself in the advertisement as the "first Hong Kong Macao restaurant" serving "orthodox Korean cuisine," it had not served the most well-known "roast" Korean cuisine by mid-May. The menu lists only 20-odd courses, the taste of which is reportedly very poor. The person who has been to the restaurant said that when he went there, there were hardly any customers and the 13 tables there were all vacant.

A New Stronghold in Coordination with the Policy of Opening Up

It is learned that the responsible person of the restaurant is a vice president of the "Koreal Trade Society." Its two managers and four cooks come from North Korea. It also employs four local waiters. In addition to introducing Korean cuisine, the restaurant provides meals to a growing number of North Koreans arriving in Macao. However, all these objectives serve a bigger objective, that is, to work in coordination with North Korea's policy of opening up to the outside world.

By using the restaurant as a contact point with the outside world, North Korea wants to communicate with the capitalist world, to attract foreign capital, particularly capital from Japan and the United States, and to import advanced technology from the West in order to speed up its economic development.

Of all overseas newspapers and magazines, CHIUSHIH NIENTAI was the first to report, in its December 1984 issue, North Korea's intention of following China in opening up to the outside world and the emergence of "sinification" on the part of North Korea. The article, in the form of an interview with South Korean academic Pak Tu-pok, explained in detail the origin and development of North Korea's "sinification." The main point of the article is that following the separate visits of Kim Il-song and his son Kim Chong-il to China in 1983, particularly after the visit of Kim Chong-il and Foreign Minister Kim Yong-nam to Shenzhen, North Korea immediately sent a 50-man delegation to Shenzhen and, after its return, started making arrangements for opening up to the outside world.

However, North Korea does not have a place like Shenzhen chiefly because it does not have Hong Kong as a capitalist concession. In terms of figures alone, Hong Kong's economic achievements have aroused the interest of the North Korean authorities. However, the Hong Kong British authorities have always followed a policy of banning official representatives of communist countries in Hong Kong. They also keep visitors from communist countries under strict control. Naturally, their attitude toward China is an exception. It is very difficult for North Koreans to come to Hong Kong. As an alternative, they cannot but first set foot in Macao and then try to establish links with the local and foreign institutions in Hong Kong.

The principal task of the Chiu Kwong Trading Company, which has been in business in Macao for many years, is reportedly to import high-class consumer goods for senior North Korean cadres, while the Koreal Trade Society, which declares its national identity, works in coordination with North Korea's policy of opening up. By gaining a foothold in Macao and establishing links in Hong Kong, the society aimes to attract capital and technology from the capitalist world. It went to Macao last year to explore the possibilities. However, a bizarre car accident happened last August, in which Kim Chon-su, the 43-year-old chairman of the board of the Chiu Kwong Trading Company, died on the spot and five others were injured. What was most surprising was that the body of the deceased was sent to Pyongyang that day, making it impossible for the Macao authorities to look into the cause of the death. Immediately after that, that is, in the second half of last year, the personnel of the company was thoroughly reorganized. Now, all the staff of the company are newly appointed and its general manager is An Kun-ho.

Inviting Public Figures from Hong Kong and Macao to Visit North Korea

In April 1985, for the first time, the Chiu Kwong Trading Company and the North Korean Consulate in Guangzhou organized a Macao press delegation to go to Pyongyang to attend the "Mid-spring Friendship Art Festival." The delegation was headed by Choi Hak-ming, director of TA CHUNG PAO in Macao. It was orginally decided to invite another delegation from the Macao and Hong Kong press circles to visit Pyongyang last September to attend North Korea's national festival. People in Hong Kong press circles were eager to sign up for the visit. At the end of 1st August, however, the North Korean side unilaterally canceled the planned visit. At first, people in Macao press circles thought that it might have something to do with the 15 August car accident involving the chairman of the Chiu Kwong Trading Company. It was later learned, however, that a similar invitation to mainland China had also been canceled. For this reason, it was believed that the cancellation of the planned visit had something to do with relations between China and North Korea.

According to an unconfirmed report, an abortive coup d'etat occured in North Korea last July. The escape of two defecting soldiers to China brought about a dispute between the two countries.

At the "Mid-spring Friendship Art Festival" this year, Asia Television of Hong Kong sent a 5-man troupe to Pyongyang, headed by Luk Shu-hung. The members of the troupe included Chan Tung and Luk Ngan-ling. It put on six performances from 8 to 18 April, one of which was attended by President Kim Il-song. Asia Television also shot television films in some excursion centers of North Korea, which will probably be broadcast in the future. After the troupe left Hong Kong by plane, all expenses, including a stopover in Beijing, were borne by the North Korean side.

Meanwhile, a 12-man Macao art troupe, headed by Ma Yao-yan, was also invited to Pyongyang to perform the "North and South China Lion Dance." Ma is the fifth son of Ma Man-kei, president of the Macao Chinese Chamber of Commerce, who has a powerful influence in Macao. This visit has strengthened North Korea's position in Macao. While Pyongyang, Ma Yao-yan presented Kim Il-song with a "longevity plate"; the latter also met with the former. After its return to Macao, the Macao art troupe held a victory party on 7 May, which was attended by (Lizhuzhi) [Li Zu Zhi 7812 4371 2535], secretary for education, culture, and tourism in Macao, and An Kun-ho, general manager of the Chiu Kwong Trading Company. Both Ma Yao-yan and An Kun-ho addressed the party. In the past, the Chiu Kwong Company's position in Macao was looked after by Ho Yin, former president of the Macao Chinese Chamber of Commerce. After Ho's death, Ma Man-kei took over Ho's position, as well as the link with the Chiu Kwong Company. In press circles, however, TA CHUNG PAO maintains the most cordial relationship with the Chiu Kwong Company.

Setting Foot in Macao with Hong Kong in View

Moreover, in order to increase its activities in Macao, North Korea has also stepped up its work in Portugal. The only branch office of the Koreal Trade Society in Europe is located in Lisbon. In Macao, North Korea has also constantly tried to rope in Macao's Portugese officials. Although North Korea paid all the expenses incurred by the Macao art troupe during its visit to Pyongyang, the Macao Government also supplied 20,000 patacas as pocket money for the members of the troupe.

North Korea has stepped up its infiltration of Macao but its real objective is Hong Kong. Judging from the fact that 13 Hong Kong companies joined in extending congratulations to the "Hoi Fu Garden Restaurant," it can be affirmed that North Korea has attained some successes in the past year or so. The companies listed in the advertisement may not have close relations with North Korea and they may have established relations through intermediaries. Since they need not spend any money, it would do no harm if their names should be listed in the advertisement. However, this trend of North Korea merits our attention. In addition to its intention of trying the Chinese style of "opening up," North Korea has another objective in stepping up its infiltration of Hong Kong and Macao. Very probably it is taking into account the situaton in Hong Kong and Macao in the period up to 1997. When China recovers its sovereignty over Hong Kong in 1997, seemingly there will be no reasons to turn down North Koreans' requests to travel, to set up companies, and to run enterprises in Hong Kong. Even before 1997, following China's increased influence in Hong Kong, the Hong Kong Government will probably relax its policy of flatly refusing to have anything to do with North Korea. It seems high time to make good preparations now.

South Korea has a consulate in Hong Kong, which has always played a very important role in economic activities.

It has also conducted indirect trade with China through Hong Kong. Will North Korea's infiltration into Hong Kong and Macao lead to conflicts and struggle between North and South Korea in Hong Kong and Macao? This is a very noteworthy factor in observing the future Hong Kong and Macao situation.

PRC-USSR TUG-OF-WAR OVER DPRK DEVELOPING

[Text] Beijing, June 4 KYODO -- China has decided to send Vice Premier Tian Jiyun to North Korea next month for the 25th anniversary of a bilateral friendship and cooperation agreement, Chinese sources said Wednesday. The trip to Pyongyang, the first by a Chinese vice premier in nine months, will coincide with a visit to North Korea by a high-powered Soviet Government-party delegation also to celebrate a treaty of Soviet-Korean friendship, according to East European sources here.

The sources said the Soviet delegation will be headed by a person higher than First Vice Premier Geydar Aliyev in ranking Aliyev visited Pyongyang last August to mark the 40th anniversary of Korea's liberation from Japanese colonial rule. There is speculation that President Andrey Gromyko may head the delegation. The sources said that the Soviet Union may also send a military delegation to North Korea as it did last year.

Relations between North Korea and the Soviet Union have become much stronger than those between Pyongyang and China, the sources said. There has not been a meeting between Hu Yaobang and Kim Il-song, top communist party leaders of China and North Korea, since May 1985 though they met regularly before that. In the meantime, the Soviet Union has been markedly increasing its national security-related aid to North Korea in recent years.

Western sources in Beijing said North Korea is worried about China's approach to South Korea and its military cooperation with the United States. For China, closer military ties between North Korea and the Soviet Union are a source of irritation, the sources said. Although China and North Korea exchange words of goodwill, there is mutual distrust between them, according to the Western sources.

VNS LANDS MASSES STRUGGLE AT NKDP CHONJU RALLY

[Text] How are you, everyone? This is an hour for station commentary. In this hour, I will speak about the rally held in Chonju to establish the North Cholla provincial branch of the 10 million-signature campaign for constitutional revision, and about the anti-U.S. and antidictatorial demonstration staged there. As has already been reported, on 31 May in Chonju, with the participation of some 30,000 people, a rally to establish the North Cholla provincial branch of the signature-campaign for constitutional revision was held in the Student Hall in Chonju.

Prior to the rally, youths, students, and religious figures staged a furious anti-U.S. and antigovernment demonstration. The demonstrators were carrying placards reading "Let us expel Chon Tu-hwan and establish a democratic government!" and "Let us repel the U.S. imperialists supporting the military dictatorship!", while shouting anti-U.S. and antigovernment slogans.

At the rally held on that day, Mr Kim Yong-sam, standing adviser of the NKDP, said that no one can block the turbulent tide of democratization and that if anyone attempts to block it, he will become a victim of this tide.

Meanwhile, Mr Kim Tae-chung, in a recorded speech, said: Chon Tu-hwan must allow the realization of democratization before the masses' indignation grows further. Otherwise, he will be punished by Heaven.

Following the rally, those who participated in it marched up to the Chonju local party office in Kyonghwa-dong, Chonju city, and a ceremony was held to hang the signboard of the signature campaign. At this point, some 5,000 youths and students shouted "Let us overthrow the dictatorship" and staged a furious street demonstration, while countering some 1,000 oppressive police troops.

The rally to establish the headquarters of the local signature-campaign for constitutional amendment and the large anti-U.S. and antigovernment demonstration held and staged in Chonju following the rallies and demonstrations in Seoul, Pusan, Kwangju, Taegu, Taejon, Chonju, Inchon, and Masan were the very just struggle reflecting the unanimous aspiration of our masses to establish a democratic constitutional government, overthrow the fascist pro-U.S. dictatorship, and usher in an independent and democratic new society.

As is known, the Chon Tu-hwan regime is an unprecedentedly murderous regime and a fascist pro-U.S. dictatorial regime that usurped power through guns and bayonets by submerging Kwangju in a sea of blood as a result of the 17 May fascist outrage committed under U.S. instigation. At the same time, the present constitution is an anti-democratic and anti-popular fascist evil law by which the Chon Tu-hwan group has established a foundation for its long-term office by inheriting the heinous Yusin constitution.

If the fascist Chon Tu-hwan regime and the present fascist constitution are left intact, democratization cannot be achieved. This is precisely the reason why the masses of all strata are unanimously demanding the withdrawal of Chon Tu-hwan and the rescission of the fascist Constitution and its revision.

Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan group, turning its face away from the just demand of our masses, is hatching all kinds of plots to extend its power and the U.S. imperialists are openly protecting and supporting the fascist Chon Tu-hwan dictatorial regime, thus hampering our masses' struggle for democratization. This is precisely the reason why our masses of all strata, while carrying out the signature campaign for constitutional revision, are persistently continuing the just anti-U.S. and antidictatorial struggle in Seoul and in all local areas by occupying the American Cultural Center in Pusan and the branch of an American bank in Seoul. This is an eruption of the pent-up resentment and indignation over the colonial subjugation and fascist rule which have continued more than 40 years.

In particular, the furious anti-U.S. and antigovernment demonstration staged this time in Chonju with the participation of youths, students, religious figures, and masses from all walks of life was a laudable patriotic struggle that displayed the will for practice and strong aspiratin of our masses who are not frustrated under the fascist oppression and who will not allow the fascist U.S. colonial rule.

Nevertheless, the fascist Chon Tu-hwan group mobilized the oppressive police and bestially suppressed their patriotic struggle. This is an intolerable criminal act whereby traitors strangle patriots and is an outrage that can be committed only by the pro-U.S. fascist dictators.

At present, while persisting in the frantic fascist oppression against the youths, students, and democratic patriotic forces, the fascist Chon Tu-hwan group is driving a wedge between the students and the off-stage forces and employing all kinds of cunning tricks in order to alienate and disrupt the forces of the democratization movement. However, the frantic fascist oppression and cunning maneuvers of alienation and disruption cannot block the grant national salvation march, and cannot serve as a means to maintain their remaining life. This will only further increase our masses's indignation and accelerater their self-destruction.

The Chon Tu-hwan group must look squarely at the trend of the times, rescind the present fascist Constituion, and step down from power without delay in accordance with the unanimous demand of our masses. The fascist dictators who turn their faces away from public opinion will face miserable destinies in the wake of the powerful resistance of the masses, as did the former pro-U.S. dictators.

SEOUL RADIO CITED ON MILITARY DRILL 'SHIELD-86'

[Text] Pyongyang June 5 (KCNA) -- The military fascist junta on June 4 held a provocative military exercise condenamed "86-Shield" with the mobilisation of a puppet army unit, according to a radio report from Seoul. That day the fascist clique frantically whipped up a war fever, clamouring about "exhibitioin" and "the main point" in the military exercise, watched by the puppet prime minister, "defence minister" and bosses of the "Regional Defence Council: and "Homeland Defence Reserve Forces" and others, more than 2,000 in all.

The puppets kicked up much ado, holding the "exercise simulating a real war" on the plea of "coping with someone's infiltration: with the Asian and Olympic Games ahead. In frantically holding military exercises to invade the North, harping on the worn-out fiction of "threat of southward invasion: with the Asian and Olympic Games as an occasion on the orders of the U.S. imperialists, the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique reveals its true color as the splittist and war maniac.

[Text] Pyongyang June 5 (KCNA) -- An evening of Pyongyang youth marking the 49th anniversary of the victory in Pochonbo battle was held on June 4 at the Moranbong Youth Park. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on June 4, 1937, commanding the main force of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army, advanced into Pochonbo, a strategic vantage of the Japanese imperialists in the boarder guard, and imbued our people with the conviction of victory by wiping out the enemy.

Attending the evening of youth were thousands of young people from various districts of Pyongyang. They had a pleasant evening, reciting poems, singing songs and performing dances. Colorful art pieces were put on the stage of the evening of youth which opened with the solo recital of the poem "The Eternal Torchlight". URBAN DEFENSIVE TRAINING DRILL HELD AROUND SEOUL

The reservists staged the training operations in a realistic situation against the simulated North Korean infiltrators armed with various weapons and equipment necessary for the terrorism. According to the scenario, the simulated North Korean commando forces penetrated into the South by AN-2 light aircraft or aboard speedy vessels and attempted to sneak into the capital city and other major urban areas. Their mission was to kidnap social and political dignitaries to the North and to carry out various terrorism activities so as to create social unrest and hamper such international events as the Asian Games and the Olympics.

The HRF defensive operations demonstrated high capabilities and readiness of the South to effectively cope with the possible provocations by the North Koreans, an army spokesman said. Prior to the exercises, the observers were briefed on the latest security situation on the Korean peninsula and the reservist systems of foreign countries.

JSP TO TRY TO VISIT SEOUL AFTER 6 JULY ELECTIONS

[Text] Seoul, June 3 (YONHAP) -- Masashi Ishibashi, chairman of the Japan Socialist Party (JSP), Tuesday sent a letter to Yi Min-u, president of the New Korean Democrataic Party (NKDP), saying that the JSP will discuss the plan to send its delegation to Seoul after Japan's general elections slated for July 6. In the letter, Ishibashi said that the JSP had planned to send a delegation to Seoul for a visit from May 27 to 29, but it had no choice but to cancel the plan because the South Korean Government refused to issue entry visas for its delegates.

He also said that the relations between NKDP and JSP will not be affected, regardless of the South Korean Government's attitude. The NKDP sent a letter of invitation to Ishibashi on May 19, but the South Korean Government's refusal to grant visas caused quite a controversy here.

DJP SURVEYS FAVOR PARLIAMENTARY CABINET SYSTEM

The results of the survey were discussed at the second meeting of the panel, composed of 20 lawmakers, held at party headquarters yesterday. "There are two major options -- the parliamentary cabinet system and the presidential government system. We discussed both merits and demerits of the two formulas," he said. "The conclusion was that power should not be centralized upon one man, and dictatorship and the long-term maintenance of power by one man should be prevented," he said.

Following the second meeting, the panel held a seminar on basic rights and the form of government, with two professors as speakers. At the seminar, Rep. Chae Mun-sik, chairman of the panel, denounced the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party's demand for revision to have the direct presidential election system. He said the concept that only direct election of the president is democracy should be discarded. "Such a prejudice is the very element impeding the development of democracy in this country," he stressed.

Rep. Yi said that the survey was conducted by the panel members during the past 30 days, since the panel was inaugurated on May 7. The results of the survey set the direction for the panel's work, Yi said. "Now we have to start planning practical work." He sad that the panel would make the final choice of the power structure by July and the draft amendment of the party would be confirmed in August. Public hearings will be held throughout the country during this month, according to him.

He also said that the method of electing the president, if the presidential government system is adopted, is a matter to be discussed after the form of the government is chosen. He further said that the study of basic rights is as important as that of the power structure. "The point at issue is how to have ordinary laws ensure the basic rights porvided by the constitution," he said. He said, "As far as basic rights are concerned, the current Constitution is one of the best in the world." "But, the actual problem is that the constitutional basic rights are not kept well. We will study ways of strengthening the function of the Constitution Committee to screen unconstitutionality of subordinate laws," he said.

DJP TO URGE RELEASE OF 'POLITICAL PRISONERS'

[Text] The ruling Democratic Justice Party will urge the government to consider the release of "political prisoners" as demanded by the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party. Party spokesman Rep. Sim Myong-po said yesterday that the party would deliver its opinion on that matter to the administration soon.

Asked what the party opinion is, he recalled the agreement reached between his party chairman No Tae-u and NDP president Yi Min-u that No would direct "keen attention" to the demand of the NDP.

"The party's position is to further solidify the current atmosphere for partisan dialogues and compromises," he said. However, he asserted that the release of prisoners and the formation of a special House panel on the Constitution are "two different things" although the NDP made the former the precondition for the latter.

The spokesman was briefing reporters on the results of a meeting of leading party officers held to discuss the current situation following President Chon Tu-hwan's exclusive meetings with opposition leaders.

FURTHER ON 4 JUNE CHON-YI MAN-SOP TALKS

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan said yesterday that the regular session of the National Assembly will be able to pass an amendment bill, if the ruling and opposition parties reach an accord to do so. The regular autumn sitting opens on Sept. 20 and ends on Dec. 18.

President Chon made the remarks on early constitutional amendment in his talks with minor opposition Korea National Party (KNP) president Yi Man-sop at Chongwadae. The President also told Yi that legal measures will be taken to get political detainees released on a "phased basis, if they show repentance."

The Chon-Yi talks touched on a wide range of issues facing the country, which included campus unrest and the local autonomy system. Yesterday's talks, which were held without the presence of any aides, lasted for about two hours from 10 a.m. The meeting followed the President's conference with New Korea Democratic Party (NDP) leader Yi Min-u Tuesday.

KNP leader Yi told the President that an ad hoc House panel on constitutional amendment should be formed in the Assembly during the extraordinary House session, scheduled to open today. For this, both the government and ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) are asked to exert their utmost efforts to foster a miliew for compromise, Yi said.

President Chon said he hopes that the ruling and opposition parties will soon start the work of rewriting the Constitution, without any preconceptions. Any preconditions stemming from partisan interests must not be set in the negotiations for constitutional revision, he stressed.

Yi said that inter-party efforts should be redoubled to pass the revision bill to the Constitution during the coming regular Assembly session, in view of busy political schedules until the peaceful change of government. As to this, President Chon replied, "The regular House session will be able to pass the amendment bill if the ruling and opposition parties agree to do so."

Yi emphasized that constitutional revision should be made in a way the people want and the next president should be elected under the new Constitution. Chon told Yi that the new Constitution should be drafted in such a way as to make democracy take root in the country and guarantee the well-being of all people. The President particularly noted that the Constitution must not be written for a certain person or a certain political group but on the basis of the people's consensus.

Yi asked the Chief Executive to take special consideration of students detained for political causes, saying that the President's measure to free the detainees is a very important element to solve the current political situation in the whirl winds of the constitutional revision debate. Chon answered, "Those now under detention are mostly persons who perpetrated acts of violence and arson, engrossed in pro-Communist or leftist ideologies." "However, if they show repentance in the course of legal procedures, I will have measures taken to free them on a phased basis," Chon promised Yi.

President Chon then said that the problems concerning the students, especially infatuated with leftist ideology, will be solved in the desirable direction, if their parents and school authorities combine their efforts.

Yi said that the schoolteachers' rights should be firmly protected and full self-rule should be ensured for school administrations. He particularly called for an overall review of the college graduation quota system and entrance examination system, plus measures to help needy students. Chon told Yi that a good plan for the promotion of education will be worked out soon, as the education reform committee has been studying an educational system tailored to the country's circumstances.

CARDINAL KIM WARNS PARTISAN SELF INTEREST

[Text] Stephan Cardinal Kim Su-hwan yesterday emphasized that today, at a critical crossroads toward democratization,, politicians should converge their wills for the good of the nation, staying away from their own self-interests and warding off sectional disputes. The Catholic primate of the nation made the remark through a speech made while presiding over a memorial mass for the late prime minister Chang Myon (John M. Chang) at the Myongdong Catherdral at 10 a.m.

The memorial mass, remembering the 20th anniversary of Chang's death, was attended by about 600 people, including more than 30 lawmakers of the opposition New Korea Democratic Party. Among the participants were NDP president Yi Min-u, and Kim Tae-chung and Kim Yong-sam, co-chairmen of the Council for the Promition of Democracy.

"The late premier Chang, praying for unification of the nation, assumed his premiership not for his personal benefits but as a cross for the nation," Cardinal Kim said. "Some criticism that he was a failed politician was based on the May 16 military coup of 1981, which was invited by the partisan confrontations seeking their own self-interests," he stressed.

NDP president Yi said in a memorial address that opposition forces should cooperate to assure that there will be no repetition of the suspension of the Constitution.

FORMER NKDP LAWMAKERS TO FOUND NEW PARTY

SK310131 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 31 May 86 p 1

[Text] The "New Conservative Club," composed of 12 lawmakers who withdrew from the major oppostion New Korea Democrtic party, held a preparatory committee meeting to found a political party at the Ambassador Hotel yesterday.

Some 2,500 people attended the rally to found a party, tentatively named the "People's Democratic Party (Minjing-Minju-Dang)."

At the rally, the NCC chairman, Rep. Yu Han-yol, was elected chairman of the committee. Rep. Yu said in an address that the current Constitution should be revised to provide for the parliamentary cabinet system because the presidential system has just resulted in extreme confrontations of political forces.

The preparatory committee declared in a prospectus, "We can no longer waste national energies in confrontations and should create a political party to take root among ordinary citizens to tide the nation over the current political crisis." The participants adopted a resolution in which they vowed to re-introduce the cabinet system to put an end to the possibility of dictatorship by one man.

PROFESORS' RECENT STATEMENT 'IRRESPONSIBLE'

SK040118 Seoul THE KOREAN HERALD in English 4 Jun 86 p 4

[Editorial: "Professors' Statement"]

[Text] It is good to see that nation's political scene becoming increasingly reconciliatory, retreating from its former state of confrontation. This certainly reflects the growing popular desire to see poltical stability maintained. And it is as a result of such overwhelming public sentiment that the voices of radical students have grown weaker. We are only anxious to see such trends continue. As such, it is extremely regrettable that some university professors have recently issued a joint statement that is prone to agitate radical activism. Although they numbered far less than one percent of the nation's total faculty membership, we cannot help being concerned about their act.

A close examination of the roster shows the most of the signatories have habitually engaged in such agitation. Considering the role they have played so far behind radical student activism, due to attention must be paid to this latest act. The signatory professors, in their statement, expressed support, or sympathy, for the leftist rhetoric of the student radicals who deny our liberal democracy itself. Their motive, therefore, cannot but be imterpreted as being aimed at preventing the political situation from coming to a solution by means of dialogue.

Unless they are indeed interested in abetting the horrid eventuality such student extremists entertain, they must discontinue their reckless behavior. They must foresee the dire consequences that might result from their irresponsibility. What we expect from them is not irresponsible acts, but reasonable behavior true to their academic pursuit.

The signatory professors questioned the legitimacy of the imcumbent government, apparently deliberatedly ignoring the legitimate process by which the incumbent government was inaugurated. After all, they have so far abided by what is stipulated in the existing system. It may be conceivable to discuss the shortcomings of the present system with a view to reform, but it is absurd to ignore it entirely.

The professors must also look squarely at the danger involved in the radical students' call for withdrawal of the American forces from Korea. Given the present realities, it would be tantamount to encourage the north Korean Communists to venture a reinvasion of South Korea. It was Pyongyang's invasion that initially made the U.S. presence here ncecessary, as it is the north's unceasing threats which have made their continued presence imperative.

They also called for direct presidential election, as if it were the only choice at present. Needless to say, it is up to the people to determine what form of government or election system should be employed. It is not becoming of academic professors to put forth the bid now being offered by opposition politicians. They should avoid engaging in politics if they are sincere about pursuing their genuine, nonpartisan academic quest. Dogmatism is unbecoming of a genuine academic.

PROFESSOR SIGNING STATEMENT DENIED OVERSEAS STUDY

[Text] A university professor is likely to be denied the chance of government-paid overseas study just because he signed a so-called political statement of professors. He is Prof. Pak Pan-yong, 44, teaching business administration at Hansin University.

According to the university, he was not even given the chance to be tested for his language ability despite his being recommended by the university for the government-paid overseas study program. At present, the Education Ministry sends about 200 professors overseas for study annually, and the screening of applicants is virtually dependent upon recommendations provided by universities.

Prof. Pak had been dismissed from Kangwon University during the period of political upheaval in 1980. He became professor of Hansin University in 1984, where he now works as the dean of general affairs. He signed the so-called political statement on the current issue, which was released on April 2. Sources at the ministry said the professor was excluded because it is unlikely that he could engage in study abroad because of his administrative duty as the dean of general affairs of the university.

SNU ACTIVISTS DENIED GRADUATE MILITARY PRIVILEGES

[Text] A dozen alumni of the graduate schools of Seoul National University plan to file a lawsuit against the Education Ministry arguing that they have been denied the due privilege of a shortened military duty. It was learned that they were being denied the privilege because of their records of having been involved in anti-government campus protests.

Under the present regulation, those who complete graduate school can finish their military duty by engaging in a six-month course training if they are accredited as government-certified professionals. All of them passed the ministry screening last month to be certified as special professional personnel.

SPK RAPS U.S. ALLEGATIONS ON CHEMICAL WARFARE

["A Hoax" -- SPK headline]

[Text] Phnom Penh SPK June 4 -- Why the State Department of the United States has, since the end of the 1970's and the early 1980's maintained that the USSR and its allies "use chemical weapons in Southeast Asia".

It is known that by doing this the U.S. imperialists want to cover up their own crimes against innocent people in this region during the Indochina war, and refuse to pay their debt to the peoples of Vietnam, Laos, Kampuchea-victims of their chemical warfare and also their debt to the American and Australian war veterans who have been affected by toxic chemicals used by the Pentagon during the Vietnam war from January 1962 to February 1971. Having hatched up the "yellow rain" story, the U.S. imperialists, together with the Chinese expansionists, the Thai ultra-rightists and the Pol Pot butchers, have hoped to discredit the Soviet Union, and Vietnam.

Yet, despite all their efforts many U.S. officials, including former U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig, Defence Secretary Weinberger and President Reagan have since 1981 failed to produce any evidence, meanwhile, many scientists have come up with irrefutable evidence showing that this has been a hoax.

In a letter to the Vietnamese UN mission, Professor A.M. Pfeiffer of the Montana University exerpted articles in science bulletins to refute the U.S. charge, among them one carried in the British paper GUARDIAN on Nov 3, 1983 which says: "The weakness of the American claims is demonstrated by the fact that no other government defence laboratory has been able to establish the presence of fungal toxins in the yellow spots from Southeast Asia. Our own chemical defence establishment at Brotont Down has not found anything and neither has the Australian Defence laboratory".

American Professor Meselson and three colleagues were quoted as saying on that occasion that the findings would suggest the soldier had eaten mouldy food a day or two before he died, and that they believed that there might indeed by a mycotoxin problem in Southeast Asia but that was not related to chemical warfare. The cause was contaminated food.

And recently THE WASHINGTON POST quoted the studies made in Canada and Great Britain indicating that the toxic substances found in the so-called "yellow rain" are only the natural substances, a kind of poisonous mushroom which had contiminated the food. According to an article carried on WASHINGTON POST May 29, 1986 Mr Gordon Vachon, a Canadian specialist in chemical and biological warfare, delcared: "We haven't any information which permit us to reach a scientific conclusion"...

"It has never, according to my knowledge, had any research on the food produced in the region to see if it should have contained mycotoxins (...). It should be then worse to speculate in one sense or another". So, the enemy, have their own purpose. [sentence as received] But how can they turn up the land by putting ploughshare before the buffaloes?

CGDK DEFENSE COORDINATING COMMITTEE COMMUNIQUE

BK310256 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2330 GMT 30 May 86

[28 May "Press communique of the CGDK Coordinating Committee for National Defense"]

[Text] A meeting of the three ministers in charge of the CGDK's Coordinating Committee for National Defense was held on 28 May under the chairmanship of His Excellency Son Sann, prime minister of the CGDK.

The meeting examined Cambodia's political and military situation and expressed satisfaction at the progress achieved in the military, political, and diplomatic fields during the past 2 months. In the diplomatic field, 40 countries have already lent their support to the CGDK's 8-point peace proposal dated 17 March 1986. The meeting noted that the Hanoi authorities' deceitful propaganda on the troop withdrawal from Cambodia was just an annual rotation of troops. Moreover, this year the Hanoi authorities have stepped up their plan to occupy Cambodia by sending two more divisions to withstand the increasing attacks by the resistance forces inside Cambodia. The setting up of the two new coordinating committees for military activities and for information and press in April 1986 has strengthened the struggle of the CGDK and the Cambodian people for national liberation.

The meeting formulated a number of principles regarding the tasks of the two committees. The three factions of the CGDK unanimously decided to increase their coordination further to pursue their struggle in all fields -- military, political, and diplomatic -- unitl final victory.

Son Sann Statement

BK311002 (Clandestine) Voice of the Khmer in Cambodian 0500 GMT 31 May 86

[Statement by CGDK Prime Minister and KPNLF President Son Sann on outcome of the CGDK's defense coordinating committee meeting -- recorded; date and place not given]

[Text] My respects to venerable monks; dear compatriots inside Cambodia and along the border: Yesterday [28 May] I convened a meeting of the defense ministers of the three factions of the CGDK -- namely the factions of Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, Democratic Kampuchea, and the KPNLF -- to discuss the current military situation in Cambodia, seek all means to strengthen unity among the 3-faction combatants against the Vietnamese, and take effective measures to improve our hit-and-run tactics against the Vietnamese in Cambodia. The meeting clearly noted two points of importance: Vietnam's desire to seal off the border by digging canals, building fences, and planting booby traps has not been satisfied; we continue to be able to go into the interior in large numbers. Tens of thousands of our men are now inside the country. The KPNLF has nearly 10,000 men in Cambodia. In the not too distant future, we will have more than 10,000 men inside the country. On the side of Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, many men have already infiltrated. As for the other faction, it has the most men in the country. Therefore, Vietnam's objective to seal off the border has been a failure.

Another Vietnamese dream -- to pull out some troops from the border in order to concentrate forces on crushing our side in the interior -- has also failed to come true, for the combatants of the tripartite CGDK are attacking the Vietnamese everywhere. In the past, our actions were concentrated only in western Cambodia, mostly in Siem Reap and Battambang Provinces and around Tonle Sap Lake. Now, we are attacking them deeper insider the country. So far, we have launched four attacks on Kompong Thom and three on Battambang. In the latest attack on Battambang, the three factions closely joined hands in a powerful attack on the Vietnamese, killing many Vietnamese soldiers and two Soviet advisers. The remaining Soviet advisers rushed onto a plane and flew back to Phnom Penh. We attack the Vietnamese in Kompong Speu, in the region east of Phnom Penh, in Kompong Cham, and around Phnom Penh, such as at Snuol and Roka Kaong. We thus see that Vietnam's hopes to crush us in the interior of the country have not been fulfilled.

We know very well that the Vietnamese are strong, that they remain strong. However, for 7 years they have failed to eliminate us. Two years ago, during the 1984-85 dry season, they launched a powerful major offensive at the border. But now we have vacated the border, coming into the interior to avoid being hit.

The meeting thus concluded that Vietnam's attempt to seal off the border and hopes to smash us inside the country were unsuccessful. Instead, we are attacking, harassing them everywhere. When the Vietnamese attack, we run away in small groups. When they relent, we join forces and attack them all-out, like in Battambang. We know that Vietnam remains strong. But we need to tell the compatriots in the interior that no one there supports the Vietnamese who have forced hundreds of thousands of our people to clear brush, defuse mines, to be killed or crippled in the process, and to contract malaria in the jungles. Many people from the interior, including those in Heng Samrin's ranks, have come to the border to join us. According to latest reports, groups of hundreds of them have come over to our side, bringing arms with them.

We can see that the brothers in the interior do not support the Vietnamese, and soldiers of the Heng Samrin side have made it known that they dislike working with and for the Vietnamese. In some localities, they have mutinied against the Vietnamese. The civilians in the interior, such as in Roluos, have also rebelled against them. Therefore, the Vietnamese aggressors are finding themselves in great difficulty, experiencing a serious crisis in the interior.

I would like to inform all compatriots that it is good for you to rebel against the Vietnamese and to defect to our side at the border, bringing weapons with you. But it is preferable for you to stay in the interior, waiting for us who are now by the tens of thousands going into the interior to meet you and cooperate with you. Anyone who is a fighter, who is armed, can join us inside the country in fighting the Vietnamese in the interior. If you leave the country, the Vietnamese would bring their own people to our country without opposition. Let us stay in the interior and oppose the Vietnamese. Let us join hands against them.

In the international arena, I would like to inform you that our 8-point proposal in which we ask Heng Samrin to come over to our side is now supported by more than 40 countries. The other day, I said that a number of them had supported this proposal and I also listed them. Now, there are too many to count. More than 40 countries voiced their support and more are going to do so. Therefore, I would like to beg all compatriots to wait for us inside the country. Then we will join forces, heads, minds, and -- if possible -- arms to attack the Vietnamese more vigorously in the interior, making their life in Cambodia very difficult. Abroad, international opinion is now well aware of the Cambodian problem and is supporting the 8-point proposal.

I take this opportunity to take leave of all of you. In a few days I will leave for Europe to inform European countries about the situation in Cambodia, giving them the same information I just gave you. I will also request their assistance to enable more of our men to infiltrate into the interior of Cambodia. I will also drum up support for the 8-point proposal from any countries that have not yet voiced their support for it. Furthermore, I will ask those countries planning to give aid to Vietnam and Cambodia to refrain from aiding Vietnam at this moment, despite the fact that Vietnam is experiencing serious economic hardship.

We do not hate the Vietnamese people. However, in order to stop the Vietnamese from occupying our country, it is necessary for us to ask such countries to set conditions on Vietnam. If Vietnam needs economic aid, it should first withdraw troops from Cambodia. The rich countries would give their economic aid to Vietnam when it has withdrawn troops from Cambodia. This is to allow Cambodia to breathe again and to restore peace and happiness to our people who have suffered for years. This is the objective of my forthcoming visit.

It is my hope that the Cambodian compatriots on Heng Samrin's side will soon agree to join us, although neither Heng Samrin nor the Vietnamese have yet to give approval of our 8-point proposal. This is because the sole duty facing all Cambodians is to rebuild our country into an independent, neutral, human, free, and democratic state where the people can enjoy religious freedom. The people on the Phnom Penh side or on any other side will surely agree to join hands to liberate our country and build it as an independent state. Therefore, I continue to nurture the hope that soon the people on Heng Samrin's side will agree to talk with us in order to bring about national reconciliation and union. Once we achieve reconciliation and union, we can become independent again. The history of Cambodia shows that whenever we were divided, we lost independence and whenever we were reunited, we regained national independence. Thus, all compatriots, be they the Phnom Penh faction of the tripartite coalition, must help each other and join hands to realize alliance and union of all Cambodians.

During the meeting, I noted that the three factions made every effort to bring about even greater cooperation to launch even greater attacks against the Vietnamese. Solidarity among the factions should be strengthened and each faction should also be strengthened so that the coalition government is subsequently strengthened. I asked all factions to work hard to strengthen solidarity among the Cambodian's and to strengthen the factions themselves. When Heng Samrim joins us, I will ask for the same thing: all four Cambodian factions must be united. Then, we will be able to build our country into an independent country with true neutrality, human rights, freedom, territorial integrity, religion, and democracy.

This is the major thing I ask of all of you before leaving for an overseas mission to find ways to make our people stronger in attacking the Vietnamese aggressors, denying them an easy life in Cambodia and forcing them to negotiate with us in accordance with our 8-point proposal. We will ask the United Nations to help bring pressure on Vietnam, too. Goodbye, dear compatriots both in the interior and along the border.

CGDK MINISTRY SPOKESMAN ON SRV ATTACK ON CAMP

BK310340 (Clandestine) Voice of the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2315 GMT 30 May 86

[30 May "Statement of the CGDK Foreign Ministry spokesman condemning Hanoi Vietnamese aggressors for attacking Cambodian refugee camp at Ta Ngoc, called Site 8" -- read by announcer]

[Text] At about 0800 on 29 May, The Vietnamese aggressor troops in Cambodia fiered artillery shells for about 40 minutes into a Cambodian refugee camp at Ta Ngoc -- called Site 8 -- in Thailand's Prachin Buri Province. Fourteen shells landed in the middle of the camp as the Cambodian refugees were eating breakfast in their houses with their families. Twenty Cambodians -- mostly women and children -- were killed and 30 others were wounded.

This attack was launched 1 day after the Hanoi authorities had declared that they have begun to withdraw part of their troops from Cambodia in accordance with their plan to withdraw all their troops by 1990. This is another criminal act of the Hanoi Vietnamese aggressors in addition to the uncountable heinous crimes that they have continuously committed against innocent Cambodians in accordance with their policy of exterminating the Cambodian race and annexing Cambodia into their abject Indochinese federation. This is also another gross violation of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Kingdom of Thailand.

The Cambodian people and the CGDK vehemently and indignantly condemn this new genocidal crime of the Hanoi Vietnamese aggressors. This attack against Ta Ngoc Camp by the Hanoi authorities constites a most cowardly and abject revenge for their bitter defeats suffered during the 1985-86 dry season both on the battlefield of aggression against Cambodia and in the international arena, where the CGDK's 8-point proposal for a political settlement of the Cambodian problem has been enthusiastically supported by the world community. Moreover, the Hanoi authorities' rejection of this 8-point proposal has laid bare their aggressive and war-like face so thay they can no longer deceive others and have become more seriously isolated in the world. Due to this total impasse, the Hanoi authorities have lost their senses and turned against anyone.

The Cambodian people and the CGDK appeal to all peace- and justice-loving countries in the world and to the world community to raise their voices in condemnation of this new genocidal crime committed against the Cambodian race by the Hanoi Vietnamese aggressors. We call on them to take necessary and urgent measures to prevent the Hanoi authorities from committing any more crimes against innocent Cambodians. The most effective measure is to exert greater pressure in the political, diplomatic, economic, and financial fields on the Hanoi Vietnamese aggressors to force them to consent to negotiate with the CXHQ on withdrawing all their aggressor troops from Cambodia and allowing the Cambodian people to solve their own problems in accordance with the CGDK's 8-point proposal.

SIHANOUK: PLEDGE OF SUPPORT FROM KIM IL-SONG

PM041208 Paris LE MONDE in French 24 May 86 p 36

[Interview with former Cambodian head of state Norodom Sihanouk by Patrice de Beer in Chhang-Sou, DPRK -- date not given]

In this closely guarded haven of peace Prince Sihanouk is continuing to write his memoirs: He has reached the year 1971. "I swear to you," he told us, "that I have had no direct contact with the Vietnamese, the USSR, or the Soviet bloc here. They are too intransigent: They want me to resign as president of the coalition first, but that is a trap." And he condemned the "arrogance" of the Kremling and Hanoi in rejecting his latest peace proposals.

In these circumstances "I have given up making any proposals. This is the fault of Phnom Penh, Vietnam, and the USSR. But I will continue to chair the coalition despite the irritation of the Khmer Rouge and the Khmer Bleu (pro Son Sann). I must do my duty as a Khmer patriot to the end and remain at the head of the anti-Vietnamese resistance. I cannot accept the Vietnamese fait accompli either now or in the future" and, according to him, this fait accompli is not necessarily irreversible despite the resistance's weaknesses. He hopes that a solution can be found through an agreement between Beijing and Moscow, which would be followed by a normalization in relations between the Chinese and Vietnamese. But this is not likely to happen overnight: "The USSR has too many strategic interests in Southeast Asia to abandon Vietnam. It is building two bases in Cambodia: a naval base in Ream-Sihanoukville, and an airbase with missles and helicopters in the western part of the country between Battambang and Siem Reap, threatening the region and above all Thailand," he said.

The prince continues to follow his usual lifestyle, inviting the few friendly diplomats accredited to Pyongyang for a game of badminton and an evening of dancing. He will be received two or three times during his visit by the "great leader" -- his long-standing friend who, despite increasingly strong pressure from the USSR, still recognizes him as Cambodian head of state. Although there is "no doubt that Korea has developed its cooperation with the USSR in a very marked way recently, President Kim Il-song told me that I will always be his brother and that we will be inseparable. As long as you are its president," he told me, "we will always have diplomatic relations with Democratic Kampuchea." But what will happen after that? For how long will Pyongyang continue to provide an increasingly discreet -- some say shameful -- refuge for the prince who was formerly frontpage news in an official press which now keeps silent about his visits.

ARMY RESHUFFLE DENIED; LAOS WARNED ON INSTRUCTIONS

[Text] The army has sent a circular denying rumours of a military reshuffle following the appointment of Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut as army commander-in-chief. The circular, dated June 2, and countersigned by Director of the Army Operations Centre Maj Gen Prasoet Sanlit, said widespread speculations that the army is planning a reshuffle of unit commanders are groundless. The rumours, it said, were circulated by "ill-intentioned persons who want to create rift in the army." The circular also instructed that unit commanders relay the message to their subordinates.

Meanwhile, Air Force Commander-in-Chief ACM [Air Chief Marshal] Praphan Thupatemi warned yesterday that planes would be sent to intercept any airspace intrusions by Laotian aircraft. He said Soviet-made MiG-21 jetfighters have frequently violated Thai airspace during training. The airspace intrusions by te Laotian planes were mostly reported over the northeastern province of Nong Khai which borders Laos.

Praphan said the MiG-21s normally take off from an airfield known as Wattai near Vientiane. "If Loas continues to violate our airspace we will have to respond by intercepting its planes," he said.

PREM WRITES REAGAN ON RICE PRICE ISSUE

BK050131 Bangkok THE NATION in English 5 Jun 86 pp 1, 2

[Excerpts] Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon yesterday sent a personal letter to President Ronald Reagan urging him to fulfill his promise to lessen the impact of the Farm Act on Thai rice exports, an informed source told THE NATION last night. The two-page letter, which was sent yesterday evening, expressed serious concern over the continuing drop in U.S. rice prices in world markets.

Prem called on President Reagan to take into consideration the close bilateral relations, "which you value so much." The premier pointed out that so far the U.S. Department of Agriculture [USDA] has unilaterally fixed the rice prices since these were first announced seven weeks ago.

In the letter, Prem appealed to Reagan that in the future fixing of U.S. rice prices, USDA should discuss and consult the issue with Thai representatives in Washington.

The premier's message came at a time when rice exporters have complained that if the decline in prices continues Thai rice would further lose its world market share. The falling rice prices have suddenly made U.S. rice competitive in the world market. Thai rice exports are estimated to have dropped to a total of 370,000 tons from 500,000 tons in the same month of last year. Thailand's rice exports are forecast to decline by 100,000 tons this year, largely due to increased competition from the U.S.

ATHIT CITED ON MOVING CAMBODIAN REFUGEE CAMP

[Excerpts] Aranyaprathet -- Supreme Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek and Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut yesterday toured a camp for displaced Khmers here which they said had been shelled by the Vietnamese and vowed that Thailand will not allow Vietnam to violate her territory again.

When asked about a proposal of relief officials for the camp to be moved further inside Thailand for better security, Gen Athit said: "We have to wait to see. Moving a camp is complicated and costly."

He said if the situation did not worsen the camp would remain where it is. However, the Thai authorities would consider moving the camp if it was in danger, he said.

Col Chalong Chotikakham told the officers the shells were fired from Kampuchean territory three to five kilometres east of Ta Ngoc Hill which towers above the Site 8 camp. The military has recently reported heavy fighting in the area opposite Site 8 between Khmer Rouge fighters and Vietnamese troops.

The people in Site 8 are civilian followers of the Khmer Rouge which is the strongest Khmer resistance force fighting the Vietnamese.

THAI RAT PRAISES NEW ARMY CHIEF'S INITIATIVES

BK041001 Bangkok THAI RAT in Thai 3 Jun 86 p 3

[Editorial: "New Changes in the Army"]

[Text] A few days after he was appointed Army commander in chief by royal decree, Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut introduced several changes in the Army. First, he declared his intent to separate the Army from politics which is not its duty. He also said he would serve as army chief for 2 years only.

The Army Chief told a group of Chunlachomklao Military Academy Class 10 officers who paid him a visit to offer their congratulations that he will change the method of appointing transfering officers. The Army chief will no longer monopolize the reshuffle, but a committee will be set up to be in charge of it. He said the appointment of the army chief should also be approved by the subordinates.

We believe that the plan to separate the Army from politics will help promote unity, solidarity, and integrity in the Army. The Army will serve as a true apparatus in its duty for the country and the people instead of being a personal Army of or a power base for a particular individual or group of people who exploit it for their political ambition.

His pledge to serve as Army commander for only 2 years, although he is entitled to remain there for many more years, and his willingness to declare his financial assets before taking over his new job is praiseworthy. It shows that he wants to give a chance to his subordinates to get promotions and prevent the abuse of the top Army post for irrelevant power.

The change in method of military reshuffle would mean an end to the sytem of favoritism and proteges which is widely practised in the bureaucracy, including the Armed Forces. Promotion based on merit is the correct method in personnel administration and it is fair for all subordinates.

Justice should be the rule in administration of national affairs. Appointments, transfers, promotions, or punishments of officials should be based on their capability and suitability rather than on their closeness to or personal relationship with their superiors. Justice will create unity, solidarity, and integrity in the Army. All concerned authorities in the entire bureaucracy including the military and civilians should support this line so that our national administration will guided by justice and achieve greater efficiency.

'ARMY GENERAL' STEPS IN TO HEAL UDP RIFT

[By Phanni N. Konkit]

[Text] The disarray in the United Democratic Party (UDP) took a new twist yesterday following mediation efforts by an "army general" to patch up the intro-party rifts. As a result, two group leaders ended their plan to break away and vowed to stay in the party. The behind-the-scenes bid to dissuade former Ayutthaya MP Col Narong Kittikhachon and former Maha Sarakham MP Thawit Klinprathum from quitting the party was set in motion Tuesday night. It bore fruit yesterday morning.

It all started after UDP leader Buntheng Thongsawat received a phone call Tuesday evening from Col Narong who aired his frustration over the way he was treated in the UDP. Col Narong informed Buntheng that he had made up his mind to quit the party. The phone call prompted Buntheng to contact the "general" to seek his "good office" in a bid to stall what threatened to snowball into a wave of mass defections in the party, which was formed to stand against the return of Gen Prem Tinsulanon as premier after the general election.

The mediator managed to reach Col Narong yesterday morning to listen to his grievances and volunteered to help mediate between him and other faction leaders. Col Narong reportedly felt that some figures in the party did not regard him with prestige and that he was uncertain about the future of the party. He was quoted as saying that he must be assured that the party he was to stay with must have a good future; otherwise the Chat Thai Party from which he had defected would look down upon him.

The "general" afterwards put the line through to many other UDP leaders including Col Phon Roengpraseotwit, the chairman of the UDP's advisory board, Tamchai Khamphato, the party secretary general and Mongkon Simarot, the party's general campaign manager. The phone call apparently pacified Col Narong, who in turn called up Thawit and persuaded him to stay on in the party. The two former Chat Thai MP's have been a close friends and they initially planned to switch to the Ratsadon Party. Col Narong also earlier pondered over the possibility of joinging the Liberal Party of former University Affairs Minister Prida Phatthanathabut.

As a result, Thawit and Narong yesterday called separate news conferences during which they vowed to stay on in the UDP. But Thawit told THE NATION Ratsadon Party of Gen Thianchai Sirisamphan did approach him. The contacts were established through Dr Niphon Sasithon and Dr Phaithun Khruakaeo of the Ratsadon Party. Thawit also admitted that Col Narong had problems in UDP but he added that the "matter has been cleared up." Narong also told THE NATION that although he was staying in UDP, there was nothing certain during the days before the candidacy registration deadline. "It depends on how the candidates that I have selected for UDP will be treated. If I leave, 70 candidates will follow me," he said.

In a related development, Prida told Narong that he may have to merge his Liberal Party with Narong's party if his party failed tomeet the legal requirement of fielding at least 174 candidates in the upcoming election. Prida is close to Col Narong whose Sukhothai residence is in the neighborhood of Prida's party head office. At the Sukhothai residence, another UDP leader Bunloet Loetpricha affirmed that he will not defect from UDP. "How can I do so? I have no time to switch from one party to another. It is too late now," he said.

Meanwhile, former Loei MP Pracha Bunyanet has decided to join UDP in turn rejecting an offer from former Deputy Prime Minister Bunchu Rotchanasathian's Community Action Party (CAP). Pracha will recruit a candidate who will run with him in Loei. The former Loei MP is a defector from the Social Action Party. He was formerly deputy secretary to the prime minister when Buntheng was deputy prime minister.

CHAWALIT URGES CONTINUED PRESSURE ON COMMUNISTS

[Text] Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut urged Internal Security Operations Command (ISOC) officers to be more serious in their duty to suppress Communism which he said still existed and maintained its objective of subverting national security. He made this remark to ISOC officers led by Acting Deputy Army Chief and Deputy Director of the ISOC Gen Akkhaphon Somrup, who turned up this morning to congratulate Gen Chawalit for having assumed the position of the ISOC director.

Gen Chawalit said Communist activities and political ideology remained a major threat to national security and must not be overlooked. He praised Supreme Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek, the former ISOC director, for having successfully maintained national security through a period of both internal and external Communist threats. "We still need his advice for our operations to be effective," he noted.

On his position as the ISOC director, Gen Chawalit said he had asked Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon to keep Gen Athit in this position but the prime minister said it was a traditional practice for the Army chief to direct the internal security operations and that advice could still be sought from Gen Athit when necessary. Saying that he was still inexperienced, Gen Chawalit asked for advice and cooperation from all officers concerned.

JAPANESE BUSINESSMEN ARRIVE IN HANOI FOR TALKS

[Text] Hanoi, June 4 KYODO -- A 10-member private Japanese trade delegation arrived here Wednesday for a two-week visit, the first business mission from Japan in seven years.

During their stay until June 19, the mission members are scheduled to hold a series of talks with Vietnamese trade and business leaders on ways of expanding bilateral trade -- currently lopsided in Japan's favor -- by increasing imports of local products such as coffee, sesame, fruit, cuttlefish and logs.

An exchange of opinions is also expected on Vietnam's new investment law and a Japanese request for permission to open representative offices of trading firms in Hanoi.

ARMY PAPER COMMENTS ON U.S. CHEMICAL WEAPONS

BK041120 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 3 Jun 86

[Commentary by (Quang Loi) in recent issue of QUAN DOI NHAN DAN: "A Dish That is Hard To Sell"]

[Text] The U.S. Department of State recently reiterated its shopworn story about the use of Soviet-made chemical weapons in Southeast Asia. Washington has repeatedly spread this odious and slanderous charge against the Soviet Union and Vietnam. In 1980, the United States concocted a fictitious story about the use of Soviet-made chemical weapons in Cambodia by Vietnamese troops. However, Washington's dark scheme was exposed by the results of on-the-spot investigations conducted by many teams of western experts and researchers on weaponry. These experts and researchers declared that there was no evidence of the so-called yellow rain clamorously alleged by Washington.

Recently, THE WALL STREET JOURNAL even spread the news that the Canadian Government will soon announce its conclusion that yellow rain along the Thai-Cambodian border has been caused by toxic chemicals. This news was also reported by the BANGKOK POST. Later, however, the BANGKOK POST quoted the Canadian ambassador to Thailand as saying that the research agency of the Canadian Defense Ministry had never reached any conclusion on the issue of yellow rain in Southeast Asia.

Despite the fact that it has repeatedly been unmasked, Washington still obstinately seeks to advertise this unwanted dish among the general public. A broad sector of public opinon in the world, including that in the United States, no longer believes Washington's clamoring about the so-called yellow rain in Southeast Asia. THE WASHINGTON POST on 29 May reiterated that research conducted in Britain had found no proof of yellow rain at 35 points along the Thai-Cambodian border which the United States claims were attacked with chemical weapons. People maintain that the United States has done this not because of its concern for human health and the environment in Southeast Asia, but for the sinister political purpose of justifying its extremely barbarous crime of using toxic chemicals on a large scale against Vietnam in the past, which has been strongly condemned by public opinion, as well as covering up its plan to manufacture new chemical weapons. That plan, to resume production after 17 years was approved by the NATO member countries on 22 May.

The Pentagon now has a total of 300,000 tons of chemical weapons. These include the binary type -- nerve gas. Half of this huge quantity of chemical weapons is stored in Asia, the Pacific, and Western Europe.

No one but the United States has perpetrated the most serious crime of using toxic chemicals against mankind. It is also the United States which, together with its allies, is frantically preparing for a large-scale chemical war, thus advancing the arms race in an area no less dangerous than nuclear weapons.

The United States' odious slander campaign concerning yellow rain in Southeast Asia is part of a scheme to collude with the Chinese expansionist and hegemonists and the reactionaries in the Bangkok ruling circles to overshadow the three Indochinese countries' good-will proposal and lower the increasing high prestige of the PRK.

Washington's replay of the cracked record "Yellow rain in Southeast Asia" at the very moment of the fifth partial withdrawal of the Vietnamese Army volunteers from Cambodia is also aimed at playing down the significance of this troop withdrawal. In a seemingly close coordination of effort, the Beijing authorities on 30 May repeated the prosy allegation that Hanoi is intensifying its Vietnamization of Cambodia by dispatching hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese to that country as part of a new plan to raise the Vietnamese population there to 700,000, and that Vietnamese emigrants now comprise 60 percent of the population of Phnom Penh.

At the same time, Bangkok shouted that the Vietnamese Armed Forces had shelled a Cambodian refugee camp and caused many civilian casualties, despite many international aid officials' suspecting Khmer Rouge involvement in this shelling. Even more insolent was the fact that Bangkok addressed a protest note to the UN slandering Vietnam.

The chorus of slander by Washington, Beijing, and Bangkok has been negated by reality. It only shows that they are the worst enemies of the Southeast Asia peoples.

REFUGEE DEPARTURES DOWN; APPLICANTS BACKLOGGED

[Text] Hanoi, June 4 (AFP) -- The number of Vietnamese allowed to emigrate under the United Nations-supervised Orderly Departure Program hit a three-year low last month, which some sources attributed to disputes between Hanoi and host countries, primarily the United States.

The 1,256 Vietnamese allowed to leave the country last month under the program overseen by the U.N. High Commission for Refugees (UNHCR) was the lowest monthly total since May 1983, UNHCR figures released Wednesday showed. The dwindling totals confirmed Hanoi's desire to gradually reduce the number of emigres, said Western observers who estimated that this year scarcely more than 20,000 would be allowed to leave.

About 9,000 Vietnamese left legally in the first months of this year, down from 11,000 in the same period last year, and observers said the drop was due to disputes which arose in the past several months between Hanoi and receiving countries. The main problem, they said, was a backlog of tens of thousands of applicants who had been left in limbo after receiving either an exit visa from Vietnam or an entry visa for another country, but not both.

Hanoi has accused Washington of stalling in accepting 20,000 applicants who had been interviewed by U.S. authorities and duly issued Vietnamese exit visas. As a result of the disputes, Hanoi suspended U.S. interviews with 30,000 candidates who had already received exit visas. UNHCR mediation efforts failed to get the program under way again. "The number of departures for the United States now depends entirely on the visas issued each month by the U.S. authorities to Vietnamese who already have their exit visas," a UNHCR official said.

The United States, meanwhile, says Hanoi has denied exit visas to 30,000 refugees it is ready to accept. Departures to other countries of refuge, notably Canada and Australia, have also fallen after similar problems.

Beyond these technical problems, caused chiefly by differences in criteria used to select candidates, observers said that in general Hanoi wanted gradually to reduce the number of emigres. Some Vietnamese officials have told Western diplomats they would like to see departures limited to cases involving separated families or Amerasians, while other have spoken privately of the end of the Orderly Departure Program.

Last month, 673 Vietnamese received visas for the United States, 250 for Australia, 153 for Canada and 97 for France. UNHCR figures show that those four countries have received most of the refugees since the Orderly Departure Program set up in 1979.

The program hit a low point in 1983, when only 19,000 Vietnamese were granted permission to leave. In 1984 departures peaked at nearly 30,000 departures, but last year the number slipped again to 25,000.

AFP REPORTS ON 'RELAXATION' IN HO CHI MINH CITY

[By Laurent Maillard]

[Text] Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam June 4 (AFP) -- Authorities have bowed to a recent barrage of public complaints about bureaucracy and bad management by loosening their grip on the city, residents and officials said.

Foreign and Vietnamese residents saw evidence of simplified administrative measures, relaxed police procedures and a freer atmosphere in general recently, while a city official confirmed that a relaxation had been ordered. "People were asking for more freedom. We have to provide it if we want to win their confidence," the official added.

Authorities also said that several junior officials had been dismissed for corruption and that important changes were likely in the local party leadership when local and provincial congresses begin in August. In an officially-endorsed criticims campaign for the past three months, many residents voiced their grievances in public meetings around Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon) "for the first time since 1975," one party official said. They denounced bureaucracy, authoritarian bosses, police and administrative repression, bad management, corruption, nepotism and a lack of contact with party leaders, he added. "The criticism of the population were well-founded in nine out of ten cases," said Tran Cao Hien, chairman of the 5th District Popular Committee.

"This kind of campaign should have been conducted regularly in the past." But, he added, some residents "still hesitate to speak because of a fear of reprisal from the officials they name." The criticism campaign was encouraged by city leaders, who repeatedly stressed that it should be conducted publicly. The newspaper SAIGON GIAIPHONG demonstrated the official sanction by publishing letters from readers criticizing the Communist Party Central Committee and the Politburo.

City officials said they had already implemented a series of temporary measures as a result of the campaign, such as raising teachers' salaries, without waiting for the green light from Hanoi. "It's not possible to wait to correct the most serious problems," one official said.

Mr Hien, the 5th District official, said authorities "have had to listen to the population and simplify several administrative procedures, to help cut down on bureaucracy." The most frequent complaint, various sources said, was about the activities of police and local militia forces who have kept the former capital of South Vietnam on a tight rein over the past 10 years.

Several Western residents remarked that they had noticed a certain liberalization in the past two months. "The police have relaxed, residents seem less scared and are speaking more freely," one foreigner said. "One has the feeling that since the campaign started, officials have adopted a low profile and that the noose around the city has been loosened," In line with the new attitude, a Vietnamese resident said that his street was advised by a police officer 24 hours in advance of a "surprise" check. "This was inconceivable just a couple of months ago," he said. "It wasn't a coincidence," a city official told a group of visiting foreigners. "A relaxation has been ordered."

Although police and checkpoints are omnipresent and a midnight to 5 a.m. curfew remains in effect, there are other signs of a relaxation by city authorities. Sidewalk vendors, banished by police at the beginning of the year, have reappeared in central Ho Chi Minh city. Municipal authorities also allowed a nightclub to open last month, a first in Communist Vietnam.

A Ho Chi Minh City official assured a visitor that the liberalization is not just temporary -- a respite before another crackdown. "We are not going to go backwards," he said, adding that the "necessary" liberalization will last because the "public demands it."

AUSTRALIA

HAWKE ON 'MISUNDERSTANDING' IN JAKARTA TIES

[Text] The prime minister, Mr Hawke, says recent articles in the Indonesian armed forces newspaper which criticized Australia do not reflect the view of the Indonesian Government. The articles in the newspaper, ANGATAN BESANJATA, have described Australia as arrogant and hostile. They have also criticized elements in the Australian Labor Party, universities, and the news media.

Mr Hawke told parliament that the articles showed there is still some misunderstanding in Indonesia about Australia and its people and government. He said no government could have done more than his to put past disputes behind it and look to the future. He urged Australian politicians and those in responsible positions to use every opportunity to increase understanding between the Indonesian and Australian people. Mr Hawke said his government paid close attention to Indonesian as soon as it took office, and he believed he had built good relations with President Suharto.

INDONESIA SAID TO POSE MILITARY THREAT

[Text] Sydney, Australia, June 5 (AFP) -- Australia faces a military threat from Indonesia, even though this was not spelt out in the public version of the Australia defence review released this week, the AUSTRALIAN FINANCIAL REVIEW said Thursday. The national daily said in an editorial that there were no signs of a military buildup in Indonesia which "does not possess the military strength or discipline to mount an invasion of Australia."

The threat was more in "terms of structural hostility in powerful minorities in a country whose continuing obsession with territorial control (security) holds the potential for recrurring regional skirmishes."

It added: "there is not doubt that the Indonesian armed forces regard Australia as a historical impediment to territorial expansion, most notably in the case of Australia's criticism of Indonesia's annexation of Timor a decade ago."

The FINANCIAL REVIEW, one of only two Australian news organisations still represented in Jakarta after the Indonesian Government's crackdown on Australian journalists, said the Dibb Report on national defence planning carefully avoided giving much away about the extent to which Indonesia is assessed as a possible threat. "But the unfortunate fact is that Australia does face a threat from Indonesia. In Australia's uneasy relationship with Indonesia, low-level harassment of remote Australian terrritory, as Mr Paul Dibb (author of the report) puts it, now stands out as a clear possiblity."

NEW GOVERNMENT ASSESSED AFTER FIRST 100 DAYS

Aquino Cites Gains

[Text] Manila, June 4 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino Wednesday said her first 100 days in office had brought lower inflation, a stable currency, and increased foreign exchange reserves, but stressed that "huge" problems remained. Mrs Aquino also cited as her main achievements unshackling of the courts from "political interference," press freedom, military reforms and peace offerings to communist guerrillas.

Speaking at her bi-monthly show on state-run television, Mrs Aquino called for hard work and faith in her government, saying: "Your government can and is, creating the conditions for recovery but that recovery can only be carried forward by your efforts."

The Philippine economy had undergone two consecutive years of decline before a popular uprising three months ago ousted President Ferdinand Marcos and installed Mrs Aquino as the rightful winner of Presidential elections in February.

She said Wednesday the "good news" was that the inflation rate which was 50 percent in 1984 and 23 percent last year "has now come down to a rate of 2.1 percent," and that "the value of the peso has strengthened." Manila's foreign exchange reserves have also increased by 85 percent and interest rates have fallen sharply. Finance Minister Jaime Ongpin told the same show the 50 percent dip to 15 percent would motivate private industry to invest and create new jobs.

Mrs Aquino also cited the release of some 500 political prisoners, the drafting of a new constitution, lower fertilizer prices and land reform for poor farmers, and abolition of restrictive labor laws as her other feats. But she said the country's legacy of debt, a bankrupt government, poverty, corruption and insurgency." Mr Marcos left behind a depleted treasury and a foreign debt currently estimated at 27 billion dollars, for which the Aquino government is seeking easier terms to allow it to achieve economic growth.

Mrs Aquino had pledged to hold ceasefire talks with the leadership of the communist underground, whose 16,500-strong New People's Army grew rapidly in the last years of the 20-year Marcos regime. "There is no instant revolution nor, I must tell you are there instant answers. We had a snap election, then we had a snap revolution, but I never promised you snap solutions" Mrs Aquino said.

The television program also showed in full Wednesday's cabinet meeting which had her ministers arguing on national government's financial support for local government projects and other local issues.

Mayor Accomplishments Noted

[Text] The dismantling of the framework of the Marcos dictatorship is the most important achievement of the Aquino government as it approaches the end of its first 100 days in power. This assessment was made by Malacanang. It added that the dismantling was made possible through the abolition of the Batasang Pambansa and the replacement of local government officials by officers-in-charge.

Another major accomplishment is the declaration of the Freedom Constitution which was based on the Bill of Rights of the 1935 and 1973 constitutions, says the report.

During its first 100 days, President Aquino reorganized the government, created several commissions including the Commission on Good Government, better known as the commission on sequestration.

Manila Poll Shows Approval

[Text] Manila, June 5 (AFP) -- Metropolitan Manila residents gave President Corazon Aquino high marks for her performance during her first three months in office, a poll published Thursday showed.

Forty-eight percent rated her overall performance as fair and 44 percent said it was good or very good, for an approval rating of 92 percent. Six percent said it was poor or very poor, and two percent did not respond.

The May 26 to June 2 survey of 300 people was undertaken by the privately run Philippine Survey and Research Center Inc. for the mass-circulation MALAYA newspaper in preparation for Mrs. Aquino's 100th day in office Thursday.

The 53-year-old widow was swept to power February 25 by a military-civilian revolt that sent strongman Ferdinand Marcos to exile following their election battle in which Mr. Marcos's victory was widely disputed here and abroad.

In eight specific performance categories, the president's approval rating was highest at 93 percent for "bringing the national government closer to the people." Seventy-three percent said she was good or very good.

The lowest approval rating was 82 per cent for "generating employment opportunities and livelihood sources." Fifteen percent [said] she was poor or very poor in this category, the lowest disapproval rating she got in the survey.

The other categories and her approval ratings were the handling of her tasks and functions (90), removing graft and corruption (89), eliminating human rights violations (90), reforming the military (88), maintaining peace and order (90), and holding down prices of commodities (89).

GOVERNMENT GETS REDUCED LOAN PLEDGE FROM JAPAN

[By Abrino Aydinan]

[Text] President Corazon C. Aquino's government got only about half of the amount of the annual package of soft loans committed by Japan to the ousted government of Marcos.

The agreement signed by Finance Minister Jaime V. Ongpin with the Overseas Economic Cooperation Fund (OECF) in Tokyo last week for the 13th yen package to finance infrastructure projects here, dropped four projects that had been approved under the Marcos regime, including three pet projects of the former president's son.

The Aquino government earlier announced the scrapping of the three projects that would have benefited Ilocos Norte where Ferdinand Marcos Jr. was governor, and asked to renegotiate the credit package.

The "Bongbong (the name by which Marcos Jr. is popularly known) projects" were: road inprovement and construction of the 72-kilometer stretch of the Philippine-Japan Friendship Highway between Laoag City and Allacapan; construction of the water supply systems for Ilocos Norte; and expansion of telephone exchange stations and lines in the general area. The three projects would have fetched a total of Yen13,547 million equivalent to about P1.6 billion at the current exchange rate.

A fourth project, the installation of a floating facility for unloading of grains at the Port of Manila with approved OECF financing of Yen175 million (P20 million), has also been scrapped.

The 13th Japanese credit package renegotiated by the Aquino government also does not include the commodity loan of Yen16,473 million (P1.9 billion) already granted to the previous government.

A ranking leader of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) in Japan who visited the Philippines recently said Tokyo would consider sympathetically any request from Manila for the conversion of the loans approved for the development projects that the Aquino government would decide to cancel into the fast-disbursing commodity loans. Past OECF commodity loans financed imports of certain commodities from Japan.

A commodity loan amounting to Yen35.2 billion (P4.04 billion) was granted last year, less than 50 percent of which was relent to Philippine borrowers before the fall of the Marcos government. Despite the apparent reluctance of Philippine importers to use the trade financing facility, Tokyo committed the next loan. The final signing of the commodity loan agreement was suspended however after the February election that led to Marcos's downfall when various foreign nations openly withdrew support from the previous government. Tokyo put it on record however that the suspension of the loan agreement was a political act.

The Japanese government now is reportedly insisting on a 90 percent disbursement of the existing commodity loan fund as a condition for the granting of the next. The LDP leader, Member of Parliament Kabun Muto indicated only a 50 percent disbursement prerequisite.

Both Tokyo and Manila are not explaining why Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's government was willing to accommodate the Marcos government on the commodity loan, whose approval served more as a political rather than an economic boost for the past regime, and not the Aquino government which is in dire need of foreign aid.

The new financing obtained by Ongpin from the OECF to finance the rescheduling of Philippine debts falling due last year up to June 30 this year is not a new feature. The original package was boosted by a debt servicing fund of Yen6 billion (P689 million).

The 13th OECF credit package renegotiated by the Aquino government amounts to a total of P2,737 million (about Yen17,067 million) only, while the original amount granted to the Marcos government was P5.7 billion (Yen48,500 million). Compared to the amount of the 12th package, the credit financing has gone done by some 60 percent.

MORE ANTIRIOT BATTALIONS FORMED BY RAMOS

[Text] Manila, June 3 KYODO -- Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel Ramos Tuesday ordered the creation of additional anti-riot battalions to quell civil disturbances and violence committed by supporters of deposed President Ferdinand Marcos in the capital.

Ramos, one of the leaders of a civilian-backed military revolt that ended 20 years of Marcos rule, ordered that a civil disturbance battalion be formed in each of the major service commands -- the Army, Navy, Air Force, the Philippine Constabulary -- and another from the General Headquarters Infantry Brigade. The battalions, each with a normal strength of 600 to 800 men, will support regular anti-riot contingents from the the police and the constabulary's Capital Regional Command (Capcom).

Ramos issued the order a day after police and Capcom troops used tear gas and water cannons to disperse about 3,000 Marcos loyalists from the grounds of the parliament building where they had slept Sunday night. The demonstrators planned to picket the opening session of the Constitutional Commission (Concom) that was addressed by President Corazon Aquino Monday.

Among them were "Freedom Marchers" who arrived in Manila Sunday after trekking 400 kilometers from Marcos' northers Philippine home province of Ilocos Norte. The march, which began May 17, had been marred by clashes between Marcos loyalists and Aquino supporters in which scores were injured.

Loyalists have staged noisy Sunday demonstrations since early April in Manila's rizal Park, denouncing the Aquino government and calling for the return of Marcos, now in exile in Hawaii. Several journalists and photographers covering these rallies have been mauled by the demonstrators who were angered at what they claimed was biased reporting by local newspapers.

RAMOS VIEWS SECURITY SITUATION FOR FIRST 100 DAYS

Insurgency 'Under Control'

BK050621 Manila PNA in English 0551 GMT 5 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 5 (PNA) -- Armed Forces Chief of Staff, Gen. Fidel V. Ramos said the current insurgency problem is well under control but he warned that it may deteriorate seriously if political and economic instabilities continue.

On the whole, the insurgency situation has not improved, Ramos said in a press conference as he assessed the first 100 days of the New Armed Forces of the Philippines (NAFP) since the February revolution. However, Ramos said the over-all situation has greatly changed since the renewed confidence of the people in the military and the determination of the new government to wipe out all undesirable vistages of the old regime.

To sustain the fight against communism, Ramos called on all [words indistinct] insurgency threat. He stressed the importance of an intensified campaign down to the grassroots level of the need for public anwareness on the government's counter insurgency drive.

Pertinent government agencies and concerned citizens must assist the military in neutralizing the propaganda efforts of the insurgents and win back the mass base of terrorists to the government's side, Ramos said.

The chief of staff admitted that the Communist Party [CPP] of the Philippines and its military arm, the New People's Army [NPA], have gained considerably in the psychological front.

Ramos said there is an urgent need to orchestrate and coordinate activities at all levels of the government in order to downgrade communism. He said the insurgents have been deployed practically in all regions in the country.

From Feb. 26 to June 1 this year, a total of 870 incidents or an average of nine violent incidents occurred daily nationwide which resulted in an average of four government troops, four NPA and MNLF rebels and three civilians or a total of 11 killed, Ramos said.

From Jan. 1 to Feb. 28, an average of 10 violent incidents were recorded daily with three soldiers, five insurgents and two civilians or a total of 10 killed daily.

Records also showed that last year, a total of 12 incidents occurred daily which resulted in four troops, six NPA and MNLF [Moro National Liberation Front] and four civilians, or a total of 14 killed each day, Ramos said.

Following are the casualties recorded: CPP-NA-NPA 375; MNLF 46; government troops 358; and civilians 261, including 33 government officials, Ramos said.

Urges Local Cooperation

[Text] Armed Forces of the Philippines Chief of Staff General Fidel Ramos warned against a deterioration of the peace and order situation should the political and economic instability go on unchecked. General Ramos gave this warning in his assessment of the first 100 days of the New Armed Forces of the Philippines. He also noted that there is an increase in CPP-NPA incursions.

[Begin Ramos recording] This is the situation to be hurdled: The reluctance of many city and municipal mayors and provincial governors to boldly come to grips with local security problems, in spite of the availability of AFP and INP, the Integrated National Police Force, in areas affected by CPP-NPA and MNLF encroachment. The psychological front, this is where the insurgents have the advantage and have made their greatest gains through the united front and party building activities which should be given the highest priority and support. For counterinsurgency to succeed, military efforts are not enough. Thus, the new AFP, other government agencies and the private sector should effect integrated programs guided by national policies and public safety and security. [end recording]

ILOCOS SUR GOVERNOR REFUSES TO YIELD POWER

[Text] San Fernando, La Union -- Formal turnover between outgoing Gov Luis "Chavit" Singson and Officer-in-Charge (OIC) Sally Villanueva was called off yesterday morning when violence broke out.

Some 10,000 Singson loyalists barred Villanueva's group from entering the provincial capitol in Vigan, Ilocos Sur. the OIC was reported to have suffered bruises following a melee between opposing groups in front of the capitol building. A 30-minute negotiations before the incident bogged down when hotheads shouted at each other.

Sources at the PC [Philippine Constabulary] provincial command said tension in Ilocos Sur has heightened. Villanueva's group has retreated to a private office to hold office until Singson yields power. The Mayor's League of Ilocos Sur, headed by Vigan Mayor Evaristo singson, said it would only recognized Singson as the legitimate head of the province.

Earlier, Gov Singson told newsmen he would not allow any OIC to enter the province of Ilocos Sur. Yielding the governorship is a betrayal of supporters' loyalty, he said.

The military is expected to intervene to prevent hostilities. Ilocos Sur is the latest province in President Ferdinand Marcos's region which has not yeilded to the appointment of a governor by the Aqunio government.

NEGROS NDF WARNS AGAINST U.S.-MARCOS VESTIGES

[By Edgar Cadagat]

[Text] Bacolod City -- The National Democratic Front [NDF] in Negros has called on the government to be vigilant in "eradicating will vestiges of the U.S.-Marcos fascist dictatorship."

It also encouraged democratic forces within her government to heed the aspirations of the Filipino people in "building a truly sovereign, full democratic and free nations."

Human rights groups have documented at least three dead, two wounded, and 8 houses burned during a recent military operation. The NDF said this happened when soldiers went on a shooting spree unleasing machinegun fire and lobbing mortar shells indiscriminately.

"The coordinated military operations and ceaseless violations of human rights by the 7th IB, [Infantry Battalion] 11th IB, 338th PC, CHDFs [Civilian Home Defence Forces] -- all under Task Force Sugarland -- bring to the limelight the old faces of the U.S. -Marcos fascist dictatorship," the NDF said.

At the same time, fears of renewed bloodletting in an island which has seen many of the worst cases of human rights violations surfaced. This developed as the NDF warned it would crush all attempts by the military if it "continues to provoke and challenge the invincible might of the NPA and the broad and militant masses."

Meanwhile, military authorities said deployment of additional soldiers should not alarm the Republic. Such is an implementation of a long-standing order and in response to an earlier request for more troops to meet the requirements of both provinces, they said.

RUC [Regional Unified Command] 6 commander Brig. Gen. Dionisio Tan-Gatue, confirmed the arrival of the 6th IB in Negros plus two Armored Personnel Carriers (APC). The 6th IB, formerly assigned in Lanao, beefs up the combat battalions deployed here from two to three. Already in place in Southern and Central Negros, respectively, are the 7th IB and the 11th IB.

FORMER JOURNALIST NAMED AS NPA CEASE-FIRE ENVOY

[Text] Manila, June 5 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino Thursday announced that communist insurgents have named a former journalist who escaped from military custody last year as one of their emissaries in expected ceasefire talks.

Mrs Aquino said she would name within 48 hours members of her negotiating panel in her efforts to achieve a political solution to the 17-year-old insurgency led by the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) and the New People's Army (NPA). "We have just gotten word from the top leadership of the Communist Party and they have named Satur Ocampo as one of the negotiators," Mrs Aquino told a news conference on the occasion of her first 100 days in office.

The former assistant business editor of the MANILA TIMES, who spent nine years in jail on suspicion of being a top communist party leader, tricked his guards while on furlough to vote in the National Press Club elections in May 5, 1985.

Pressed for more details regarding her ceasefire plan, Mrs Aquino said: "I would hate to do anything that would upset the present plans." She reiterated that she was holding national-level talks with the top Communist Party leadership, who have rejected regional ceasefire arrangements.

The negotiations would show if the CPP-NPA leadership was in control of its force nationwide, Mrs Aquino said. She said the wave of NPA attacks after she declared her intention to hold ceasefire talks was just a show of strength to be in a better bargaining position durng the talks.

15 CASUALTIES IN NPA RAID IN DAVAO DEL NORTE

[By Ped C. Velasco]

[Text] New Corella, Davao del Norte -- A militia man, his wife, their eight-year-old son, and a 60-year-old man were killed and 11 other civilians were wounded yesterday when about 100 armed men believed to be New People's Army rebels raided a police-CHDF camp at barangay Suwaon, this town. The Suwaon detachment camp was the third military camp of this province attacked by the rebels in the last two weeks.

The fatalities were identified as Gil Luwayon, 30, a member of the local Civilian Home Defense Force (CHDF), his wife Marcela, 27, and son Melvin, 8, and Venancio Lacia, 60.

Seriously wounded were Susana Ernias, 50, and Rene Lacia, 8. Ernias was taken to the Christ the King Hospital in Tagum and Lacia was rushed to a hospital in Davao City for treatment of a bullet wound in the head. Also wounded and taken to the Davao Regional Hospital in Tagum were Emelyn Lacia, 4, Gertrudes Lacia, 8, Esteban Lacia, 48, Rosita Lacia, 35, Jocelyn Formentera, 14, Estrebel Lacia, 8, Maxima Acosta, 49, and CHDF member Ariel Acosta, 24.

Ms Acosta, one of the slightly wounded, said she was preparing breakfast at about 5 a.m. when the armed men arrived. She said she heard the armed men ordering the occupants of the camp to surrender.

When nobody responded, she said the rebels opened fire with automatic weapons. Then the rebels stormed the camp but found no one inside, only the body of CHDF member Gil Luwayon. The rebels then indiscriminately fired guns at the houses nearby, it was learned.

The report said that the 14-man CHDF team stationed at the camp was on foot patrol at the time of the attack. However, the rebels and the team led by Cpls. Virgilio Lacia clashed as the rebels withdrew toward the direction of Montevista town.

Col Marcelo C. Blando, commanding officer of the 1st Scout Ranger regiment, dispatched yesterday a team of scout troopers to track down the rebels in New Corella town.

17 NPA MEMBERS KILLED IN SOUTH COTABATO

[Text] General Santos City -- Seventeen New People's Army were killed while 20 others were wounded in a surprise attack by the elements of the 3rd Infantry Battalion under Lt. Col. Ernesto Uy in Baranggay Mayahay, Maasin, South Cotabato last week.

Col. Orlando Soriano, Southwestern Brigade Commander in his report to Col. Romeo Recina, Recom [Command] and RUC 11 chief, said a civilian who was supplying food to the NPA reported the presence of 70 armed men to headquarters.

The NPA's were caught unaware when the soldiers arrived. A two-hour gunbattle ensured forcing the rebels to disperse in different directions.

Soriano said the rebels withdrew towards Mt. Todok, between Maasin and Kiamba town border, bringing with them their casualties and wounded companions. The dead were buried along the road, a civilian said. "The rebels suffered heavy casualties during the two-hour firefight. No casualty or wounded was reported on the government side," Soriano said.

Last year, the same group of NPA's was responsible for the killing and ambush of 21 innocent civilians and seven policemen while on their way riding on weapons carrier going to barangay Mayahay.

MNLF COMMANDERS IMPATIENT WITH NEGOTIATION DELAY

HK031336 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 31 May 86 p 2

[Text] Davao City -- There is a growing impatience among freedom fighters belonging to the Misuari faction of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) in the face of the stalled attempt for renegotiating the Tripoli agreement of 1976 with the new goverment.

This sentiment was relayed to PNA during an interview with four commanders of Nur Misuari, founding chairman of the MNLF who is still in exile in the Middle East. The interview was held shortly after the departure of President Aquino last Saturday for Cebu for the second leg of her southern swing to consult with the people of the region.

The MNLF field commanders who did not want to be identified, said they came to Davao to observe the presidential visit as it related to the Muslim problem in Mindanao. The four said they were members of batch 90, batch 300 and 701 support battalion that had trained in foreign countries sympathetic to their cause of liberating Muslim Mindanao from the Manila government.

Their main spokesman who preferred to be called a graduate of batch 90, said he would move for the ouster of Misuari and other exiled MNLF leaders "if they could not move their strength to join the new government to the renegotiating table to implement once and for all the Tripoli accord that will give rise to 13 province Muslim autonomous region of Mindanao, including Sulu and Palawan."

He said they will elect a chairman who can reunite the splintered MNLF in Mindanao to press the Aquino government to implement the Tripoli agreement. The MNLF has three major factions -- Misuari's, Hashim Salamat's Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), and Dimas Pundato's Reformist Group.

The Philippine government and the MNLF signed the Tripoli agreement in the Libyan capital in December 1976 under the auspices of the Organization of the Islamic Conference. The pact set the terms for the grant of autonomy to the Muslim province to Mindanao.

According to the spokesman of the Misuari group, they are already fed up with remote control leadership. "If we succeed in this plan," (to oust Misuari) he added, "I think we can siphon foreign support directly to the battlefield."

The spokesman whose base is Central Mindanao, told PNA that he could muster the return of Muslim surrenderers numbering about 20,000 to the battlefronts to resume hostilities in Mandanao. "If nothing happens to the Tripoli agreement, our estimate of resumption of the Mindanao conflict will be after the Ramadan," he said. "That is the only radical way to settle a political issue." The Ramadan, the month-long fasting and prayer in the Muslim world, started last May 9 and it is expected to end on June 9.

The spokeman emphasized that their action is purely a political struggle in nature to liberate the homeland which is Muslim Mindanao. "However, if the Imams and Ustadzes will convert the conflict into the Jihad or religious war it will be bloodier than we think," he added.

PRODUCER SEES BRIGHT PROSPECTS FOR SUGAR SALES

HK290300 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 28 May 86 p 2

[Text] An industry leader sees a bright future for the Philippine cane sugar in the wake of the Soviet Union's Chernobyl nuclear plant accident which, he believes, may have scared European consumers away from the region's own beet sugar production.

Executive vice-president Jose Zubiri of Bukidnon Sugar Milling Co., Inc. told newsmen yesterday he suspects the radiation contamination scare would forece the European countries in the fallout zone of the nuclear accident to destroy standing beet sugar crops. This situation would hold for two to three years, he believes.

The anticipated sugar supply crisis in Europe may well be the reason for the visit here of internationl commodities trader Philipps Brothers Oceanic, Inc. which is offering to buy the domestic sugar production for the next four crop years, Zubiri said.

Philipp Brothers, according to Agriculture and Food Minister Ramon Mitra who disclosed to reporters the United States-based outfit's futures buy offer, is prepared to purchase the local cane sugar crops at the prevailing world market price. This means $0.07 to $0.08 per pound. Zubiri considers the price offer low. He suggests the Philippines should wait until it could sell directly to the European market when his projected Chernobyl related supply crunch comes about. He also sees domestic production of sugar exceeding the local requirement and the Philippine's export commitment to the U.S. this year. "I believe we should not sell at seven to eight cents a pound but no less than 20 to 23 cents. I believe we should not even entertain Philipps Brothers." Zubiri said.

The former assemblyman does not believe the Philippine export quota for the U.S. market would be increased, despite a proposal toward this end at the American Congress and vague promises made by U.S. administration officials. On the contrary, the Philippine quota is reportedly set for cutting from the current 220,000 metric tons to 108,000 metric tons next year Zubiri pointed out. He believes this projected drop in the U.S. quota is the result of a health consciousness campaign among advocates of corn and other vegetable-based synthetic sugar substitutes which they claim do not have the deleterious effect on the human body they attribute to crop sugar. "I believe the U.S. quota drop is not political," Zubiri said.

Three Philippine sugar planters' leaders left for the U.S. during the first week of the month were they are still lobbying for a sugar quota increase for the country.

Despite his projected higher demand in the European market for local cane sugar, Zubiri thinks "we should not produce more." Citing and estimated 1.4-million metric ton national sugar production this year, he believes there would be 180,000 to 200,000 metric tons in excess which could be sold to the Europeans after providing for the 900,000 to one-million metric ton domestic consumption and a "safe" margin to fill the U.S. quota.

Zubiri expressed support for government plans to rehabilitate the sugar milling sector which he believes would involve the closing of 10 to 15 of existing sugar mills. The remaining 26 "good mills" would then be able to operate at a higher capacity utilization rate (the utilization rate has plunged from a high of 2.3 million metric tons to the expected 1.4 million this year) to meet current production levels which he said should be maintained at 1.1 to 1.6 million metric tons.

GOVERNMENT PLANS 110 BILLION PESO 'GROWTH' BUDGET

[By Conrado R. Banal III]

[Text] The Aquino government, under pressure from the International Monetary Fund (IMF) to finalize its 1986 budget, is eyeing expenditures totaling P110 billion for this year, or about 36 percent more than P80 billion the Marcos government spent last year. Sources in the government disclosed yesterday that the budget committee, which President Aquino assigned to revise the Marcos government's budget for 1986, is recommending a "growth" budget to stimulate business through government spendings.

But this plan, if implemented, would force the government to impose new taxes, thus breaking the Aquino government's declared policy of not increasing taxes.

The sources said the budget committee is also recommending that the government should raise more revenues to help finance such a growth budget. The plan is to generate about P83 billion in government revenues this year, or 22 percent more than the P67.7-billion revenues last year. If the government could raise that much this year, its budget deficit -- the spendings its revenues cannot cover -- will go down to about P26 billion. Such a deficit level can pave the way for the IMF's approval of a new standby credit line for the Philippines which the Aquino government has been seeking the past three months.

Government estimates showed that without new tax measures, the growth budget of P110 billion this year can inflate the deficit to betwen P35 and P38 billion. The IMF is against such a huge budget deficit. In fact, the IMP and government still have to discuss further the revised 1986 budget and the tax measures needed to finance it, before the Philippines can submit its economic program to the Fund's board for approval. A source said the discussions are scheduled to start this week.

If these talks go smoothly, the government can expect to resume negotiations with the IMF for the standby credit line by mid-July. The IMF grant of this credit line will mean dollars will flow into the Philippines and that the Fund approves of the country's economic program. The government needs this approval to pursue talks with its creditor-banks abroad.

Many in the business sector believe that the IMF approves of government spending to stimulate the depressed economy. They noted for instance that business is wary of investing at this time and that the government is the only sector which can spend for construction projects. The revised 1986 budget allocates some P17 billion for capital expenditures, or almost double the P8.8 billion earmarked for this purpose last year, the sources said. The Aquino government's economic planners want the increase in capital expenditures to stimulate demand. The plan is to spend for construction to create jobs particularly in the rural areas and the agricultural sector, sources said.

The revised budget sets government spendings for maintenance and operations, such as salaries and repair of roads, at P21 billion -- about 60 percent more than P13 billion last year. It for instance wants to increase the salaries of public school teachers, soldiers and policemen.

The government actually does not have to finance the entire P26-billion projected budget deficit for 1986. Sources disclosed that the economic support fund (ESF) from the United States, which the Philippines books as rental for the U .S. military bases here, will cover roughly P4 billion of the deficit. The ESF this year amounts to about $200 million. The government therefore has to seek financing for only P22 billion of the projected budget deficit. President Aquino's policy is to cover this gap through foreign aid and concessional loans.

This amount however is still larger than the expected $1 billion in foreign funding. But the government, during the World Bank-sponsored consultative group meeting held in Tokyo last week, got some $770 million in loan and aid commitments.

Getting additional funding from abroad therefore remains the government's main problem in pursuing its growth budget. Crucial to its solution is this week's government-IMF talks on the revised budget and new tax measures. Sources said the World Bank subcommittee for the Philippine consultative group has agreed to "consider" giving the Aquino government additional funding as soon as the government and the IMF agree on the revised budget and tax measures.

GORBACHEV PROPOSES 'RECIPROCAL' VISITS TO GRAVES

[Text] Tokyo, June 6 KYODO -- Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has proposed reciprocal visits by Japanese and Russians to each other's country in connection with a Japanese request for resumption of visits to graves on four disputed islands off Hokkaido, Foreign Ministry officials said Friday. A high-ranking Foreign Ministry official said that Japan-Soviet negotiations on the issue in Moscow are reaching "a crucial stage," with Japan seeking a resumption of such visits to the Soviet-controlled islands this summer.

Gorbachev made the fresh proposal in a meeting with Japanese Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe in the Soviet capital May 30. During the meeting, Japanese officials said, Abe renewed a Japanese request for resumption of visits by former Japanese residents to their ancestral graves on the "northern territories," taken over by Soviet troops in the closing days of World War II.

Japan, which claims the right over the islands, has urged the Soviet Union to permit Japanese to pay homage to their ancestors without visa requirements, which were imposed in 1976 by the Soviets. The Gorbachev proposal calls for reciprocity over the issue and requests Japan to allow Soviets to visit ancestral graves in Japan.

SOVIET CARRIER MINSK SEEN SAILING NEAR HOKKAIDO

[Text] Tokyo, June 6 KYODO -- Soviet aircraft carrier Minsk was seen crusing in Soya Strait between Hokkaido and Sakhalin Friday morning, the Defense Agency said. At 5:30 a.m., a Maritime Self Defence Force vessel from Ominato in Aomori Prefecture saw the Kiev-class, 37,100-ton Minsk, cruising eastward in the strait, accompanied by two destroyers and an intelligence collecting vessel, the agency said.

The Minsk may be headed for the Okhotsk Sea north of Hokkaido for maneuvers, the agency said. This is the ninth time Minsk was seen near the Japanese coast since 1979, the Defense Agency said.

VISITING ROK GROUP: TALKS WITH NORTH MAY RESUME

[Text] Tokyo, June 5 KYODO -- South Korea's economic, Red Cross and parliamentary talks with North Korea may be resumed later this year, South Korean officials predicted here Thursday. They made the prediction during Japan-South Korea high-level consultations at the Foreign Ministry, a Japanese Foreign Ministry official said.

The communist North suspended dialogue with the South in protest against a United States - ROK military exercise earlier this year. North Korea, the South Korean officials said, "is closely following developments" in South Korea. The suspended talks between the two divided states may be resumed "within this year at the earliest," the visiting officials were quoted as saying.

The South Korean delegation to the Tokyo meeting, led by Pak Su-kil, assistant foreign minister for political affairs, said that Seoul expects Pyongyang to respond to a South Korean proposal on the 1988 Seoul Olympics during an International Olympic Committee meeting in Lausanne, Switzerland June 10-11. South Korea has expressed readiness to accept North's proposals for holding some of the Olympic events in the northern half if North Korea accepts the IOC's awarding the 1988 Olympiad to Seoul.

Shinichi Yanai, deputy foreign minister for political affairs, led the Japanese group to the daylong meeting, the third of its kind after the two previous consultations in March 1984 and April 1985. The Japanese delegation emphasized the importance of promoting North-South dialogue and the Seoul Olympics' success to ease tension on the Korean peninsula, the Japanese ministry official told reporters.

The South Korean officials warned that the strengthening of relations between North Korea and the Soviet Union is having "a negative effect" on South Korea's security, according to the Japanese official. The official quoted the visiting South Koreans as "voicing very grave concern" about the growing ties between the two countries.

The South Koreans made the assessment when the Japanese officials explained Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe's recent visit to the Soviet Union from where he returned with Soviet observations that the North Koreans have not changed their stand on the question of United Nations membership and the Seoul Olympics. The South Korean delegation also speculated that close tripartite ties among the United States, Japan and South Korea have induced the Soviets to pay greater attention to Asian affairs, officials said.

The Japanese officials also said that Abe will outline Japan's views regarding falling prices of primary products, and failure of economic policies and political instability in developing countries in Asia during his visit to the Philippines later this month.

Abe will hold talks with his counterparts from member countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and their dialogue partners, including the U.S., and also confer with Philippine President Corazon Aquino.

PHILIPPINE VICE PRESIDENT LAUREL INTERVIEWED

OW051421 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 1205 GMT 5 Jun 86

[Interview with Philippine Vice President Salvador Laurel by NHK newscaster Taro Kimura -- recorded; time and place of interview not given; interview conducted in English with Japanese translations provided in subtitles; following is from the English version]

[Text] [Kimura] Mr Vice President, this is the 100th day since you took over the power and Mrs Aquino, I understand, rated her achievement as 85 points. Do you share the same rating?

[Laurel] I would give her even higher than 85. She is modest. You see, talking into account the circumstances under which we took over the new government, it was very difficult taking over without benefit of a formal turnover. You see, Mr Marcos just left abruptly and we had to take over under revolutionary circumstances, and under those circumstances I would give President Cory Aquino even a higher grade.

[Kimura] What is the minus, if there is any?

[Laurel] I think the minus is the insurgency. We have three groups trying to destabilize the government. There is the NPA, or the communists, then there is the Muslim National Liberation Front, and there are some recalcitrant groups identified with the loyalist group of Mr Marcos. Those three groups are somewhat lowering the percentage of the new government.

[Kimura] How about, sir, some friction within the government between Unido [United Nationalist Democratic Organization] and Laban [Lakas ng Bayan] and maybe other forces.

[Laurel] Oh, that is exaggerated. There is really no frication between the Unido and the other groups that supported Mrs Cory Aquino and myself. President Cory Aquino and I are completely in accord with many things and we have no problem talking to each other. Probably in the lower level, there might be some....

[Kimura] You mentioned your relation with President Aquino. Observing the government, I had an impression that you take care more of the details of the administrative function and Mrs Aquino appears in more ceremonial occasions. Is she a symbolic figure?

[Laurel] No. Not really. She is doing a lot of hard work also. It is just that the people are not used to a woman president. That's probably why. They have....

[Kimura] Even the Filipinos. [laughter]

[Laurel] Yes, even Filipinos in a way because she is the first woman president that we have had.

[Kimura] Yes.

[Laurel] But she is dong a lot of work and she is working very hard going through papers, and you can imagine the staggering problems that have gathered together after the previous government left us. They left us with a terrific amount of debt and then this insurgency problem and, of course, the demoralization that was left behind when Mr Marcos left. Like we have to now start completely new with a new constitution, a new government, and an economic recovery program--all of this is a little bit too heavy for a new government that is only 101 days old.

[Kimura] You mentioned a new constitution. I understand that the power of the presidency is the very focus of the new constitution. Would you like to see the new constitution like the one of 1935 -- your father drafted it, I understand. Would you like to give the president that much power?

[Laurel] Well, I don't want to unduly influence the Constitution Commission that is now at work, but I have my own personal opinion. And I am speaking as Salvador Laurel as a Filipino citizen and I personally prefer a return to the presidential system. It is the system that our people understand, and, I think, prefer. They would, of course, want to have a government that they understand. It is they want to vote directly for the president, and they want a 6-year term, I believe, without re-election. Also, they want a separation of power so that the powers of government are not concentrated in one person, like what happened under Mr Marcos. Too much concentration of power was not good.

[Kimura] Do you mean like the American president?

[Laurel] Yes. A slight difference because the U.S. Government has no limitation as to the term of the president. I think they are entitled to two terms. Whereas in the case of this government that we are fashioning, it is just a single term of 6 years without....

[Kimura] No re-election.

[Laurel] No re-election.

[Kimura] Mrs Aquino already stated publicly that she will run, or rather, govern only one term. Will you take over the presidency after that?

[Laurel] I cannot say that. It will depend on the people. If the people want me, I cannot refuse.

[Kimura] There is also, or rather, a rumor that there was an agreement that you will succeed the presidency after Mrs Aquino.

[Laurel] Well, that was a rumor. [laughter] But we did talk about it before. But it is something that we really never formalized.

[Kimura] I see. Now the relation between the Philippines and Japan. I think, the economic problem is the major issue. Have you had any favorable response from the Japanese government personnel over new loan business.

[Laurel] Yes, yes. I spent the last 2 days talking to your officials in the government, including the private sector, and the response of the Japanese government officials and the private sector has been very encouraging. It is very clear that now I have made my presentation they now understand the Philippine situation and they have indicated their readiness to give substantial and concrete help.

[Kimura] One fear that the Japanese businessmen -- and it is not only Japanese businessmen but other businessmen too -- have it, is that the Philippines may repudiate some of the loans at the time of Mr Marcos. Will she?

[Laurel] -- No. The cabinet has been meeting on that, but I personally believe that we must respect and honor our debts, our foreign debts. Even if it takes 100 years, we must pay. It is painful because we know that it was just squandered by the Marcos regime. We will honor our debt; we will pay. The only thing we are trying to work out is that we would like to have more reasonable terms of payment, maybe lower rates of interest and longer period within which to pay within our capability.

[Kimura] Now, before the economic problem is, how do you say, resolved, the criminals (?have been) going back and forth freely between our two nations, both Filipinos and Japanese, and we are having one trouble right now. So you have any suggestion to cope with those international criminals.

[Laurel] Oh, definitely. We are against crime and criminality. That is something that we subscribe to universally. And the way to solve that is to enforce the laws strictly. It is a matter of enforcing the law; there are already laws that can and should be applied. It is a matter of enforcement. And at the same time we are going to assure all those who may be accused of violating the law of due process of law. They will have every opportunity to defend themselves.

[Kimura] Thank you very much Mr Vice President. I hope you have a pleasant stay (?and go) safely back to your country.

[Laurel] Thank you. I appreciate it.

ABE, INDONESIAN ECONOMICS MINISTER DISCUSS AID

[Text] Tokyo, June 6 KYODO -- Ali Wardhana, Indonesia's economics, finance and industry minister, sought an increase in Japanese economic assistance in a meeting Friday with Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe. Abe told Wardhana the Japanese Government will "positively respond" to the Indonesian request, a Foreign Ministry official said.

Wardhana explained Indonesia's financial difficulties caused by falling prices of oil and primary goods. His visit was part of the preparations for a meeting of the Intergovernmental Group on Indonesia (IGGI) in the Hague on June 18-19.

Japan, which pledged 75.4 billion yen in aid to Indonesia in fiscal 1985, plans to boost financial assistance during the current fiscal year for a city transport project in Jakarta and other infrastructure projects, said another Foreign Ministry official. The upcoming IGGI meeting will be attended by aid experts from Japan, the United States, France and other West European countries as well as from the Asian Development Bank, the World Bank and several other international organizations.

The Foreign Ministry official in charge of Japan's Official Development Assistance (ODA) said Indonesia is experiencing a budgetary squeeze as oil revenues account for 70 percent of the nation's budget. Japan has been providing Indonesia with financial aid mainly for road, port, railway, irrigation and other infrastructure projects.

SOUTH SECURITY COMMAND EXAMINER DEFECTS TO DPRK

[Text] Pyongyang June 5 (KCNA) -- Mun Yong-pin (56), director of the Overseas Affairs Headquarters of the Tongil Technical Company and special examiner of the puppet Security Command of South Korea, came over to the northern half of the Republic.

Mun hails from Kumgok-dong, east district of Inchon. After finishing the primary school and middle school course in Inchon, he worked at the Policy Institute directly under the speaker of the puppet National Assembly and then as official of the Inchon branch of the secret party department of the South Korean "Liberal Party", planning coordinator of the puppet embassy in Japan, permanent director of the Chinhung Company of the South Korean Minor Enterprises and director of the Overseas Affairs Headquarters of the Tongil Technical Company. He had once worked as simultaneous interpretor at the criminal "talks" held between Japan and South Korea. He had long been engaged in overseas secret intelligence work as a special examiner of the puppet Security Command.

Explaining the motive of his coming over to the North he said: On account of my occupation, I had lived in various countries. In this period I made a comparison with deep thought between the totally different realities of the North and the South and came to be convinced that the society of the North where state affairs are administered with main emphasis on the masses is a place of life to be chosen and sincerely desired and expected by our nation. Mun Yong-pin continued: Though belated, I, as a member of the nation, came to have an ardent desire to be taken into the bosom of the republic where the great President Kim Il-song and the dear leader Mr. Kim Chong-il whom our nation holds in high esteem and the world people respect administer affairs of state.

[Text] Moscow June 4 (KCNA) -- Salamat Mukashev, vice-president of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, in Moscow in June 4 met Han Tok-su, chairman of the Central Standing Committee of the General Association of Korean Residents in Japan (Chongnyon), on a goodwill visit to the Soviet Union. He said that the friendly relations between the USSR and Korea have rapidly developed and strengthened in a broad and profound way since the official goodwill visit of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to the Soviet Union in May 1984.

Referring to the activities and role of Chongnyon, he pointed out that Chongnyong was waging a vigorous struggle for peace and security in Japan and in the Asian and pacific region and playing an important role in uniting the Koreans residing in Japan under the banner of the DPRK.

Pointing to the question of Korean reunification, he said: The U.S. forces must be withdrawn from South Korea at once. The Soviet Union has always supported and will resolutely support in the future, too, the struggle of the Korean people to reunify the country on a peaceful and democratic basis. A friendly atmosphere prevailed in the conversation.

JSP'S ISHIBASHSI VIEWS DPRK ART TROUPE IN JAPAN

[Text] Tokyo June 4 (KNS-KCNA) -- The Pyongyang School Children's Art Troupe gave the premiere in Tokyo on the evening of June 2 amid great expectation and interests of Japanese people and Koreans in Japan. The performance grasped the hearts of the audience from the beginning and made the hall overflow with unbounded emotion and excitement.

Masashi Ishibashi, chairman of the Central Executive Committee of the Japan Socialist Party, said: In Korea the state takes upon itself the responsibility to bring the talent of children into full bloom. This is wonderful, indeed.

The Japan Socialist Party has briskly conducted cultural exchange between Japan and Korea in the past. It will make efforts for the normalisation of interchange in many fields, beside cultural exchange, in the future. I extend greetings to President Kim Il-song and His Excellency Kim Chong-il for sending such excellent art troupe to Japan.

Yoshihisa Kajitani, director general of the Japan-Korea Cultural Interchange Association, said: The performance showed well the worthwhile life of the children of the DPRK, thereby greatly impressing Koreans in Japan. This year is an "International Year of Peace". The United States is bringing battleships to Japan. But Korea has dispatched such excellent cultural mission. This proves that the DPRK desires peace. Masako Ishii, professor at Shoka University, said the performance touched the right chord in the hearts of a large audience because each number of the program carried high ideological and artistic value.

Sumiko Shimizu, chairman of the Japan Women's Association, said: Korean children could present a wonderful performance of high artistic plane by fully displaying their talent. They owe this to the wise leadership of President Kim Il-song. Korea must be reunified at an early date.

KIM IL-SONG PRAISED FOR GUIDANCE TO CHILDREN

[Text] Pyongyang June 5 (KCNA) -- June 6 this year is the 40th anniversary of the founding of the Korean Children's Union (June 6, 1946). On this significant day, the people look back on the kindness shown by the great leader President Kim Il-song and dear Comrade Kim Chong-il for the preschool and school children and students.

President Kim Il-song spares nothing for the younger generation, regarding them as the valuable treasure of the country. Ever since the liberation he has shown all solicitude for them to clothe them better. Even in the postwar period when the country was in a difficult situation he saw to it that clothes for children and students were made well preferentially and supplied at cheap prices lower than the production cost. And when the economic foundation of the country was consolidated with the progress of socialist construction he gave instructions to supply clothes with 30-60 percent of their prices paid by the state or free.

This deep love and care of the great leader President Kim Il-song has been succeeded wholly by Comrade Kim Chong-il to reach the younger generation with greater warmth. Saying nothing should be grudged for the rising generation, he showed meticulous care for them, disbursing a huge amount of state's fund for them.

On April holiday, the greatest national fete, he supplied clothes, shoes, candy and school things to all children and students across the country at a time on the same day,

Whenever he provides them with clothes, he personally examines their designs and takes steps to secure necessary raw and other materials of best quality. And he personally chose the styles, variety and color so as to make beautiful clothes of diverse styles suited to the tastes of the modern times. The sweaters supplied to the school children and students numbering several million were measured so that the clothes may fit them well. Amid this warm care the Korean children and students are growing to be reliable workers for the country.

CHON'S MEETING WITH YI MIN-U U.S. SCENARIO

[NODONG SINMUN 5 June commentary: "The Dictator Behind a Mask"

[Text] There was a tete-a-tete between Chon Tu-hwan and Yi Min-u, president of the NKDP, in Chongwadae on 3 June. The main point of the discussion at this meeting was a series of problems concerning constitutional revision.

The Chongwadae spokesman explained that this tete-a-tete was the first of its kind since Chon Tu-hwan took power and that this shows his determination to realize the politics of dialogue. However, the result of the meeting shows that this was a lie.

Chon Tu-hwan, a vicious military fascist dictator, has been wielding bayonets since the first day of his taking power, making it his way of existence to suppress the South Korean students, people, opposition parties, off-stage opposition forces, and even religionists.

The fact that such a person appeared on the tete-a-tete stage does not signify any change in his fascist nature; rather, it is a sign that the dictator's position has become very difficult and precarious. Traitor Chon Tu-hwan is forsaken and rejected at home and abroad now. He is raving about a peaceful transfer of power in 1988, but the people are waging a stubborn struggle, demanding that he immediately step down.

Because of the anti-U.S. and antifascist demonstration of the students and the people, which is becoming more vigorous with each passing day, the colonial military facist dictatorship in South Korea is being shaken at its very root. This situational background itself realistically proves that the tete-a-tete was not the expression of some leniency of Chon Tu-hwan but a product of his desperate attempt to extricate himself from a crisis in his rule.

History shows that no dictator has given the people a gift of democracy. Although the Chon Tu-hwan clique mentioned a grand mutual concession and politics of dialogue on that day, he, in fact, totally rejected the assertions of the president of the opposition party. He said that, as to the demand for a revision of the Constitution for a direct election system, he cannot tell anyone to do this or that, and that, therefore, it should be based on a national agreement. He said that, as to the question of releasing the detainees and of amnesty and restoration of civil rights, the enforcement of law should be abided by and that as to the release of Mun Ik-hwan, there is no room for any discussion as the investigation is still going on. He even threatened, babbling about the relations between the NKDP and a procommunist and leftist group, that the NKDP should not cooperate with the group.

The constitutional revision for a direct election system, release of detainees, and amnesty and restoration of civil rights, are not only the assertions of the NKDP but also the demand of the entire South Korean people. Whereas he said that a constitutional revision should come about on the basis of national agreement, he is avoiding the answer to the people's demand for a constitutional revision for a direct election system and is raving that the constitutional revision itself should come about through an agreement of both the ruling and opposition parties. What is the reason for this? As for the question of releasing the detainees and of amnesty restoration of civil rights, why is the attempting to embellish the present situation of suppression, mentioning the current law?

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan is attempting to have the discussion of constitutional revision made in the National Assembly in which the DJP has the majority seats, ignoring the demand of the opposition party. As for the question of law which traitor Chon Tu-hwan holds up as an excuse in connection with the issue of releasing the detainees, it is an evil fascist law designed to legitimatize and prolong the dictator's rule, trampling on the people's elementary democratic freedom and rights.

Therefore, the meeting on that day was nothing but to say that the assertions of the ruling party DJP should be followed and that the existing legal system should be abided by, although traitor Chon Tu-hwan babbled about grand mutual concession and politics of dialogue.

The true objective of their politics of dialogue and grand mutual concession is to suppress the students and the opposition forces with violence outside the National Assembly and to equivocate the opposition party's assertions for constitutional revision for a direct election system through empty talk in the National Assembly. The double nature of the dictator which is more cunning than a fox and more wicked and treacherous and cruel than a wolf has been thoroughly exposed.

The manipulator of the Chon Tu-hwan ring's grandmutual concession and politics of dialogue is the United States. Traitor Chon Tu-hwan merely danced to the tune of the scenario written by the United States to prevent South Korea from becoming another Philippines and to maintain the colonial military fascist dictatorship. However, the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan ring will gain nothing from it. The South Korean people are well aware that unless the colonial fascist rule of the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan ring is brought to an end, they can realize neither independence nor democracy. They, therefore, are advancing, holding aloft the banner of the anti-U.S. and antidictatorship struggle despite the fascist hangmen's deceptive tactics and violence of bayonets. The U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan ring should clearly know this and had better not engage in such futile mischief.

CHON'S SUPPRESSION OF MINTONGNYON DENOUNCED

[Commentary by station commentator Cho Tu-ul: "The Last-ditch Maneuvers of Those Who Are Nearing Their Last Minute"]

[Text] The fascist Chon Tu-hwan clique's suppression of a South Korean off-stage democratic organization, the United Mass Movement for Democratization and unification [Mintongnyon], is becoming more wicked. According to news reports, at dawn on 1 June, the fascist clique committed a violent act of mounting a surprise raid on the Mintongnyon office and houses of the organization's cadre members and then of confiscating books and other materials related to their activity.

Prior to this, the fascist clique placed in the hands of the prosecutor's office Rev Mun Ik-hwan, chairman of the Mintongnyon, whom they took into custody on the grounds that he had delivered a speech at Seoul National Unversity's [SNU] "May Festival" held by students to commemorate those who were sacrificed during the Kwangju popular uprising and to whom it applied fascist evil laws.

It is also well known that the fascist clique has put on a wanted list many members of this organization on charges of their involvement in the Inchon demonstration incident. This demonstrates how viciously the puppets are maneuvering to break up the Mintongnyon and to repress and obliterate the organization's members, including its chairman Rev Mun Ik-hwan. This is an intolerable criminal act. The harsh suppression of this organization's members, including Rev Mun Ik-hwan, by the puppet clique, which regards the Mintongnyon as a thorn in the side, on the grounds that it had controlled somebody from behind the scenes or that it had been involved in an antistate incitement, is totally unfair and unjust.

The fascist clique's charges that Rev Mun Il-hwan's speech at the SNU was an agitation and that his call in the past for the withdrawal of U.S. troops constituted an antistate act of sedition are indeed violent acts that can be committed only by such a group of traitors as the Chon Tu-hwan ring.

As is known, the South Korean people have suffered all sorts of misery and misfortune for nearly 40 years under the fascist colonial rule imposed by the U.S. imperialists and the puppet clique. In South Korea, which has been converted into a total U.S. colony, military base, and a nuclear base, people are now on the verge of a danger where they can be turned into victims of the U.S. imperialists' proxy war and a nuclear war.

Under such circumstances, how can anyone who has conscience and who loves the country and his fellow countrymen sit idly by and do nothing? Nevertheless, the fascist clique has not only taken into custody Rev Mun Ik-hwan, who has done nothing but tell the truth, on sedition charges, but it is also now trying to punish him even by extending the prison term it had handed down to him at the time of the 17 May violence in 1980. This is nothing but a wicked trick to bury him, a man nearing his seventies, politically, forever. There is no doubt as to why the fascist clique is now wickedly suppressing the Mintongnyon and its members.

The anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle for independence and democratization is being vigorously staged in South Korea by the youths, students, and people of all walks of life. The people's mass advance against foreign forces and fascism and for independence and democratization is now making the puppet clique extremely terrified and uneasy, while leading South Korea to the state of another Philippines. Perplexed by this, the fascist clique is now harshly suppressing the Mintongnyon, foremost among the organizations engaged in the struggle for democratization, with an aim to eliminate it, on various preposterous charges, while seeking to put down the flames of the aspirations for independence and democratization, which are spreading like a brush fire on the prairie, and to prolong its stay in power by bringing the crisis facing its rule under control.

Such a scheme, however, is nothing but a last-ditch struggle of those who are nearing their end. Bayonet-wielding suppression is not a panacea and it alone cannot stop the righteous advance of the South Korean youths, students, and people who are now defying death. The puppet clique's tyrannical and lawless suppression will, rather, only bring about a consequence like adding oil to burning fire.

The fascist Chon Tu-hwan clique should stop the tyrannical and reckless suppression at once and set free without delay and conditions all the people it unjustly imprisoned. If the puppets continue to devote themselves to the violent suppressive maneuvers in defiance of public opinion at home and abroad, they will never be able to avoid the people's grave judgment.

SKNDF SLOGANS FOR ANTI-U.S. STRUGGLE VIEWED

SK050849 (Clandestine) Voice of National Salvation in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 30 May 86

[Roundtable talk among Madame Yun Chong-won, Ko Il-chol, and moderator Min Hye-kyong, from the "Feature Program" segment: "The Milestone for Saving the Country"]

[Text] [Min Hye-kyong] We are gathered here to discuss slogans calling for the anti-U.S. struggle -- slogans issued on 28 March this year by the Central Committee of the South Korean National Democratic Front [SKNDF]. [passage indistinct] I would like to discuss the anti-U.S. nature of [words indistinct]

[Madam Yun Chong-won] I would like to speak first. I believe that in order to overcome the erroneous situation of South Korean society running counter to the age of independence, the SKNDF has issued slogans calling for waging a national struggle.

In other words, these slogans were issued, reflecting the desire and aspiration of our South Korean people to end the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule in South Korea and to achieve independence in society, democratic development, and the country's reunification. As is known, the world is now advancing toward confronting colonialism and toward achieving independence, peace, and democracy. South Korea is traversing the road of running counter to the requirements of the contemporary era.

[Ko Il-chol] South Korea is still under U.S. domination as the sole colonial tributary state in Asia, running counter to the trend for independence. U.S. colonial rule has forced immeasurable suffering and misfortunes on our people. The sovereignty of the people has been mercilessly trampled underfoot, and medieval militarist fascist rule has been maintained in South Korea coercively under the instigation of the United States. At the same time, the danger of nuclear disasters and the perpetual division of the people has increased, incurring the resentment and resistance of our people. As a result, South Korea has been turned into a zone in which confrontation between independence and contrtol, between democracy and fascism, and between patriotism and treachery has become very acute.

[Min] In order to overcome the difficult situation, which has reached its zenith, and to make a breakthrough for saving the country, the SKNDF has issued slogans for waging the struggle at present. I believe that the SKNDF's slogans calling for the struggle at present are a milestone iluminating a straight road toward overcoming the difficult situation that has developed in South Korea today.

[Yun] That is right. The SKNDF's slogans calling for waging the struggle at present clearly indicate the direction in which to wage the anti-U.S. and antidictatorial struggle and to achieve the country's reunification. These slogans clearly set the goal that our people should achieve to wage the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle and to achieve the country's reunification. These slogans clearly set the goal that our people should achieve to wage the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle and to achieve the country's reunification. These slogans also indicate the direction of the action people from all walks of life should take to win victory in this struggle.

[Ko] The SKNDF's slogans calling for waging the struggle at present contain such anti-U.S. fighting slogans as "South Korea is a U.S. colony," "Let us carry out an anti-U.S. movement to achieve national liberation," and "Let us bring U.S. colonial rule to an end and achieve national sovereignty." The anti-U.S. fighting slogans issued by our SKNDF intensively reflect the unanimous desire and will of the South Korean people to bring an end to U.S. colonial rule over South Korea and restore the sovereignty of the people. The slogans state that the anti-U.S. struggle alone is the true way to revive the people and to save the country.

[Yun] As is known, for our people, there is no more urgent struggle than the anti-U.S. struggle to oppose U.S. colonial rule over South Korea. U.S. colonial rule has brought the tragedy of division of our people. In order to restore sovereignty and to free themselves from the iron shackles of colonialism, our people should bring U.S. colonial rule over South Korea to an end. Thus, they can revive the people and make a breakthrough for the people.

Because of this, in its fighting slogans at present, the SKNDF has regarded the anti-U.S. struggle as a primary fighting task of our people and has called for restoring national sovereignty usurped by the United States, for achieving economic self-reliance and wholesome cultural development, for the withdrawal of U.S. forces, and for resolutely waging an antiwar and antinuclear movement. I believe that one of the important questions in opposing U.S. colonial rule is to vigorously carry out a movement to force the withdrawal of all nuclear weapons deployed by the United States in this land.

[Ko] Because of this, the SKNDF has designated antinuclear fighting slogans saying, "U.S. nuclear umbrella will cause the people to perish," "Let us remove nuclear weapons," and "Let us prevent nuclear disasters through an antiwar, antinuclear, and peace movement" as fighting slogans at present. For our South Korean people, vigorously carrying out an antinuclear movement is a most important question that is directly linked to the destiny of the people. In other words, checking and foiling the U.S. policy for a nuclear war is a very important question in saving the people from nuclear disasters. As is known, having deployed more than 1,000 various nuclear weapons in this land, the United States has annually staged such experimental nuclear war exercises as "Team Spirit" by deploying in South Korea hundreds of thousands of troops and great quantities of sophisticated military hardware. Thus, it has been hellbent on carrying out maneuvers to provoke a nuclear war, a new aggressive war, on the Korean peninsula. If a war breaks out on the Korean peninsula by the United States, it will easily expand to a thermonuclear war on a worldwide scale. If the situation develops this way, our land will be reduced to ashes, and our people will suffer immeasurable disasters.

[Yun] Although the U.S. aggressors and the Chon Tu-hwan faction, a group of their stooges, have boisterously babbled about the U.S. nuclear umbrella, this is an anachronistic idea. Common sense dictates that nuclear weapons are not monopolized by someone and that disasters from these weapons will not be limited to one party. In particular, nuclear weapons throughout the world are aimed at the nuclear bases of the opposite side. If a nuclear war is touched off in this situation, retaliatory nuclear missiles are destined to fall where nuclear missiles are launched. Preemptive nuclear strike bases are destined to become the targets of nuclear attack. Under such circumstances, U.S. nuclear protection is meaningless. In this context, U.S. nuclear protection is nothing but sweet words designed to deceive the South Korean people into sacrificing themselves for U.S. interests.

[Min] Because of this, students and the people from all walks of life are opposing the U.S. policy of a nuclear war against South Korea, shouting, "The United States must withdraw nuclear weapons," and "Let us carry out an antiwar and antinuclear movement." I believe that responding to this, all the people should carry out an antiwar and antinuclear war on a pan-national scale so that they can save the people from the danger of nuclear disasters. I also believe that the SKNDF's fighting slogans at present reflect the desire and will of our people to enjoy democratic freedom by extricating themselves from military and fascist dictatorship.

[Ko] That is right. Reflecting the desire to bury the Chon Tu-hwan military and dictatorial system and to achieve the people's freedom and democratic rights, the SKNDF's fighting slogans at present read, "We will never tolerate the Chon Tu-hwan military dictatorial system that has turned its back on the people," "Let us bury military dictatorship," "We cannot live without freedom," and "Let us revise the Constitution and replace the regime." I believe that these slogans are just, correctly reflection the South Korean situation and the will and desire of the people. As is known, ending fascist rule in South Korea and achieving democracy there pose very urgent questions. As a matter of fact, there is no country on earth in which brutal military and fascist rule has been maintained like in South Korea.

[Yun] So our masses are struggling against fascist rule to regain democratic freedom and rights in defiance of death. The Chon Tu-hwan group should step down from power at an early date as demanded by our people.

[Min] However, instead of stepping down from power as demanded unanimously by our people, the dictator Chon Tu-hwan is now harshly suppressing the righteous masses who have risen in the antifascist resistance struggle, while craftilyu scheming to divide and subvert the patriotic antifascist forces.

I believe the ultimate objective behind this act is to deceive people and to achieve its ambitions to prolong its stay in power and perpetuate the division under the mask of the 1986 Asian Games and 1988 Olympics. At the same time, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is now scheming to divide and subvert the democratic and patriotic forces as our masses' anti-U.S. and antigovernment struggle surges forward and as the movement for the collection of signatures for constitutional revision enters an earnest stage, while babbling about the deceptive theory of revising the Constitution.

Our masses should never let themselves be deceived by this and instead should strive to achieve the unity among the antifascist democratic forces and to make them take concerted action.

[Yun] Our masses should pay greater attention to unity of the democratic antifascist force and make sure that they take concerted action. Also, by launching the movement of collecting signatures for the constitutional revision as a pan-national movement, they should frustrate and smash the Chon Tu-hwan ring's maneuvers to prolong its stay in power and perpetuate the division, at all costs, through a vigorous antidictatorial struggle.

[Min] Even though the struggle of our masses against fascism and for democratization is now undergoing difficulties, it will triumph in the end. I am also convinced that a new spring of democracy will come around us without fail.

I understand that the SKNDF slogans for immediate struggle clearly state the position and role of the masses of all walks of life as well as their tasks in the struggle for independence, democratization, and reunification.

[Ko] The SKNDF slogans for immediate struggle contain what the masses of all walks of life, including youths, students, workers, peasants, fishermen, the urban poor, unemployed masses, small- and medium-size industrialists, intellectuals, men and officers of the South Korean Army, and even religious personages, should do in the struggle.

The portion of the slogans that deals with the position and role of the youths and students in the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle includes the following slogans "Youths and students are the main force of the anti-U.S. national liberation movement," "Let us uplift higher the beacon of the nation, masses, and democratization," "The masses' expectations are high," and "Let us courageously produce breakthroughs for the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle."

[Yun] I believe that the masses have great expectation from the youth and students who are seething with justice are sensitive to new things, and are enterprising. The youths and students should commit themselves more vigorously to the struggle for the national liberation and democratization of society in league with various forces, raising higher the banner of anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle. At the same time, they should also continue their struggle for freedom on the campus, the reform of the current system, and for the release of the imprisoned patriotic students, while opposing [words indictinct].

I believe it is important for the youths and students to take concerted action in their joint struggle of all the students in order to realize the Sammin idea [unification of the nation, the liberation of the masses, and realization of democracy] transcending [word indistinct] of the masses of all walks of life.

Also, I believe that not only should they be on their guard against the rulers' scheme to divide and subvert the student movement, but they should also crush such a scheme and realize the federation of the workers and students.

[Ko] The SKNDF slogans also presented tasks that the masses of all walks of life, including the workers and peasants, whould carry out in their struggle. They include "Workers should wage a struggle for regaining their three labor rights by taking the lead in the struggle," "The peasants should struggle against imports of surplus U.S. agricultural products while engaged in the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle for national salvation for the nation and masses, for their own freedom, and for democratization, as well as their right to exist.

[Min] As is the case with all other forms of social movement, for our masses' anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle to triumph, it is of great importance for them to unite in one force. What do you think?

As a matter of course, the masses' strength lies in unity. When they are united, the masses are indomitable. This has been proven by the history of the mass movement. For example, the downfalls of the Syngman Rhee and Pak Chong-hui dictatorships, the demise of the Pahlavi regime in Iran, I mean the Pahlavi monarch, and the toppling of the Marcos dictatorial regime in the Philippines, were all due to the united strength of the masses. This being the case, for our masses to achieve substantive triumphs in their anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle in which they are now engaged, they should stage the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle for national salvation on a pan-national scale by uniting firmly in one force under the banner of independence, democracy, and reunification.

[Min] Yes. I believe that our masses should advance tirelessly on the single road of national salvation in unity, transcending thoughts, ideologies, political views, religions, factions, and assertions. When they struggle in firm unity, they can be sure of their ultimate victory.

Thank you very much for your being with us.

ANNIVERSARY OF 3 JUNE UPRISING DISCUSSED

[NODONG SINMUN 3 June special article: "Struggle Is the Only Way to Independence, Democracy, and Reunification"]

[Text] Today marks the 22d anniversary of the 3 June uprising of the South Korean youths, students, and people.

Today, 22 years ago, the South Korean youths, students, and people launched a mass struggle, because they could not allow the scheme of the Japanese reactionaries and the puppet clique to expedite the conclusion of the criminal talks.

Turning out on the streets of resistance, the South Korean youths, students, and people shouted: "Let us smash Japanese militarism," "The United States, take off your mask," "The traitor who sells out the nation, resign," "Stop the operation to divide the nation." Countering the bestial oppression, they waged a gallant struggle.

The 3 June uprising of the South Korean youths, students, and people was the partiotic national salvation struggle to accelerate the new world of independence, democracy, and reunification by annihilating the foreign aggressors and the fascist nation-selling traitors.

However, the aspiration of the stugglers of the 3 June uprising to restore the dignity and sovereignty of the nation and to live in an independent and democratic world has not yet been realized. Because of the foreign forces' aggression and intervention and the traitors' nation-selling acts, which are being intensified with each passing day, the South Korean people's national dignity and sovereignty and their democratic freedom and rights are being trampled underfoot more miserably than 22 years ago.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: By perpetuating the division of our country and creating two Koreas, the U.S. imperialists are scheming to continue the occupation of South Korea and their subjugation over it, and the Japanese reactionaries are scheming to restore their old position of colonial rulers in South Korea.

The U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea is the cause of all national trials and tribulations being suffered by the South Korean people. For more than 40 years, the U.S. imperialists have occupied South Korea and acted as masters there, thus infringing upon the South Korean people's national dignity and sovereignty and imposing the miserable fate of colonial slavery on them.

Instead of withdrawing from South Korea in accordance with the unanimous demand of the whole nation and the peace-loving peoples of the world, the U.S. imperialists are furter intensifying their policy of occupation.

The U.S. imperialists, who masterminded the operation of the Kwangju massacre and, thus, killed thousands of our compatriots 6 years ago, are still driving forward the fascist Chon Tu-hwan clique in dyeing the plaza of the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle of the youths, students, and people with blood. The U.S. imperialists are breathing new life into the Chon Tu-hwan ring and are driving it forward in seeking the manuevers of the fascist suppression and war, and the perpetuation of the division.

The U.S. imperialists have deployed some 1,000 nuclear weapons in South Korea. They are annually staging nuclear war exercises and hatching a plot to continue to introduce new-type nuclear weapons. This is clear evidence that the U.S. imperialists are trying to use South Korea as a site of a nuclear war to bring all of Korea and Asia under their control. In addition to their miserable fate of colonial slavery, the South Korean people are now facing the tragic fate of a nuclear catastrophe.

Instigated by the U.S. imperialists and guided by the traitors, the Japanese reactionaries' schemes to invade South Korea again are becoming active. The force of the Japanese militarists, which is controlling the economy of South Korea, is sinking its talons deep into the political and military fields of South Korea.

At the summit of the seven Western industrial countries held some time ago, Japanese Prime Minister Nakasone blew the two-Korean bugle, emphasizing active support for the South Korean puppets. It is no secret that the Japanese reactionaries, on the pretext of economic aid, are continuing to offer enormous amounts of money to the puppets as military funds.

While the U.S. imperialists are accelerating the fabrication of the U.S.-Japan-South Korea triangular military alliance, the territorial waters of the Korean peninsula have been selected as an operational area of the Japanese Self-Defense Forces and the leaders of the South Korean and Japanese military circles frequently visit one another, military personnel are frequently exchanged, and joint exercises are frequently staged. This is a very dangerous development of the situation.

Because of the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique, the foreign forces, subjugation, aggression, and despotism over South Korea are being further promoted. In return for offering South Korean politics, economy, military and cultural affairs, and all other South Korean things completely to the U.S. and Japanese masters, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is maintaining the position of the stooge. The Chon Tu-hwan ring is a shock brigade to implement the U.S. imperialists' policy of two Koreas, it is a colonial cat's-paw, and a servant of war.

While the South Korean people are waging the anti-U.S. struggle, shouting "The United States, withdraw," the traitorous clique is talking about the so-called leading role of the United States and begging the U.S. forces not to withdraw from South Korea. At the same time, it is bestially suppressing the youths, students, and people who are waging the anti-U.S. struggle for independence.

The puppets' adulation and flattery to the Japanese reactionaries are also endlessly servile. Puppet Chon Tu-hwan visited the Japanese emperor and annulled the Japanese imperialists' unpardonable crime against Korea, committing the shamless act of inviting the Japanese crown prince to South Korea.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring is a puppy for the U.S. and Japanese aggressors, and a vicious wolf for the people. The Chon Tu-hwan ring is indeed a group of traitors worse than the five Ulsa traitors.

Because of the outrage of the foreign aggressors and because of the traitors' outrageous wielding of bayonets, not a day passes in peace for the South Korean people. The miserable South Korean situation is calling the people to struggle: "Overthrow the U.S. and Japanese imperialists," "Yankees, go home," and "Death to Chon Tu-hwan."

The South Korean youths, students, and people are resolutely turning out in the just struggle to overthrow the aggressors and traitors. This proceeds from the bloody lesson that only the pan-national struggle against oppression and subjugation can recover the lost national dignity and sovereignty. The South Korean people will deal a heavy blow to the aggressors and fascist traitors, and will certainly realize their aspiration for independence, democracy, and reunification.

OFFICIALS LEAVE FOR OLYMPICS TALKS WITH DPRK

[Text] Seoul, June 5 KYODO -- Top South Korean Olympic officials left here Wednesday night for Lausanne, Switzerland, to attend next week's North and South Korea sports talks on the Seoul Olympics in 1988. The six-member delegation, headed by Kim Chong-ha, president of the South Korean Olympic Committee, will have a series of dialogues with parties concerned before the official talks on June 10 and 11 -- the third such meeting under the auspices of the International Olympic Committee (IOC). The delegates are scheduled to meet Juan Antonio Samaranch of Spain, president of the IOC Saturday, official sources said.

The two Koreas failed to iron out their differences in the last two rounds of talks as the North insisted on the idea of fully co-hosting the Olympics. According to IOC sources, however, North Korea is likely to give up the idea of co-hosting in the coming talks, and some kind of compromise, such as the South giving rights to hold several sports to the North, is expected to be hammered out. While the IOC says the upcoming talks will be the final ones, the possibility of further dialogue cannot be ruled out depending on the outcome, the sources said.

CHON CALLS FOR REJECTION OF ANTISTATE ACTIVITIES

[Text] Seoul, June 6 (YONHAP) -- South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan said Friday that society should reject "all anti-state, anti-democratic activities." In the speech read by Prime Minister No Sin-yong, Chon said: "polarized values should be accepted and respected in the democratic and open society we pursue. However, we cannot tolerate activities that deny the existence of our nation." No presented the address at a ceremony commemorating Korea's Memorial Day at the National Theater here.

The president said that the people's democratic consciousness will mature and that a free and open society will take root in Korea when each individual fulfills one's duties and responsibilities. He said that Korea is in a position to lay a foundation for "an advanced fatherland" and that "what is required of us most urgently now at this historic turning point is the establishment of a firm consciousness of history and a fair evaluation of our values."

SOCIALIST LEADER ON CONSTITUTIONAL REVISION

[Text] Tokyo, June 5 KYODO -- South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan is aware of the necessity of some form of constitutional amendment, socialist leader Kim Chol said Thursday. Opposition parties, religious and student organizations have been calling for a new constitution to open the way for direct popular election of the president. It will be a major topic of discussion at the extraordinary Assembly session which opened Thursday.

It is President Chon's judgment that the present situation cannot be maintained as it is, Kim was quoted as saying in a meeting with Hideo Den, an upper house member of the United Social Democratic Party. Some people in the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) also favor direct presidential election, Kim added. Under the existing Constitution of 1980, a South Korean president is elected by the electoral college of about 5,000 members.

Kim also said treatment of dissident leader Kim Tae-chung will be the focus of political wrangling between the South Korean ruling and opposition parties. Kim is here en route to Peru to take part in a general meeting of Socialist International.

KIM TAE-CHUNG DISPLEASED WITH YI MIN-U'S ACTION

[From the "Out and About" column]

[Text] Kim Tae-chung and 26 NKDP lawmakers of his faction met over breakfast yesterday and expressed displeasure over party president Yi Min-u's "lukewarm" attitude toward the release of those detained for political reasons. During the meeting, which was held before a party caucus, Kim told his follows to call Yi to account at the caucus as to why he behaves as if there's disagreement among the three -- Kim, Yi and party adviser Kim Yong-sam.

Kim was talking about Yi's "flexible stance shown on the issue in interviews with vernacular papers. Yi said in the interviews that he doesn't expect all the detainees will be released at once and added the opposition party will nevertheless join the proposed formation of an ad hoc Constitution committee. But previously, the three opposition figures agreed the overall release of the detainees was a precondition for the formation of the envisaged special committee.

At the breakfast meeting, Rep. Sin Ki-ha said, "Even the party president is subject to disciplinary measures when his attitude is against the party's official line." Rep. Kim Yong-pae proposed they (Kim Tae-chung's followers) bring Yi to account as to why he abandoned the valuable precondition for the formation of the special committee. Later at the party caucus, some of them demanded that Yi, who is known as a Kim Yong-sam man, explain why he gave the impression that the party is not so anxious for the release of the detainees.

DJP TO REVEAL DIRECTION OF CONSTITUTION REVISION

[Text] The ruling Democratic Justice Party will reveal the direction of the revision of the Constitution in party chairman No Tae-u's speech at the National Assembly Monday, party sources revealed yesterday.

A high-ranking, inside source in the DJP told reporters that "the DJP cannot delay baring the amendment guidelines, now that the rival parties have already agreed on early revision of the basic law." He said, "Although it is the basic stance of our party to engage in debates without any preconceptions, the mainstream opinion within the party should be made known."

Chairman No and the DJP's key post-holders yesterday put the finishing touches on a draft of No's address. They included advisor Kwan Ik-hyon and Reps. Choe Pyong-yul and Kim Hak-chun. Also present were Rep. Chae Mun-sik, chairman of the party's Special Committee on Constitutional Revision, and Rep. Yi Chi-ho, assistant chairman of the ad hoc panel.

Party spokesman Sim Myong-po said that emphasis in the address was given to a call to the opposition camp to take a flexible attitude, to achieve amendment to the basic law within this year. After the gathering, No visited President Chon Tu-hwan at Chongwadae. Some surmised that No discussed with President Chon the matter of setting free the political detainees to comply with the opposition party's demand.

20-DAY SPECIAL ASSEMBLY SESSION OPENS 5 JUNE

THE KOREA TIMES Report

[Text] The year's second National Assembly session opened yesterday with the rival parties trying to inaugurate a special committee to work on constitutional amendment around the end of the session. As the amendment issue will dominate the 20-day session, there will be hot debates between the ruling and opposition parties over the form of government and other contents of the projected basic law.

Although they had agreed, in principle, on the creation of the ad hoc panel through meetings of their leaders, they have a host of problems that should be settled before the operation of the committee. The main stumbling block -- so it is feared -- at present is the NDP-demanded releases of political detainees. Political sources said that if the government releases political detainees during the current session, though it may be on a gradual basis, the rival parties will be able to pass a joint motion for the formation of the panel.

The NDP yesterday reconfirmed in a caucus its earlier demand that all "political prisoners" be freed before the creation of the panel. The DJP, even if it claims that the release of detainees cannot become a prerequisite for the panel creation, held a consultation meeting with the administration about the matter yesterday.

Party sources said that the government is screening the detainees at the request of the DJP, which believes that gradual release would contribute to further cementing an atmosphere for partisan dialogues and compromises. They said that the detainees now under scrutinity are those who were arrested for their struggles for constitutional revision. They number about 700. The floor leaders of the parties have made behind-the-scenes negotiations to solve the issues for the past few days, according to them.

Besides the amendment issue, the rival parties are expected to clash over the questions of campus disturbances, the Inchon incident, foreign exchanges flight and the gap between the rich and the poor during the three-week House session.

The DJP, NOP and the second opposition Korea National Party held various meetings to discuss floor strategies yesterday. The DJP set three goals in a meeting of its floor strategy committee and endorsed them in a caucus. The goal are: 1) the creation of the special committee during the session through partisan agreement; 2) the DJP's initiative in cooperation between the party and the government, and 3) the handling of bills related to public livelihood in standing committees.

Rep. Yi Se-ki, floor leader, said, "We should make the session an occasion to produce a ompromised amendment by forming the special panel under any circumstances."

NDP lawmakers vowed in caucus that they would continue to struggle for the revision to enable the people to elect the president by their own hands. In a resolution, they demanded that students, workers, intellectuals and religious figures who were arrested for their outcry for amendment and democratization be freed before the creation of the House panel in order to pave the way for mutual trust and harmony. They also urged the government to stop immediately its labeling arrested students and workers as pro-Communists and its use of torture.

Meanwhile, Speaker Yi Chae-hyong in his opening address read by Vice Speaker Choe Yong-chol called upon the lawmakers to have frank dialogues and debates with each other to forge an amendment acceptable to all. He said, "It will be difficult for the ruling and opposition parties to reach an accord in a couple of days." "We, politicians, have to think first of the nation's safety and prosperity and the people's interest, rising above individual and partisan interests," he added. Yi could not attend the opening due to illness.

Prime Minister No Sin-yong will make a report on state affairs in a plenary session tomorrow, and leaders of the three parties will deliver key-note speeches on Monday. The Assembly will have questioning sessions for six days from Tuesday, and the standing committees will be held from June 17 through June 23.

YONHAP Report

[Text] Seoul, June 5 (YONHAP) -- The New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP), coming out with a strategy for the ongoing special National Assembly session, will call on the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) to present its timetable for constitutional revision before the end of this year. Under the strategy, formulated by the office of the NKDP'S floor leadership Thursday, the NKDP will do its best during the special 20-day assembly session to achieve its goal of establishing a direct presidential election system. As part of the strategy, NKDP lawmakers will present convincing arguments supporting the party's draft to amend the Constitution in interpellation and discussion sessions within the Assembly.

The ruling and opposition parties agreed earlier to set up a National assembly committee to work on the revision of the nation's Constitution. The NKDP has decided to name the committee the "special constitutional revision committee" and to set the time limit for operation of the committee the end of the regular National Assembly session, which is scheduled to open on Sept. 20.

The NKDP will propose the disbandment of the government's constitutional research committee and try to prevent the DJP from delaying constitutional revision or submitting its own version of a dual executive ruling system.

During the special Assembly session, which opened Thursday, the NKDP plans to emphasize outstanding issues, including the recent suppression of campus, labor and dissident organizations; the opposition's demand that those imprisoned for "political causes" be released; its call for the granting of amnesty and the restoration of civil rights for dissident leader Kim Tae-chung and others; and the need to launch an inquiry into the cause of the riot in Inchon on May 3 and the government's actions in response to the riot.

UNIVERSITY PRESIDENTS REGRET PROFESSORS' ACT

[Text] Presidents and deans from 19 universities and colleges across the nation yesterday held a meeting in Seoul and expressed their regrets over a statement issued by 264 professors Monday on controversial issues. They also expressed hope that the government will show leniency and not penalize professors who signed the declaration. The signatories were from 23 colleges and universities across the country. Among them were Korea, Yonsei, Sogang, Sungkyunkwan, Chungang, Ewha Woman's and Sookmyung Women's universities.

The top school administrators also said they were concerned over the fact that the declaration carried phrases denying the present political and economic systems.

Of the administrators of the 23 universities and colleges whose professors signed the declaration, five, including Pak Pong-sik, president of the Seoul National University, did not attend the meeting for "personal reasons". They also said that such a collective action by the 264 professors was an act that does not fit their status as educators.

The meeting lasted about two and a half hours at the second-floor conference room of the Private Schols' Pension Fund Hall in Yoido beginning 2 p.m. The participants also said a majority of the signatories turned out to have signed the declaration without carefully studying its contents. Some of the professors who signed the statement have shown repentance for their action, they also said.

ACTIVIST STUDENTS STRESS SOLIDARITY WITH WORKERS

[Text] Activist students appear to have put emphasis on establishing solidarity with workers in their antigovernment struggle. According to the Labor Ministry, 350 workers were fired as of May as they were found to have concealed their higher educational background to get jobs in the production lines instead of desk jobs, which their high educational background warrants them.

The number of such employee is larger than that of last year since the violent sabotage taking place at Daewoo Motor Co. in April of last year. The ministry analyzed that the sharp increase of the number is mainly due to activist students' attempts to instigate massive labor disputes during the wage readjustment period.

A total of 110 cases of labor disputes have been reported, which is 16 percent larger than 91 cases reported during the corresponding period of last year. However, labor disputes these days have been relatively mild without resorting to violence and other extreme means because of weak reponse from workers and precautionary measures on the part of employers.

The total number of workers involved in labor disputes this year was 8,770, much smaller than 13,698 of the same period of last year. The loss of working hours resulting from the labor dispoutes is some 12,000-man-hours, also smaller than last year's 16,000 man-hours.

In a way to further minimize undesirable occurrences of sabotage, the ministry plans to intensify supervisory actions in work places where disputes are likely to occur. Besides, it told employes to closely check the background of workers when they recruit new employes.

As of yesterday, some 67.3 percent of companies employing more than 100 workers have concluded wage negotiations. This year's wage increse rate is 6.5 percent on the average.

CAUSE OF SRV TROOP 'DECREASE' VIEWED AS 'DEFEAT'

BK051014 (Clandestine) Voice of the Khmer in Cambodian 0500 GMT 5 Jun 86

[Text] The U.S. Embassy in Bangkok recently estimated that Vietnam still has some 140,000 troops in Cambodia This estimate is 20,000 lower than previous estimations. This American announcement was made after Vietnam said it had pulled out some 10,000 troops from Cambodia in its annual withdrawal, which the CGDK and a large number of other countries believe is merely a Vietnamese deception vis-a-vis the world. The Americans did not say whether or not this decrease in Vietnamese troops was the result of the Vietnamese troop withdrawal announced by Hanoi.

In this commentary, let us try to predict how many Vietnamese troops are left and, if there has been a decrease, explain why. Regarding the former question, the Voice of the Khmer would like to admit outright that we do not have the means to correctly compute the real number of Vietnamese troops. However, considering various reports we have received, we tend to believe the estimate of the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok despite the fact that this source did not divulge how it arrived at that figure. However, regarding this matter, we would like to explain why the number of Vietnamese troops has decreased.

At first glance, it seems like the Vietnamese are being true to their word in their announced troop pullout, for the number of troops has decreased. But, the truth is something different. The decrease has stemmed from quite different causes. Regarding this assertion, there can be no better witness than the Cambodian people living in Cambodia. It is public knowledge that during the past more than 7 years many Vietnamese soldiers have perished on the Cambodian battlefield. Many Vietnamese soldiers have died from bullets, from malaria, dysentery, and so on. Each unit has lost many men because of these causes. Moreover, the Vietnamese soldiers have deserted one after another. Some have fled to Thailand, asking to be sent to third countries. Others have also asked to be sent overseas through the CGDK. Some have fled through the forest back to Vietnam. A few others have fled overtly along national highways. A Vietnamese commander killed himself with a grenade when too many of his men died in an CGDK ambush. A Vietnamese battalion commander who lost all of his men from the above-mentioned causes lost his mental stability because he was so upset. Not a single Vietnamese unit is unaffected.

The Vietnamese troop withdrawals, as always, are merely a safety value, an assurance to the remaining Vietnamese troops that they should not worry too much about going home as their turn will come sooner or later. Moreover, this is concocted to fool international public opinion. In fact, this troop withdrawal gimmick is merely a rotation of troops. And Vietnam could easily send in fresh troops secretly in greater numbers than those withdrawn. However, no matter how many more have been sent to Cambodia, the number of those killed, wounded, or who have deserted is overwhelmingly high, thus reducing the number of Vietnamese troops to 140,000.

We therefore would like to conclude that the decrease in the number of Vietnamese troops in Cambodia results from the Vietnamese defeat and not from the generosity of the Vietnamese in withdrawing troops as announced. We believe that the Vietnamese troops will continue to decrease in size until they are completely wiped out in Cambodia if they stubbornly cling to their presence there at a time when the CCDK forces are becoming stronger and stronger as they are now. The struggle of the Cambodian people will continue to be waged without letting up in order to completely drive all the Vietnamese forces from Cambodia.

Vice President Khieu Samphan brought back the friendship, assistance, and support of the people and governments of these friendly countries to the Cambodian people and the CGDK, particularly support for and assistance to the CGDK's 8-point peace plan to resolve the Cambodian issue politically. The friendship, assistance, and support of these seven friendly countries the world over, are an encouragement for our National Army, the Cambodian people, and the CGDK in the struggle for national liberation and are an important force to compel the Vietnamese enemy to hold talks with the CGDK to resolve the Cambodian issue politically on the basis of the CGDK's 8-point peace proposal.

FOREIGN MINISTRY STATEMENT ON THAI RELATIONS

[Statement on "Lao-Thai relations" issued "today" by LPDR Foreign Affairs Ministry on occasion of 2d anniversary of Thai troops' "occupation of the three villages"]

[Text] Two years ago, on 6 June 1984, acting on orders of former Army Commander in Chief General Athit Kamlang-ek, many battalions of Thai troops arrogantly invaded and seized three Lao villages -- namely Ban Mai, Ban Kang, and Ban Savang -- in Paklai District, Sayaboury Province. Following the proper and just struggle of the Lao people and as a result of the public denunciation in Thailand and in the world, the Thai troops were compelled to withdraw from the three villages unconditionally. But, while withdrawing from the villages, the Thai troops committed serious crimes against the Lao people of the three villages. They forced more than 1,000 Lao people to abandon their houses, farm land, and cultivation areas to earn a living in detention centers in Thai territory. The Thai troops were organized for separate deployment on various peaks in areas along the Lao-Thai border in the three villages in Lao territory. These troops repeatedly fired into the areas in a threatening manner. They also sent bandits and spies to the three villages to create disturbances and plunder animals and other property of the Lao people. The Thai troops have continued their criminal acts until today.

The Thai side has continuously refused to return to their native villages the Lao people they herded form the three villages and has refused to pay compensation to the people of the three villages for the great losses in life and property caused by the Thai troops. A number of Lao people who escaped to return home were also impeded by the Thai troops who fired at them. As a result, a number of the Lao people were killed.

Worse still, of late Thai troops have even organized military exercises along the Lao-Thai border adjacent to the areas with the participation of exiled Lao reactionaries. The activities indicate preparations for a new aggression against Laos' Sayaboury Province and show that danger and threats of aggression by the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries still exist in the areas.

With its good intentions to improve Lao-Thai relations on the basis of the spirit of genuine neighbouring and fraternal countries to contribute to solving regional problems and other international problems, the Lao side has exerted its efforts by repeatedly proposing that the Thai side appoint a high-level delegation with full authority to hold talks with the Lao side. But, until now, 2 years have passed, and the Thai side has not yet given the Lao side a positive response. To improve Lao-Thai relations on the basis of the genuine spirit of neighborliness and fraternity, the LPDR Government reiterates once again its Foreign Affairs Ministry's statement of 6 June 1985, proposing that the Kingdom of Thailand appoint a government delegation to hold talks with a delegation of the Lao Government either in Bangkok or Vientiane. To guarantee the success of the talks, the Lao side hereby proposes that the Foreign Ministries of the two sides appoint officials to hold a consultative meeting to work out all necessary preparations for the government-level talks and that the meeting of the officials of the Foreign Ministries of the two sides should begin right away.

The LPDR Government hopes that the additional proposal will meet the urgent aspirations of the peoples of the two countries, who want to see Lao-Thai relations improved without delay.

The LPDR Government is also convinced that the Government of the Kingdom of Thailand will take this proposal into consideration in a responsible spirit and will respond creatively. The Lao people and the LPDR Government hope that the Thai people of all classes who wish to maintain neighborly relations between Laos and Thailand will vigorously support this correct, just, and reasonable stand of the Lao people and the LPDR Government, which is aimed at improving relations between the two countries to contribute to safeguarding the peace, stability, and friendship of the nations in the region and the world.

DEPUTY FOREIGN MINISTER MEETS SRV COUNTERPART

BK051220 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1030 GMT 5 Jun 86

[Text] Visiting SRV Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son met with Thai Deputy Foreign Minister Dr Arun Phanuphong at the Foreign Ministry this morning. Reporting on the meeting to newsmen, Deputy Foreign Ministry Spokesman Pratchayathawi Tawethikin said the meeting proceeded well and the two sides discussed regional and bilateral issues. Dr Arun brought up the shelling of the Cambodian refugee camp Site 8 in Thai territory by Vietnamese soldiers on 29 May. The SRV deputy foreign minister, however, denied that Vietnamese soldiers had shelled the camp and reiterated that Vietnam continues to honor its pledge not to violate Thailand's sovereignty. He opined that the shelling could be the work of Heng Samrin soldiers. Arun told the SRV deputy foreign minister that fighting between CGDK and SRV-supported Heng Samrin forces posed a threat to Thailand's security and pointed out that Thailand strongly desired genuine peace in Southeast Asia which will lead to cooperation and prosperity in the region.

On bilateral relations, the two deputy foreign ministers discussed the capture of Thai fishermen by the SRV. The Vietnamese official informed Arun that his country will soon release 300 Thai fishermen. Arun asked that the five to seven Thai civilians and soldiers who still remain in Vietnam be released. The Vietnamese deputy foreign minister agreed to convey this request to his government.

WANG ZHEN PAYS CALL ON PRIME MINISTER PREM

[Text] Today at Government House Wang Zhen, visiting vice chairman of the Chinese Communist Party Central Committee's Advisory Committee, accompanied by Deputy Foreign Minister Praphat Limpraphan, called on Prime Minister General Prem Tinsulanon. Wang Zhen is visiting Thailand from 25 May to 5 June as guest of the Foreign Ministry in his position as honorary president of the China Association for International Friendly Contacts. Also present at the meeting were Major General Chatchai Chunawan, president of the Thai-Chinese Friendship Association; Lieutenant General Chantharakhup Sirisut, secretary to the prime minister; Foreign Ministry Spokesman Sawanit Khongsiri; Protocol Department Director General Thawiphan Singha; and Major General Mongkhon Amphonphisit, the prime minister's aide.

According to Sawanit, the prime minister and Wang Zhen held official discussion in a cordial atmosphere. They discussed the growing all-round Thai-Chinese relations, particularly in trade, with its marked growth in combined value. The prime minister said he was given a warm welcome during all of his three visits to China both by Chinese leaders and the people. He noted to the Chinese official that both Thailand and China are agricultural countries and that China has achieved great agricultural development. For that reason Thailand and China should increase cooperation in this field. Both countries should also exchange views on trade and marketing as well. The prime minister said that, as in Thailand, great development achievements in China have attracted foreign tourists. Therefore, both countries should discuss ways to attract more tourists to their countries because each has a rich historic and cultural heritage, especially now that there is a direct Bangkok-Kunming flight. Official discussions on this matter can begin if the Chinese side is interested.

Wang Zhen said he welcomed the prime minister's suggestions and will convey them to appropriate Chinese leaders. He said China and Thailand have long enjoyed good relations. China is ready to contribute to establishing peace and tranquillity in Southeast Asia. Wang Zhen also presented a brush painting to the prime minister as a gift.

ATHIT INTERVENES TO HALT PARTY DEFECTIONS

BK060203 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 6 Jun 86 pp 1, 3

[Excerpt] Supreme Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek halted Col Narong Kittikhachon's plans to lead 70 candidates in a defection from the United Democratic Party to the Liberal Party, sources said yesterday. The former Chat Thai MP for Ayutthaya initially planned to announce his defection to Prida Phatthanathabut's Liberals on Wednesday, the sources said. They claimed that Col Narong, who had held talks with the former university affairs minister, changed his mind about defecting following a telephone call from Gen Athit on Wednesday.

SITTHI PREDICTS GROWTH FOR SAP AFTER ELECTION

[Text] The Social Action Party [SAP] will grow after the elections because of its reputation and the entry of qualified members, its leader Sitthi Sawetsila said yesterday. ACM, Sitthi said yesterday's gathering of candidates reinforced his belief that the SAP would once again become a major force. Veteran members remained loyal to the SAP's ideologies, he said, and newcomers had shown a great deal of unity and enthusiasm.

"We want a new generation of politicians who are willing to serve the country with integrity and have the public interest in mind," said ACM Sitthi.

While the party had been shrunk by defections and has been a frequent target of criticism, it had maintained its reputation, said the Foreign Minister. Only 186 of the SAP's 214 candidates attended the gathering and ACM Sitthi said most of the absentees were former MPs tied up with campaigns. Conspicuous by their absence was MP's Office Minister and SAP deputy leader Sawat Khamprakop and his four loyalists.

Mr Sawat's presence at United Democratic Party meetings has prompted speculation of further defections. ACM Sitthi said the former Nakhon Sawan MP failed to turn up for an appointment with him and he had not received resignations from Mr Sawat and his group. The SAP will hold its first rally at Sanam Luang on June 17, but ACM Sitthi said the emphasis would be placed on door-to-door campaigning. Party spokesman Amnuai Yotsuk said ACM Sitthi told the candidates of the need to eradicate poverty and create jobs. The candidates were also told of the campaign strategy and means to handle attacks and insinuations. The SAP is to field 30 candidates in the South, 40 in the North, 31 in the Central Plains, 79 in the Northeast, and six in Bangkok Metropolis. Deputy Interior Minister Montri Phonphanit said the SAP's priorities were creating work, developing the provinces and improving the welfare of industrial workers. He said the Labour Department should be upgraded to ministerial level.

SITTHI SPEECH ON CURRENT POLITICAL SITUATION

["Excerpts" from 2 June speech by Foreign Minister and Deputy Prime Minister Sitthi Sawetsila to the Foreign Correspondents Club of Thailand in Bangkok entitled "In the Arena"]

[Text] As all of us know, the political situation in Thailand at the present time is in a fluid state. Thailand's attempt at democracy has been brief. Fifty-four years may be a long time in the life of an individual, but many would agree that it has not been much for the democratic development. If your foot were to be in my shoe, obviously, you just could not sit still in office without having the concern for failure weigh heavily on your mind. We know that democracy is the condition under which a life of freedom is meant to flourish. But democracy cannot exist of its own free will. It depends on us. It needs our courage to build it, nourish and guard it, and then pass it on to future generations.

We also know that what we have is not perfect. There have been setbacks along the way. There have been coups d'etat; there have been "new" constitutions; there have been elections and there have been changes of government. Soon we will have another election and, on top of that, another government. If that government is to come in to serve the people and do something good for the country, no matter who will win I do not think the people would mind and the exercise would have been worthwhile. But then, while we do not seek our future in our past, our democratic history has been replete with blunders. The good part of it is that it has taught us many painful lessons. Despite our best efforts, we have not been entirely successful in producing a government as good and as decent as its people.

The events of last month amply illustrate the confusion which has, unfortunately, come to be a part of the Thai political process. My only hope is that the phenomenon will be transitory. It seems that we have had less men of principles than those without them. Democracy cannot last for long if politicians were to put their self-interests before the national interests.

And so, as I see it, no greater task faces this country; and no challenge is more deserving of our effort and energy, than to revitalize and strengthen our democratic institutions all across the board. For too long we have taken our democracy -- and our own people -- for granted. It would be a great mistake if we were to believe that this country is populated by fools. We cannot ignore the fact that, politically, we have come once again to the crossroads. It should be clear that what has gone on cannot be allowed to stay its course.

When I entered the arena in 1983, it was out of the call to duty. On the other hand, I had also wanted to find out how broad-based was the support for our foreign policy, and whether our achievements were accepted by the people. I have always known that a successful foreign policy needs a solid domestic front, and this over the last six years the Thai people have given in good measure. I had not sought it for personal gains or gratification, but the leadership of the Social Action Party [SAP] was thrust upon me because many people believed that my service was needed and that I could be useful for our beloved country. I could not, and would not, shrink from this responsibility. That responsibility was so heavy, for I did not have the stature of our former leader, M.R. Khukrit Pramot. But the party's image had to be changed, and that caused some ripples. Even though the SAP may now be a smaller party, its internal problems have been solved.

At my age, I know that the time has come for the torch to be passed to a "new generation" of leaders. So this will be my last mission. I am convinced that we in this country possess in abundance the necessary resources, the necessary skills and, most importantly, the necessary dedications and sacrifices that are the hallmarks of leadership. We must look for men and women who are tempered by the belief that they want to become the servants of the people and not their masters. We want men and women who are unwilling to witness or permit the slow undoing of those human rights to which this country has always been committed. Let me make clear that I am determined to see it through, upon our system's survival and success, regardless of the cost and regardless of the peril.

There are those who entertain the forlorn hope that the party over which I preside, the Social Action Party, is now in a shambles. It is true that mass defection has hit our party. But it is also equally true that it has left our party in a better shape and in better hands. I would like to look at it as a blessing in disguise. Just imagine how chaotic it would be if we had had to conduct a "wholesale purge." It is only natural that once ideals conflict among the members, or if some of us should have found something better, the party can never be the same. It is time to part company and there are no grudges. I speak here with no rancour or bitterness. I even wish those who have left us the best of luck. However, I cannot say with the same degree of certainty how they feel about me. Misinformation is being spread around; the ugly picture is being painted of me as a person of short temper. They say that I was responsible for the break-up of the party. Well, you should know better. While it is not for me to peer into the mysteries of the future, I do not know that, given strong leadership, time and a little bit of hope, the forces of good would ultimately rally and triumph. I am confident that the Social Action Party, or what is left of it, will more than hold its own.

We are of course opposed to all forms of protectionism. We disdain "broken promises." This brings into focus the question of sincere friendship. We cannot accept that the big, industrialized countries should bully the small, developing countries on the issue of trade. In this connection, a way will be found in which a new vitality, new vigour, and new effectiveness can be infused into the cooperation between first, the ASEAN countries and second, between the developing countries which will give them the required strength.

A strong Thailand obviously depends on its farms and its resources. It should not be forgotten that the SAP is the only party which does most for our farmers. Under the SAP's leadership, Thailand has become the world's foremost rice exporter.

We realize, of course, that development of agriculture must remain our top priority. It is the main pillar of our economy. However, we do need a long-range, comprehensive programme with new, realistic measures which will ensure a sense of proportion between demands and supplies -- both domestic and overseas. Innovation in the direction of crops diversification must also be encouraged. For it is only plain to see that the reliance on a few major crops can no longer be adequate. And a strong Thailand must respond to the aspirations of its citizens. We shall be adding a new public programme to help the needy, the least fortunate among us. We shall also recommend measures to improve the educational quality, to stimulate the arts, and, at all levels, to provide the opportunity for every student to develop his talents and to acquire his knowledge through expanded facilities.

In the field of the economy, we recognize the need for new stimulants which will spur its growth. The SAP's policy to develop the rural areas through the fund reallocation programme has been successful and it will be continued. Meanwhile, in other areas, we may require the repeal of outmoded laws which inhibit investment and employment.

One step, above all, is essential -- and that is to increase the efficiency of the tax collection. Next, we must make sure the existing tax structure will not destroy the incentives or impede the free flow of capital. What is more, it should not expert too heavy a burden on private purchasing power, profits, and employment. Although the government at present is suffering from a budget deficit, we do not see in the raising of the tax a sign of a healthy economy or a measure to strengthen it.

The SAP deems it an urgency to reverse the decline in morale in our civil service. We take as our philosophy the separation of politics from administration. Whatever wrong may have occurred will be rectified. Despite some flaws, I believe that we have succeeded by and large in restoring the pride in our civil service. More qualified men and women want to join -- and remain -- in it. At the Foreign Ministry alone, we have been able to recruit young men and women of the highest quality who will add significantly to the building of professionalism of the foreign service.

Turning to the world outside, I am proud to report that all is well and will continue to be well. While security problems continue to exist along the border, they are now of a manageable proportion. The past six years have shown that our foreign policy has been on the right track. It has made not only Thailand but also ASEAN strong and resilient. ASEAN is now a factor to be reckoned with in world politics. Our firm and independent foreign policy is the indispensable element of a stable, peaceful regional order. It is, and should remain, the best hope in the search for the solution to the Kampuchean problem.

I would like to believe that there will be no drastic change in foreign policy regardless of the change of government. Our international image will be at stake, and whoever is foreign minister after the July election should make sure that there is sense of continuity if we are to be trusted by our friends and allies. Foreign policy is that part of the national policy which cannot afford wild fluctuations without creating adverse repercussions. In short, in foreign policy we need not rip off every tree to find whether its roots are still there.

I have now spoken at some length about the political situation in the country, the Social Action Party, what we have done and also some of the things we hope to do if we should be called to duty. Of course not everything can be dissected here. But both you and I know that this election is the most crucial in our democratic history. It will determine whether we can continue to be called a democracy, or it could herald its ending. But whatever comes out of it let us give it our full measure. Let us go to our strength. Let us offer hope. Let us show the world that a new age for Thailand is not only possible, but probable. I am ready to do my part.

Of course, time is not on our side. The SAP is not sailing with the tide in its favour. We lack many things. We have too little money. We have not done much public relations campaigns. But we are honest. We are not running scared. It is going to be a struggle against all odds, however long and hard the road may be. Our opponents, whoever they may be, will find that we are going to give them more than they may expect. It is going to be a good match. I have done it before -- in the United Nations Security Council, in the Kampuchean problem, and against all adversaries in international politics. The arena may be different, but the spirit is the same and can never be broken. If I should lose and do not return as foreign minister, I will always carry with me the fond memories of your good will and friendship. But if I should return, the Thai people will know that they will have the loyalty of a faithful servant who will never break his promises.

Theodore Roosevelt had his answer and I would like to quote from him: "It is not the critic who counts: not the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs, and comes short again and again... who knows the great enthuiasms, the great devotions -- and spends himself in a worthy cause; who at best knows in the end the triumphs of high achievements, and who at the worst, if the fails, at least fails while daring greatly -- so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat."

I have never wanted my place to be with the cold and timid souls. Win or lose, I have entered the arena. This is the only way. And I would not have done it any other way.

INTERVIEW WITH DEMOCRAT PARTY LEADER PHICHAI

BK050209 Bangkok THE NATION in English 5 Jun 86 pp 4, 5

["Excerpts" from "Exclusive Interview" with Deputy Prime Minister and Democrat leader Phichai Rattakun -- date and place not given]

[Text] Q: You once said that if the Democrat Party wins the majority seats in the House, it is ready to have its leader take over as prime minister. Do you still stand firm on the statement?

A: I did not mention the name of my party but anyway, as far as the principle is concerned, I reaffirm the statement.

Q: You were also quoted as saying if Party A won 120 House seats and Party B won 80, then the two parties should form a coalition government headed by the leader of Party A, right?

A: Yes, in that case, the most suitable way is for the two parties to set up a coalition government and to settle a question as to whose party should take the premiership. In any case, Party A must form the core of the new government. In other words, it must spearhead the move to form a new government by approaching parties with a similar platform. Now, the former should have more public mandate from [as published] the latter, given the number of its MPs and therefore, it should be entitled to the premiership.

But if, say, Party A wins 120 MPs, Party B with 80 MPs and probably Party C with 50 MPs failed to agree who should be made prime minister. Let's say, Party C also wants its leader to be prime minister, then political confusion and a stalemate would arise, a scenario which I would not like to see happen. But in that case, it is natural that an outsider may be required as prime minister.

Q: Chat Thai leader Maj Gen Praman Adireksan recently told us that he used to float an idea to you: Chat Thai, Democrat and Social Action parties should strike an agreement to form a new government on the term that the biggest of them should be entitled to the premiership. How would you respond to that?

A: Yes, during the ceremony to open the new party head office recently, Maj Gen Praman was kind enough to attend the ceremony at my invitation -- I invited all party leaders -- and he did come up with the idea. At first he mentioned it as a matter of principle and I replied that I totally agree with the concept, the way I has just told you. Then, he said that Chat Thai, Democrat and Social Action should win a combined House seats enough to form a stable government. I responded that -- well, that I did not know.

So, there was not a secret deal -- as mentioned by somebody. It's just a meeting of minds on a principle. In fact, Maj Gen Praman used to be in the same Cabinet. He also attached much importance on our relationship by showing up at the ceremony.

A: The Democrat Party adopts a friendly attitude towards any party but I cannot know whether some parties hold grudges against us.

Q: You mentioned as a condition that the parties to form a coalition government should share common or similar ideology and platforms. To your mind, what parties have platforms that correspond with the Democrat's ideology? For example, Chat Thai, given its policy announcement and its roles in the past.

A: Well, I would say that the platforms of the three parties are not all that different from one another. There may be some difference in nuances. For example, one party may insist on the paddy price guarantee scheme but the Democrats would argue that although the idea is sound the scheme was unrealistic. It's impossible to guarantee the prices. Such a difference, I would say, can be reconciled.

But if one party's policy calls for the nationalizing of all the commercial banks, then we cannot join hands with it. In short, I don't think our policies would pose serious impediments for a coalition government.

It depends on the results of the general election and afterwards, we can hold consultations to blend our policies. After all, politics are an ongoing process of negotiation.

Q: Supposing that SAP, [Social Action Party] Democrat and Chat Thai jointly secure enough House seats to form a stable government, do you perceive any problems in terms of the working relationship of the three parties to the formation?

A: The three parties have worked together and there has been nothing between the Democrats and the other two. Even the Prachakon Thai Party of Communications Minister Samak Sunthorawet and the Democrat Party have worked together over the past three years. I see no problems in terms of working relationship. Coming back to your question about the possibility of SAP, Chat Thai and Democrat forming a coalition government, I would say it depends on negotiations.

To my mind, the best reason is for the leader of the biggest political party to attain the premiership. But if any of the two parties insisted against the principle, then we must find a way out because in principle, the government must be a coalition.

Q: Have you talked to SAP leader ACM [Air Chief Marshal] Sitthi Sawetsila over the principle?

A: Not yet. SAP and the Democrat Party have worked together well. You see, there are some issues that we understand each other without having to talk them out.

Q: Do you think SAP will accept the principle?

A: That I don't know.

Q: Talking about the general trend, how do you see the chance of the three parties forming a coalition?

A: Well, the other two parties may think of it but the Democrat Party is so humble that it would not nurture the idea. I am not sure how big our party will be after the polls. Will there be any party to approach us if we get only 20 seats?

Q: How about your approach towards the present economic situation? There are two lines of thinking: Should the priority be placed on financial and economic stabilization or on the stimulation of economic growth by injecting more money into the system?

A: Alright, I have all along argued for the idea that we must inject money in the system in times of economic recession. I disagree to the other approach.

Let's put it in simple terms. The finance minister wants to stabilize financial and economic institution and so, he has tried to control government's expenditure. That's why the concept of zero-growth budget has been introduced. But as a result of the policy, the economic, trade and investment expansion has come to a standstill.

It all started when the government restricted commercial banks' credit extension to the ceiling of 18 per cent of their deposits. It disagreed to the idea. Advocates of the school of thought argued that if you want to expand the economy, then you must seek more foreign loans. I say if we have to secure loans to stimulate the economy, I am all out for the loan acquisition. Of course, I would be strongly opposed if the loans were spent extravangantly to import luxurious goods into the country, for example. We must utilize the loans to increase the yields of production, to create new jobs, to cause more construction and so on. You know, it's a chain reaction.

This is our major policy and any party to join us must share the same platform. This is an opportune time for our country because the world oil prices have plunged to a low. As a result of the low prices, a lot of money has come into the government's coffer. Why don't we spend the money to stimulate the economy? Why not?

It's like businessmen. If their registered capital totals 10 million baht, their business can expand up to 1,000 million baht because they use loans to do their business. If the company spends within 10 million baht, it would not have enough money to cover advertisement expenditure alone. If it spends 10 million baht on advertisement to increase the sale volume to 1,000 million baht, then why not? In this case, the advertisement people will have jobs to do, the painters will have jobs. It's a chain reaction.

Q: How about the tax system? Some party has declared that it will reduce the tax rates.

A: I have fought for the reduction of tax ceiling and the broadening of the tax base. I have not won all I wanted but the ceilings have come down to a certain extent.

The ceiling of the individual income tax has come down to 55 from 65 per cent -- and I want it to be 50 per cent. The corporate tax ceiling has been reduced from 40 to 35 per cent compared to my goal of 30 per cent.

I believe I can reduce the budget deficit because when the private sector can make more money, we will collect more tax even at a lower rate. The crux of the issue is to stimulate the economy.

Q: How about the paddy price lifting scheme? You mentioned that you do not support the idea, right?

A: No, we do not stand for it. The government has tried to set up agricultural zones but the coordination among related government agencies has been so poor. We'll try to streamline their efforts. We will not set the guaranteed prices but we will announce reference prices which we deem logical. We need to amend the law. We have called for the establishment of a national agriculture council comprising representatives from four organizations: The government, farmers' organization, cooperatives and the middlemen. The mechanism covers all the organizations in the full circle. It will be responsible for production control in each agricultural zone, and region, the reduction of cost of production, central intelligence gathering on the international agricultural trade and marketing planning.

We have to amend the law to back up such an establishment and I believe this is the only effective way to solve the problem.

Q: How about the Tambon [subdistrict] Fund or the Job Creation Programme?

A: We will maintain the job creation programme because it's a way where farmers can earn additional income, though it's not a major source of income.

Lately, the govrnment has improved the supervision of the job creation programmes. I have observed the programmes in several rural areas and are convinced of their merits. It will be very useful particularly if we can coordinate the projects in the tambons within the framework of a master plan.

For instance, if we plan to link five tambons together in this fiscal year, then each should spend the money to construct new road instead of wells.

Q: Some have pointed out that the major difference between the Tambon Fund and the Job Creation scheme lies with the fact that under Tambon Fund scheme, local elite will decide on their own as to what they need while the other scheme requires officials from the capital to do the planning. Which approach do you prefer?

A: The initiatives must come from the tambon councils. That's the right way. But on the other hand, there must be consultations as to what they need that will benefit the whole area. If a tambon is rich with maize but the adjacent tambons refuse to construct roads, then the produce cannot be transported into the markets.

By the way, I also disagree to the appropriation of development funds to MPs. It's not MPs' duty to distribute development funds. The money should be kept for other more useful purposes.

Q: Don't you think that the proposal will invite criticisms from MPs?

A: Of course, they will but the Democrats have never supported the idea. All of us have been against it. We even raised our objection during the Cabinet meetings. And the return of the development funds the last time were less than 50 per cent.

Q: How about the party's foreign policy platform?

A: Our platform does not differ very much from the present policy. I don't think I should dwell on the matter.

Q: There are criticisms that the Foreign Ministry was pre-occupied with the Khmer problem. How will you respond to that?

A: Somebody said that the Foreign Ministry is the Khmer minister and I got the message. I would put it this way: We need to do more trade with foreign countries despite the problems we are having with some neighbours. Trade must take the lead over politics at least to reduce the atmosphere of confrontation and tension. Of course, we must always bear in mind our security interests. But I don't believe that trade will weaken our national security.

Q: The government has said it has already allowed the private sector to trade with such countries?

A: That's what was officially said. What the reality is, we all know. But what I want is not to make money, I just want to see a build-up of good atmosphere which may lead to peace.

In other words, the priority should shift more to trade with all countries -- be they in the socialist or the Free World camps.

Q: How about relationship with superpowers?

A: Superpowers are very influential. Whatever slight act they do will greatly affect such a small country as Thailand.

As a small country, why don't we draw the lessons from the history? How our country survived one crisis after another without having to be colonized. This I don't have to explain at length. Our kings have pursued a very correct foreign policy in relations to superpowers because of their far-sightedness. They were aware of the fact that we cannot rigidly rely on a particular superpower and so they pursued a policy with westerners called "bend with the wind." But if Thailand did not bend with the wind, the country would have experienced an undesirable period which Burma, for example, has experienced. Laos, Malaysia, Indonesia and many others in the region have fallen into the colonization orbits. I think the history has clearly taught us as to how we should stand in relations with superpowers. But of course, there must be a superpower which we may be closer than another. This is something that we have to adjust ourselves to.

For example, the Thai people may feel proud to be a member of the UN Security Council [UNSC] I also share the sentiment but to be frank, I have had a foreboding from the very beginning. As a UNSC member, we can be proud but then we will always be caught in the middle of conflicts. What I am afraid of has happened twice.

PARTIES ISSUE COMMUNIQUE FORMING ALLIANCE

[Text] The Siam Democratic and Democratic Labour parties yesterday issued a joint communique forming an alliance in the forthcoming national election. The communique, countersigned by Col Somkhit Sisangkhom and Prasoet Sapsunthon, cited the current Election Laws, which they claimed deprived the public of freedom and liberty, as the reason for the formation of the two-party alliance. The two parties, according to the statement, are against the requirement that each party field not less than 174 candidates in the general election as well as the stipulation that MP's affiliate with political parties. They also called for the introduction of the one-man-one-vote election system.

HANOI ON PRC INCURSIONS; U.S., THAI CHARGES

[Station editor Vu Dinh Vinh's feature: "Heighten Vigilance for National Defense"]

[Excerpt] Dear comrades and friends: China's hostile activities along our country's northern border have taken place continually. During the 2d half of May, Chinese artillery fired nearly 7,000 rounds of assorted mortar shells into the Thanh Thuy village area and some populated areas in Vi Xuyan District, Ha Tuyen Province. At the same time, the Chinese side sent commandos and scouts across the border to conduct 14 sabotage operations in the areas of Phong Luu village, Tien Yen District, Quang Ninh Province; marker posts 47, 48 and 5, Loc Binh District; Thanh Loa village of Tra Linh District, Cao Bang Province; Cau Kieu and Lao Cai of Hoang Lien Son Province.

A squad of Chinese troops penetrated into Ban May village, Xin Man District, Ha Tuyen Province, and abducted a Vietnamese peasant to China.

In these localities, our border defense forces and militiamen, who were highly vigilant and combat ready, opened fire quickly, killing and capturing some of the Chinese aggressors.

The partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia in late May continues to be welcomed by broad segments of world public opinion, as evidence of the goodwill of Vietnam and Cambodia. It proves that Cambodia's foreign and domestic position has been consolidated and that the three Indochinese countries want to settle the problems in Southeast Asia peacefully.

However, hostile forces have tried to play down the significance of the fifth partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia. The Beijing authorities have harped on their shopworn tune that Hanoi is intensifying its Vietnamization of Cambodia. At the same time, the Bangkok authorities raised a hue and cry that Vietnamese troops have shelled a Cambodian refugee camp, injuring many civilians, despite the fact that the international relief organizations have suspected that the Khmer Rouge forces theselves shelled the camp.

It was noteworthy at this juncture that the U.S. State Department warmed up a stale saying that Soviet chemical weapons have been used in Southeast Asia. Everyone knows that the U.S. Administration has several times hurled such odious slanders to oppose the Soviet Union and Vietnam. Since 1980, the Americans have fabricated the myth that Vietnamese troops have used Soviet chemical weapons in Cambodia. However, on-the-spot investigation by many teams of Western weapons research experts have unmasked Washington's dark plots. In spite of this, the U.S. Administration is still stubbornly trying to peddle this stale commodity.

That Washington has again raised a hue and cry about the so-called yellow rain in Southeast Asia is absolutely not because it is concerned for the health of people and the ecological environment in this region. It has only aimed at odious political goals to justify large-scale, criminal use of chemical weapons in Vietnam while covering up its current plans to produce new chemical weapons.

HA NAMM NINH PARTY ORGANIZATION CONDUCTS CRITICISM

[Text] During the first phase of self-criticism and criticism the party organization committee of Ha Nam Ninh Province carefully analyzed the circumstances and causes of shortcomings and mistakes involving the quality and leadership of collectives, individuals, and key cadres that have led to existing problems in the implementation of local political tasks. Although Ha Nam Ninh is a province in the plain, its grain production remains poor, in particular, the production of secondary food and industrial crops has decreased. Although the handicrafts and artisan industry is one of the province's strengths, it has marked time in the past few years. The abundant resources of the sea, forests, and mountains have not been satisfactorily exploited. The rates of using material and technical facilities remains very low.

The provincial party committee members frankly pointed out the improper lifestyle of some comrades, violations of the regulations on housing management, illicit trade of materials and goods, nepotism, and rightist leanings in leadership over the struggle against negativism in the economy and society and state agencies, especially in the sectors of distribution and circulation, communications and transportation, internal affairs, public health, education, and student recruitment. The most notorious irregularities in these sectors are theft of public assets, corruption, bribery, improper use of state materials and goods, siphoning off of state commodities, and under the counter connections with traders for illicit business.

The provincial party organization's executive committee clearly asserted the responsibility of the provincial party committee's standing committee and of each individual member of the executive committee for the above mentioned negative phenomena. In leadership, the most notorious shortcomings are the failure on the part of leaders to stay close to the grassroots level, holding of too many conferences and meetings, and overemphasizing the issuance of directives. The state of talking more than doing still prevails.

The party committee of Ha Nam Ninh Province has put forth measures to overcome the shortcomings and mistakes raised at the self-criticism and criticism sessions, emphasizing specific targets. Within June, specific conclusions must be reached as to whether the rumors are right or wrong concerning the selfish lifestyle of some of the provincial party committee members. All complaints about the violations by cadres and party members of all sectors at all levels must be considered and settled immediately. All irrational cases of wages payment and cadre placement must be immediately checked in combination with the perfection of organization and the streamlining of extra personnel from the provincial down to local levels. Inspections must be conducted to ensure the implementation of various policies toward retired cadres and to amend the division of labor and the decentralization of management authority to cadres in the province.

HAYDEN ON PACIFIC NUCLEAR FREE ZONE BILL

[Text] The foreign affairs minister, Mr Hayden, says the South Pacific nuclear free zone shows that the region now has a voice that can be clearly heard on the world's stage. Mr Hayden told Parliament that the treaty shows that the South Pacific Forum has come of age as the authentic and collective voice of the region.

He was speaking when presenting the South Pacific Nuclear Free Zone Bill which will prevent the manufacture, testing, and stationing of nuclear weapons in or by Australia.

Mr Hayden said the Australian law went beyond the minimum need to ratify the treaty and covered all of its main provisions. He said the nuclear free treaty was widely recognized around the world as a significant measure and had been welcomed by the international community at a time when there was little progress on arms control and disarmament.

The foreign affairs minister said the treaty did not in any way conflict with Australia's defense arrangements, notably the ANZUS Treaty with New Zealand and the United States. He said it did not run counter to Australia's support for a stable nuclear deterrent or impede Australia's ability for military cooperation with its allies. Under the treaty, United States ships and aircraft can still visit Australia and participate in exercises.

BUSINESS, LABOR ADVISE HAWKE ON ECONOMIC POLICY

[Text] The government is holding a further series of talks in Canberra on possible economic policy changes. Today's talks involved a cabinet subcommittee and officials from the Australian Council of Trade Unions.

Yesterday, the committee led by the prime minister, Mr Hawke, had talks with representatives of business and professional groups. After yesterday's meeting, the spokesman for the business group said that they were pleased with the policy direction the prime minister would announce in his address to the nation next week.

The treasurer, Mr Keating, said today's talks with union leaders would also focus on economic policy changes.

The business groups have stressed the need for wage restraint, but the unions are expected to argue that current economic problems cannot be blamed on workers. Instead, the unions say that there should be more emphasis on industry development and price restraint.

NEW ZEALAND

'SENSIVITY' OVER U.S. PUBLICITY PROGRAM NOTED

HK050405 Wellington THE EVENING POST in English 24 May 86 p 6

[Editorial: "Insecurity Is Showing"]

[Text] New Zealand Government sensitivity over an American public relations programme against our anti-nuclear ship policy is inappropriate. Calling upon the American Ambassador to explain the details of the US Information Agency's budget and programme relating to New Zealand shows an insecurity.

Freedom of expression is one of the great advantages New Zealand and American democracies share. The call for an explanation of the USIA's local programme implies that there may be limitations to that freedom if the government so decides. Our society is surely mature enough to receive and compare the Wellington and the Washington lines of facts and arguments without falling asunder. Call it information or call it propaganda, the bulk of us are intelligent enough to sort out what is relevant.

It is good for us to hear all sides of an argument before we make up our minds. We appreciate opposing points of view can shake loose information or comments that would otherwise not become public knowledge. Defence, nuclear weapons, and international relations are issues involved in the controversy between New Zealand and America. Future defence is currently the subject of a public review here. These issues can vitally affect our interests and those of our descendants. They deserve full exposure.

The American Government is not the only one to seek to influence decision makers and public opinion abroad. The Russians, the British and lots of other foreign embassies, high commissions and agencies disseminate information about their countries and their policies. In our own modest way New Zealand is in this game too. An example is our Ambassador to Washington from time to time writing to major American newspapers to counter certain stories or editorial positions. And why not in an open society?

Some Labour Party branches, and apparently some Labour MPs, sought to influence American public opinion by contributing to an advertisement in the Washington Post. The advertisement supported the Labour Government's policy on banning nuclear powered and armed ships, and supported the proposal for a nuclear-free South Pacific. Good luck to them but they cannot now complain about the American Government peddling its wares here. If there is some paranoid fear about our being bullied by the might and wealth of America then there would be some comfort in knowing that if the Americans overplay their hand they will lose goodwill and support. It might also be salutary to compare any New Zealand charges of American bullying with the threats we are making against the Cook Islands should they change their constitution.

Any foreign-inspired subversive attempts to destabilise the Government through spying, blackmail and the rest would be a sinister, separate matter and one that if proven or at least reasonably certain would deserve protest and counter measures. Whatever the fears and suspicions some in the Labour Party and government might hold about such a possibility there should be no confusion with the free slow of official and unofficial information and views, however embarrassing that flow can prove to be.

MALAYSIA

SOVIET OFFICIAL DECRIES 'PACIFIC COMMUNITY'

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 5 (AFP) -- A senior Soviet official Thursday attacked what he called moves initiated by the U.S., Japan and South Korea to forge a Pacific community and said Moscow wanted the destiny of Southeast Asia decided by countries in the region. "History shows that the formation of such groups eventually leads to military blocs and confrontation," Akil Salimov, deputy president of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, said.

Mr. Salimov, head of a five-man Soviet delegation which visited Indonesia and Singapore before coming here, said Moscow felt that Asian countries should begin "confidence-building" talks free from external interference to decide their future. He told a news conference before leaving for Thailand that the discussions held bilaterally or multilaterally could lead to a formal security conference of Asian nations, although Moscow felt countries in the region were not quite prepared for such a conference right now.

Mr. Salimov added that while the security conference could work towards closer economic cooperation among Asian nations, Moscow would oppose any moves to forge "closed economic groupings like the Pacific community."

An Asian diplomat here said Mr. Salimov's statement underlined Soviet fears that any economic grouping of countries on the Pacific rim would result in a further consolidation of ties among non-communist nations leading to Moscow's isolation. "Their fears are not justified because the Pacific community has no military objectives," he said. The Soviet official also said Moscow had no objections to other superpowers, including the U.S., participating in discussions leading to a formal Asian security conference and said the Soviet Union would take "a role in the talks as a great Pacific nation."

Diplomats said Mr. Salimov's criticism of the Pacific community concept appeared aimed at reinforcing reservations expressed by Malaysia that the proposal could result in economic domination of smaller Pacific states by the U.S. and Japan.

Mr. Salimov told reporters Malaysian leaders shared "close and identical" views with Moscow but declined to elaborate on his discussions Tuesday with Foreign Minister Tengku Ahmad Rithauddeen. He said Moscow was looking into ways of stepping up bilateral trade and economic ties with Malaysia "but such should be mutually beneficial." Moscow has asked Malaysia, which has a pro-Western foreign policy, to narrow a huge trade surplus in Malaysia's favour, officials said.

[Text] The Soviet Union hopes the development of trade relations with Malaysia will bring mutual benefit. The leader of the visiting group of USSR Supreme Soviet, Mr Akil Salimov, says there is a lot of potential areas for development in the relations between the two countries.

He told a press conference in Kuala Lumpur that both countries can benefit in fields such as economic, cultural, and science sectors.

Mr Salimov and his 4-man delegation met Foreign Minister Tengku Ahmad Rithauddeen, speaker of the Dewan Rakyat [Lower House of Representatives], and several members of Parliament. The group had earlier visited Indonesia and Singapore, and left for Thailand today.

BARISAN NASIONAL TAKES SABAH PARTIES AS MEMBERS

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 5 (BERNAMA) -- Sabah's ruling Parti Bersatu Sabah (PBS) and the opposition United Sabah National Organisation (USNO) were Thursday accepted as members of the Barisan Nasional [BN]. The approval of their applications was made at a meeting of the Supreme Council of the ruling Barisan Nasional (National Front) Coalition, chaired by BN Chairman and Prime Minister Dr Mahathir Mohamed here. With the admission of PBS and USNO, the BN now has 13 component members.

For USNO, it is a return to the BN fold following its expulsion on April 15, 1984, for its opposition to the creation of Labuan Island (off Sabah) as a federal territory and the constitutional amendments.

Dr Mahathir told a press conference that USNO was accepted back as it had changed its earlier stand on the two issue. He said: "USNO has explained the reason why it took the stand before and that it no longer entertained such ideas and therefore accept completely BN's stand on these matters."

The PBS application to join the BN was proposed by Berjaya President Mohamed Noor Mansoor, who is also Sabah BN chief, and seconded by S. Samy Vellu, president of the Malaysian Indian Congress (MIC), a component party. Dr Mahathir said Mohamed Noor had also expressed willingness to relinquish the post of state BN head to make way for PBS President and Chief Minister Joseph Pairin Kitingan. "This means Pairin becomes BN chairman in Sabah, as other chief ministers are the BN chiefs in their respective states," he said.

Dr Mahathir said the BN Supreme Council decision would take immediate effect. To quetions from reporters, Dr Mahathir said he was confident the PBS, USNO and Berjaya, as BN members, would cooperate in developing the east Malaysian Sabah state. he said such cooperation had been seen when Berjaya was the state government and USNO the opposition.

Dr Mahathir declined to say much about the next general election, although he said it was discussed at Thursday's meeting. Asked if a date had been fixed, he said: "Yes, we all agree that it will be held sometime between now and June next year."

GROUP URGES BAN ON CONTAMINATED FOOD IMPORTS

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 5 (OANA-BERNAMA) -- The Federation of Malaysian Consumers Association (FOMCA) Thursday urged the Malaysian Government to ban food imports from countries near Russia because of possible radioactive contamination resulting from the recent Chernobyl nuclear accident in that country.

FOMCA Secretary-General Hamdan Adnan said the government should adopt a firmer stand on import of food items from these countries as food having even a low degree of radioactive contamination would still have an adverse effect on the people who eat it. He said their import should be banned worldwide until the Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) had certified food products from these countries were free of contamination. "Malaysians will not die of starvation if they do not eat imported food as there is plenty of local food in the country," he added.

He was commenting on a newspaper report on Wednesday saying two samples of food imported by a leading hotel in the east Malaysian Sarawak state were found to be highly contaminated and unsafe for consumption. Samples from the food ordered from Italy and France were taken during a check at the Kuala Lumpur International Airport last week and sent to Puspati, the Tun Dr Ismail Atomic Research Centre, for tests.

This is the first confirmed discovery of radioactive contamination in imported food since the Chernobyl nuclear accident in the Soviet Union on April 25.

Hamdan regretted the attitude of certain countries which he claimed banned such contaminated food for their own consumption but exported it to other countries.

USSR OFFICIAL DISCUSSES ASEAN DURING VISIT

[Text] Singapore, June 2 (AFP) -- A Soviet delegation Monday said the United States and Japan were trying to form a military bloc in Southeast Asia and cautioned the region's non-communist countries against keeping Moscow at arm's length. Expressing displeasure about what Moscow considers U.S. and Japanese influence over the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), the delegation said problems in the region could not be solved without apparently Moscow's involvement.

"Soviet Union is not only a European country but also an Asian country. Problems in this region are not to be solved by two powers but including all the powers in the region," delegation leader Akil Salimov told a news conference. "The United States together with Japan want to make an axis and dominate this area," and are taking steps to interfere in the internal affairs of the countries, said Mr Salimov, vice-president of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet. "They are trying to use economic and cultural ties to make military blocs," he said.

China is not considered a threat in this regard, he said. "As far a we are concerned, China is not interested in closed groups," he said.

The five-man team, including a foreign policy consultant to the Presidium and a counsellor, is visiting Indonesia, Singapore, Malaysia and Thailand on a foreign policy review tour of Southeast Asia. Answering questions about the designs of the avowedly anti-militarist Japan, Mr Salimov said, "One shoiuld not minimise the military capability of Japan."

Delegation member Aleksandr Isayev, a Siberian scientist-MP, pointed out that Japan had provided bases to the United States -- the U.S. Navy's 7th Fleet is headquartered in Japan -- and were conducting joint exercises close to the Soviet Pacific coast.

The parliamentarians denied that Moscow was planning steps to counter the preceived lack of Soviet influence. They also said no offer of capital investments or special favours were being made during their visits.

"We have come here to find out what is the latest thinking of these (ASEAN) countries," said Mr Salimov.

They refused suggestions that Moscow had military designs in the region, and said Moscow only used Vietnamese bases for change of crew and resupply.

ASEAN principal argument with the Soviet Union is over Moscow's backing for Vietnam which maintains troops in Cambodia where it toppled the pro-Peking Khmer Rouge government of Pol Pot in 1978 and installed a pro-Hanoi administration under Heng Samrin which is supported by the Soviet bloc.

ASEAN and the United Nations does [as received] not recognise Heng Samrin and instead supports a guerilla coalition comprising the deposed Phnom Penh rulers, and the two non-communist groups under Prince Norodom Sihanouk and his former Premier Son Sann.

Asked about the Soviet role in the Cambodian conflict, the delegation members said Moscow continued to give material and other support to the Cambodian and Vietnamese governments.

They reiterated that the Soviet Union wanted a settlement of the conflict through negotiations among all the countries in the region, including the Indochinese countries Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. ASEAN has found this proposal unacceptable.

The delegation, which arrived Sunday after a two-day visit to Indonesia, met Singapore's junior Minister of Foreign Affairs Yeo Cheow Tong and a small group of MPs on Monday. The team is to leave for Malaysia Tuesday.

COVERAGE OF AQUINO 5 JUNE PRESS CONFERENCE

Agricultural Reform Emphasized

BK060543 Manila PNA in English 0346 GMT 6 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 6 (PNA) -- President Corazon Aquino has expressed optimism that her government and the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) and its military arm, the New People's Army (NPA), will gradually negotiate for a ceasefire at the national level.

The president, in a press conference Thursday [words indistinct] that one of their negotiators for peace talks is Satur Ocampo, former newsman and one of the political detainees under the previous regime.

The conference, marking the first 100 days of the Aquino administration, was attended by more than 100 local and foreign journalists.

Asked to identify the members of the government panel that would negotiate with the Ocampo group, the president said she would announce the names in 48 hours, probably in another press conference. It's not that I'm hiding anything but I do not want to upset the forthcoming dialogue, she said.

She told newsmen that after 100 days in office, the problem of insurgency and economic recovery still pose as the biggest problems confronting her administration, saying that she had inherited these from her predecessor.

On the economic front, Mrs Aquino said she was satisfied by the degree of concern given by the U.S. Government to the Philippines regarding financial assistance. She cited a news report saying State Secretary George Shultz is urging American businessmen to invest in the Philippines in a move to appease the country in its national economic recovery program.

In the same conference, the president also:

-- Announced she will forgive the conspirators and forget the slaying of her husband former Sen Benigno S. Aquino Jr., but declared she would like to know all the facts and would not allow a repetition of such assassination.

-- Announced she would ask foreign governments, including Hong Kong where Filipino domestics are based, to protect the rights of the Filipinos.

-- She announced the distribution of idle lands and military reservation for the poorest of Philippines society to tilt [as received] genuine land reform program. About 33,000 hectares of military reservations in Mindanao and 9,000 hectares of idle lands in Negros Occidental are being eyed as site of land reform program.

-- Lauded the presidential Commission on Good Government headed by former Sen Jovito R. Salonga for unearthing properties and ill-gotten wealth to which former President Marcos had been dubiously linked.

-- Cited the independence of the Presidential Commission on Human Rights led by former Sen Jose W. Diokno in trying cases of violations of human rights.

-- Announced she will respect the provisions of the RP-US military base agreement which will expire in 1991 and keep the option open in case there may be renegotiation of the use of Philippines bases by American military facilities.

-- Reiterated the government's continued support to agriculture which she described as the center piece of the government's economic recovery program. She said the government has decided to abolish export taxes on agricultural products and the removal of the surcharge on fertilizers per bag.

Optimism About Cease-Fire Talks

[Text] President Aquino yesterday expressed optimism that her government and the Communist Party of the Philippines and its military arm the New People's Army will gradually negotiate for a ceasefire at the national level. The president said she had received word from the CPP-NPA that one of their negotiators for peace talks was Satur Ocampo, former newsman and one of the political detainees under the previous regime.

The press conference was attended by more than 100 local and foreign journalists. Also at the press conference were Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo and Mrs Alice Villadolid, officer in charge of the Malacanang press center.

In reporting the developments of the insurgency, Mrs Aquino had this to say:

[Begin recording] All along I have said and I have asked that we exhaust all peaceful efforts. Earlier this morning, when I was talking to General Ramos, I again inquired from him if the Armed Forces were in control of the situation as far as insurgency is concerned, and he assured me that they are in control of the situation. [end recording]

In the same conference, the president also announced that she will forgive the conspirators and the slaying of her husband, former Senator Benigno Aquino Jr. But she declared that she would like to know all the facts and would not allow a repetition of such assassination.

[Begin Aquino recording] Well, I would still like to know the truth about the assassination of my husband. Um, by forgiving and forgetting, I am prepared to forgive and forget but I want to know all of the facts surrounding the assassination of Ninoy. I think it is not only I who am interested in knowing this, but I think a great majority of the Filipino people are also so that there will not be a second or a repeat of this assassination. From now on, nobody will even think of perpetuating a crime as they did on August 21, 1983. [end recording]

AQUINO LISTS 'FREEDOMS' OF FIRST 100 DAYS

Speaking on nation-wide TV to assess her presidency, the 53-year-old Chief Executive who was swept into power in a nearly bloodless revolt last February, said her administration has achieved remarkable results despite over-whelming odds. But she said more hard work needs to be done, more sacrifices must be made, and while her government is willing to make them, she asked the nation what President Kennedy has asked the American people more than 30 [as published] years ago: "What are you going to do for your country in the second 100 days?"

She said she inherited a legacy of debt, a bankrupt government, poverty, corruption, and insurgency and said there are no instant answers to these problems. "We had a snap election, then we had a snap revolution, but I never promised you snap solutions," she said.

She then appealed to the people for cooperation. "Our country needs your hard work, your patriotism and your faith more than ever," she said. People power, she said, is exactly that: It is people acting together, not government alone, to press through change.

She said her presidency was an invitation to everybody to bury their differences and work together, but this call seemed to have been lost on some people. "I fear some have seen the new freedom, not as a privilege of a common commitment to rebuild the nation, but as a license to rake up old -- or light up new -- quarrels," she said. "Perhaps the great achievement of the first 100 days is also its greatest danger: We are taking freedom for granted."

She said the bloodless revolution may have created certain questions about the determination of her administration, how far it plans to go, but she assured her countrymen, "We will go all the way it takes to build a society free from corruption, oppression and poverty. There will no longer be one Philippines for the rich, and one for the poor, one for the strong and another for the weak."

Calling herself and her officials "meek revolutionaries," she listed the freedoms that were achieved in the first 100 days of her administration.

She said these were freedom under the law for having freed the courts, political detainees, and for coming out with the Freedom Constitution.

Freedom of the press for allowing the blooming of the freest press in the region.

Freedom for our farmers for eliminating cartels, lowering the price of fertilizers, implementing land reform, and providing cheap credit. Freedom of labor for repealing labor laws that are repressive.

Freedom of the military for allowing it to play their proper role as protector of the people and implementing an extensive military reform program. Freedom from the hills for giving insurgents the opportunity to return to normal life.

Freedom of our economy for improving the business climate and cutting down the inflation rate to just 2.1 percent from 50 percent in 1984, and for reducing the interest rates.

Aquino said there are more freedoms she could cite like those that come from the improvement of medical services or from the revived tourist industry or from protecting the natural environment and for instituting the writing of a new constitution. But she said all these could not have been achieved without the help of the power of the people. "And it is that power that I wish to summon again in the revival of our economy and the establishment of peace." she said.

At least seven commissioners, namely Lorenzo Sumulong, Blas Ople, Francisco Rodrigo, Gregorio Tingson, Ambrosio Padilla, Florangel Braid, and Vicente Foz were opposed to the specific mention of Sabah in the definition of the country's territory.

CON-COM MAJORITY FAVORS PRESIDENTIAL SYSTEM

[By Rod L. Villa Jr.]

[Excerpt] A presidential form of government emerged yesterday as the choice of a majority of members of the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com], but all 48 declared that whatever its form, the new government should be provided with strong checks and balances. Of 30 commissioners who responded to an early media survey, 19 favored the presidential system, seven were for a modified parliamentary form, and four reserved their decision.

Con-Com President Cecilia Munoz Palma presided over a discussion on governmental form which the assembly decided is a condition precedent to all other constitutional issues during the assembly's third plenary session yesterday at the Batasan building in Quezon City.

Those who favored the presidential system were Commissioners Cristino de Castro, Alberto Jamir, Jose Laurel Jr., Regalado Maambong, Teodulo Natividad, Blas F. Ople, Ambrosia Padilla, Napoleon G. Rama, Florence Regalado, Rustico de los Reyes, Cirilo Rigos, Francisco Rodrigo, Decoroso Rosales, Rene Sarmiento, Lorenzo Sumulong, Ephraim Penas, Wilfredo Villacorta, and Eulogio Lerum.

Those for a modified parliamentary system were Commissioners Joaquin Bernas, Adolfo Ascuna, Hilario Davide, Vicente Foz, Christian Monsod, Minda Quesada, Christine Tan, and Bernardo Villegas.

Commissioners Roberto Concepcion, Jose Suarez, Serafin Guingona and Palma said they are keeping their minds open on the issue.

Floorleader Rama said today's session will again be devoted to debates on governmental form to make full use of time until the committee on rules headed by Commissioner Lorenzo Sumulong submits its report tomorrow.

Palma said the chairmen and members of the 15 standing committees will be announced tomorrow based on computerized data of Con-Com members. Early formation of the committees, she stressed, is pivotal as already more than 35 resolutions have been submitted for the committees' action.

AQUINO MEETS NAURU PRESIDENT DEROBERT

[Text] Manila, June 5 (AFP) -- Nauru President Hammer DeRobert Thursday met with President Corazon Aquino and said his country will invest in the Philippines to help hasten Manila's economic recovery, the presidential palace said.

A palace press statement quoted the head of the fertilizer-rich Central Pacific island as telling Mrs Aquino: "We look forward to further cooperation between our two countries, mainly in fertilizer production."

He added that Nauru was looking for opportunities to invest in the Philippines, whose economy was devastated after 20 years of rule by former president Ferdinand Marcos. "We can assure you that your ventures in the country will be attended to and you will be informed of the policies of the government," the statement quoted Mrs Aquino as telling Mr De Roburt.

The two countries currently have a joint venture in the form of a phosphate fertilizer plant in the central island of Leyte, designed to make the Philippines self-sufficient in phosphatic fertilizers. Mr De Roburt arrived in Manila Monday, the Foreign Ministry said.

KBL TO HOLD CONVENTION, REVAMP LEADERSHIP

HK060115 Manila PHILIPPINES DAILY INQUIRER in English 4 Jun 86 pp 1, 2

[Text] Iloilo City (PNA) -- Former MP Arturo Tolentino said yesterday the Kilusang Bagong Lipunan (KEL) will be strengthened by revamping its leadership down to the local level.

Tolentino, who is acting president of the party, said the KBL national directorate and central committee are in the process of uniting all opposition groups and will hold a national convention within two months. He made the announcement during a get-together here Saturday of some 1,000 KBL leaders from the provinces of Iloilo, Capiz, Aklan and Antique. Also present in the gathering was former MP Salvador Britanico, KBL head in Panay.

Tolentino, who was the running mate of deposed President Marcos in the Feb. 7 election, said the party is not participating in the Constitutional Commission because it believes that the present government and the commission itself as illegal. The Constitution must be drafted by a delegation elected directly by the people and not merely appointed by one person, he said.

On the coming local elections, Tolentino said there might be two sets of candidates on the side of administration with the Pimenel and Laurel factions, while on the opposition side, there will be different candidates of the KBL and the Partidong Nacionalista ng Pilipinas headed by Blas Ople. However, there is a bigger possibility of unifying all groups in the opposition than in the administration, he said.

Britanico said current indicators showed the possible downfall of the Aquino government before December this year. The current situation shows a possible coup d'etat with the Americans taking over the government, Britainco said.

The KBL get-together in Iloico City was attended by ranking officers of the KBL national directorates namely: former Speaker Nicanor Yniguez, Edith Nakpil Rabat, KBL Secretary General Manual Garcia, former Mayor Perez of Cabanatuan City, former Governor Lorenzo Teves and Assemblyman Flores Bayot.

KBL REPORT CRITICIZES AQUINO'S FIRST 100 DAYS

[Text] The Kilusang Bagon Lipunan (KBL) assessed yesterday the first 100 days of the Aquino government and reported negative results.

In a report submitted by a seven-man assessment body and which the party's 30-man central committee approved unanimously, the KBL claimed the economy "has sunk deeper into shambles," the people have been divided further, and the country has been brought closer to Communism.

The KBL report underscored what it called "deteriorating socioeconomic conditions" that have driven out both local and foreign investors because of the risks involved in an atmosphere of "extreme instability and confusing policies."

It was claimed that human rights "have been extensively violated in public demonstrations and rallies, civil service laws have been disregarded, and elected officials have been illegally and indiscriminately replaced by mere officers-in-charge."

"All these violate and nullify the new administration's commitment to govern by consultation and not by dictation, and its repeated calls for national reconciliation and unity," the KBL report said.

The report said the situation was made worse by mere appointment of members of the Constitutional Commission instead of electing delegates who truly express and reflect the will and sentiments of the people in framing a new constitution.

According to the KBL report, "even the Supreme Court has been gravely weakened because the members appointed under a revolutionary government are bound to consider as political question any and all challenges to the legality of the present government."

"This means that the power of judicial review, one of the most precious time-honored principles of constitutional law has been emasculated," the KBL report said.

Former MP Arturo M. Tolentino of Manila, KBL titular head, former Speaker Nicanor Yniguez, and former Political Affairs Minister Leonardo B. Perez alleged that the Aquino government has "made itself the surrogate of the Philippine Constitution which it has abandoned to foist its dictatorial will upon the people."

"Knowing it cannot stay long claiming only revolutionary support," the KBL leaders said, "the new administration went through the motion of promulgating a 'bogus' Constitution under Proclamation No. 3 which it arbitrarily called 'Freedom Constitution.'"

They claimed the peace and order situation has deteriorated from bad to worse and that members of the New People's Army (NPA) have multiplied. They also claimed the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) has so fortified itself into a position that it now threatens to fight on a larger scale if the Tripoli Agreement is not implemented.

Members of the special committee, headed by Perez, were former MP and Deputy Justice Minister Manuel Garcia, and former Assemblymen Antonio Tupaz, Gualberto Lamauig, Mariano Logarta, Jose Tumbokon, and Gerardo Espina.

The committee said the report took into account consultations made with business, industry, banking, labor, youth, and student groups, civic and professional sectors, religious orders, and farmers organizations.

RAMOS ON LOYALISTS, HUMAN RIGHTS ABUSE

Loyalists Not Military Threat

HK050443 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 0200 GMT 5 Jun 86

[Text] Armed Forces of the Philippines [AFP] Chief of Staff General Fidel Ramos said that the Marcos loyalists are not threats to the national interest. According to him, the new AFP could defend the country's security against military operations launched by Marcos loyalist supporters. He stressed that the activities of Marcos supporters are serious only in so far as staging demonstrations, mass actions and propaganda are concerned. He also ordered the creation of battalions composed of men from the different military services to prepare to counter mass actions by Marcos loyalists in Metro Manila.

Military Abuse May Still Occur

[Text] The military cannot guarantee that human rights violations by soldiers will be totally eliminated but all military abuses will be speedily investigated. AFP Chief of Staff General Fidel Ramos said he cannot speak for the nature of different individuals in the new AFP since men are only human and commit mistakes. At a press conference at Camp Aguinaldo marking the 100th day of the new AFP, Ramos said it must be borne in mind that the nation faces grave problems of insurgency. He said human rights violations by the NPA and other rebel groups are will known and have been documented by the authorities.

ENRILE CLAIMS COMMUNISTS INFILTRATING GOVERNMENT

[Text] The communists are trying to infiltrate different government offices. This was announced by Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile in a speech before the Road Safety Club in Baguio City.

Enrile revealed that the communists are trying to infiltrate the bureaucracy during the governmental transition period. He added that members of the Communist Party of the Philippines are entering major industries such as transportation and communications, both vital to the economic stability of the country. The country is in a transition period following the toppling of the Marcos regime.

'FLOWERING' OF CAUSE-ORIENTED GROUPS VIEWED

[By Marites Dangulan-Vitug]

[Text] Outside Malacanang, in the arena of cause-oriented groups, the first 100 days of President Corazon C. Aquino have been lively. There was a flowereing of political organizations, each one enjoying the newfound freedom to strengthen its ranks, advocate diverse views and stage mass actions.

It was a heyday for popular movements, which, after 20 years of Marcos, now find themselves in an enlarged "democratic space."

Many groups have emerged, committed to the institutionalization of people's power: the phenomenon of popular participation in government through a regular process of consultation on policies and problems.

But while President Aquino has encouraged conslutation and the transformation of people's power into a conscious and strong political force, she has been slow in harnessing this popular support. She has not yet formed the planned presidential arm on people's organizations, an office directly under her, in charge of meeting with cause-oriented groups as well as civic associations. This will provide the mechanism for direct consultation of non-governmental organizations with the President.

The President's first 100 days is a short time to make a definite judgment, but, as things stand, there is concern that people's power may not be able to stand up, in support of the government, against aimed threats, particularly from the right. Many in the cause-oriented sector realize the need to organize and strengthen their ranks.

The new government has also shown, so far, its openess and willingness to listen to diverse voices. Unlike the Marcos years when the government was distant from the people and access was limited to a few, it is relatively easy now to seek audience with Palace officials, not necessarily the President. Grievances can be aired; action is promised.

Lakas ng Sambayanan or Cory Aquino's People's Power (CAPP) is the most visible group in the cause-orented sector which has made known its position on various issues. Some observers say CAPP has the "franchise" and access to the President because it participated in the Feb 7 snap elections despite calls from the left to boycott it. CAPP also brings together moderate political forces as well as social democrats and socialists all supportive of President Aquino.

For the legal left, it was a time to shape up and rectify their admitted error of boycotting the polls. Bagong Alyansang Makabayan or Bayan [New People's Alliance] suffered a setback in its expansion and organization plans because many in the moderate groups perceived it to carry a stigma. There, too, was a feeling of isolation from mainstream politics.

But with the liberal atmosphere, the legal left has been able to make up for losses by organizing anew, not necessarily in strengthening or refurbishing Bayan, but in forming other like-minded groups.

Former political detainees Horacio Morales, alleged leader of the underground National Democratic Front (NDF) and Fr. Ed de la Torre, also linked with the NDF and Christians for National Liberation, immediately set up, after their release from prison, Volunteers for Popular Democracy (VPD), a group of professionals, mainly, lending their skills and talents to the bureaucracy as members of task forces, commissions or simply outsiders giving their proposals on policies and programs.

Morales and De La Torre, prominent figures in the left, were known advocates of cricital participation in the snap elections.

In a similar effort, Jose Ma. Simon, said to be the founder of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), is setting up Partido ng Bayan [People's Party], a political party espousing nationalist causes such as removal of the American military bases in the country and implementation of a genuine land reform program.

Sison will be able to attract various individuals and groups which opted for participation in the presidential elections whom Bayan will find difficult to bring in. (Sison advocated critical participation in the polls.)

Adding to this flurry of organizing in the legal left is the birth of a new group advocating socialism: Bukluran sa Ikauunlad ng Sosyalistang Isip at Gawa [Alliance for the Advancement of Socialist Ideology and Deeds] (Bisig), considered "ideologically close" to the national democrats.

Bisig has adopted a policy of critical support for the Aquino government. It is also launching an educational campaign on socialism in the Philippine setting, in preparation for the formation of a political party within three to five years.

Bisig is one of the founding coalitions of CAPP or Lakas ng Sambayanan. Chairman is University of the Philippines professor FRancisco Nemenzo Jr., known for his Marxist-Leninist leanings.

Apart from the frenzy in organization work and the sprouting of new groups those formerly operating underground, have chosen to come out in the open. The Partido Demokratiko Sosyalista ng Pilipinas (PDSP) [Philippines Democratic Socialist Party] with an armed group Sandigan, recently declared itself legal, claimed to have dissolved its army, and expressed support for President Aquino. PDSP plans to ascend to power through elections and placing its people in key positions in the bureaucracy. It plans to field candidates in the coming local and legislative elections.

Kasapi [Kapulungun ng mga Sandigan ng Pilipinas], another group espousing social democracy, joined the legal and open arena before the snap elections. Under President Aquino, however, it declared it has dismantled its urban guerilla unit, the April 6 Liberation Movement, which was responsible for bombing crony establishments and hotels in 1980.

But a three-year-old urban guerilla group advocating "democratic socialism," which calls itself Sandatahang Mandirigma sa Kalunsuran para sa kalayan ng bayan (SMK) [Urban Armed Warriors for National Independence] remains intact. It has, however, expressed support for President Aquino "on a case-to-case" basis. SMK maintains a defensive posture and does not intend to launch offensives yet.

The underground left -- CPP, New People's Army (NPA) and the NDF -- for their part, have started their rectificating process, admitting boycott was a mistake. They hope to emerge revitalized and the NDF, particularly, wants to be acceptable to moderate forces in alliance or united front building.

Many observes see the presence of a liberal democratic government as a setback to the underground struggle. The issue of fascism no longer carries much weight for, as the underground says, the Armed Forces is the only remant of the fascist regime. Nor could they chant "Down with the US-Aquino dictatorship." But the issues of imperialism, bureaucrat capitalism and feudalism are unchanged.

The non-ideologues, it is hoped, will be separted from the hardcore CPP-NPA-NDF members, once the ceasefire takes place and rebel reintegration programs are in full swing. But the Aquino government has moved cautiously and discouragingly slow on the ceasefire issue, failing to convene the proposed commission on national reconcilation within the first 100 days. The NDF has recently named an emissary to hold peace talks with the Aquino government, reports say, but it is not known when these meetings will take place, what they will achieve, if indeed, they are ongoing and are official.

There are two proposed documents on the reconciliation body now in Malacanang, an unsigned executive order proposing the creation of a presidential commission on reconciliation. The other is an unsigned public act from the Armed Forces and the Defense Ministry -- proposing the creation of an inter-agency reconciliation council to grant amnesty to rebel returnees and come up with a rehabilitation program.

Neither has been acted upon. So far, no guidelines have been given on the treatment of returnees; no funds have been allotted. Only Davao has started, on a regional level, its own program for for returning rebels. Thus many are pessimistic about the prospects for a ceasefire.

The restoration of freedom and civil liberties has been one of the most eminent achievements of President Aquino in her first 100 days. The President will need to defend these gains because, with all the daunting problems facing the country, she'll definitely need people's power on her side.

SALAS REPORTEDLY RESIGNS CPP CHAIRMANSHIP

[By Jose Ma Nolasco]

[Text] Two top leaders of the Communist Party of the Philippines, whom President Aquino had wantd to negotiate with have fallen from the party's graces. Inquirer sources in the underground yesterday said Rodolfo Salas, CPP chairman, and Rafael Baylosis, a member of the party's five-man executive committee, recently figured in a major reorganization of the party's leadership.

Salas, known in military circles as "Kumander Bilog," resigned as CPP chairman to make amends for his staunch advocacy of the boycott line in the Feb 7 special presidential election. The CPP leadership, which commands the 15,000-strong New People's Army, considered the boycott line "a serious tactical error" that resulted in the isolation of the revolutionary forces from the political mainstream.

Baylosis, another amjor proponent of the boycott, line lost his membership in the CPP's executive committee, the leading body that oversees the party's day-to-day affairs.

Unlike Baylosis, however, Salas was allowed to retain his membership in the executive committee. The Inquirer sources withheld the identity of the new CPP Chairman.

The same sources explained that the party's reorganization would hardly affect the CPP leadership's earlier decision to participate in talks for a possible ceasefire with the government. According to the sources, only a few regional party organizations and NPA units harbor reservations on the ceasefire negotiations.

Both the CPP and the NPA, the sources said, are reassessing their strategy in the light of the "February revolution," a spontaneous, peaceful uprising in Metro Manila that ended the 20-year Marcos regime. The CPP and NPA adhere to the revolutionary principle of waging a protracted people's war by surrounding the cities from the countryside. The two outlawed organization likewise consider the "legal" struggle in the cities as secondary to the armed struggle in the countrysides.

MINISTER PROPOSES TAXES TO CLOSE REVENUE GAP

[By Juanito Concepcion]

[Text] The Ministry of Finance has recommended to President Aquino the adoption of six new tax measures to raise additional P7.1-billion revenues for the government this year.

The additional income will be used to support a P109.4-billion expenditure program this year that aims for a positive 1.5 percent economic growth after close to a 10 percent negative growth suffered by the economy in the last two years.

Finance Minister Jaime V. Ongpin said in a memorandum to President Aquino that the additional P7.1 billion will have to be raised from new taxes to be imposed on cigarettes, liquor, processed petroleum products, and undeclared foreign currency and other assets that will be allowed to enter the country.

The government is expected to raise P1.258 billion from new taxes that would be imposed on cigarettes and beer. The average increase of 39 percent in ad valorem taxes imposed since late last month will generate an additional P1.2 billion.

Ongpin told President Aquino that the government also stands to increase its revenues by allowing the Bureau of Internal Revenue to accept payment of amounts lower than what are demanded in disputed tax assessments. This compromise scheme, aimed at settling cases which have been pending since the end of 1985, will bring in P1 billion.

Ongpin also said that Executive Order 1042 will have to be revised in such a way that it provides a more effective incentive program to increase BIR's tax collections. BIR expects to raise an additional P3.3 billion from improved tax collection system.

The government expects to raise P83.2 billion in revenues this year, which is significantly higher than the P67.7 billion revenues collected last year.

Ongpin said that P8.8 billion to P17 billion will be allocated for capital expenditures to create jobs in the rural areas and the agricultural sector. He said some funds in the revised 1986 budget will be reallocated to increase the compensation rates of public school teachers, policemen, and soldiers.

SUGAR PLANTERS URGE ABOLITION OF MARKETING BODY

HK051121 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in Tagalog 1000 GMT 5 Jun 86

[Text] The National Federation of Sugarcane Planters are urging that the Philippine Sugar Marketing Corporation be abolished. They said the corporation is no different from the former National Sugar Trading Corporation which was recently abolished. The federation issued this statement after chairman Artemio Yulo of the Sugar Regulatory Administration said it is up to the sugar producers to decide if they wish the marketing corporation to remain. Former Bacolod Mayor Romero Guanzon said both Jaime Cardinal Sin and Bacolod City Archbishop Antonio Fortich strongly opposed the setting up of the news agency. Guanzon said the sugar industry is being undermined by this news agency.

PRC DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF ARRIVES IN TOKYO

[Text] Tokyo, June 8 KYODO -- Xu Xin, deputy chief-of-general Staff of the Chinese People's Liberation Army, arrived at Narita International Airport Sunday afternoon for a week-long visit to Japan. Xu has come to Japan in return for last years' visit to China by Vice Administrative Defense Minister Haruo Natsume.

Xu is scheduled to meet Japan's Defense Agency Director General Koichi Kato Monday, agency officials said. Xu will also inspect the maritime Self Defense Force's Yokosuka Base and the Ground Self Defense Force's Fuji Training Field before leaving Saturday, the officials said.

Meets With Kato

[Text] Tokyo, June 9 KYODO -- Defense Agency Chief Koichi Kato and Xu Xin, No 2 man in the Chinese People's Army, agreed Monday to make greater efforts to maintain peace in the Asian and Pacific regions. Xu told Kato that friendship between Japan and China is important to peace in the region, according to an agency spokesman.

The People's Army depouty chief of General Staff said, however, the international situation is still "difficult" despite a meeting between U.S. President Ronald Reagan and Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev last November, the first summit between the two superpowers in more than six years. Reagan and Gorbachev agreed at the time to meet again this year in the United States, but no date has been set.

Xu is in Tokyo as a guest of the Defense Agency, which has been promoting contacts between senior Japanese and Chinese military officials. Yang Dezhi, chief of General Staff of the People's Army, visited Tokyo in May. But Xu did not invite Kato to visit China, though there was speculation he might, according to the spokesman.

SAPPORO GROUP RECEIVES SOVIET OFFICIAL'S REPLY

[Text] Sapporo, June 6 KYODO -- A citizens' peace group here got a letter from the Soviet Union Friday answering letters sent by Hokkaido peace groups in April. The letter was handed to Shigeru Sugawara, leader of the Sapporo-based "Japan Peace Committee of the War Experienced," at the Soviet Consulate General in Sapporo. The letter, written under the name of G. Zhukov, chairman of the Soviet Peace Committee, said the Soviet Union will continue its ban on nuclear testing until August 6, the day Hiroshima was bombed.

The letter also said the Soviet Union is aiming at abolishing nuclear weapons in the world, cited General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev's appeal to hold a Soviet-U.S. summit in Europe or Hiroshima, and accused the Reagan administration of proceeding with the militarization of space, Sugawara said.

Officials at the Soviet Consulate General said the Soviet committee has no relation to the Soviet Government, but said Zhukov is one of the members of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party. The letter said the Soviet Union has no intention of invading Japan, answering a point specially raised in the groups' letters, Sugawara said. The Soviet Union declared a cessation of nuclear tests on August 1985, but failed to obtain a similar declaration by the United States.

In April this year it was reported that the Soviet Union is likely to resume the tests, and so worried peace groups in Hokkaido wrote letters to Soviet leaders demanding an extension of the voluntary ban on nuclear tests until August 6, Sugawara said.

Sugawara, a peace activist and a company director, said, "it is wonderful that the voices of ordinary citizens like us were heard by Soviet leaders."

FOREIGN MINISTRY ANNOUNCES 1985 ODA DROP

OW070815 Tokyo KYODO in English 0801 GMT 7 Jun 86

[Excerpt] Tokyo, June 7 KYODO -- Japan's Official Development Assistance (ODA) decreased 12.1 percent to 3.79 billion dollars in 1985, the final year of a five-year ODA program, due chiefly to a sharp drop in multilateral ODA, the Foreign Ministry announced Saturday. The 1985 ODA on a disbursement basis accounted for 0.29 percent of the nation's gross national product, down from 0.34 percent in 1984, the ministry reported. As a result, Japan's ODA between 1981 and 1985 totaled 18.07 billion dollars against a target of 21.36 billion dollars under the five-year program to double the amount of ODA from the preceding five-year period.

The Foreign Ministry attributed the double-digit decline in Japan's ODA last year to a 34.4 percent fall in multilateral ODA in the form of capital subscription and similar payments to the international development association (IDA) and other international financial institutions.

MINISTER REFUTES U.S. CHARGE ON AIRPORT BIDDING

[Excerpt] Tokyo, June 6 KYODO -- Construction Minister Takami Eto Friday defended Japan's international bidding system as being open following U.S. criticism that Japan has restricted foreign firms' participation in planned bidding for the new Kansai international Airport project. Eto suggested at a press conference following a cabinet meeting that Japan will not review its present international bidding system on public works, saying, "I don't think Japan closes its door completely to foreign countries at all," Eto also hinted that Japan may consider the issue in the future, saying, "everything is included when Japan says it will open up its market to foreign access. It does not mean that a field is (to be protected as) a 'sanctuary.'" He also stressed that Japan will handle the participation issue under a law which stipulates that specified foreign bidders can participate in tendering for public works projects.

MIYAZAWA, ABE, TAKESHITA BEGIN CAMPAIGNING

[Text] Tokyo, June 6 KYODO -- All three prime ministerial hopefuls from the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party plunged onto the campaign trail Friday in a bid to drum up party support for the upcoming Diet elections. LDP Executive Council Chairman Kiichi Miyazawa, his eyes apparently set on the LDP presidential race this fall, ventured into his native Hiroshima and unveiled an ambitious fiscal policy aimed at revitalizing the sagging the economy.

Miyazawa, known as a policy-oriented politician within the LDP, took the opportunity of a rally involving 1,500 supporters at Fukuyama, to warn of zero growth in the economy if the government fails to take emergency measures to cope with the yen-led recession. Fukuyama was the eighth campaign stop the 67-year-old Miyazawa has made in the past three days.

Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe and Finance [Minister] Noboru Takeshita -- the other two so-called "new leaders" vying for Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's job -- also took to the road Friday, with Abe making two campaign stops at Nagoya and Handa, and Takeshita making a swing through four cities in Hokkaido.

Speaking at a news conference after a speaking tour at Sapporo, Takeshita said he was confident that the LDP would win in the July 6 elections. "I don't think the LDP is facing an ebb in its fortunes," he said. "We have high hopes." Takeshita also agreed with Miyazawa that the government should draw up a supplementary budget this fall but made no specific proposals as to how this should be done. Takeshita has been finance minister over the past three and a half years, but his strength lies more in political wheeling and dealing within the LDP, than in finance expertise, analysts say.

Abe too showed greater preoccupation with the election fortunes of the Fukuda faction than with policies during a news conference on the campaign circuit Friday. For the second day in a row, Abe complained about a tightening of the candidacy list that the LDP leadership is contemplating for the lower house poll. The Fukuda faction, which provides the power base for Abe, is backing 32 candidates for the lower house election -- the largest number among five major LDP factions.

While all the three "new leaders" have made it clear they want to contest the prime ministership when Nakasone's second term ends in October, they were discreet about their ambitions during the campaign tours. "Let's play fair," Miyazawa told his supporters at Fukuyama in the only significant reference he made on the LDP presidential elections.

FURTHER ON KIM IL-SONG PARTY BUILDING LECTURE

[Excerpts from the text of the transcript of DPRK President Kim Il-song's lecture entitled "Historical Experience in Building the WPK," released on 31 May on the occasion of the 40th anniversary of the founding of the Kim Il-song higher party school -- read by announcer]

[Excerpts] 2. The WPK Is a Revolutionary Party of the Chuche Type

Achieving the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland is the most urgent fighting task assigned to our party. Only when the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland is achieved can national sovereignty be realized nationwide, the social and political independence of the South Korean people be realized, and the unified development of the country and the nation be guaranteed.

To achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland, we must struggle to further strengthen the revolutionary forces in the northern half of the Republic, to powerfully support the just and patriotic struggle of the South Korean people, and to create an international environment favorable to our revolution. Our party makes all efforts to realize the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland at an early date and achieve the unified development of the country and the nation.

The ultimate revolutionary task of our party in realizing the chuche cause is to build a communist society by imbuing the whole society with the chuche idea. A communist society is an ideal society of mankind in which the legacies of the old society are ultimately eradicated and the independence of the popular masses is completely materialized. Only through the struggle to remodel the whole society on the chuche idea can a communist society, the ideal of mankind, be successfully built. Only when all members of society are turned into chuche-type communist men by imbuing the whole society with the chuche idea and society and nature are thoroughly reformed as demanded by the chuche idea can the ideological and material fortresses of communism be captured and a communist society in which the independence of the popular masses is completely realized be built.

Our party set forth building a communist society by imbuing the whole society with the chuche idea as its supreme program and has vigorously pushed ahead with the work of remodeling man, society, and nature as demanded by the chuche idea. Along with carrying out the revolution of our country well, our party struggles to attain the victory of the world revolution. The world revolution is a struggle to eradicate imperialism and colonialism worldwide, realize national and class liberation, and build communism. World revolution is the common international cause of the communist and workers parties and the world's revolutionary peoples. Struggling for the victory of the world revolution is an international duty of the working class and popular masses of each country.

An important task arising in accelerating the world revolution is making the whole world independent. An independent world is a world where imperialism and colonialism are completely eradicated and the sovereignty of all countries and nations are fully realized. If the whole world is made independent, a broad road along which all countries and nations build a new independent and prosperous society and, thus, the independence of the popular masses is completely realized, will be opened.

An important question rising in attaining the victory of the world revolution is powerfully pushing ahead with the international communist movement. The international communist movement is a sacred cause to achieve the victory of socialism and communism worldwide and consummate the task of the liberation of mankind. Only when communism wins victory worldwide will the revolutionary cause for independence of the working class and the popular masses be ultimately consummated.

To achieve the victory of the world revolution, the working classes and peoples of many countries in the world should strengthen international unity and cooperation and vigorously stage a joint struggle against imperialism. Under the banner of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism and the anti-imperialist banner of independence, our party will firmly unite with the fraternal communist and workers parties and other progressive political parties in the world and continue to powerfully wage the struggle against imperialism, colonialism, and all types of aggression and subjugation and for the independence of the people.

Our party's cause for the independence of the popular masses can be realized only through continuous struggle. Our party will fulfill its honorable mission to the end on the road of the sacred struggle for the independence of the popular masses.

3. Organizational and Ideological Consolidation of the Party Ranks

Consolidating the party ranks organizationally and ideologically is the main content of the construction of the party and a central aspect of its tasks. The construction of the party is, in a word, the work of founding the party and incessantly strengthening the party ranks organizationally and ideologically. Only when the party ranks are constantly enhanced organizationally and ideologically can the party smoothly perform its leadership role and fulfill its historic mission. Therefore, the first priority in party work should be given to consolidating the party ranks organizationally and ideologically. We have vigorously conducted the work of consolidating the party ranks organizationally and ideologically, always adhering to it as a central task of the party work, and have gained a precious experience and lesson in this course.

The most important thing in consolidating the party ranks organizationally and ideologically is to establish the monolithic ideological system throughout the entire party. Establishing the monolithic ideological system in the party is a decisive guarantee for consolidating the party ranks organizationally and ideologically. Only when the monolithic ideological system is thoroughly established in the party can the party ranks be firmly consolidated, unity and cohesion in their ideological will be solidly realized, and a strong organizational discipline and an orderly organizational system be established throughout the entire party.

From the first days of its founding, our party set forth establishing the monolithic ideological system as a basic line in the construction of the party and has steadily struggled to this end. The entire party should be imbued with one idea to establish the monolithic ideological system in it. To this end, all types of evil ideas running counter to the monolithic idea of the party should be, above all, thoroughly overcome.

Establishing chuche as a struggle to embody the chuche idea in all fields of the revolution and construction and, at the same time, a struggle to overcome all kinds of evil ideas, including flunkeyism and dogmatism, and imbue the entire party with our party's revolutionary idea -- the chuche idea. Because of the peculiarities of the historical development of our country and the complicated circumstances facing our country, the tendencies of flunkeyism and dogmatism once manifested themselves to no small measure in our party.

Flunkeyism is a slavish subjugatory idea of serving big countries and the national nihilism of despising one's own nation. When one is tainted with flunkeyism, one unconditionally worships and follows others and uphold others' things, disregarding one's own things for no reason. Flunkeyists are, without exception, dogmatists.

As shown by historical experiences, if a person follows flunkeyism, he becomes a fool; if a nation does so, the country is ruined; if a party does so, revolution and construction and construction are ruined. Herein lies the fatal harm of flunkeyism. In the past, flunkeyism had an immeasurably harmful influence on the development of our nation and on the communist movement of our country. Looking back upon the history of our country, it was because of flunkeyism that the country was ruined and the communist movement failed in the initial period. Even after the country was liberated, flunkeyism hindered the revolutionary struggle and construction work and laid great obstacles in the way of building our party. Those tainted with flunkeyism and dogmatism tried to mechanically use others' things as a model, not relying on the lines and policies of our party, and to depend on others, not believing in our own strength.

The harm of flunkeyism was more seriously manifested during the war period, and became something that could no longer be tolerated as the socialist revolution and contruction was pushed ahead in a full-dress manner during the postwar period. Without uprooting flunkeyism, the entire party could not be imbued with the revolutionary idea of our party and the party's leadership over the revolutionary struggle and construction work could not be smoothly realized.

Since the first days of leading the revolution and construction, our party has steadily struggled to oppose flunkeyism and establish chuche. During the postwar period in particular, it put forward a resolute policy of establishing chuche and struggled determinedly to implement it. Our party did not overlook even the slight expression of flunkeyism and dogmatism, but timely staged an ideological struggle to overcome it. Our party has strengthened ideological work so that all cadres and party members might deeply study the specific conditions of our country and work in reliance upon our party's lines and policies, and has struggled to establish among functionaries the traits of solving all problems from an independent and creative stand.

With regard to introducing the experience of other countries, our party has seen to it that things are not mechanically used as models, but are introduced in conformity with the specific conditions of our country.

Through the struggle to establish chuche, a great turn took place in setting up the monolithic ideological system of the party. Our party's revolutionary idea, the chuche, idea, has filled the entire party, and all cadres and party members think and act as demanded by the chuche idea. Today the phenomenon of looking up to or yielding to others cannot be found in our party.

The main struggle of our party to establish the monolithic ideological system was also a struggle against all hues of sectarian elements, including factionalism. Along with realizing the embuing of the entire party ideologically, organizational unity should be achieved to establish the party's monolithic ideological system. Only through struggle against all kinds of sectarian elements, including factionalism, can the unity and cohesion of the party ranks be successfully realized.

Factionalism is an antiparty and antirevolutionary element which undermines the unity and cohesion of the party and destroys the revolutionary movement and has its ideological origin in bourgeois ideas -- individual heroism and the idea of seeking fame and a career in particular. For this reason, factionalists resort to all means and methods in displaying fame and realizing their wild ambition for a career.

If a factionalist element is tolerated even a little, the unity and cohesion of the party ranks cannot be achieved and, later, even the existence of the party cannot be maintained.

The reason why our party could not but strongly wage its antifactionalist struggle from the beginning is connected with the fact that it greeted the liberation of the country without overcoming factionalism that emerged in the communist movement in the initial period. There was no unified party of the working class in our country until the fatherland was liberated after the party, organized in 1925, was dissolved due to the factional strife of factionalists and the Japanese imperialists' suppression. For this reason it was impossible to check systematically the communists who were engaging in activities in a dispersed manner at home and abroad, nor was it possible to wage a struggle against factional elements in an organized and vigorous manner. Therefore, factionalism continued to remain, and the factional elements' maneuvers continued in various forms.

Our party was confronted with the historical task, after liberation from the Japanese, of overcoming factionalism, which has caused enormous harmful and poisonous effects on the communist movement of our country. With a view to forming a unity with as many people as possible, our party maintained a policy of generously accomodating, indoctrinating, and remaking even those who participated in factional strife in the past or who were affected by it, if they regretted their mistake and did not engage in acts of factionalism. However, despite the party's consistent indoctrination and repeated advice, the factional elements did not abandon their bad habits of the past but continued acts of factionalism, gravely hampering the party's unity and cohesion. The factional elements in particular openly challenged the party whenever our revolution was confronted with trials and difficulties.

In order to realize their malicious ambition, the factional elements followed the counterrevolutionary road in collusion with the enemy during the stern period of the fatherland liberation war, and even engaged in a plot to overthrow the party and the government during the difficult period of postwar rehabilitation and construction. Seeing through in time the wicken maneuvers of the antiparty and counterrevolutionary factional elements, our party exposed and crushed them, mobilizing the party organizations and party members, and liquidated them in an organized manner. While liquidating the factional elements in an organized manner, we conducted a vigorous ideological struggle on a pan-party basis to root out the vicious ideological effect of factionalsim. Our party adhered to the principle of rigorously discriminating between the leading activist elements and the passive elements in the antifactionalist struggle and of dealing with them on an individual-by-individual and case-by-case basis according to their degree of crime. We handed down thorough and stern punishment to the leading activist elements and accomodated and indoctrinated the passive elements.

In opposing factionalism and strengthening the party's unity and cohesion, the plenary meeting of the sixth party Central Committee held during the fatherland liberation war, the plenary meeting held in August 1956 during the postwar period, the party delegates' meeting held in March 1958 were meetings of historical significance. By holding the plenary meeting of the fifth party Central Committee, we laid bare and purged the antiparty and counterrevolutionary spy ring, and by holding the August plenary meeting and the party delegates' meeting, we liquidated the last remnants of factionalism. By so doing, we overcame factionalism that existed historically, further strengthened the organizational unity of the party ranks, and firmly realized the unity of the Korean communist movement.

After liquidating facionalism, our party waged a vigorous struggle against the antiparty revisionist elements and boosted our party's unity and cohesion onto a new plane. Today, our party's unity and cohesion have reached a very high level. The entire party membership is firmly rallied around the party Central Committee, and is firmly united based on the chuche idea. No power can demolish our party's unity and cohesion formed on the basis of chuche idea.

Our antifactionalist struggle was a very complicated and arduous one. To be frank with you, the antifactionalist struggle carried out by our party was a struggle against the enemies within and without, and it was a difficult a struggle as the fatherland liberation war against the U.S. imperialists.

The main reason why we could successfully carry out the complicated antifactionalist struggle was that our party possessed a strong core. Because our party had strong core consisting of outstanding communists trained in the long and arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, our party was able to successfully defeat the factional elements' maneuvers. The fact that we enhanced the political consciousness of the party members and workers and intensified criticism and self-criticism in the party, especially criticism from below, was a major factor which enabled us to lay bare and purge in a timely manner the factional elements who were maneuvering to split our party ranks.

Through the long struggle to establish the monolithic ideological system, our party has become a strong party in which the entire party membership is imbued with the chuche idea and which is in firm unity and cohesion in terms of ideology and will on the basis of it. It has become a revolutionary party in which the entire party organization and party members function consistently under the monolithic leadership of the party center. Even though we have attained great success in the work of establishing the party's monolithic ideological system, we should not be self-conceited over this. We should never forget the fact that the antiparty and counterrevolutionary elements who were hiding within the party attacked the party when the situation within and without was complicated and when our revolution was undergoing trials.

We are still on the road of revolution. We may encounter unexpected difficulties and trials as our revolution advances. How can we definitely say that apostates will not turn up within our party in the future when our revolution experiences trials? Moreover, under the condition in which there are still remains of the old ideology within us and in which the imperialists' ideological and cultural infiltration from outside is continuing, there is no guarantee that there will not be a revival of various kinds of foreign ideological trends, including flunkeyism, dogmatism, and factionalism.

5. The Party's Leadership Over the Revolution and Construction

In the building of an independent national economy, our party has firmly maintained the basic economic construction line of giving priority to the development of heavy industry while developing light industry and agriculture simultaneously. Our party's basic line of economic construction is a just line advanced on the basis of a correct calculation of the inevitable demands of our country's economic development and of the practical possibilities. It is also a revolutionary line that is capable of successfully accelerating independent national economic construction.

Because we have firmly maintained the line of developing light industry and agriculture simultaneous while giving priority to developing heavy industry, we have been able to lay the solid foundation of an independent national economy and turn our country, once a backward agrarian state, into a powerful socialist industrial state in a short period of time after overcoming the ruins of war that was so tragic.

Realizing the chuche-orientation, modernization, and science-orientation of the national economy is an important task arising in building an independent socialist national economy. Only when the independence of the national economy is firmly guaranteed, the national econmy's technical aspects are ceaselessly modernized, and all production activities are science-oriented can we lay a firm material and technical foundation for socialism and communism.

By vigorously pushing ahead with the modernization and science-orientation of the national economy while at the same time giving priority to the chuche-orientation of the national economy, we have achieved great successes in socialiste economic construction. In the future, too, we should wage a vigorous struggle to realize the chuche-orientation, modernization, and science-orientation of the national economy, while firmly maintaining the basic line of economic construction -- giving priority to the growth of heavy industry, while simultaneously developing light industry and agriculture.

An important task facing the party of the working class in pushing ahead with economic construction after the establishment of the socialist relations of production is to correctly solve the question of economic management. Only when the question of economic management is correctly solved according to the characteristics of a socialist society can we lay a firm foundation for the socialist economy and make production grow at high speed by fully displaying the superiority of the socialit system. Our party has brilliantly solved the question of economic management by creating the taean work system in conformity with the characteristics of the socialist society and the demand of the developing reality.

The taean work system is an economic management system in which the plants and enterprizes conduct all management activities under the collective guidance of the party committee, implement their assigned economic tasks with priority given to political work by mobilizing the production masses, and the upper echelons help the lower echelons with a sense of responsibilty. The essence of the Taean work system lies in having embodied the revolutionary mass line in economic management. The might of the taean work system lies in the very fact that the revolutionary mass line has been embodied in economic management.

Along with the system of industrial management, our party has established a new system of agricultural guidance and a scientific planning system, and through these systems, all the economic guidance institutions are led to give priority to political work, coordinate economic organizational work in conformity with the demands of the taean work system, and run and manage the economy scientifically and rationally by correctly utilizing the socialist economic laws and various economci levers.

Our party is seeing to it that party committees at all levels serve as good helmsmen over the economic work in conformity with the demands of the taean work system. To say that the party committees are serving as helmsmen over the economic work means that they are to define the directions and methods for the execution of the party policy on the basis of collective discussion by the party committees, to adopt correct decisions, and to provide political guarantees so as to mobilize the party members and working people to thoroughly execute the decisions. In other words, to say that the party committees are serving as helmsmen over the economic work with regard to which direction should be followed and what methods should be adopted on the basis of the party policy.

The party committees' taking the role of helmsmen enables them to smoothly realize the party's leadership over the administrative and economic work. It also enables the economic institutions to further raise their self-reliance and sense of responsibility. Party committees at all levels should thoroughly implement the party's economic policies by successfully assuming the role of helmsmen over the economic work.

What is important in the party's leadership over revolution and construction is to build revolutionary armed forces and realize the party's guidance of them. Revolution is a confrontation of strength with the counterrevolution, and revolutionary struggle and construction work are to be carried out in fierce class struggle against the class enemies, including the imperialists and domestic reactionaries. For the revolution to defeat the counterrevolution and to credibly defend the cause of socialist and communist construction against the imperialists' aggression and against the subversive maneuvers of the reactionaries, it is imperative to build Revolutionary Armed Forces without fail.

An important problem arising in building the Revolutionary Armed Forces is to build armed forces into those of the party and boundlessly loyal to the party and the revolution. Loyalty to the pary is life itself to the Revolutionary Armed Forces. The chief mission of the Revolutionary Armed Forces is to safeguard the party and to defend the party's revolutionary cause. In order to make the Revolutionary Armed Forces those of the party loyal to their own mission, it is imperative to organize them with core members of the party as the cadre force, to organize their ranks with sons and daughters of the working people, including the workers and peasants, anda to thoroughly guarantee the party's leadership over the military domains.

The fundamental principle which must be consistently adhered to in building the revolutionary armedforces is to realize self-reliance in defense. Realizing self-reliance in defense means defending one's own country and people with one's own strength. Although it is mandatory to solve all problms arising in revolution and construction on one's own strength, it is particularly important to carry out defense work with one's own strenght.

Of course, we also can obtain some help from the fraternal countries for defense work. However one cannot possibly defend one's own country by relying on some other countries. If one's own strength is weak, assistance from outside also cannot prove its worth. It is imperative to base defense work on one's own strength from start to finish. Our party has energetically struggled to the build Revolutionary Armed Forces by applying the revolutionary principle of self-reliance in defense. The regular armed forces constitute the core of the Revolutionary Armed Forces, and they play the leading role in a revolutionary war of justice. The building of regular armed forces was not only an indispensible demand for building a completely independent state in the wake of national liberation, but it also was an important and pressing question arising in connection with the situation prevailing in our country .

Proceeding from this, along with the work of building the party and establishing a people's government, we vigorously pushed ahead with the work of building regular armed forces in the days immediately following national liberation. An important task that faced us in the course of building the regular armed forces was to prepare able military political cadres [kunsa chongchi kanbu]. Without able military political cadres, it is neither possible to build regular armed forces nor strengthen their might.

We concentrated our efforts on giving priority to the work of training military political cadres over the building of the regular armed forces. In order to solve the question of the cadres required to build the regular armed forces on our own, we managed to found Pyongyang Institute and Central Security Cadres School against all odds in the days that followed national liberation. In these we have trained a great number of military political cadres from the workers and peasants. Basing ourselves on the experience gained in the course of the building Revolutionary Armed Forces as well as the experience gained in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, we organized the People's Army, a reliable defender of the party and the revolution, to develop and strengthen the Korean People's Revolutionary Army into a regular army after national liberation.

The work of defending the country is also work for the people as well as the people's own work. When all the people rise in defending the fatherland in rock-firm unity, they can ably repel any aggressors. We have founded civilian armed forces, including the Red Worker-Peasant Militia, and have endlessly strengthened its combat capabilities. Our party set forth a military line, the keynote of which is to turn the entire army into an army of cadres, modernize it, arm all the people, and fortify the whole country. It has implemented this, thereby building up our People's Army to be a one-beats-a-hundred revolutionary army, arming the entire people and turning the whole country into an impregnable fortress.

In order to realize self-reliance in national defense, it is imperative to properly combine economic construction with defense building. Of course, the important mission in building a new society is to carry out economic construction well. However, we cannot possibly afford to neglect defense building while stressing economic construction. An independent and sovereign state should adhere to economic construction and defense building simultaneously, combining them appropriately in conformity with the demands of the situation. Our party has always paid deep attention to economic construction and defense building. Whenever the dangers of war were felt as a result of the growing nakedly aggressive maneuvers by the enemy, our party put forward policies of combining the development of economic construction with defense building and concentrated great efforts on defense building.

By constantly strengthening the material and technical foundations of the defense industry, we have been able to produce and supply by ourselves the necessary weapons and combat and technical materials. The military and political situation prevailing in Korea today requires that our revolutionary armed forces be further strengthened. We should strengthen our revolutionary armed forces in all aspects in conformity with the demands of the prevailing situation and be fully prepared for war even if it should break out at any time due to the enemy's provocative maneuvers.

The party of the working class should conduct external activities and ensure the uniform guidance of the foreign affairs of the country as a whole. Each country's revolution is part of the world revolution, and the party of the working class in each country is a unit of the international communist movement. Revolutionary struggle by the party and people in each country is to be developed on the strength of international support and encouragement. The victory of the world revolution is to be achieved as a result of joint struggle by the parties and peoples of various countries in the world.

The party of the working class can provide a favorable international environment for the revolution in its own country and fulfill its duty borne before the world revolution only when it actively conducts external activities and correctly and uniformly guides the nation's foreign affairs as a whole. The basic idea consistently maintained by our party in external activities is independence, friendship, and peace.

In the past period our party has formulated foreign policy by embodying the idea of independence, friendship, and peace, conducted external activities accordingly, and has correctly led state institutions and social organizations in their external work. It is very important to firmly maintain independence in external relations. We have made a point of independently shaping all foreign policies in the interests of our people and in accordance with the demands of the revolution, dealt with all problems arising in the field of international relations on the basis of our own judgment and views, and developed relations with other parties and other countries on the principle of complete equality and mutual respect.

We have made tenacious efforts to strengthen the unity and cohesion of the socialist forces and the international communist movement.

The socialist forces and the international communist movement are the most potent revolutionary forces in our era, as well as a decisive factor that propels the development of human history. We have directed preferential attention toward the consolidation of friendly ties with the socialist countries. The socialist countries are class brothers which are struggling for common goals and ideals. Under the banner of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism, we have made every possible effort to unite firmly with the socialist countries and to develop friendly and cooperative relations with them.

Even when differences of views emerged among the socialist countries, we have done nothing that could undermine their unity, but encouraged them toward their unity. We have always called on the socialist countries to observe the principles of 1) opposing imperialism; 2) support for colonial national liberation movement and labor movement in countries; 3) continuing to advance toward socialism and communism; and 4) nonintervention, mutual respect, equality, and reciprocity, saying that if they observe such principles, they should unite on the basis of these four principles by putting differences in views behind. As a result of our tenacious efforts, the friendly and cooperative relations between our country and the socialist countries are now developing in a good direction on a new and higher stage.

By solving problems arising in relations with the communist parties and workers' parties on the basis of mutual understanding and in the spirit of comradely cooperation through contacts and negotiations, our party is actively contributing to strengthening the unity and cohesion of the international communist movement. We are making positive efforts for the consolidation and development of the Nonaligned Movement and for the development of friendly and cooperative relations with the Third World countries. On the basis of the noble idea of anti-imperialist cause for independence, we are strengthening unity and cohesion with the nonaligned countries and the Third World countries, while broadly developing economic and technical cooperation and cultural exchanges with them.

We have established friendly relations with the capitalist countries that respect our country's sovereignty and are friendly with our country and are now developing economic and cultural exchanges with them. It is our party and people's noble internationalist duty to support and encourage the struggle of countries engaged in fighting. We are helping the oppressed peoples' colonial national liberation struggle with whatever we can do, while at the same time supporting the struggle by the working class and working people in the capitalist countries for democratic freedoms and class liberation. We resolutely suport the struggle of the peoples of all countries against imperialism and for independence.

Our party is waging a struggle for durable peace and security in the world. Together with the world's peace-loving people, our party and people are ardently struggling against the imperialists' aggression and war maneuvers and, in particular, are actively struggling to eliminate the dangers of war and defend peace on the Korean peninsula and the Northeast Asian region. Our party also will constantly strengthen our revolution's international solidarity in the future by actively developing unity and friendly and cooperative relations with all the progressive countries of the world, including the socialist and nonaligned countries, by holding aloft the banner of independence, friendship, and peace.

7. The Party Is a Guide in Socialist and Communist Society.

The struggle of the popular masses for chajusong is the historical cause to be continued from generation to generation under the leadership of the party. To lead the cause of the chajusong of the popular masses to final victory, it is essential to continuously strengthen and develop the party, the vanguard organization of the working class, as revolution advances and society develops.

Based on the success and experience already attained in the construction of the party, we should continuously strengthen and develop our party to be a chuche revolutionary party that will lead revolution and construction to the end and that will dependably guide the socialist and communist society. In order to strengthen and develop the party to be a guide in socialist and communist society, we should correctly inherit the party's cause generation to generation. The basis of inheriting the party's cause is to correctly solve the problem of the successor [hugyeja] to the political leader [chongchijok suryong].

The problem of a successor in the construction of the working-class party is the problem of inheriting the position and role of the political leader. The leader's [suryongui] leadership [yongdojok] position and role should be inherited by the successor without change. By whom and how the cause of the working-class party, which continues generation to generation, is inherited is an important problem related to the destiny of the party, the destiny of revolution. The working-class party should have as a successor a people's leader [chidoja] who is boundlessly faithful to the party and revolution and who has the personality and qualifications to fully realize political leadership over the whole society. This is necessary to adhere to, inherit, and develop the party's cause without swerving and without vicissitudes no matter what difficult and complicated situation may be created in the course of the advance of revolution.

In order to correctly inherit the party's cause, it is imperative to lay a solid organizational and ideological foundation and to thoroughly establish the leadership system to realize the leadership of a successor, while correctly choosing him. Only when the work to lay the foundation of the party and to establish its leadership system is done well can the militancy of the party and its leadership ability be enhanced, the political and ideological unity and purity of the party ranks be defended, and revolution and construction be led to victory. Therefore, the working-class party should grasp this work as an important problem in the construction of the party.

Our party has satisfactorily solved the problem of inheriting the revolutionary cause. The leadership [sunoebu] of the party has been firmly built up, the party's organizational and ideological foundation laid as firm as a rock, and the leadership [yongdo] system of the party firmly established so as to inherit the idea and the leadership [yongdo] of our party. This is a shining success and a great victory in the construction of our party. We should, in the future, further consolidate the organizational and ideological foundation of the party. In particular, we should pay deep attention to cementing the political and ideological unity and cohesion of the party around the party Central Committee. All cadres and party members should defend the unity and cohesion of the entire party around the party Central Committee like the pupils of their eyes and should wage a resolute struggle, firmly rallying around the party Central Committee, against all the phenomena gnawing at the party's unity and cohesion. We should thoroughly establish the leadership system of the party Central Committee and should continuously carry out the work of consolidating this system.

[Text] Pyongyang June 5 (KCNA) -- The text of lecture "Historical Experience in the Building of the Workers' Party of Korea" authored by the great leader President Kim Il-song on the occasion of the 40th anniversary of the founding of Kim Il-song higher party school is evoking great repercussions upon the people of all strata.

Comprehensively analysed in the work are historical experiences in our party building including experience in the struggle for founding the party, experience in consolidating the party ranks organisationally and ideologically and in achieving unity and cohesion of the party and the popular masses, and experience in enhancing the leadership function of the party as the General Staff of the revolution.

Immensely rich and versatile exploits and experiences gained in our party building have invincible vitality in further strengthening the part as the guide of socialist and communist society, and enhancing its leadership role. For this, the work is a guiding principle which should be firmly adhered to in accomplishing the cause of building a chuche-based revolutionary party and energetically pushing ahead with the communist movement in our age.

Choe Kum-sun, president of Kim Hyong-chik University of Education, pointed out that what is most pround and brilliant among the experiences achieved by our party is that the problem of the heir to the political leader has been correctly solved, organisational and ideological foundations for realizing his leadership laid and his leadership system established. She went on:

The cause of a party is one which continues through generations and, accordingly, there inevitably arises the question of succeeding the revolution. The essential point in carrying forward the cause of the party is to correctly solve the question of the heir to the political leader. Today the party's leadership has been firmly built in our country so as to carry forward the idea and guidance of the party.

Our people confidently see a bright future of the party and the revolution in the greatness of dear Comrade Kim Chong-il who is successfully carrying forward the revolutionary cause of President Kim Il-song. The theory on the prospect of the party elaborated in the work is a precious ideological and theoretical wealth which gives deepest conviction and hope to our people and the revolutionary peoples, and an undying banner which guarantees an enternal prosperity to mankind, she stressed.

U.S. HOUSE RESOLTION ON KOREA BLAMES NORTH

[Text] Pyongyang June 8 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN and MINJU CHOSON Sunday hit at the provocative "resolution" slinging mud at our republic, which was adopted by the U.S. House Foreign Relations Committe on June 5. In the resolution U.S. Congress stringed out rubbish, urging us to renounce the attempts to "take over" South Korea, ease the tensions in the Koean peninsula and "agree" to "simultaneous entry" of North and South of Korea "into the United Nations."

NODONG SINMUN says in its signed commentary that this is a base ruse to shift on to us the blame for the strained situation on the Korean peninsula by hurling groundless slanders at us and a foolish attempt to justify the U.S. moves of split and war against the Korean people. It continues:

The chorus about "threat from the north" in which the administration, military and even Congress of the United States have joined is no more than a smear campaign to lay at the door of our republic beforehand the blame for another war they are going to start in Korea.

The Korean peninsula is today a place where the danger of a new war, a thermonuclear war, is mot acute in the world. The constant arms buildup of the U.S. forces and the puppet army in South Korea and their large-scale war exercises there for the completion of nuclear war preparations are the main factor of the growing danger. As facts indicate, there exists on the Korean peninsula threat of northward invasion from the south, not "threat of southward invasion."

U.S.-SOUTH JOINT NAVAL EXERCISE DENOUNCED

[Text] Pyongyang June 7 (KCNA) -- The U.S.-South Korea Combined Forces Command announced that the U.S. Seventh Fleet and many war ships of the South Korean puppet Navy will hold a provocative military exercise from June 8 to 14 under the name of the U.S.-South Korean joint naval exercise.

The scheme of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges to hold another large-scale military exercise even before the powder smoke of the "Team Spirit-86" war rehearsal involving forces more than 200,000 strong died down patently shows once again that they are a wrecker of peace and a criminal opposed to the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea.

ABE REMARKS ON KOREA IN SHEVARDNADZE TALKS CITED

SK060820 Seoul YONHAP in English 0809 GMT 6 Jan 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 6 (YONHAP) -- Foreign Minister Shintaro Able said Friday Japan will continue to cooperate in having the Soviet Union allow Koreans in Sakhalin to visit their homeland or repatriate them in recongnition of his country's responsibility in the past for the Korean expatriates.

Abe said the Soviet Union repeated its previous stand that the issue is basically one to be dealt with between it and North Korea, when he asked his Soviet counterpart Eduard Shevardnadze anew late last month to settle the matter.

An estimated 40,000 Koreans, taken to the former Japanese island during the World War II for Japan's war effort, have reportedly been stranded there.

Abe also called on Shevardnadze to positively cooperate in the staging of the 1988 Seoul Summer Olympics in light of the games' success in contributing to easing tensions on the Korean peninsula and to promoting world peace.

In response, the Soviet foreign minister noted that a sports meeting was under way between South and North Korea and that consideration should also be given to North Korea's position on the matter.

Abe made the remarks while meeting with a group of visiting Korean reporters assigned to cover their Foreign Ministry. Outlining the latest conference with his Soviet counterpart, Abe said Shevardnadze expressed welcome for the promotion of dialogue between the two Koreas, when he suggested cooperation by powers surrounding the peninsula for the expedition of the inter-Korean contact. There are no diplomatic ties between Moscow and Seoul.

On the proposed visit to Seoul by Japan's Crown Prince Akihito, Abe said consultations were still in progress about the timing and other details, adding he hopes Akihito's visit could draw welcome from the whole nation.

Abe told the Korean reporters that he would announce a Japanese doctrine emphasizing unity and peace in Asia, when he attends an expanded foreign ministers' meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) slated for late this month in Manila.

FURTHER ON JAPANESE HISTORY TEXTBOOK CONTROVERSY

Foreign Ministry To Investigate

SK070820 Seoul YONHAP in English 0803 GMT 7 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 7 (YONHAP) -- The Foreign Ministry will look into the alleged distortions of historical facts in a Japanese high school history textbook, a ministry source said Saturday. The ministry also plans to decide whether or not the Japanese Education Ministry should approve the new history textbook, which is scheduled to be released to the public on July 10.

The ministry's plan followed a decision by the ruling Democratic Justice Party to take issue with the contents of the new histroy textbook, which reportedly contains false descriptions of past relations between Korea and Japan. The DJP called on the government to investigate whether or not the concealment of Japan's wartime atrocities and the "historical crimes" it committed during its colonial rule over Korea reflects the official attitude of the Japanese Government. The ministry is trying to determine how the Korean-Japanese relations are described in the new history textbook, the source said.

According to reports from Tokyo, the textbook contains no accounts of Korean drafted for forced labor, the compulsory worship of Japanese gods at Shinto shrines, the forced renaming of Koreans, the forced use of Japanese language among Koreans or the expropriation of Korean land. Moreover, the textbook describes a Korean independence fighter who assassinated a senior Japanese politician held responsible by Koreans for Japan's annexation of Korea as a "hoodlum."

"We have grave concern about the contents of the textbook," the source said. "Therefore, it is very natural for us to keep a close eye on whether or not the Japanese Education Ministry will approve the textbook."

A similar controversy between Seoul and Tokyo took place some years ago, when the Japanese Government pledged to rectify any distortions of historical facts in Japanese history textbooks.

[Editorial: "Breach of 'Textbook Pledge'"]

It was just about four years ago that a so-called "history textbook war" was waged by Asian nations, including Korea and China, against Japan's shrewd scheme to whitewash its devastating wrongs done before and during World War II, by rewriting history and using words such as "advance" in lieu of "invasion." After protracted diplomatic rows, the Japanese government formally promised the Asian nations to correct a number of erroneous and misleading descriptions which, in Korea's case, affect not only modern records but also the ancient history of binational relations.

Consequently, the latest instance of "history distortion" prompts serious concern as it constitutes a breach of the Tokyo government's diplomatic commitment, which in turn is feared to raise international misgivings about the credibility and trustworthiness, let alone the integrity, of Japanese records and intentions at large.

While granting that the compilation of school textbooks is essentially within the realm of domestic affairs of a country, it must be stressed that Japan's accounts, which directly concern the history of foreign relations, differ signficantly from those of other countries.

That is because of Japan's outrageous militarism and colonialism in the recent past, which devastated and tortured so many Asian nations -- with Korea having suffered the most.

What is crucial is that the postwar generation in Japan learn a precious lesson from the country's past, based on the study of accurate and factual historical accounts -- an approach that would help foster more friendly relations among Asians. Such a factual teaching, however disgraceful it may be for Japanese to acknowledge, is deemed all the more necessary as Japan has reemerged as a major power -- as an economic superpower, drawing international resentments over its trade surplus, amid indications that it is being armed with formidable military muscle.

To be noted in this regard is the undeniable fact that the Asian peoples, including the Koreans, still harbor negative feelings about what the Japanes did to them and are apprehensive of Japan's growing dominance today. As a saying goes, the Asians may forgive the Japanese wrongs, but they cannot afford to forget them altogether.

Thus, the Japanese government, having the authority to sanction the content of textbooks, is urged to take swift, corrective actions against the disputed history textbook accounts, in compliance with its earlier promises, for the good of properly educating Japanese students and for the sake of maintaining amity among the Asian nations.

JAPAN SAYS NKDP-JSP OFFICIAL CONTACTS DESIRABLE

[Text] Tokyo -- The government of Japan deems it desirable for Korea's major opposition New Korea Democratic Party and the Japan Socialist Party to hold official contacts, a senior Japanese official said Friday (June 6) Hiroshi Fukuda, deputy director-general for Asian affairs at the foreign ministry, flatly denied reports that his government had solicited Seoul not to issue visas to JSP chairman Masashi Ishibashi and his delegation who were invited by Korea's NDP to visit Korea around May 27-29.

"Such contacts will not influence the relations between Japan and North Korea," he said. "There is no correlation between the fact that the JSP is willing to improve its relations with the Republic of Korea and the possibility that Japan would do the same thing with North Korea," he said.

ROK NOT ALLOWED HONG KONG CONSULATE AFTER 1997

[Text] Hong Kong (YONHAP) -- After the return to China of sovereignty over Hong Kong in 1997, countries like Korea that have no diplomatic relations with China will be allowed to maintain only private representation here, a neutral newspaper said Thursday, indicating that Korea will not be able to keep its present general consulate.

The Chinese-language In BAO quoted an official who had attended a recent meeting of the commission on drafting Hong Kong's basic law in the Chinese special economic zone of Shenzen. At the session, Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Zhou Nan addressed Hong Kong's future foreign relations in a speech.

The commission member, speaking on condition of anonymity, said after 1997, if a foreign country is to establish an official or semi-official agency in Hong Kong, it will be required to register it with the Chinese Foreign Ministry and to obtain approval from the central government. But foreign countries will be able to set up private bodies only with approval from the government of Hong Kong special administraive zone.

U.S. TEXTILE NEGOTIATIONS OPEN 9 JUN IN SEOUL

Proposal Runs Counter to GATT

[Editorial: "ROK-U.S. Textile Meeting"]

We note with particular interest that the United States is pressing once again for a three-year protectionist freeze on textile imports from Korea under a bilateral accord barely a week after many participants in the multilateral ministers' talks for the New Round called for a "standstill" on import restriction measures by all countries, and for a "rollback" in the future. The proposed freeze, it must be pointed out, goes counter to the spirit of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), the backbone of the existing international trade order, that calls for international trade negotiations on the basis of "multilateralism," instead of "bilateralism."

What is more, it would involve scrapping the six-year Korea-U.S. textile quota agreement which will not expire until the end of 1987. Under this accord, Korea agreed to limit the annual growth of its textile exports to a mere one percent for wool products and 2.5 percent for other fiber goods. it must also be noted that renewal of the Multi-Fiber Arrangement (MFA), a 51-nation agreement governing textile trade that is due to expire next month, is being negotiated between the developed and the developing countries. As the MFA was orignially intended to be a temporary departure from GATT and has already been extended twice to allow enough time for the advanced countries to enhance the competitiveness of their textile industries, we see no justification for extending it again.

Under such circumstances, we view any bilateral negotiations between Korea and the United States on new textile import curbs as premature. We, therefore, urge that Washington reconsider its unilateral protectionist pressure against the Korea textile trade.

U.S., ROK Viewpoints Differ

[Text] Seoul, June 9 (YONHAP) -- Delegates from South Korea and the United States expressed widely differing views on Monday, the opening day of the Korean-U.S. trade conference, in Kwachon, a suburb of Seoul.

In the bilateral talks, the U.S. delegates briefed their Korean counterparts on a U.S. proposal to freeze Korean textile exports to the United States at the 1985 level and strongly demanded that Korea, a major textile exporting country, cooperate on the matter before U.S. lawmakers override President Reagan's veto of the "Thurmond bill." U.S. congressmen are scheduled to vote on a motion to override the veto on Aug 6.

In response, the Korean delegates said that the U.S. demand contravenes the Multi-Fiber Arrangement (MFA) and the existing bilateral accord. They urged the U.S. side to drop its unfair demand, arguing that the issues between them should be resolved in accordance with the results of the ongoing MFA negotiations.

Kim Chul-su, first assistance minister at the Trade and Industry Ministry, leads a ten-member South Korean delegation, and Charles R. Carlisle, U.S. chief textile negotiator, heads a seven-member U.S. delagation.

In the Korean-U.S. talks in February, the United States demanded that Korea freeze its textile exports to the United States at the 1985 level for three years, beginning this year. The U.S. Government also argued that silk and linen should be classified under the category of items subject to additional import restraints. South Korea exported 2.6 billion U.S. dollars worth of textiles in 1985, accounting for 10 percent of the total U.S. textile imports. South Korea is world's second largest textile exporting country, following Taiwan.

STUDENTS ATTEMPT SIT-IN AT U.S. EMBASSY 8 JUN

[Text] Seoul, June 9 (YONHAP) -- Police arrested nine students who tried to break into the U.S. Embassy in downtown Seoul on Sunday night. According to police, Pak Song-pok, 22, a senior majoring in economics, and eight other students, including three coeds, from Korea University were caught trying to climb over the embassy wall at about 9:20 p.m. (12:20 GMT). Pak and six other students were arrested by guards as they rushed toward the right side of the front wall of the embassy compound after igniting a makeshift torch as a signal. Three other students were arrested 20 minutes later, after climbing over the wall, according to police.

Police said they confiscated five kinds of leaflets, six steel pipes and two makeshift torches from the students. The students' leaflets were titled "Our Position on Entering the U.S. Embassy," "Message to the New Korea Democratic Party" (leading opposition political party in Korea) and "Message to the Patriotic Citizens." On a street near the embassy, police found more leaflets, a headband, two banners and two empty paint thinner containers, which were confirmed to belong to the students.

Police said that the students had planned to stage a sit-in and to demand a press conference with both domestic and foreign news media, a meeting with the U.S. ambassador and debate on the current political situation. If their demands were not met, the students had planned to continue the sit-in indefinitely, until all of them were arrested, according to police investigators. The students' demands also included the cancellation of a plan to set up a special National Assembly committe on constitutional revision.

The police investigators said that Sunday's break-in attempt was masterminded by the head of a nationwide dissident students' organization that planned a similar break-in last Thursday.

MOKHTAR CONCLUDES TRADE VISIT, DEPARTS SEOUL

SK050702 Seoul YONHAP in English 0640 GMT 5 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 5 (YONHAP) -- Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja Thursday urged South Korea businesses to step up their efforts to sell more goods to Indonesia in order to reduce Korea's deficit in its trade with his nation. In a press conference held shortly before the conclusion of his three-day official visit here, Mokhtar said that if Korean businessmen do not try to market their products in Indonesia, the trade imbalance will deepen further, due to Korea's importation of Indonesian liquefied natural gas (LNG). "The correction of the trade imbalance is in the interest of both countries," said Mohktar. "It is up to South Korean businessmen to narrow Korea's deficit in bilateral trade."

He said that the trade volume between Korea and Indonesia has reached 950 million U.S. dollars per year -- more than seven times that recorded in 1973, when Seoul and Jakarta established diplomatic relations. Indonesia records an annual surplus of about 400 million U.S. dollars in its trade with Korea, according to the Indonesian minister.

Mokhtar said he was deeply impressed by Korea's continuous economic development and attributed its success in part to the leadership of President Chon Tu-hwan.

In their meeting here on Wednesday, Mokhtar and his Korean counterpart, Yi Won-kyong, discussed ways to promote bilateral cooperation, especially in the fields of economics and trade, he said. The two foreign ministers also agreed to set up a joint commission to promote economic cooperation between their two countries.

Referring to the ongoing negotiations over the price of Indonesian LNG, Mokhtar said: "The most important thing is the stability of prices and delivery. We should wait until the present fluctuation of oil prices stops."

The decline of crude oil prices on international markets has triggered a renewal of negotiations over the price of imported LNG. Under a 20-year contract signed by Korean and Indonesian officials in 1983, the price of LNG imported into Korea is linked with the international price of oil. Seoul has insisted that the price of LNG should be linked to the spot market price of crude oil, which ranges from 12 to 13 dollars per barrel, while Jakarta asserts that the base price of crude oil is 20 dollars per barrel. Mokhtar also said that Korean and Indonesian officials will hold a meeting in Jakarta in July to resolve the matter of readjusting the price of Indonesian LNG.

Asked about the prospects for relations between Jakarta and Pyongyang, he said that Indonesia's relations with North Korea are reflected in their bilateral trade volume of 21 million dollars -- about 45 times smaller than the trade volume between Indonesia and South Korea. Indonesia maintains diplomatic ties with both Seoul and Pyongyang.

Mokhtar left here on Thursday for Hong Kong, where he made a brief stopover en route to Jakarta.

KBS TO REDUCE ADS, REORGANIZE ADVISORY BOARD

YONHAP Report

SK070826 Seoul YONHAP in English 0734 GMT 7 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 7 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government has decided to drastically cut back on advertisements aired by the Korea Broadcasting System (KBS) in an effort to break out of the prolongued controversy over the management of KBS. It has also decided to reorganize the network's Advisory Board, creating a more powerful body comprising lawmakers from both the ruling and opposition parties.

In a plan it finalized through consultations with the ruling Democratic Justice Party on Saturday, the Culture and Information Ministry announced that it will abolish 'block' advertisements aired between programs, beginning July 1, and will remove all commercials from the KBS' television station No 1. KBS will continue to run the advertisements of sponsors of sports programs and public message, however.

The ministry plans to boost KBS' Advisory Board membership from 21 now to 30. Three lawmakers from both the ruling and opposition parties will be appointed to the board in order to promote public interest and to balance the network's news programs. The revision of regulations concerning the operation of the new board, which will also comprise representatives from the press, judicial, religious and academic circles, will reflect the board's mandatory decisions involving the production of KBS programs.

Under the Culture and Information Ministry's plan, both KBS and the Korea Broadcasting Advertising Corp. will be required to submit their balance sheets to the board, which will open them to the public.

The plan would also improve the system of collecting the viewers' fee, exempting poor people and reducing the fee by 40 percent for viewers living in remote areas where reception is not clear.

Unlike the past practice of basing the fee on how many TV sets a household owns, KBS will collect the same fee from all families, regardless of how many sets they own. In addition, deductions will be given to those viewers who make payments in advance.

As a result of the reform measures, KBS will lose 25.6 billion won (28.8 million U.S. dollars: one dollar is worth about 890 won) per year -- 14.3 billion won from the viewer's fee account and 11.3 billion won from the advertising account, according to the ministry. Therefore, KBS plans to scale down all its investment projects, except for those involving Olympic broadcasting facilities, the facilities of local stations in provincial areas and facilities that improve reception in remote areas, the ministry reported.

A ranking official at the Culture and Information Ministry who announced the plan said that the government has worked out concrete measures for developing KBS' news programming, improving its system for collecting viewers' fees and enhancing advertising to meet the aspirations of the viewers. He said that the government will provide an institutional apparatus to maintain public interest in all KBS programs, in view of the fact that KBS is a public broadcasting network. In addition, the government will take the public nature of KBS into consideration in planning the network's programming.

THE KOREA TIMES Report

[Text] The government will seek to discontinue the running of all commercials on the state-run KBS-1 TV after staging the Olympic Games in 1988 and decided to gradually curtail the advertisements until then. A comprehensive reform program of the KBS, announced by the Culture-Information Ministry yesterday, provides that the KBS-TV will discontinue "block spot commercials" shown during prime time from next month. But the Korea Broadcasting System will continue commercials for sports and public campaigns till 1988, the ministry said. The KBS-TV has been airing the block spot commercials twice a day, at 7 a.m. and at 8:30 p.m. for five minutes each.

In order to promote the fairness of news reports, the Advisory Commission on Brodcasts of the KBS will be invigorated to virtually control the composition of programs. It will be required to report the results of its activities to the Korea Broadcasting Commission, which will in turn report to the National Assembly annually.

Members of the advisory commission will be increased to 30 from the present 21. They will include three lawmakers to be recommended by the ruling and opposition parties. Other advisory commission members will be selected by the Korea Broadcasting Commission among those recommended by various functional circles.

The Korea Broadcasting Commission will be authorized to make public balance sheets of the KBS and Korea Broadcasting Advertising Corporation, an exclusive supplier of advertisements to the KBS and Munhwa Broadcasting Corporation (MBC).

The reform of the state-run KBS management has emerged as a major political issue recently as a campaign rejecting the payment of KBS-TV viewing fees due to the network's alleged "unfair and biased" news reports. The drive started by a religious organization turned into a new form of a civil disobedience movement, gaining nationwide support.

The KBS will continue to collect the subscription fees under the reform plan, which was finalized through a consultation between the Culture-Information Ministry and the ruling Democratic Justice Party yesterday morning. But poor people who are subsidized by the government and those who live in blanket areas will be exempted from the fees from next month and from next year, respectively. Households with more than one television set will pay 2,500 won per month beginning July 1. Thus far, the monthly fee has been levied per TV set.

NKDP Says Reform Unsatisfactory

[Text] Rep. Yi Taek-hui, chief policy maker of the major opposition New Korea Democratic Party, said yesterday that the government's measures to improve the operation of the state-run KBS-TV were unsatisfactory. He demanded an immediate abolution of the TV viewing fees across the nation, which is currently 2,500 won per month for one color TV set. Yi said, "The government measures should focus on making impartial news coverage take early root."

FURTHER COVERAGE OF SRV'S HOANG BICH SON VISIT

Discusses Regional Issues

[Text] Vietnam has not yet set a date for the promised release of 300 Thai fisherman because it is waiting for procedural preparations by Thailand, said Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son before his departure for Hanoi yesterday. He claimed that in the past when Vietnam fixed a date, Thailand set it back because their procedures couldn't be completed. He cited in particular delays in the "collection of fines" to repay the expenses of local authorities connected with the fishermen.

Mr Son told Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphon that he "doesn't have the exact figure of the total number of Thai fishermen captured" by the Vietnamese. "The Vietnamese territory, especially in the South, is violated daily. Even as I set here there might be fishermen caught in Vietnam," he said.

The issue of the Thai fishermen was brought up by Mr Arun during a meeting at Don Muang on Monday. Mr Arun also had asked for Vietnamese help to secure the release of Thai soldiers being held in Kampuchea. The fate of the Thai soldiers must be "decided completely by Kampuchean Government," Mr Son said. During the meeting, he agreed to forward Thailand's concerns to the Heng Samrin government.

On other issues, Mr Son reiterated his government's assertion that Vietnam was not responsible for last weeks shelling of the Site 8 civilian refugee camp. "We did not shell from Kampuchean territory into Thai territory. International organisation sources assumed that the shelling was from the Khmer Rouge," he said. He also said that Vietnam has withdrawn one third of its Armed Forces from Kampuchea since the "partial withdrawal" begun, but he declined to say how many troops that fraction represents. He declined, too, to comment on possible changes in the Vietnamese administration, saying that the decisions rest with Vietnam's Communist Party congress in December.

Mr Son stopped in Bangkok on his return from New York. He said that his discussions with Mr Arun were "aimed at building up friendly and good neighbourly relations between the two countries."

Departs for Hanoi

During his talks with Mr Arun Thursday, Mr Son rejected Thai charges that Vietnamese troops in Cambodia were responsible for the cross-border shelling that killed 12 Cambodian refugees and wounded 45 others in a camp inside Thailand last week.

Mr Son said shells that hit Site Eight refugee camp, lying five kilometers (three meters) from the border, could have been fired by units of the Cambodian Army during a mopping-up operation against Cambodian resistance guerrillas in areas opposite the border. Mr Son reiterated Hanoi's pledge to respect Thai sovereignty and territorial integrity.

SECURITY COUNCIL ON AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL CHARGE

[Text] The spokesman for Amnesty International, in a press release, charged Thai officials with torturing three Cambodian civilians taken into custody 17 March 1986 by Thai authorities for collaborating with Cambodian bandits in robberies and assaults of Cambodian refugees and rangers at Khao I-Dang Center and Site 7. The organization requested the Thai Government appoint an independent team to investigate the matter for fairness and safety of the three accused Cambodian based on the principal of human rights.

The National Security Council has investigated the charge made by Amnesty International. The results are as follows:

1. The three Cambodians, Sa Hoeun, Keo Mayura, and Keo Chantha, are registered at Khao I-Dang Center. They were taken into custody by Task Force 80 on 21 March 1986 following interrogations of other Cambodian witnesses. It was established that the three cooperated with Cambodian bandits who robbed Cambodian refugees at the center on 5 and 18 March. As a result, one ranger was killed, four others, both rangers and Cambodian refugees, were seriously wounded. Four Cambodian refugees were robbed of their material property. The crime was a serious case substantiated by individual Cambodian witnesses. The three were therefore arrested and detained pending legal action to be taken under Thai law. They are now awaiting trial.

2. The measure taken by Thai authorities is correct and within their scope of responsibility and rights. The National Security Council asserts that no torture was used against the three during investigations by Thai authorities and that they were not seriously wounded. The three are in good health and have no trace of physical injuries purportedly caused by torture by Thai officials.

3. The victims of robberies and attacks by Cambodian bandits has not been only cambodian refugees but also Thai border villagers and Army rangers who supervise and provide protection to the Cambodian refugees at the center. Similar incidents had taken place many times before. It is thus appropriate to take legal action against the culprits who are arrested, a practice which is common in all countries.

4. The accusation by Amnesty International may be the result of either one of the two following reasons. First, it may have received distorted information or an incomplete report and then jumped to conclusions without using good reason. Second, it may have purposely made the accusation to discredit Thailand for some reason. No matter what the rationale, the charge made by Amnesty International is unfair to the Thai Government, the Cambodian refugees at the center and the Thai rangers and border villagers.

As for the question of human rights posed by the organization, Amnesty International should in fact pay more attention to the human rights of the victims of the three Cambodians' acts of violence instead of trying to protect those known to have committed serious crimes.

5. It is Thailand's responsibility in providing security at the various refugee centers to guarantee peace and order for the refugees' own sake. The arrest of criminals inside Thai territory is based on law and international human rights. It is Thailand's sovereign right to conduct the affairs inside the country to achieve peace and order without outside interference.

6. The Thai Government stressed that it has abided by humanitarian principles in giving help to the refugees over the past 11 years. More than 500,000 refugees have safely taken temporary shelter in Thailand before being resettled in third countries. The Thai Government has fully cooperated with international and charity organizations in supervising and assisting the refugees, and they have come into close consultation each time specific problems or uncertainties arose. The same should apply with Amnesty International; it should have asked Thailand its questions so that Thailand could supply it with answers. The report released by Amnesty International reflects ill intent toward Thailand. The organization should review its operation on this matter.

GUNS, AMMUNITION SEIZED IN CHIANG MAI

BK061328 Bangkok MATICHON in Thai 6 Jun 86 p 16

Kuomintang Rockets, Ammunition

[Text] Bangkok, June 6 (AFP) -- Police have seized a large amount of ammunition and rockets believed to belong to remnants of China's nationalist forces and arrested a truck driver in northern Thailand, police said Friday. Police said they seized about 20,000 rounds of automatic rifle ammunition and 55 rockets Thursday from the truck on a highway in Chiang Mai Province, 700 kilometers (420 miles) north of here.

The arrested driver, Bunra Panyabua, told police he was hired by Kuomintang (KMT) nationalists to transport the ammunition from Mae Hong Son Province, near the Thai-Burmese border, to their bastion in a district of Chiang Mai.

The KMT settlers fled Yunnan after the Chinese communists' victory in 1949.

About 13,000 KMT troops and their families are thought to be living in settlements set up in sensitive areas of Chiang Mai, Mae Hong Son and the nothernmost province of Chiang Rai. According to Western narcotics officials, some of the settlers have been key actors in regional narcotics trade, as well as refining opium form the regions' notorious Golden Triangle into heroin.

CHINESE TROOPS SHELL CHILDREN'S SUMMER CAMPS

[Text] Hanoi VNA June 7 -- At 3:00 p.m. on June 1, Chinese troops fired hundreds of artillery rounds at summer camps of Vietnamese school children and teachers in Quang Ba District, Ha Tuyen Province, killing two children and seriously wounding one teacher and five other pupils. This comes from a statement released here today by the commission for investigation of Chinese expansionists and hegemonists' war crimes against Vietnam.

The statement further said that the teachers and pupils belonged to the Quyet Tien basic general school and their camps were located more than 10 km deep inside Vietnamese territory. On the same day, it went on, Chinese troops opened artillery fire at the hamlets of Duong Tinh, Lao Giang, Bac Xim, Khau Kha, Tung and Dang in Quyet Tien village, burning down more than 20 houses of the villagers and devastating a good quantity of their rice and other property.

The Chinese troops' crimes were all the more brutal as they took place on June 1, the International Children's Day, and the shelling targets were Children's summer camps.

Together with other armed provocations including 10 intrusions by Chinese scouts into Vietnam's land and the wanton shelling of almost 3,000 artillery rounds on many areas inside Vietnamese territory from June 1-6, the statement said, these new cruelties of the Chinese troops have flayed the Beijing rulers' slanderous charges that "Vietnamese side continues armed provocations against China." "The Chinese authorities must stop immediately all hostile and criminal acts against Vietnam", the statement insisted.

HANOI SOURCES CITED ON SRV PARTY PLENUM TOPICS

[By Laurent Maillard]

[Text] Hanoi, June 7 (AFP) -- A rejuvenation of the Vietnamese Communist Party leadership at all levels is expected during forthcoming local and provincial party congresses, a party monthly has said.

The reshuffle during local meetings to prepare a national party congress at the end of the year will be designed to ensure "continuity" in the party leadership and a smooth handover to a new generation of rulers, the TAP CHI CONG SAN said in its May edition. "Many comrades are old and feeble, and do not have the good health or competence to cope with the new demands of the revolution," the article said.

It stressed that the local and provincial congresses should elect "executive committees able to understand and apply party directives," particularly in economic matters.

The TAP CHI CONG SAN laid down guidelines for age limits at each level, saying that the majority of those elected at provincial level should be aged 40-50, with those at district level 35-45. Some members should be younger than the guideline average, to ensure the preparation of a third generation of leaders, it added.

According to rumours here fed by senior Vietnamese officials, aging leaders likely to relinquish at least some of their titles before this year's congress include party Secretary General Le Duan and State Council Chairman Truong Chinh, both 79, and the 80-year-old Prime Minister Phan Van Dong. Several sources here said that the 10th party plenum which ended here Friday after a 19-day session had evoked the question of "personalities" linked to the succession to these three leaders, the mainspring of power in the country.

There has been a virtual news blackout on the plenum, but reports from several sources said that the meetings had also revised the policy report to be presented at the party congress and discussed at length the party line. Observers here agreed that the length of the plenum suggested that there had been some problems, but that this was to be expected given the country's current economic problems and the power struggle evident for several months within the party hierarchy. Rumours have been flying here in recent days that the changes at the top were discussed during the plenum, but no concrete information. Most observers here have greeted these with caution, and said that it will be several days before details of the plenum begin to filter out.

Aside from the question of the leadership succession, any details which emerge on the outcome of the plenum's policy discussions should give some idea of the development of the internal party battle over economic and social policy.

The party is divided between proponents of decentralisation and a rapid economic and social opening up and the more "orthodox" who favour more cautious steps toward reform, analysts say here.

The problems of aging party members and internal struggles were raised last week by the SAIGON GIAIPHONG newspaper which covers the former south Vietnamese capital, Ho Chi Minh City. The number of party members in the city had multiplied by 15 since 1975 to more than 62,000, the report said. Half of them were under 40 years old and almost a quarter were workers, the newspaper said in an edition reaching here Friday.

However, "the party must face up to a major problem: It remains with little foothold among the masses," particularly in rural districts where its "role and influence are very limited," the reported added. It also said that a third of party members were "corrupt, incompetent or aging" while another third was made up of "poor quality" members. The article complained that the bourgeois lifestyle which persisted in the city was partly to blame, but it also cited the party's "lack of internal unity" and in-fighting for top posts which had "badly hit the party's prestige."

POPULATION RELOCATION DIRECTIVE ISSUED

[Text] The Council of Ministers recently issued a directive outlining the tasks to be implemented in the months ahead in order to complete labor and population distribution in 1986.

After pointing out the efforts, initial results, shortcomings, and mistakes of various localities and services in labor and population deployment during the first months of 1986, the directive says:

In preparation for the relocation of population at the end of 1986 and in early 1987, the chairman of the Council of Ministers urges various provinces, cities, and ministries to urgently implement the following tasks:

1. Locations must be prepared, particularly in the central highlands, to receive laborers and people in accordance with the prescribed plan norms. The three Central Highlands provinces must secure sufficient locations for the reception of 150,000 people in 1986 and must continue to prepare sites for the relocation of others during the 1986-87 dry season.

Dac Lac Province should work out a plan and decide on the relocation sites for the people coming from Ha Nam Ninh and Thai Binh Provinces. Gia Lai-Cong-Tum Province should arrange specific locations for the people from Hai Hung and Thai Binh Provinces.

As Lam Dong Province has overfulfilled the local relocation plan norms and fulfilled the annual plan norms for relocating the people coming from Ha Nam Ninh and Nghia Binh, it should prepare additional locations to receive more people coming from these two provinces and other localities, including Hanoi, Ha Son Binh, and Binh Tri Thien.

The northern mountainous provinces should prepare specific locations to receive people from the lowlands in accordance with the prescribed plan norms.

Although the main task of the Mekong Delta provinces is to complete local labor deployment in 1986, they must prepare some locations to accept an additional number of people coming from the Bac Bo Delta beginning in 1987.

The directive stresses the need for the Ministries of Agriculture and Forestry and the Rubber General Department to immediately send their representatives to coordinate with the Central Highlands provinces in rearranging plans for grass-roots installations and determining the boundaries and sizes of state farms and state forests in order to effectively use lands in accordance with the Council of Ministers Chairman's Directive No 633-V2 of 14 February 1986.

2. The provinces and districts, which have planned to send people to the Central Highlands, should immediately dispatch survey and planning forces to coordinate with various districts in the Central Highlands in locating relocation sites and should appoint permanent work teams to coordinate with the Central Highlands provinces and districts in directing the task of preparing locations, solving problems encountered during the relocation of population, and organizing the deployment of laborers first. The assault youth force should coordinate with the local construction force in undertaking the building of infrastructural, communication, and irrigation projects and in preparing material bases for the relocation of population.

The directive also prescribes specific tasks for the State Planning Commission, various provincial and city planning committees, and the Ministries of Food, Supply, Building, Forestry, Home Trade, Labor, and Communications and Transportation as well as for the localities in the establishment and use of funds for new economic zones.

The directive also stresses the need to organize neat, light, and effective apparatuses and build unified sources of expenditures in order to meet the local labor and population distribution requirements.

FURTHER ON CRITICISM, SELF-CRITICISM DRIVE

In Minh Hai Province

OW071117 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 5 Jun 86

[Text] Following the recent self-criticism and criticism drive, the Minh Hai Provincial party committee has set forth the urgent work that must be carried out immediately in order to overcome the shortcomings and deficiencies discovered in the drive.

For the immediate future, the provincial party committee will focus its guidance on all districts and sectors, particularly key districts and economic sectors, and will link the first-phase criticism drive to guidance over the summer-fall crop production. It has reminded all sectors and echelons, through the self-criticism and criticism drive, to accelerate political and ideological indoctrination in the entire party organization on the stance and viewpoint of the working class, service to the public, party members' sense of responsibility, and the leading cadres' key role as examplars. The Standing Committee of the provincial party committee and the provincial people's committee have worked out specific schedules for meetings with people in their offices. Members of the provincial party committee Executive Committee must make trips to the grass-roots level to help resolve its difficulties. Nonspecified control stations must be abolished. Disqualified party members and cadres must be dismissed from government positions. Illegal arrests of people must be scrupulously handled. Party members and cadres must not drink alcohol. Organs must not hold sumptuous parties. Meetings with unrealistic agendas must be curtailed. Gifts and presents in any form are strictly forbidden.

In Lam Dong Province

[Text] The Lam Dong provincial party committee's report on self-criticism and criticism said: In the past few years, Lam Dong Province has scrupulously implemented all the directives and resolutions of the party and state.

In providing leadership and guidance, the party committee has concerned itself with improving the livelihood of the people, especially the ethnic minority people. It has motivated the people to uphold a spirit of self-reliance and self-support in overcoming difficulties in order to achieve the socioeconomic goals.

The Lam Dong provincial party committee sternly reviewed shortcomings in combat will, sense of responsibility, and leadership; bureaucratic manners alienating the masses; and failure to stay close to primary production units. The provincial party committee still prolongs its meetings and conferences without achieving high quality results, has not scrupulously observed its reporting system to ask for instructions, and has failed to perform good control and supervision The pilot program for building models has not been reviewed and thus experience has been derived for multiplying models.

Although the key leading members of the party committee show no arbitrary or paternalist attitudes some other members in charge of districts, towns, cities, and various sectors still follow various calculating and self-seeking practices to different degrees. Some of the leading cadres have bought used motorized vehicles, televisions, and radios at low prices and have used more housing space than they are authorized.

The Lam Dong provincial party committee has put forth some measures to overcome shortcomings such as improving the task of administering and distributing materials to promptly put an end to negativism; emphasizing the ideological and organizational tasks; intensifying the task of developing the party, especially the task of comprehensively consolidating various party organizations and chapters; and accelerating the task of mass motivation to create conditions for the people to give their views in developing the party andd criticizing cadres and party members.

The provincial party committee has paid attention to implementing the various 1986 socioeconomic tasks, using production results as the yardstick to assess the improvement of party committees and each cadre and party member.

AQUINO INTERVIEWED ON IMPRESSIONS OF 100 DAYS

PM061237 Paris LIBERATION in French 2 Jun 86 p 33

[Interview with Philippines President Cory Aquino by Patrick Sabatier in Manila -- date not given]

[Text] LIBERATION: You have been president for almost 100 days and you had no preparation for this role. Is it more difficult than you thought?

Cory Aquino: Much more difficult. In retrospect the election campaign seems like a picnic. During the campaign I only had to thing about Cory Aquino. I now have to think about the whole country. There is also the fact that Marcos left us with so many problems...

LIBERATION: What is the main challenge you are now having to face?

Cory Aquino: The economic situation is undoubtedly the main problem. If I succeed in solving the economic problems I will essentially have solved the problem of the insurrection at the same time

LIBERATION: Your government gives the impression of not always speaking with one voice. Are you really in control?

Cory Aquino (laughing): Yes. I think my ministers realize that. Allow me to explain: In the past, in fact since 1972, almost all the people in my cabinet have been known for their frankness. That was even why they were fired. It takes time to change some old habits. I sometimes have to remind them that we are now all in the same boat and that we must be united in action. But I am very democratic.

Indeed, I think it is a good thing for all disagreements to be expressed. It is by listening to all opinions that you can arrive at the best solution. Once again it is not easy to change the habits of several years, but I am sure that we will succeed. Every time a minister is cited by the press as having contradicted another minister, I summon them to discuss the matter with them. It is a question of time. The important thing is that we are all undoubtedly very anxious to solve the problems facing the country and that we are devoting all our efforts to that.

LIBERATION: You mention the time factor. People in the Philippines say that presidents are entitled to a 100-day honeymoon period. Do you think this honeymoon period is now over for you?

Cory Aquino: No. So far I have really encountered great popular enthusiasm during all the visits I have made around the country. The media are a different problem, but I ought not to attack the media. I think that everything stems from the fact that we suddenly have complete press freedom.

Perhaps I ought to remind some of our journalists that you cannot have freedom without responsibility. I am sometimes upset for the people: If they buy all the different newspapers they are plunged into confusion, because they all contradict each other, even on the facts. Since I took office I have constantly appealed to journalists to make an effort to check the authenticity and accuracy of some of their reports. But this takes time too....

AQUINO AFFIRMING RESOLVE NOT TO SEEK SECOND TERM

[Text] Manila, June 8 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino will not seek a second term and intends to keep her cabinet intact despite criticism over some of them, according to an interview published here Sunday.

Mrs Auino told the SUNDAY INQUIRER magazine that she missed her privacy and that her relationship with the military, the strongest pillar of her deposed predecessor Ferdinand Marcos, was getting "better."

After completing her first 100 days in office, she also felt the time was now "fast approaching" when the people would blame her for everything.

On her political future, the chief executive said: "it would be so dishonest of me not to say what I've said even before that I'm just for a snap election. In fact my children always remind me, 'Mommy, you promised us that.'"

The 53-year-old widow, who had no previous experience in public office, accepted a draft by more than one million supporters to run in a snap February poll, the contested result of which triggered an uprising that toppled Mr Marcos. "I will be out of it," Mrs Aquino said when asked if whe would run again if a commission now drafting a new Philippine constitution were to decide to call a national election.

The 48-man panel, whose members she had handpicked from a list of names nominated by the public, will decide on the form of government the Philippines will adopt, and set the length of tenure of elected officials. The old constitution which she abolished in March prescribed a six-year term with options for re-election.

Mrs Aquino quashed suggestions of a cabinet reshuffle on allegations that some of her ministers were abrasive, saying: "Abrasiveness would really rank lower to me anyway, as far as effective administration (is concerned.)"

"Whatever I do ... even I don't get 100 per cent approval but I might as well do what I should rather than allow myself something which I don't really believe in."

Nationalists here are seeking the dismissal of Finance Minister Jaime Omgpin and Central Bank Governor Jose Fernandez, who they charge are promoting U.S. interests, while conservatives are seeking the dismissal of Labor Minister Augusto Sanchez, alleging that his pro-labor stance was scaring away foreign investors.

PRESIDENTIAL CLEMENCY GRANTED TO 70 PRISONERS

[Text] Manila, June 6 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino Friday granted clemency to 70 prisoners, including a suspected communist guerrilla, but largely ignored a six-day fast by 13 political prisoners for their immediate release.

Suspected communist guerrilla Noel Lumanting, serving three years for illegal possession of firearms, was granted conditional pardon with parole along with 51 common law prisoners, a presidential Palace statement said. Mr Lumanting is considered by the Roman Catholic Church-backed human rights group task force detainees to be a political prisoner.

Three convicts were granted absolute pardon while 15 others had their prison terms shortened, the palace statement said. The palace did not indicate the specific offenses committed by the 69 other clemency recipients, but the state-run PHILIPPINE NEWS AGENCY (PNA) said they were serving terms for various criminal offenses in national jails.

The clemency, issued by Deputy Executive Secretary Fulgencio Factoran on behalf of Mrs Aquino, came as 13 convicted political prisoners entered a sixth day of fasting to press for their immediate release.

The Task Force Detainees told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE Mr Lumanting was released last week with nine political prisoners whose names did not appear on Mr Factoran's list.

Asked if Mrs Aquino was aware of the fast, presidential spokeswoman Alice Willadolid told AFD, "I don't think she is."

Mrs Aquino had earlier freed 517 dissidents who had been put in military jails without being convicted by the administration of Ferdinand Marcos, who was toppled in a popular uprising last February.

"At least this is more positive. We are more hopeful now," Task Force Detainees worker Teddy de los Santos told AFP. His group maintains that more than 400 political prisoners have remained in jail despite Mrs Aquino's order because the military was dragging its feet in implementing it. Thirty-two other political prisoners are either awaiting execution or serving long jail terms after being convicted of ordinary crimes in connection with their work as communist or Moslem guerrillas.

EXISTENCE OF MORE POLITICAL PRISONERS DENIED

HK090659 Manila THE MANILA EVENING POST in English 6 Jun 86 pp 1, 6

[Text] The Aquino government has practically described as liars two cause-oriented groups that were among its most ardent supporters when it debunked the groups' claim that there were still 433 political detainees.

During President Aquino's bi-monthly press conference yesterday, Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo, in the presence of Cory, indicated that the Task Force Detainees of the Philippines (TFDP) and National Alliance for Justice, Freedom, and Democracy (NAJFD) were asking for the release of common criminals tagged "political prisoners."

The TFDP and NAJFD have been holding rallies demanding the release of all political prisoners in the country. They said 433 such detainess still remained in various detention centers.

In the first few days of the Aquino administration, Arroyo said he had sat down with Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and other top officials of the New Armed Forces of the Philippines (NAFP) and pored over the list of political detainees thoroughly.

Based on the list recommended by Enrile, Arroyo said there were only 517 political prisoners, all of whom have been released by Aquino.

Arroyo wondered why there were still that large number of political detainees, adding that the claims of TFDP and NAJFD were "debatable." he said that since the defense establishment denies knowledge of any remaining political prisoner, the 433 prisoners claimed to be such are common criminals.

Aquino was asked on these allegedly remaining political detainees, but she tossed the question to Arroyo, who was delegated with the task of releasing prisoners jailed by the Marcos administration for political reasons.

In the same forum, Aquino indicated that her call for a strike moratorium to speed up the government's economic recovery program has been ignored by labor groups. She said she talked anew with Rolando Olalia, chairman of the Kilusang Mayo Uno (KMU), a few days ago and was only told that the militant labor organization would discuss it among its leaders. For this reason, Aquino said she "would continue appealing to labor leaders on the strike moratorium."

Aquino reiterated her confidence in Labor Minister Augusto Sanchez, whose replacement has been demanded by some sectors. She said: "Sanchez has been doing a good job by settling many strikes and he has gone out of his way to prevent the breakout of strikes."

She pointed out, however, that if anyone could document charges of misdeeds against Sanchez or any other minister for that matter, she would immediately dismiss them.

Asked if the family-owned Hacienda Luisita could be offered for distribution under Aquino's new land reform program so that the communist rebels might see her sincerity on this, president gave a hesitant "no." She pointed out that since Hacienda Luisita is sugarland, it will not be feasible for small cropping. She said tenants would earn more when they till and own one hectare of rice land, adding that Luisita has no tenents.

GOVERNMENT REITERATES STAND ON U.S. BASES

[Text] The government will respect the provisions of the revised RP-U.S. Military Bases Agreement until its expiration in 1991. President Aquino said she will keep her options open until such time that the Military Bases Agreement shall have expired. During the campaign for the February 7 presidential election, Mrs Aquino said she was in favor of the discontinuance of the existence of U.S. military facilities in Philippine bases. However, she gradually changed her stance for the abrogation of the agreement [words indistinct]. The president [word indistinct] the possiblity of renegotiation of the continued use of the Philippine bases by the Americans in a press conference in June 4, making her 100th day in office at Malacanang.

POLICE, TROOPS BATTLE 20,000 MARCOS SUPPORTERS

[Text] Four people were seriously injured and scores of others were hurt when police antiriot squads and military troops battled 20,000 Marcos loyalists trying to march to Malacanang yesterday [8 June]. The antiriot unit used teargas heavily to disperse the loyalist throng. Most of these injured were women and children. The four seriously hurt were youngsters. One of them suffered a gunshot wound in the abdomen, and another a stab wound in the back. It is not known who fired the shot that wounded the student.

The violence broke out when the loyalists stormed the barbed wire by the gate at Ayala Bridge on the way to the presidential palace where President Aquino resides. Police General Alfredo Lim ordered an investigation into the violence-marred demonstration by the loyalists. He has invited the loyalist leaders, including former Member of Parliament and Marcos lawyer Rafael Recto, for questioning. Also invited were former San Juan Mayor Joseph Estrada and former Ilocos Sur Governor Luis Singson.

ENRILE SAYS MARCOS RETURN WOULD BE 'PAINFUL'

[By Jose de Vera]

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said in Baguio City Thursday that he would be a "most foolish revolutionist" if he would welcome the return of deposed President Marcos to the Philippines.

This was his reply to a question asked during an open forum that followed his speech before the members of the Safety Organization of the Philippines (SOPI).

The question: "How true is the report that you and vice President Salvador "Dony" Laurel are welcoming expresident Marcos at a certain time?

"I do not wish him ill, but I will tell him most respectfully never to come back to the Philippines for as long as we are around because it is going to be a painful encounter," Enrile said.

Asked what he would do if Marcos does not heed his advice, Enrile said he knows Marcos will not come back. Enrile explained that three weeks ago, somebody told him that Marcos wanted to talk to him and asked him (Enrile) to return Marcos's call. But Enrile did not do.

Enrile added that his "somebody" told him that Marcos wanted "To tell me that he (Mr Marcos) is not coming back anymore to this country, not until he is wanted by the leadership to come and if ever he should be allowed by the leadership to return, he will come back but he will not engage in politics anymore."

"He (Mr Marcos) just wants to be a private citizen living the rest of his days in retirement," enrile said, quoting the message of Marcos to him. "Our course, I do not know whether you could trust that statement" Enrile added. "So I am just telling you what he said to me. I have no doubt that he probably meant it. I will give him the benefit of the doubt."

He then addressed himself to the youth of Ilocos Norte, saying: "You people should think of the future. You will never have a chance to rise as leaders of your province, let alone of Ilocandia, as long as you have the Marcos children around supported by their Marcos parents. Because they will always prefer the Marcos children to be leaders of the Ilocano votes. I think that is a realistic way of putting it."

Enrile also said that he has no more intention of playing politics other than what "I am doing now and I have no children who are playing politics and I have no relatives in my province playing politics. I have prohibited them from playing policies."

Asked to comment on what should be done to erring military personnel, Enrile said that "we should not stop at merely relieving erring members of this force." If there is evidence of anomalies, there erring personnel should be charged before a court martial, he said. "We can never clean our own organization if we merely transfer one person from one pace to another because what he did in the area where he came from, he will be dong in the area he is going," Enrile said.

GROUP URGES AQUINO TO OVERHAUL MILITARY

[Text] Manila, June 9 (AFP) -- A group of active and retired officers and prominent civilians have urged President Corazon Aquino to launch an immediate total overhaul of the Philippine military.

The group also urged Mrs. Aquino during a recent seminar here to give priority to land reform, bring justice to the masses and deliver services to rural areas in order to counter the 17-year-old communist insurgency. The proposals were contained in a seminar summar given to Mrs. Aquino and received by AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE on Monday.

The seminar participants included Brigadier General Eudardo Ermita, the deputy to Armed Forces chief General Fidel Ramos, prominent Roman Catholic Bishop Ferderico Escaler and national defense experts. They said that they "recognized the fact that the main cause of the deterioration of the nation's Armed Forces is its manipulation and corruption" by former President Ferdinand Marcos, who was toppled by a military-civilian revolt in February. Urging an immediate "total overhaul" and reorientation of the Armed Forces, they also called for "prompt disciplinary action on all erring military men without cover-ups" and said "this action must start from the very top echelons,": although it did not name names.

Mrs. Aquino has retired top military officers identified with Mr. Marcos -- led by former Armed Forces chief Fabian Ver, who joined Mr. Marcos in exile in Hawaii -- and prompted several batches of officers, but many junior officers still await promotions delayed during the Marcos years.

PRO-AQUINO PARTIES REPORTEDLY AGREE TO UNITE

[By Jose Ma. Nolasco]

[Text] The feuding leaders of political groups which supported President Aquino's rise to power have finally agreed in principle to unite under a single ruling party. The ruling coalition, which shall carry a new name, will be headed by Ms Aquino herself.

A Cabinet official, who asked not to be identified, yesterday told the INQUIRER that the leaders of the pro-administration parties agreed to join forces in a recent meeting presided over by Jose Cojuangco, Ms Aquino's brother and chief political adviser.

Among those who attended the initial unification talks were Natural Resources Minister Ernesto Maceda and Government Reorganization Minister Luis R. Villafuerte, representing Unido [United Nationalist Democratic Organization]; Political Affairs Minister Antonio V. Cuenco and MWSS [Metropolitan Water and Sewage System] General Manager Jose Yap, for PDP-Laban [Philipino Democratic Party-Lakas ng Bayan]; Good Government Commissioner Raul Daza for the Liberal Party (Salonga wing): and Public Works and Highways Minister Rogaciano Mercado, for National Union for Liberation.

The meeting also agreed to draw into the unification process other pro-Aquino political alliances and regional parties. The groups include the Nationalista Party (Laurel wing), Pinaghisua, Mindanao Alliance, Laban ni Ninoy sa Central Luzon, and Lakas ng Bayan.

The INQUIRER source said Local Governments Minister Aquilino Pimentel Jr. a PDP-Laban leader, has likewise agreed in principle to the formation of a single ruling party -- notwithstanding press reports to the contrary.

Pimentel, however, made it clear that the merger of his party with Unido and other political groups will have to be decided in a general membership meeting of the PDP-Laban.

According to the source, the unification talks were prompted by the strong possibility that local elections may have to be called this November, ahead of the plebiscite on the draft of the new Constitution.

Leaders of various pro-Aquino parties have decided on this new political timetable in the event the Constitutional Commission fails to finish its job by September.

Whatever the schedule of the local polls, the source said that Ms Aquino's political leaders are agreed that only by fielding a unified ticket for the local elections will the present administration succeed in consolidating its rule at the grassroots.

Unification of all pro-Aquino political forces, the same source explained, will also be the key to having the draft of the new Constitution ratified overwhelmingly in the plebiscite. Anything short of an overwhelming ratification could result in a crisis of confidence on the Aquino government, the source said. The unification talks will resume upon the arrival [from] abroad of Cojuangco, the source said.

OPLE CRITICIZES AQUINO'S RECORD; DISCUSSES PLANS

Raps 'Political Vengeance'

BK060603 Manila PNA in English 0401 GMT 6 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 6 (PNA) -- The opposition Partido Nacionalista ng Philipinas [PNP] Friday said President Corazon Aquino's first hundred days would have been more productive and satisfactory if she did not choose political vengeance as the central theme of her revolutionary government. Blas F. Ople, PNP acting chairman, said the Aquino government turned itself into an engine of retribution and persecution.

Ople said, it became inevitable for the Aquino government to abrogate unilaterally the Constitution of 1973, abolish the Batasan Pambansa (National Assembly) remove arbitrarily elected governors and mayors eliminate security of tenure for civil servants including the courts and other constitutional offices, and sequester a vast array of private business with abandon and without due process. All these acts constitue a presecription for political instability which insidious forces are fully exploiting to prepare the downfall of the Phiippine Government, Ople said.

Ople acknowledged, however, that President Aquino had made initial steps toward reconcilitation with her political adversaries and these are steps we have encouraged with the PNP's decision to participate in the constitutional commission.

He said with the forced departure of President Marcos after the February revolution, the country was wide open danger and it could have collapsed into chaos and civil war. The country did not collapse although constitutional democracy has temporarily perished, Ople said.

Cites Ways To Replace Aquino

[Text] San Fernando, Pampanga -- Opposition leader Blas F. Ople, acting chairman of the Partido Nacionalista ng Pilipinas (PNP), told newsmen yesterday that the PNP is now recognized by President Aquino as the official opposition party and that it will field candidates in the coming local and congressional elections.

Ople also said that there are three ways by which the Aquino government can be toppled -- through "destabilization, coup d'etat, and elections."

He said that the PNP has opted to choose elections because "it is very remote to oust the Aquino government through destabilization or coup d'etat at this point in time, when it has the full support of the people and the world communities."

TRAVEL BANS ON TOLENTINO, OPLE, CENDANA LIFTED

HK070836 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 30 May 86 pp 1, 6

[By staff member Chit Estella]

[Text] The Aquino government, in power for over three months, has begun softening up its policy on officials under the Marcos administration.

It indicated it would allow the former president, now in exile in Hawaii, to return home "in a couple of months" after it restored the passports of former Ministes Arturo Tolentino, Blas Ople and Gregorio Cendana.

Vice President Salvador Laurel said the government was allowing the former president to "come home when the country is already stable and that would just be in a couple of months."

He said his homecoming would demonstrate that the government was not vindictive against officials of the previous administration. "We were just taking precaution because we are going through a difficult transition. We cannot afford to make mistakes or let anything explode into something violent," Laurel told reporters yesterday.

At the same time, the government lifted the hold-orders on Tolentino, Ople and Cendana by re-issuing their passports. Tolentino is reported to have left for Singapore while Cendana is planning to go to the United States for medical treatment.

Not included in Laurel's list of former officials whose passports were returned was ex-MP Rafael Recto, known lawyer for Marcos. The Vice President said moves like this was taken because "of the possibility that (some persons) may try to destabilize the new government (and) it is merely an exercise of self defense."

CARDINAL SIN URGES SUPPORT FOR AQUINO GOVERNMENT

[Text] Manila, June 7 KYODO -- Philippine Roman Catholic church leader Cardinal Jaime Sin Friday called on his countrymen to give President Corazon "Cory" Aquino a chance to rebuild the country and warned that internal divisions threaten the survival of the government.

In his homily during a thanksgiving mass at Manila Cathedral timed two days after Aquino completed 100 days as president, Sin asked for support for the new government's economic recovery program. "We need reconciliation and unity," he said. "Those of us who tried to give peace a chance, give Cory a chance.

He said that "every group and individual in the network of divisions and subdivisions, multiplications and subtractions that we Filipinos seem to have been entangled in ... threatens the survival of the new government."

A sharp critic of the excesses of the past regime, once accused by Marcos of instigating rebellion, Sin was the first religious leader to call on civilians to support the near bloodless military revolt which led to the ouster of Marcos and the installation of Aquino in February.

He said the national recovery program of the new government aims to alleviate mass poverty and generate employment and equality. "Let me commend this new campaign to all of you, dear friends," he said.

Sin characterized the nearly bloodless revolt "a revolution waged with rosaries and roses" and called the overthrow of Marcos a miracle. "If indeed we still need miracles, perhaps the greatest miracle is the inner miracle of reconciliation, a genuine reconciliation among the divided sectors of our society and the inner miracle of an authentic unity in common purpose... and common struggle," he said.

The Aquino government, which is nearing ceasefire talks with communist insurgents, is being troubled by supporters of Marcos, as well as by labor and peasant unrest, bickerings among parties that support Aquino and distrust between civilian and military authorities.

CONSTITUTION COMMISSION DISCUSSES TIMETABLE

[By Rod L. Villa Jr]

[Text] The Constitutional Commission (Con-Com) approved yesterday its house rules and timetables, and appealed to President Aquino to immediately fill up the two vacant seats to complete its mandated 50-man membership. Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo, however, said the President will no longer appoint the two other Con-Com members.

In yesterday's session, the assembly likewise decided to increase its working committees from 15 to 17. The two new committees are those on human resources and social justice. It also decided to increase the membership of the committees.

The constitutional framers got entangled in debates on the election of a permanent floor leader, a position now occupied in acting capacity by Napoleon G. Rama, and assistant floor leader, a post occupied temporarily by Jose D. Calderon, and 17 committee chairman. The debates lasted up to evening.

Fr. Jaoquin Bernas was being groomed by a sizeable bloc for floorleadership. Con-Com President Cecilia Munoz Palma hoped that the voting on these key positions would be finished when she convenes the sixth session of the body on Monday.

Palma opened the session at 9 a.m. to dispose of routine matters and then adjourned 30 minutes later for a marathon close-door caucus to thresh out organizational kinks.

The assembly has yet to select a method with which to solicit the widest public sentiments in the most expedient, economical, and exhaustive manner.

Palma was assisted by Calderon and Rama in what both described as the strongest debates yet to rock the body.

Lorenzo Sumulong, chairman of the committee on rules, said the house rules would abbreviate long and tedious procedures which led the 1971 Constitutional Convention to meander inconclusively until it was overtaken by martial law. He said the rules, which set the guidelines on the debates and amendments would make the commission finish its work within 90 days in compliance with Proclamation No. 9.

Based on a computerization of the preferences of the 48 members, the assembly decided on the size of the committees as follows: committee on preamble, national territory, and declaration of principles 7; citizenship, bill of rights, political rights, obligations, and human rights, 15; executive, 15; judiciary, 15; constitutional commission, 7; local governments, 7; national economy and patrimony, 15; general provisions, 11; amendments and transitory provisions, 7; human resources, 15; social justice, 15; public relations, 15; and public hearings, 11.

The work of the committees was planned to avoid conflict of time of the members, many of whom are into as many as seven committees. Sumulong said the assembly has set the deadline on Monday for the organization and immediate functioning of the 17 committees.

The following deadlines were set: July 7, completion of all public hearings and debates, and submittal of reports on resolutions and constitutional proposals.

August 15, completion of second and third readings on committee reports.

August 25, completion by the sponsorship committee of all resolutions and proposals and for the committee on style to finish its formulation and polishing of the final draft for an ultimate discussion by the entire assembly in plenary session.

These would allow ample time for the submittal of the new Constitution to President Aquino who is mandated by law to call for a plebiscite for its ratification by the people within the next 60 days.

Serafin Guingona, who sponsored the creation of the committee on human resources, said the assembly voted 27 to 7 for its creation in yesterday's caucus.

This committee will have 11 members who will have overall jurisdiction over proposals relating to education, national language, science and technology, scientific research and inventions, arts and letters, educational communications, national culture, intellectual rights and properties, and cultural minorities.

Rene Sarmiento said the assembly has decided to use the constitutions of the Malolos Convention and of 1935 and 1973 as working drafts.

Vicente Foz filed a resolution widening the ownership of newspapers and other media establishments to prevent the evils of cronyism, enhance employer-employee relations and productivity, Filipinize mass media, and prevent foreign influence and interference in political and governmental affairs.

In announcing the President's decision not to appoint the two other Con-Com members, Arroyo said that since the Con-Com has already started work on the charter, the President felt that appointing two more to bring the numbers to 50 might be construed as meddling in the affairs of the commission.

He said that the President was not committed to appoint 50 members. "She had said before that the commission will be composed of 30 to 50 members," Arroyo said. "So the President will leave the commission membership to what it is now."

Under Mrs Aquino's proclamation, members of the Commission are barred from running for public office one year after the drafting of the Constitution. They are also prohibited from being appointed to government positions for one year.

CON-COM MEMBERS FAVOR LEGITIMIZING GOVERNMENT

HK090540 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 7 Jun 86 pp 1, 7

[By Miguel Genovea]

[Text] It is almost certain that the Aquino government will be legitimized through a transitory provision in the new Constitution.

A random survey of the sentiments of the members of the Constitutional Commission on the issue during the break in yesterday's session showed that a big number of the members believed that President Aquino and Vice President Salvador Laurel won in the elections and should be given full six-year terms. A transitory provision providing their terms of office is necessary to provide them the constitutional basis for their claims to their present positions, having assumed power through the so-called people's revolution.

Among those who favor granting the incumbents full six-year terms are ConCom Vice President Ambrosio Padilla, Floorleafer Napoleon Rama and members Hilario Davide Jr., Fr. Joaquin Bernas, Roberto Concepcion, Jose Bengson, Jr., Jose Laurel, Jr., Francisco Rodrigo, Lino Brocka, Felicitas Aquino, Jose Nolledo, Gregorio Tingson, Cirilo Rigos and Jose Luis Martin Gascon.

Only member Jaime Tadeo, who is representing the farmers, expressed the need for both Aquino and Laurel to submit in a popular election after the approval of the Charter "to settle once and for all" doubts on their being elected legitimately by the people.

Members Blas Ople, who is one of the four oppositionists in the assembly, Serafin Guingona and Jose Calderon refused to comment on the issue for the time being.

The charter framers also agreed to limit their proposed allowances and expenditures to P10,000 each a month maximum upon presentation of proper receipts to enable them " to work within a budget and save funds for the government." Under the original proposal, the members were supposed to get P20,000 a month, the vice president P25,000 and the president P30,000.

Both ConCom President Cecilia Munoz Palma and Padilla agreed to have the same allowances as the members because "we are not here for financial interests."

Besides the reimbursement of expenses each member is entitled to P500 per meeting and P15,500 for staff support to be paid directly by the secretariat to the employees. Under Proclamation No. 9 creating the ConCom, a budget of P20 million is appropriated for the purpose.

Davide, one of the active members of the assembly, said Aquino and Laurel "really won in the elections." He admitted, however, that they were installed by the people's revolution in protest to what he called massive fraud and terrorism "and the implication is that they were installed for six years."

Bengzon said: "In my view, we should given them a full six-year term starting from the time the Constitution is ratified by the people.

Due to the enormity of the problems Aquino and Laurel inherited from the deposed President Marcos, Bengzon said that he will propose that they be given a "grace period" within which to familiarize themselves on the actual problems. Bengzon said that he is also in favor of granting a grace period, say six to eight months for the regular president and vice president in the next elections.

"I believe that they are legitimate and it is not necessary for them to submit in an election after the approval of the Constitution," Rama said. However, Rama said that if there is real agitation for them to seek a mandate, "I will go for it."

Tingson said that "they were put there by the people and they have the right to stay in office until the next elections. Of course, he said, the ideal thing to do is submit to an election.

Concepcion said that the terms of office of Aquino and Laurel will have to be placed in the new Constitution "one way or the other."

Brocka said the tenure of office of the incumbents "should be made clear in the new Charter." He wants a six-year term without reelection.

Both Rodrigo and Padilla said that there is no need for the two leaders to face an election. Besides, the country can save on election expenses, they said.

Deliberations on the form of government continued yesterday. Due to limited time, the assembly, on motion by Guingona, will ask responsible civic and religious organizations to hold public hearings on constitutional proposals in the next two weeks and submit the consensus to the ConCom. To ensure wider participation from the public, Tingson also proposed that individuals writing suggestions to the body be given franking privileges.

'LEGALIZATION' OF COMMUNIST PARTY OPPOSED

Davide said the mere claim of the communist group seeking legalization and denouncing violence just to be legalized is not a guiding factor for acceptance. According to him, the Communist Party of the Philippines may denounce violence, which may appear on paper only, to achieve their own political goals. Davide, however, said he favors incorporation into the constitution of provisions that would give leeway for socialist concepts which aim to bring about economic, political, and social benefits.

COMMUNISTS IN GOVERNMENT UNACCEPTABLE TO AQUINO

HK070831 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 30 May 86 p 1

[By staff member Joel Paredes]

[Text] President Aquino will reject a coalition government with communist insurgents as a precondition for a ceasefire in their peace talks, her political affairs minister said yesterday.

Minister Antonio Cuenco told MALAYA there is "no way" that the 53-year-old President would appoint communists in her governmemt. Cuenco noted, however, that Mrs. Aquino can assure rebel returnees a "chance to lead a normal life."

The political affairs minister noted that the new government has been mapping out reconciliation terms with communist insurgents, including their rehabilitation and resettlement areas where they can have "farms to till."

Meanwhile, Cuenco disclosed that there had been "unofficial" ceasefires in some regions since the President called for region-to-region truce. He cited the truce in the strifetorn city of Davao in Mindanao and Samar island's provinces.

But in Cebu province, Cuenco said all 300 armed New People's Army guerrillas had laid down their arms and went back to work in their farms. "There were no promises. We didn't even have to pay for their arms," Cuenco remarked. He noted, however, that there were still marauders and bandits operating in the central province's mountain villages.

Cuenco said his ministry is now concentrating its efforts in Samar where he gathered that the rebels were "willing to surrender provided there are conditions."

"We don't expect much trouble in Samar since there are only a few ideologies there, most of them are dissenters," the political affairs minister said. Cuenco also noted that President Aquino was also concerned over some military men who "need to be disciplined" to prevent disruptions in the government's ceasefire talks.

CPP REPORTEDLY UNDERGOING 'RECTIFICATION'

[By Marites Danguilan-Vitug]

[Text] The Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) is undertaking a rectification process, after having admitted it had erred in boycotting the Feb 7 presidential election. Through that process, it hopes to come out of its sectarianism revitalized.

The rethinking process can also lead to changes in the composition of the central leadership, party sources told BUSINESS DAY. They said a change of guards will resolve the crisis of confidence which was caused by the boycott stand. That stand was unilaterally decided by the five-man executive committee of the CPP central committee is the highest decisionmaking body of the party next to the national congress. Three of them had voted for boycott, including Rodolfo Salas and Rafael Baylosis, sources said.

The CPP central committee reached a consensus that [the] boycott decision was a mistake and that the party needs to initiate measures to encourage democarcy in decisionmaking, to pay heed to the masses, and to study Marxist-Leninist teachings. They also resolved to listen to initiatives from below, avoid mechanical analysis, and not to violate "democratic centralism."

Party sympathizers see the CPP as having only two options left: to mature or to deteriorate. At present, they see the rectification process to have gained momentum, an indication the CPP is on a positive track. "It is the beginning of something new," said one keen party observer, adding that the next few years will be exciting for the CPP in terms of its role under the new government and its growth away from sectarianism. The observer also said the CPP is expected to shed off its streak of dogmatism as a result of the rectification process.

The CPP central committee, party sources said, came up with a document moe than a month ago analyzing why it made a serious mistake. It was the first official effort at self-criticism. The document was popularized for the public in the most recent issue of ANG BAYAN, the CPP official publication.

The document is an honest and thorough analysis of their error and includes prescriptions to correct it, party sources said. The result of such self-criticism was positive, they added. "It enabled a lot of the members to air their grievances, release the tension and clear the air. We came out of it more forward-looking and unified," the CPP source explained. The CPP assessment said:

-- They did not correctly understand the character and operation of U.S. policy towards the Marcos regime since they overestimated U.S. capacity to impose its will on local politics.
-- They underestimated the capabilities and determination of the "bourgeoise reformists" to engage the Marcos regime in a decisive contest for state power.
-- They ignored the fact that the Marcos regime had become extremely isolated, and -- They misread the people's deep anti-fascist sentiments and readiness to go beyond electoral process to end the Marcos dictatorship.

The process of self-critism, party sources pointed out, extends from the central committee to the politburo to all levels in the organization. Usually, after the responsible officials have admitted there mistake, resignation from the posts, not the CPP, follows, they said. But this also depends on whether their resignations will be accepted or not by the central committee.

From its boycott mistake, BUSINESS DAY gathered, the CPP learned a lesson: winning political power could be done through a combination of various forms of political struggle, including elections. In the past, the primacy of armed struggle as a means of attaining victory was the prevalent thinking. Other key isues for reevaluation by the CPP include the redefinition of a national democrat and the relations with leftist groups aborad.

A cause for the narrow perspective of many in the CPP, according to party sources, is their definition of what a national democrat is. Apart from being anti-feudal, anti-fascist and anti-imperialist; a national democrat should also carry a socialist perspective, believe in armed struggle, and accept the leadership of the CPP, they said. The sources said the CPP has to broaden "our friends and allies." It believes that a national democrat need not accept armed struggle, hold a socialist vision and accept the CPP's leadership. In retrospect, this narrow view partly caused the fiasco in the CPP's united front-building efforts in 1985 when moderate elements, social democrats, and independent personalities left Bagong Alyansang-Makabayan [New People's Alliance] or Bayan because of perceived domination by the left, observers said.

5 CIVILIANS CHOSEN FOR CEASE-FIRE TALKS

HK070305 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 6 Jun 86

[Text] The government has named five high-calibre civilian negotiators for the ceasefire talks with the Communist Party and the New People's Army. Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo said the president has decided not to identify the government negotiators because the talks are very delicate and sensitive and too much publicity might jeopardize its success. However, Arroyo said, the talks will definitely start soon. The Communist Party and NPA have designated Satur Ocampo as their chief negotiator. Ocampo is an escaped communist leader and former journalist.

Meanwhile, former Communist Party Chairman Jose Maria Sison said the communists and the NPA will only agree to a coalition government in return for a ceasefire agreement. He said the coalition government will include all blocs in the Aquino government.

NAKASONE VOWS TO RESTORE LDP RULE IN LOWER HOUSE

[Excerpts] Tokyo, June 9 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, saying that the upcoming Diet elections are important in setting the future course of Japanese politics, vowed Monday to restore his party's command of the key lower house. The call came as the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party announced a six-point policy centered on pledges for an early start to construction of more super-express Shinkansen lines and expansion of public works to spur the nation's faltering economy.

The six election commitments approved by the LDP leadership include:

-- Expansion of the Shinkansen network while privatizing the Japanese National Railways by April 1987 as promised by the government.

-- Expansion of public works, to be reinforced, if warranted, by a demand-boosting supplementary budget this fall. The plan calls for expediting the award of existing public works contracts and pumping more money into the economy through a supplementary budget which would total approximately 3 trillion yen, compared to the original 54 trillion yen budget for the current fiscal year.

-- Relief to small businesses hit by the rising value of the yen through low-interest loans and other fiscal and administrative measures.

Masayuki Fujio, chairman of the party's Policy Affairs Research Council, told the LDP meeting that these fiscal measures would be "quite effective" in expanding domestic demand as part of government efforts to cool the nation's export drive.

ABE MEETS NAKASONE; UNHAPPY WITH CANDIDATE LIST

[Text] Tokyo, June 10 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yashuhiro Nakasone met three potential successors over lunch Tuesday in a bid to rally the Liberal-Democratic Party in the July 6 Diet elections. The lunch, held as a gesture of party unity, came amid strong dissatisfaction voiced by Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe over the selection of official LDP candidates for the key lower house poll.

Abe, who saw more than a quarter of his men dropped in the first official LDP candidate list announced Monday, took up the issue with Nakasone in a meeting earlier in the day. Calling on the prime minister following the regular Tuesday cabinet session, Abe complained that LDP election managers ignored the wishes of local party chapters in the choice of candidates for the party ticket, sources said.

In announcing the 311-member candidate list Monday, the LDP gave official endorsement to 58 candidates from the Fukuda faction -- Abe's power base -- lopping off 22 from the list recommended by the local LDP chapters. The upcoming elections will decide all the 512 seats in the enlarged lower house and half of the 252 seats in the upper chamber. The candidacy list issue reflects intense rivalries among the major LDP factions which are backing their own men for the party presidential race in October -- just three months after the Diet election.

Nakasone's job as prime minister will be at stake in the LDP presidential election, and he is expected to be challenged by Abe and the other two guests at Nakasone's lunch Tuesday -- LDP Executive Council Chairman Kiichi Miyazawa and Finance Minister Noboru Takeshita.

During the luncheon meeting, Nakasone appealed for support from the three so-called "new leaders" to run an "all-party" campaign in the upcoming elections, and they expressed their agreement, sources said. The four also discussed election strategies, and agreed that the LDP should take a cautious approach over proposals for introducing large-scale indirect taxation, which has emerged as a focus of opposition attack.

The hour-long meeting also took up other potential election issues, notably education reform and government policies to spur the economy, sources said. The upcoming elections are seen as a run-up to the LDP presidential race with each of the new leaders trying to bolster his factional strength through the elections.

OKINAWAN 'REFORMIST' PARTIES PROTEST F-15 CRASH

OW100519 Naha NHK Television in Japanese 0315 GMT 10 Jun 86

[Text] Representatives of reformist political parties in Okinawa Prefecture visited the Naha Defense Facilities Administration Bureau [DFAB] one after another today to protest the crash of an F-15 Eagle fighter from Kadena Air Base, which occured in the waters northeast of the main island of Okinawa yesterday evening, demanding measures to prevent a recurrence and ensure safety for residents.

Officials of the JSP Okinawa Prefectural Chapter, led by Secretary General Nakasone, at a meeting with DFAB Director Kobodo noted that the accident could have caused a major disaster if it had occured in a civilian residential area, and that the only way to ensure safety for residents is to remove military bases from Okinawa. Kobodo responded: Details of the accident are not yet available, as the U.S. Forces have just embarked on an investigation. In view of concern on the part of residents, DFAB has already asked the U.S. military to let it know the cause of the accident as soon as it has been determined.

Chairman Nakamoto and other officials of the Socialist Masses Party also visited Kobodo this morning. Nakamoto said: There was a fire at the Kadena Air Base on 1 June involving a refueling aircraft. Accidents continue to occur, threatening local residents with grave disasters. Similar accidents will continue to occur as long as military bases exist in Okinawa. Kobodo said in his answer that, while the government is in no position to consider removal of the bases, DFAB will strongly urge the U.S. military to see to it that similar accidents do not occur in the future. he emphasized DFAB's resolve to ask the U.S. Forces to enforce measures to fully ensure safety. Komeito and JCP officials are also expected to lodge a similar protest with DFAB this afternoon.

WPK MARKS 40TH ANNIVERSARY OF CHILDREN'S UNION

[Excerpts] A grand joint national meeting of the Korean Children's Union was held magnificently at Kim Il-song Stadium on the morning of 6 June to celebrate the 40th anniversary of its founding. Placed with due respect on the front wall of the meeting place which was packed with some 50,000 students, children, and working people from the city was a portrait of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

Students from the Red Flag Mangyongdae Revolutionary Institute and members of the Children's Union from various districts of Pyongyang City stood in rows in the meeting place. Written on the backdrop on the front wall of the meeting place were letters reading "A Grand Joint National Meeting of the Korean Children's Union Celebrating the 40th Anniversary of Its Founding."

The meeting was attended by members of the Political Bureau of the WPK Central Committee and Vice Presidents Comrades Pak Song-chol and Yim Chun-chu; members of the Political Bureau of the WPK Central Committee Comrades Kim Hwan, secretary of the party Central Committee, and So Yun-sok, responsible secretary of the Pyongyang Municipal Party Committee and chairman of the Pyongyang Municipal People's Committee; alternate members of the WPK Central Committee Comrades Kye Ung-tae, secretary of the party Central Committee, Chong Chun-ki, vice premier of the State Administration Council, and Kang Hui-won, chairman of the Pyongyang Municipal Administration and Economic Guidance Committee; such functionaries concerned as Hwang Sun-hui, Kim Pong-chu, Yi Yong-su, O Chae-won, and Choe Tae-pok; and Japanese revolutionary fighters, Heroes of the Republic, and labor heroes; functionaries from the science, education, literary, art, and sports fields; LSWYK functionaries; and LSWYK and Chidren's Union members from all over the country.

At the meeting, Comrade Kim Hwan conveyed a congratulatory message of the WPK Central Committee sent to all of the members of the Korean Children's Union on the occasion of the 40th anniversary of the founding of the Korean Children's Union.

[Begin Kim recording] Congratulatory message to all of the members of the Korean Children's Union:

Marking the 40th anniversary of the founding of the Korean Children's Union, the WPK Central Committee extends wholehearted congratulations to all of the members of the Children's Union who are doing their utmost to prepare themselves as the credible reserves for the revolutionary cause of chuche under the leadership of our party [applause]

On the basis of the revolutionary traditions of the Saenal Juvenile Union and the Anti-Japanese Children's Corps established during the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song founded the Korean Children's Union on 6 June 1946, thereby bringing the Korean juvenile movement to a new stage and providing all the children of our country with a revolutionary political organization. [applause]

Over the past 40 years since its founding, the Korean Children's Union has traversed a glorious road under the leadership of the party and wonderfully discharged its own mission and duty to prepare all the children to be reseres of our revolution.

During the period of democratic construction, the Korean Children's Union educated all the children in the country as the future pillars of a new democratic Korea by uniting them as one and helped in the work of carrying out democratic reform and of organizing the northern half of the Republic as a firm revolutionary base as best it could.

During the period of the arduous fatherland war, members of the Children's Union lent assistance to the front lines while continuing their studies, did various things to defend the rear, and demonstrated the spirit of Korean children by organizing children's guard units and bravely fighting against the enemy with these units.

In the period of postwar rehabilitation and socialist construction, members of the Children's Union, while exerting positive efforts to prepare themselves as socialist and communist builders equipped with knowledge, virtues, and physical fitness, helped run the national economy by actively launching various forms of good deeds movements, and helped erect a people's paradise on this land.

Members of our Children's Union are now well prepared to inherit firmly the blood lines of our revolution upholding the fighting program aimed at imbuing society with the chuche idea, and are actively contributing to the work of carrying out the three revolutions -- ideological, technical, and cultural -- as young revolutionary warriors.

Proudly ambroidering the happy lives of our people are the commendable deeds of members of our Children's Union who have devoted themselves to the struggle for the party and revolution on the heels of the WPK members and LSWYK members.

The core members [kolgan] of the revolution are appearing afresh from among our new generations, who have been tested in the course of serving in the Children's Union following the leadership of the party. Furthermore, countless heroes, unsung performers of meritorious deeds, and talented scientists, technicians, writers, artists, and sports figures have emerged from among them. The ideological and spiritual state of the members of our Children's Union is good, and the Korean Children's Union has further grown and developed as a communistic [kongsanjuijog] children's organization in charge of training the reserves for the revolutionary cause of chuche.

It is a great joy for our party and people to see the new generations growing tenaciously to become the future protagonists shouldering the future of the fatherland through participation in the Children's Union organizations.

The WPK Central Committee rates highly the fact that the Korean Children's Union has achieved great successes in training the children as the reserves of our revolution in a revolutionary manner and that all the members of the Children's Union have accomplished a great many exploits for the revolution and construction as true sons and daughters of the party and people during the past 40 years under the leadership of the party. [applause]

The members of the Children's Union are the petals of the revolution, and the future of our revolution and fatherland depend, in large part, on how the members of the Children's Union are prepared. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The Korean Children's Union and its entire membership should improve and strengthen the work of the Children's Union and further develop the children movement of our country in accordance with the new demands of the development of the revolution.

The Korean Children's Union and its members should stage a more vigorous struggle in order to wonderfully discharge the heavy mission and duty assigned to them. All members of the Children's Union should prepare themselves thoroughly to become true revolutionary warriors, armed firmly with the revolutionary ideas of our party and deeply loyal to the party and leader. Members of the Children's Union should deeply study the works of Marshal Kim Il-song and the party documents, so much so that they become their own flesh and bones and dedicate all their strength and wisdom to implementing the party's policies. Members of the Children's Union should possess the revolutionary spirit of holding the party and leader in high esteem, of following them enthusiastically, and of strongly safeguarding and defending them by emulating the noble examples set by such young communists as Kim Hyok and Cha Kwang-su.

All members of the Children's Union should prepare themselves as strong socialist and communist builders equipped with knowledge, virtues, and physical fitness by learning industriously and by training themselves in a revolutionary manner. By studying well in school and by reading a great number of good books, the members of the Children's Union should retain a wide range of useful knowledge and scientific technology and further broaden the knowledge they have already attained by actively participating in the extracurricular activities.

Members of the Children's Union should possess wonderfully the beautiful moral traits of being polite, of doing well in observing public order in society, of having a good appearance, and of liking to work. Members of the Children's Union should stay in good shape by making such sports activities as exercises for growth and sprints a part of their daily life. The socialist fatherland is a cradle of happiness and hope for the growing new generations. All membes of the Children's Union shoiuld wholeheartedly love the socialist fatherland and assist the nation's socialist construction to the best of their ability.

Members of the Children's Union should keep their own schools and villages in good condition by broadly launching various forms of good deeds movements, and should contribute to conserving national wealth and to further expanding it.

All the members of the Children's Union should never forget about the South Korean children for even a moment, actively support the struggle of the South Koran people and children against the U.S. imperialists and puppet clique, and deveote their entire strength to hastening the reunification of the country.

Children's organization life is a wonderful school for training the children as true revolutionary warriors. All members of the Children's Union should value the children's organizations, participate in various forms of organizational life, observe the rules of the children's organizations well, and discharge the division of labor given to them by the organization without fail.

In order to strengthen the work of the Children's Union, it is imperative to raise the role of the LSWYK organizations and guiding functionaries of the Children's Union.

The LSWYK organizations should lend great effort to the work of the Children's Union and actively struggle in order to make the Children's Union organization a fresh revolutionary organization full of life.

The guiding functionaries of the Children's Union should raise the level of their own political and work capabilities, improve their own methods, educate the members of the Children's Union, and lead them as a mother would. The WPK Central Committee firmly believes that all members of our Children's Union will firmly prepare themselves to be reserves for the revolutionary cause of chuche and fulfill with credit the honorable tasks assigned to them by keeping in mind the trust and expectations of the party. [applause]

MEETING MARKS MINJU CHOSON 40TH ANNIVERSARY

[Text] On 3 June, a report meeting marking the 40th anniversary of the founding of MINJU CHOSON was held at the People's Palace of Culture. Respectfully placed in front of the meeting hall was a portrait of the great leader of our party and our people Comrade Kim Il-song. Slogans reading "Long live the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song!" and "Long live the glorious WPK!" were set up in the hall. Also hung in the meeting hall were letters reading "The 40th anniversary of the founding of MINJU CHOSON."

Comrade Pak Song-chol, member of the WPK Central Committee Political Bureau and vice president; Comrade Kye Ung-tae, candidate member of the WPK Central Committee Political Bureau and secretary of the party Central Committee; and Comrade Chong Chun-ki, candidate member of the WPK Central Committee Political Bureau and vice premier of the State Administration Council; other personages concerned; functionaries of the Central People's Committee; committees, ministries, and central organizations of the State Administration Council; and functionaries of the press and publication sectors in Pyongyang attended the report meeting together with the reporters, editors, and employees of MINJU CHOSON. Members of the visiting groups and delegations of the Chongnyon who are staying in the fatherland were invited to the meeting.

The meeting began with the signing of "The Song of General Kim Il-song." At the report meeting, Comrade Pak Song-chol conveyed the congratulatory message from the WPK Central Committee and the DPRK Government to the reporters and editors of MINJU CHOSON. The message extended warm congratulations to all the reporters and editors of MINJU CHOSON, who have actively contributed to strengthening and developing the people's government and to the victorious advance of our revolutionary cause by upholding the party's policy on press and publication, on the occasion of the 40th anniversary of the founding of MINJU CHOSEN.

The message pointed out that the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song founded the newspaper MINJU CHOSON on 4 June 1946 on the basis of the revolutionary tradition achieved in the press and publication sectors during the glorious anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle period. Thus, our people's government infiltrated the party's policy and lines of the state into the masses through its organ and organized and mobilized the masses to implement them.

Noting that for 40 years since its founding, the paper MINJU CHOSON traversed along the victorious path under the wise leadership of the party and the leader and excellently carried out the missions and duties as the organ of the government, the message said that the paper armed functionaries of state economic organizations and workers with the great chuche idea and contributed to strengthening our revolutionary forces by firmly uniting them around the party and the leader. Thus, it smoothly carried out the mission as the propagandist and defender of the party's policy in promoting the functions and role of the people's government and for accelerating the revolution and construction.

The paper inspired the broad strata of the people to the struggle for victory in democratic reform and for building the revolutionary and democratic bases by upholding the line for building a new fatherland put forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song after national liberation. During the arduous fatherland liberation war period, the paper honorably fulfilled the militant role in inspiring the people to the struggle to smash the U.S. imperialist aggressors and safeguard the revolutionary gains.

After the war, the paper contributed to building a powerful self-reliant national economy out of the ashes and to achieving socialist reform in the production sector and the historic cause of socialist industrialization by upholding our party's lines for socialist construction and by organizing and mobilizing the masses to implement these lines.

Today, the paper MINJU CHOSON is vigorously inspiring our people to the struggle to achieve the chuche-orientation of the entire society and the independent reunification of the fatherland by accelerating the three revolutions -- ideological, technological and cultural -- and is playing an important role in strengthening the international solidarity of our revolution by implementing the foreign policies of our party and the Government of the Republic.

The message noted that it highly appraises the achievements of the reporters and editors of the MINJU CHOSON who contributed to winning the great victory in the revolution and construction by strengthening and developing our people's government and demonstrating their loyalty to the party and the leader and their spirit of patriotic devotion through persistent activities of press work and reporting. The message said that it firmly believes that the reporters and editors of MINJU CHOSON will effect constant innovations in press work and editing in the future, too. by upholding the party's leadership and demonstrating revolutionary passion and creative wisdom.

At the meeting, Kim Chong-suk, the responsible editor-in-chief of the MINJU CHOSON, made a commemorative report. Pointing out that the Kim Il-song medal was awarded to the MINJU CHOSON on the occasion of the 40th anniversary of the founding of MINJU CHOSON and the reporters and editors received the congratulatory message of the party Central Committee and the government of the Republic, the reporter said that this is the greatest honor and pride of all functionaries of the MINJU CHOSON. She stressed that the paper MINJU CHOSON is a chuche-type revolutionary paper that was founded and is led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and is being guided by dear Comrade Kim Chong-il, and is the organ of the Government of our dignified Republic.

She pointed out that the great leader Comrade kim Il-song published and guided numerous revolutionary publications including the paper SAENAL and the magazine 1 MARCH MONTHLY in the early days of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle period. On the basis of this tradition, he put for the policy for founding an organ of the government together with the establishment of the people's government after national liberation. He brilliantly achieved this policy, deeply understanding the great significance of the revolutionary publications and press work in achieving the revolutionary cause of the working class.

She noted that with the founding of the paer MINJU CHOSON, our people's government had a mighty ideological weapon for achieving the policies of the state and could more brilliantly implement the leadership of the party and the leader in the revolution and construction.

The great leader Comrade kim Il-song has taught: The paper MINJU CHOSON was founded with important missions as a genuine propagandist, instigator, and organizer serving the Korean people, who are struggling for the building of a new Korea, and educating our people with democratic ideas and inspiring them to the work of building the nation.

Recalling that the paper MINJU CHOSON traversed a victorious and proud path for the past 40 years, since its founding, under the wise leadership of the party and the leader, the reporter pointed out that the paper honorably fulfilled its duties as the organ of the government at every point of time in the development of the revolution, including the period of building a new Korea after the liberation, the arduous fatherland liberation war period, the postwar rehabilitation period and the socialist construction period.

She stressed that the fact that the paper MINJU CHOSON could traverse a glorious path filled with exploits is a fruition of the wise leadership of the great leader and our party. She noted that the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song elicidated the path for the paper to advance and extensively unfolded the direction of publishing the paper in accordance with the revolutionary mission and the trend of the situation arising at every point of time and every stage in the development of the revolution and that he extended great trust and various benevolences to the reporters and editors.

The reporter stressed that thanks to the great leader's wise leadership and parental benevolence, the paper MINJU CHOSON could vigorously inspire the functionaries of the state economic sector and all the workers to the revolution and construction by firmly adhering to chuche principles in all its activities and by thoroughly embodying the party spirit, working class spirit, and people-minded spirit.

Noting that the great leader's idea for building the chuche-oriented organ of the Government is being more billiantly implemented today, the reporter said that dear Comrade Kim Chong-il put forth programmatic guidelines that we should firmly adhere to in building the chuche-oriented publications and in activities concerning these publications at a new historic time in the development of the revolution when the issue of the chuche-orientation of the entire society is being pushed ahead extensively and that he is energetically leading the paper MINJU CHOSON to contribute to achieving the cause of the chuche-orientation of the entire society.

She noted that dear Comrade Kim Chong-il helped to freshly edit the content of the paper and to organize the format of editorial work in accordance with the masses' revolutionary aspirations and put forth more important and grave missions before the organ of the government, deeply understanding the demands of our revolution, which is advancing at a new higher stage. Thus, he is vigorously encouraging the functionaries, reporters, and editors to successfully achieve their missions.

She pointed out that dear Comrade Kim Chong-il extended great love and benevolence to the paper, deeply understanding all the questions, great or minor, arising in operation of the newspaper and in the work and life of the reporters and editors, including the issue of changing the appearance of the paper MINJU CHOSON, the issue of correctly reflecting the paper's characteristic nature, and the issue of adhering to the propaganda of the respected leader's greatness.

She stressed that the 40 years traversed by the paper MINJU CHOSON are 40 years of great victory during which the outstanding idea of the respected leader and our party for building the chuche-oriented organ of the Government and their wise leadership have been brilliantly embodied.

She said that they extend greatest honor and warmest thanks to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who founded the chuche-type organ of the Government, leading it along the road of victory, and who extended honor and happiness to them and to the glorious party center.

The reporter stressed that the paper MINJU CHOSON has been accorded the glorious and responsible task of truly contributing to achieving the chuche revolutionary cause by upholding the tasks put fort in the congratulatory message of the party Central Committee and the Government of the Republic and by promoting the militant functions and role of the organ of the Government in every way. She pointed out that all functionaries, reporters, and editors of the paper should permanently glorify the paper as the genuine chuche-type organ of the Government and should make the paper tenaciously defend and protect the party and the leader and uphold the party's intentions by effecting a new turning point in the work of publishing the newspaper and cherishing lofty loyalty to the party.

She pointed to the issues of propagandizing the greatness of the respected leader and our party at home and abroad; of more comprehensively carrying out education in loyalty and the revolutionary tradition; of arming the functionaries and workers with lofty class consciousness, with the spirit of tenacious struggle, with the lofty sense of collectivist spirit, and with socialist patriotism; and of carrying out propaganda work to promote national pride in many ways and forms and in a substantive manner.

She stressed that we should write more good articles that will contribute to promoting the functions and role of the organs of the people's governments at all levels and that we should contribute to strengthening the international solidarity with our revolution. A banner of congratulations in the name of CHOSON SINBO [organ of Chongnyon] was conveyed at the meeting.

ANIVERSARY OF 10 JUN DEMONSTRATION MARKED

[Text] Pyongyang June 10 (KCNA) -- A Pyongyang meeting commemorating the 60th anniversary of the June 10 anti-Japanese demonstration was held on June 9. Hundreds of thousands of people including workers and students in Seoul turned out on the streets on June 10, 1926, breaking through a strict police cordon of the Japanese imperialists, and waged a powerful massive anti-Japanese demonstration, chanting slogans "long live the independence of Korea!" "Japanese Army, get out!" "Korean independent activists, unite!" and so on and scattering a great many copies of handbills and appeals. This fierce struggle rapidly spread to local areas.

Yu Ho-chun, director of the Secretariat of the Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland, said this in his report. He said the June 10 anti-Japanese demonstration 60 years ago was an eruption of long pent-up resentment at the heinous colonial rule of the Japanese imperialists and a massive anti-Japanese patriotic struggle of the Korean people to regain the lost sovereignty of the nation and achieve the independence of the country.

He went on: The aspiration of the June 10 demonstrators has not yet been realized on a nation-wide scale owing to the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and the South Korean people have not yet been freed from miserable colonial slavery.

The extremely strained situation in our country created by the reckless war provocation moves to the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique is growing more acute due to the scheme to knock into shape the three-way military alliance involving the United States, Japan, and South Korea.

What is noteworthy in the moves of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets rendering the situation in Korea strained these days is the fact that they are making North-South confrontation more acute, making the false propaganda that the North would "invade" the South with the 1986 Asian Games and 1988 Olympics as an occasion.

The people of all strata in South Korea should not harbor an illusion about U.S. imperialism but vigorously fight to drive out the U.S. imperialist aggression forces and put an end to their colonial rule, holding aloft the anti-U.S. slogans.

If the peaceful reunification of our country is to be accelerated at present, three-way talks among us, the United States and South Korea should be realized. If the United States truly wants the reunification of Korea, it should give up the "two Koreas" policy, stop encouraging the South Korean puppets to confrontation and division and accede at an early date to our proposal for three-way talks, stressed the reporter. He held that for a smooth holding of the 24th Olympic Games, our proposal for the co-staging of the games by the North and the South of Korea must be realized. Papers here today carry articles on this day.

SOUTH WAR EXERCISES VIEWED AS 'ALARMING MOVE'

[NODONG SINMUN 6 June commentary: "Playing With Fire by a War Servant"]

[Text] On 4 June, the Chon Tu-hwan clique again staged a war exercise called "Pilsung Pangpae-86" ["Victorious Shield-86"] in downtown Seoul. The bellicose elements, including the puppet prime minister and defense minister, came to the site of the war exercise and ran amok to instigate the war frenzy while commanding the playing with fire.

Even before the gunsmoke of the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise has vanished, provocative war exercises are being staged one after another in South Korea. This is a very alarming move. During a recent 20-day period, large-scale war exercises, including a civil defense drill and joint training for support of river-crossing operations between the U.S. and puppet armies, have been staged daily. The puppet defense minister blatantly instigated the frenzy of northward invasion while going around frontline areas.

Just a few days before, when the puppets were running amok with a war exercise, the U.S. imperialists infiltrated twice the SR-71 high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance airplane into the airspace above the territorial waters of the East and West Seas of our country, thus committing espionage activites.

Everything in South Korea has, in fact, gone into a wartime system in accordance with the northward offensive strategy which was worked out anew, and 80 to 90 percent of the U.S. forces and the puppet army have been massed in the frontline areas. Thus, the situation in the nation is in a state of super-tension, in which a war may break out even as a result of a minor clash.

At this very time, they openly invaded our territorial airspace, continuing war exercises assuming us as the target, and are openly instigating northward invasion. This is a reckless act to trigger a war after all [kioi]. The puppets' reckless act is shown by the fact that they, together with the U.S. imperialists, have made the provocation of a war against us a fait accompli.

With the approach of the 25 June to 27 July anti-U.S. joint struggle month, the peace-loving people of the world unanimously want to see the U.S. imperialist aggressor forces withdraw from South Korea and an atmosphere of peace and peaceful reunification realized on the Korean peninsula. The South Korean students and people are persistently calling for withdrawal of U.S. troops, together with nuclear weapons, and for opposition to war.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique, which is scheming to ignite the flames of war against its fellow countrymen in collusion with aggressors, ignoring such aspirations of the time and the nation, is indeed a group of peerless warmongers and traitors.

The puppets preposterously slandered us by raving about someone's provocation and infiltration attempt with the approach of the Asian Games, just like a thief calling "stop thief!" This is part of the premeditated smears and maneuvers aimed at shifting the responsibility for the war that they will trigger against us. The Chon Tu-hwan ring's war frenzy has reached an extreme point.

The frenzy of the puppets' war rackets has something to do with their consciousness of crisis. The anti-U.S. and anti-fascist sentiment that has been enhanced among the South Korean students and people on the occasion of the 6th anniversary of the Kwangju popular uprising is now a blazing mass resistance struggle to crush the U.S. imperialists' colonial fascist rule.

The situation is further constricting the neck of the colonial stooges. The Chon Tu-hwan clique is attempting to find a way of survival in the path of adventurous war provocation. However, a war will never open a road for the puppets to survive.

SOURCES OF SOUTHERN RESISTANCE TO U.S. NOTED

[Text] Pyongyang June 9 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today comes out with a signed article entitled "Anti-U.S., Anti-Fascist Struggle Is an Independent Movement Which Has Originated and Is Developing Due to Internal Factor of South Korea". Recalling that the Chon Tu-hwan group is kicking up an anti-communist row, linking with the North the massive and powerful demonstrations in South Korea against U.S. imperialism, fascism, war and nuclear weapoons, the article says: The South Korean student movement is their own struggle caused by the internal factor of South Korea, not on other's dictates.

It is an eruption of the national and social contradictions growing acute in South Korea and an independent and creative movement of the masses reflecting the law of the development of history. Owing to the U.S. imperialists' policy of occupation and their interference in the internal affairs of South Korea, the national dignity and sovereignty of the South Korean people have been trampled underfoot for nearly helf a century.

Independence against U.S. imperialism is a paramount order of the nation. The anti-U.S. action of the South Korean students stems from the unavoidable national obligation. Only when the U.S. forces are withdrawn from South Korea, can the people free themselves from disasters and a peaceful phase open for the solution of the reunification question. The anti-U.S. movement for independence in South Korea reflects this urgent demand.

The anti-fascist movement for democracy gaining momentum in South Korea is also a resistance movement of the South Korean people themselves against the ever more serious violation of human rights. South Korea is a most horrible graveyard of human rights.

The student movement against war and nuclear weapons is their own struggle representing their will to save the destiny of the natiion from the danger of nuclear war.

The mass movement of South Korean students for independence against U.S. imperialism, for democracy against fascism and for peace against war and nuclear weapons is motivated by the mission they assume for the times and the nation. How can it be said that this struggle is dictated by others?

If the U.S. troops withdraw from South Korea and stop interfering in its internal affairs, the anti-U.S. struggle will be discontinued, and if the suppression of the patriotic and democratic forces is terminated, human rights respected, and the phase for democracy opened, the students will no longer shout "down with dictatorship". The anti-war, anti-nuclear movement will no longer exist when military exercises are discontinued, arms buildup stopped and nuclear weapons withdrawn.

VNS ANALYZES SOUTH-U.S. 'COLONIAL' RELATIONS

SK100435 (Clandestine) Voice of National Salvation in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 5 Jun 86

[Roundtable talk among Madame Yun Chong-won, Ko Il-chol, and moderator Min Hye-chong in the "Feature Program": "South Korea, a U.S. Colony"]

[Text] [Min Hye-chong] Underground students reportedly are engaged in ideological debate on such social and political questions as national liberation and independence of the country, that is, whether South Korea is an independent country or a colony and whether or not this country is independent.

Superficially, these subjects of discussion, or, shall we say, themes, sound different from each other. However, both the former and latter seem to be themes that lead in the end to issues concerning relations between the United States and South Korea. Nevertheless, I believe that these themes are fundamental and significant in view of the need to arrive at a definition of a genuine view of the state, that is a view of the current situation, and in view of the need to correctly determine the direction and coordinates of the people. So, today I would like you to discuss issues related to these questions under the title "South Korea, a U.S. Colony," which is purely for the sake of expediency.

[Yun Chong-won] As you just said, it may be a question of either master-servant relations between South Korea and the United States or of how to view the United States, if I may say so.

If we are to talk about such questions, we should first of all begin with the issues concerning the Kwangju incident. This is because our people's view of the United States changed a great deal, qualitatively and quantitatively, in the days that followed the Kwangju incident. Even such people who had hitherto seen the United States as a helper and liberator of South Korea, as well as an advocate of human rights and democracy, came to realize the fact that the United States is an enemy of our people and ruler of South Korea, in the wake of the great Kwangju massacre. Today, students and masses of all walks of life are shouting stronger anti-U.S. slogans than ever before, and their struggle against U.S. domination and for the realization of independence in South Korea is expanding with each passing day. Such are, I believe, clear indications of a shift in their views of the United States.

Of course, it is hard to say that there never was any anti-U.S. sentiment and resentment against the United States among the people before the Kwangju incident.

[Min] Nonetheless, never before has the sentiment of rejecting the United States surfaced or been put into action as it is today. Or has it been?

[Ko Il-chol] It may have been either because people did not open their eyes to the illusion of the United States as an apostle of freedom and democracy or because they had an incorrect judgment on defining the course of the movement which has obviously given priority to extricating South Korea from U.S. domination and intervention, believing that such a task is something that must be done only after eliminating the comprador dictatorial power and after democratization has been achieved in South Korea.

However, the bloody incident that occurred in Kwangju has prompted the people to realize that they had hollow illusions and expectations of the United States as well as the fact that democratization of South Korea will be impossible as long as the United States remains in South Korea. This is the reason why the people's views of the United States have changed greatly in the wake of the Kwangju incident.

[Min] Do you mean that the brutal atrocities committed by the United States which instigated and controlled the great Kwangju massacre behind the scenes and the master-servant South Korea-U.S. relations whose true color was laid bare clearly for all to see through the Kwangju incident made our people open their eyes to the true nature of the United States and changed their views of the United States?

[Yun] As you mentioned master-servant relations, no nations in the world are so thoroughly bound by master-servant relations as are South Korea and the United States. Simply put, South Korea-U.S. relations can be said to be relations between the invaders and the invaded, relations between colonial imperialists and the colony and vertical relations of domination and subjugation between the master and servant.

[Min] As to the question of how to view the United States, as has been suggested by the underground students, it can be said, if we may jump to the conclusion first, that the United States is an aggressor and plunderer who has divided the Korean peninsula and dominated South Korea in its own interests.

Public relations books published by the Ministry of Culture and Information are devoted to such foolish and cheap propaganda, employing hackneyed words that the United States has never forced on the South Korean people things that are not in the interests of the Korean people, including invading our country or imposing slave-like colonial life. It simply is ridiculous.

[Ko] They may probably believe that invading other countries and occupying their land by the use of force is the only form of aggression. It is wrong. In the true sense of the word, an aggression is an act of invading other countries, holding a grip on power, and then indulging one's greed. An aggression has varied forms such as military aggression, economic aggression, and ideological and cultural aggression. People of the invaded countries are destined to have their national interests trampled underfoot and to suffer a slave-like colonial life in various forms.

[Min] You are right. Now, the question is whether it is possible to say that the United States has not invaded our country, or trampled underfoot our national interests, or forced on our South Korean people a slave-like colonial life.

[Ko] I find it unnecessary to talk about it long because it is proven by history, reality, and experience. First of all, the United States has lorded over the South Korean people as a de facto ruler for over 40 years since its illegal occupation of South Korea. Following this, it has converted this land into a complete U.S. military base and acted as a master in the political, economic, military, and cultural fields.

[Yun] Your description of the United States as a de facto ruler is very appropriate. A few examples will suffice to prove that the United States is the practical ruler of South Korea. Above all, the right to select the president in South Korea is a case in point. As you may know, the South Korean president is a running dog chosen not by the South Korean people, but by the White House. The same is true of the policies of the South Korean Government. Both domestic and foreign policies of the South Korean Government are like U.S. scenarios whose direction are determined by U.S. policy toward South Korea.

Besides, the South Korean Armed Forces are nothing but the Pentagon's mercenaries, with their prerogative of supreme command placed under the commander of U.S. forces in South Korea; the South Korean economy is a subordinate and contract economy totally dependent on the United States whose lifeline is placed in the hands of U.S. monopoly capitalists; and the South Korean culture is a carbon copy of the decadent and corrupt Yankee culture. Also, the land of South Korea is a fief annexed by the United States which can commandeer it as a military base without any constraints. Can you name any more serious form of aggression than this?

Indeed, South Korea can be said to be a model case of colonies as well as a typical colony. This is the reason why the United States is called the de factor rule of South Korea.

[Min] This notwithstanding, the Chon Tu-hwan group is not only aware of its being an object of social contempt, but it also is noisily babbling about freedom or independence.

[Yun] This is true.

[Ko] No matter how frenziedly it may try to hide itself under the mask of independence and sovereignty, it can never veil the stark reality. It simply is an ignominy to describe South Korea, which is under the U.S. military occupation and completly subjugated to the United States in all aspects, as an independent or sovereign country. To describe it with a metaphor, it is an act of arguing that a scarecrow is a real man. What a foolish act it is!

[Min] Nevertheless, more often than not some people seem to fail to understand the stark reality that South Korea is a U.S. colony. Why do you think people misunderstand, or, shall we say, are confused about, this stark fact?

[Ko] Simply put, it is because they do not have clear knowledge of what new ruling tactics colonialists of today use as opposed to those that were employed by colonialists of yesterday. While maintaining the same colonial ruling system as they did in the past, today's colonialists, I mean, the neocolonialists, pretend that they are different from their predecessors, at least superficially. This is the reason.

Let me put it this way. By making it appear to be different from the past form, today's colonialists make it difficult for the people to distinguish between the outward appearance and contents of colonial rule, although nothing has changed in the substance of their colonial ruling system.

[Yun] That is precisely the reason why people fail to differentiate between the present and past colonialism. In fact, past colonialism was so clear in its nature that nobody had any doubt about it. Past colonialism openly refused to recognize sovereignty of other countries and exercised suzerain power over them. The Japanese imperialists' colonial rule in our country in the past is a case in point. With regard to colonialism of the past, it was clear whether a country was a sovereign country or colony. There was no such thing as a disguise or ambiguity of hiding subordination under cover of sovereignty.

[Min] Do you mean to say that there was a clear line drawn between the suzerain power and colonies and that there could not have been any uncertainty about the objective of the colonialized countries with regard to sovereignty?

[Yun] It is precisely what I am talking about.

[Ko] Right. As indicated by the U.S. colonial rule over South Korea, neocolonialism does not deny independence or sovereignty in word and form. On the contrary, it claims to be the advocate of independence and sovereignty. Herein lies one of the reasons that causes misunderstanding among the people about South Korea being a U.S. colony.

[Yun] The neocolonists grant a bogus title of independence to colonies instead of denying them official country names and establish puppet regimes in the colonies instead of placing governors general as their rulers. Positioning their own perpetrators inside the subordinate regimes, the neocolonialists are realizing their rule over the colonies, indirectly, with the help of these perpetrators.

[Ko] Their methods of plundering these colonies are similar to this. Instead of directly and openly coming out into the open as the plunderers of colonies, the neocolonialists often appear under the mask of a helper. Superficially, they appear so. However, as the reality of South Korea clearly demonstrates, the various forms of assistance that the neocolonialists grant to the colonies in the name of economic assistance, military aid, and technical assistance are not for the people of the colonized counries, but for their own interests. Loans are no different than this, though they have a different name.

[Yun] A closer examination of the true picture of relations between South Korea and the United States clearly reveals the fact that the United States is none other than the incarnate of neocolonialism. As long as such neocolonial domination by the United States continues to remain in force, South Korea's independence has no substance.

[Ko] Even though it has a government, in name only, hangs out an official name called "The Republic of Korea," and has established diplomatic relations with various countries, the South Korean regime, which is in a position where it is influenced by the United States in all aspects and where it cannot continue to exist without depending on it, cannot be an independent country. This is clear to everyone.

Such a regime, which is politically controlled by the directives issued by the White House and which, in military terms, has no choice but to follow the order of the commander of the U.S. forces in South Korea in such fields ranging from commanding rights for operations to the right to troop movement and the supply and distribution of military equipment, cannot be an independent regime. Also, there is no doubt that a regime whose economic foundation is so dependent on foreign capital and technology as well as on imports of foreign goods, and which is submerged in an alien culture, cannot be an independent regime.

[Yon] You are quite right. Nonetheless, the Chon Tu-hwan group and progovernment press describe the subjugation of South Korea to outside forces as an independence, dependence on outside forces as self-reliance, and flunkeyism and national identity -- the logic of placing the cart before the horse -- while babbling that the U.S. military occupation of South Korea and its colonial rule serve as strength to guarantee the sovereignty of South Korea. This amounts to the argument that the Japanese imperialists' colonial rule helped South Korea develop.

[Min] To sum up what has been said, we arrive at the conclusing that a remark by THE WASHINGTON POST that the South Korean Government and National Assembly are nothing but a fantasy designed to make themselves appear to be independent under the domination of the United States is perfectly right.

For South Korea to put an end to U.S. colonial domination in this land and to advance on the road of independence, sovereignty, national liberation, and national reunification in accordance with the trend of the times, it should, first of all, not allow itself to be placed under U.S. military occupation and colonial rule, and should bury the pro-U.S. traitorous regime of Chon Tu-hwan at an early date.

STUDENT ATTACKS ON KOREAN-AMERICAN BANK LAUDED

SK061245 (Clandestine) Voice of National Salvation in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 3 Jun 86

[Text] In this hour we will talk about the Seoul National University [SNU] students' struggle of attacking the Songdong branch of the Korean-American Bank.

As has already been reported, the patriotic SNU students staged a daring anti-U.S. demonstration last Sunday evening, throwing Molotov cocktails at the Songdong branch of the Korean-American Bank, located in Hawangsimni, Songdong-ku, Seoul. This struggle waged by the SNU students was an explosion of the accumulated and pent-up spite and indignation against the 40-year-old U.S. occupation of South Korea and colonial rule, and a manifestation of the burning will of our students determined not to tolerate the U.S. oppressors, who are continuously imposing the fate of colonial slaves on our masses, and to realize the sovereignty of the masses under the banner of the anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation.

As you know, the United States is the source of misfortune and a sworn enemy that is imposing all sorts of unhappiness and pain on our masses. Since the very first day of its occupation of this land, the United States has been ruthlessly trampling upon our nation's sovereignty, thoroughly obliterating the democratic and civil rights of our masses, while instigating the fascist dictators. Furthermore, adhering to the two-Koreas plot, it is attempting to permanently divide the country and the nation.

Besides, the United States has turned this land into a nuclear arsenal housing some 1,000 nuclear weapons, and is aggravating tension on the Korean peninsula by continuously conducting aggressive war exercises against the North, leading the situation to the brink of war. In particular, the United States is the ringleader of the Kwangju massacre, in which it instigated and manipulated the Chon Tu-hwan group from behind the scenes.

Through this barbarity -- one incurring the wrath of both heaven and man -- committed by the United States, our masses came to realize clearly that the United States is the sworn enemy of our masses, and they more firmly resolved to wage an anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation. Therefore, the students who love justice and who have strong patriotism are waging a daring struggle daily, holding aloft the banner of the anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation, waging, in particular, a vigorous anti-U.S. struggle, attacking and seizing such U.S. institutions as the American Cultural Centers and U.S. banks, burning U.S flags, and crying out "Yankee go home."

This is a patriotic act demonstrating the indomitable will of our masses, determined not to tolerate the U.S. aggressors, who are trampling upon the nation's sovereignty, democracy, and civil rights, imposing the fate of colonial slavery on our masses, and driving them out of this land and bringing about a new independent world and a new democratic society. The anti-U.S. demonstration waged by the SNU students who attacked the Songdong branch of the Korean-American Bank is part of such as anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation. Therefore, this struggle waged by the students is a just patriotic struggle reflecting the consistent aspiration and demands of our masses who wish to oppose foreign forces and to live in an independent and democratic new society free from fascism. The patriotic students' struggle, therefore, should not be regarded as a crime.

Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan group committed the fascist suppression of dispatching the suppressive police, suppressing the student's just struggle, and arresting the patriotic students. The Chon Tu-hwan group's fascist savage act is an intolerable fascist brutality aimed at obliterating the student's sacred nation-saving struggle for independence and democracy, and a criminal act that can be committed only by the pro-U.S. traitors who are attempting to sustain their filthy remaining life by acting against the country and the nation, trying to win the favor of their U.S. masters.

No matter how desperately it may engage in fascist suppression, the Chon Tu-hwan group will not be able to block the anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation which is heightening with each passing day among the students and the masses of all strata. The Chon Tu-hwan group should stop the anachronistic fascist suppression and step down from power without delay in accordance with the consistent demands of the masses.

The students and the masses of all strata will be firmly united under the banner of the anti-U.S. struggle for independence, and wage a daring anti-U.S. and antigovernment struggle to force the U.S. aggressors out of this land, to bring an end to the fascist dictatorship, and to bring about a new independent world and a new democratic society.

VNS DENOUNCES CHON TU HWAN-YI-MAN-SOP TALKS

[Text] Following the exclusive talks with Yi Min-u, president of the NKDP, on 3 June, Chon Tu-hwan met Yi Man-sop, president of the KNP, on 4 June. That day, Chon Tu-hwan also made lengthy and boring remarks about the issues of constitutional revision, relase of detained persons, the lifting of the political ban, and so forth. The remarks made by Chon Tu-hwan at the so-called exclusive talks are, in a word, hackneyed utterances aimed at covering his filthy intention with a ridiculous and deceptive cloth and at concealing his dictatorship with the hood of democracy.

Repeating the same remarks on that day, Chon Tu-hwan said that efforts should be made to have the issue of constitutional revision passed at a regular Assembly session in September and that the sooner this issue is passed, the better and so forth, as if he is interested in constitutional revision.

Why is Chon Tu-hwan, who became enraged by even a word about constitutional revision, and who arrested those who called for constitutional revision, hastily advocating constitutional revision even by putting forth the time of passage of the issue? Has he suddenly become an angel? The people became dubious. However, the true nature of the dictator who is attempting to prolong his power will never change. Chon Tu-hwan's remarks about constitutional revision are a trick to appease the developing mass movement demanding constitutional revision and the pressure of public opinion and are a plot to weaken the mass movement for democratization by dragging it into the National Assembly and wasting time on empty words.

What we should not overlook is that Chon Tu-hwan defiled the detained people by branding them as pro-communist leftists, a radical faction, and so forth. How can the people who aspire for an independent society without outside forces and for a new democratic world be branded as pro-communist leftists and how can their act be branded as violence?

Those who should be imprisoned are the Chon Tu-hwan group, and those who should be judged by the people for their crime are none other than the Chon Tu-hwan clique, which committed various atrocities and violence against the people by dominating them with wicked and repressive rule. Nevertheless, Chon Tu-hwan defiled the detained people. This is by all means an intolerable crime. At the talks that day, Chon Tu-hwan also made sweet remarks on implementing the minimum wage system to ensure the worker's livelihood, on increasing the income of farmers and fishermen, and so forth. All his remarks are a preposterous sophistry.

Not only once or twice were our people deceived by such empty words. Chon Tu-hwan, instead of putting forth such empty words, should apologize for his crime of reducing the economy and the people's daily life to a miserable state, of turning this land into a kingdom of foreign loans, and of causing several million to be unemployed, and should step down from power.

That day, Chon Tu-hwan also made preposterous remarks on the campus issue. In order to basically settle the campus issue, we should overthrow the incumbent fascist system and establish a democratic government. Only by so doing can campus freedom and democracy be ensured and can the campus problems be settled.

Chon Tu-hwan's remarks at the talks with the KNP president are aimed at settling the crisis in his power through appeasement, deception, threats, and menace and at further intensifying the colonial fascist rule. Righteous remarks cannot be made by a dictator. There has never been a dictator with strong ambition for power who voluntarily stepped down from power and who presented freedom and democracy to the people. Chon Tu-hwan is no exception. Chon Tu-hwan is pretending that he is going to voluntarily transfer power by revising the Constitution while raving about grand compromise. However, we should not have even the slightest degree of fantasy and should not be fascinated by his sweet utterances. The true nature of a dictator cannot change, just as a wolf cannot change into a sheep. In order to achieve democracy, we should more boldly and fiercely carry out the anti-dictatorship struggle together with the anti-U.S. struggle to basically reform the present colonial fascist system.

UNC REPORT CITES NORTH HOSTILITIES AGAINST ROK

[Text] United Nations, June 9 (YONHAP) -- The communist North Korea continued its offensive military buildup close to the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) and deliberate hostilities against Korea last year, thereby undoubtedly heightening military tensions on the Korean penninsula, the United Nations Command (UNC) in Korea reported here today. In an annual report of its activities to the United Nations Security Council, UNC charged that the North Koreans had committed "no less than 11,000 substantiated violations of the Korean Armistic Agreement in 1985."

The report, submitted by the commander-in-chief of UNC Gen William J. Livsey Jr., was distributed Monday to 159 UN member countries by this month's president of the Security Council, Mr Blaise Rabetafika of Madagascar as its official circulating document. The report said "the capability of North Korea to initiate military actions against the UNC and the Republic of Korea remains real, with its massive military forces forward deployed and offensively postured." The offensively postured North Korean military buildup includes more than 20 attack submarines, 80,000 to 100,000 highly trained commandos, more than 250 special An-2 Colt airplanes for carrying commandos, newly acquired helicopters, over 100 amphibious craft, 3,000 plus taks, 1,500 armored personnel carriers, 1,500 self-propelled artillery pieces, 3,300 towed field artillery weapons, and 2,000 multiple rocket launchers, it pointed out.

It stressed that the UNC had presented various "contructive" proposals to reduce military tensions on the korean peninsula, despite continued North Korean violations of the Armistic Agreement and their provocations against Korea. "However, the North Koreans have not only failed to respond positively to any one of these UNC initiatives, but also have consistently refused to investigate jointly any serious armistice violations," it noted.

The report said the major tension-reducing proposals of the UNC included mutual prior notification of major military exercises and exchange of observer teams by both sides, joint investigation tems of the military Armistice Commission (MAC) and the Neutral Nations Supervisory commission (NNSC) to investigate serious incidents occuring in the DMZ, a viable mutual verification system for compliance with the Armistic agreement in Panmunjom, and mutual inspection of the DMZ with an ultimate goal of returning it to a buffer zone as intended by the Armistice Agreement.

In the face of continued North Korean hostilities and military buildups, however, "The UNC intends to keep in its present course of seeking progress in reducing military tensions and fostering a stable environment conducive to South-North dialogue," the report said.

CAPITAL LIBERALIZATION PLAN TO BE POSTPONED

[Text] Seoul, June 7 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government is considering a plan to postpone the implementation of its capital liberalization program until the overheared buying activities on the domestic stock market cool off. Under the plan, the government will delay the establishment of Korea's second close-end type investment fund for foreign investors until early next year, a Finance Ministry official said Saturday.

The government had originally planned to set up the second Korea fund in Europe this year. The first such fund for foreign investors opened in New York in 1984. The liberalization of foreign capital investments in Korean stocks through the planned Korean fund in Europe will further fuel the overheated Korean money market, which has been flooded with "imaginary demand," the ministry official explained.

Under the plan, the government will allow only one private business to float foreign currency-denominated convertible bonds on overseas money markets this year and to limit the ceiling of such bonds to a certain level, according to the official. Earlier this year, the government set its target for the inducement of foreign capital through the purchase of Korean stocks at 150 million U.S. dollars. The target figure comprises 40 million dollars from the Korea Fund in New York, 60 million dollars through the issuance of convertible bonds overseas (40 million dollars by Dae Woo Heavy Industrial Co. and 20 million dollars by Yukong) and 2.5 million dollars through the issuance of beneficiary certificates for foreign investors.

If the second Korea Fund is established in Europe with an initial capital of 30 million dollars this years, as the government originally planned, Korean firms will be allowed to float only 20 million dollars worth of bonds overseas this year. The government will use flexibility in implementing its capital liberalization program. The opening of the domestic money market will reflect changes in market conditions, the official said.

FOREIGN BUSINESS INVESTMENT POSTPONED UNTIL OCT

[Text] Seoul, June 10 (YONHAP) -- The Korean Government has decided to postpone until after Oct 1 the implementation of a plan that would allow foreigners to invest in an additional 35 to 40 business fields, a Finance Ministry source said Tuesday. The decision was unavoidable because of the differing views held by the pertinent ministries concerning the opening of some business fields to foreign investment. As part of its domestic market liberalization program, the government had originally planned to begin opening 35 to 40 business areas to foreign investment on July 1.

Although there have been no objections to the liberalization of the synthetic fiber market and about 30 other business fields, some government agencies, including the transportation and Education Ministries, strongly oppose the opening of the advertising industry, private foreign language institutes and the cargo transportation business to foreign investment. Even the ruling Democratic Justice Party opposes opening these business sectors to foreign investment. The three cited areas are among the sectors that the United States has been pressuring Korea to liberalize, the source said.

There are no time limits for implementing the market opening plans. Therefore, the concerned government agencies will engage in ample consultations before these business areas are opened to foreign investment, perhaps until after Oct 1 of this year, the source said. At present, foreign investments are prohibited in 237 of the 999 Korea standard industrial classification business fields. If the liberalization plan is implemented, it will boost the foreign investment liberalization ratio from 76.3 percent now to 80 percent.

Foreign investments here last year totaled 530 million dollars on an approval basis. At the end of 1985, Korea had induced more than 2.6 billion dollars in direct and indirect foreign investments on an approval basis, according to the Finance Ministry.

LABOR MINISTER SAYS ROK HOPES TO JOIN ILO

[Text] The Republic of Korea hopes to join the International Labor Organization (ILO) in the near future to step up its active participation in various ILO programs, Labor Minister Cho Chol-kwon said yesterday. In his keynote speech at the 72nd session of the International Labor Conference in Geneva, Cho noted the Seoul government has exerted all-out efforts to "observe the fundamental principles and objectives of the ILO constitution." The ILO meeting, opened June 4, will continue through June 25.

In addition, the minister said, "Korea has made progress in observing most of the ILO conventions and recommendations for the protection of workers' rights and for the achievement of social justice." In an effort to even further promote workers' interests and to improve working conditions, the government as well as employees and employers "keenly feel the necessity of strengthening the cooperative relations with the ILO and all its member states." Cho said. "I assure you that the strengthening of cooperative relations between Korea and the ILO will contribute to enhancing workers' interests all over the world by sharing with its member countries the experience and technology that we have acquired in the process of the economic and social development," Cho said.

The minister said Korea has been "vigorously" fostering the activities of small- and medium-sized industries by "providing direct financial support, numerous tax incentives and various forms of technical assistance." He said the present Labor Standard Law articulated detailed protective measures for industrial youths and the government has extended various programs designed to help them learn and receive education at schools while working at industrial plants.

DISCUSSION ON CONSTITUTIONAL REVISION CONTINUES

No Tae-u Urges Decentralization

[Text] DJP Chairman No said that the Constitution should be revised in such a way as to guarantee the people's basic rights substantially, by allowing the people's wider participation in politics and by decentralizing powers of the state. "The National Assembly and political parties should be activated through the amendment, and other major democratic systems functions should be strengthened," he said.

Baring the DJP's five-point basic position on the constitutional revision issue, No said, "All systems have to be studied and debated thoroughly under the principle that a fair and free election is the very starting line of democratic politics." "It is never a democratic attitude to make a premise with a specific system," he said.

He also said, "We have to keep the principle of a free economic system firmly and to realize social justice more boldly through the amendment." In particular, the DJP chairman stressed that the new Constitution should be able to guarantee the national security and the survival of the people first of all.

"The DJP will do its best and exert every patience to realize the amendment on the basis of partisian agreements as soon as possible," he said.

However, the ex-general noted that the rival parties should work for the amendment from a long-range viewpoint for the "genuine democratization of this country," which means the comprehensive practice of democracy in all sectors of society.

The most important task for the democratization of the nation is, according to him, the decentralization of powers. "We should realize the idea of checks and balances by dividing equally powers of the state among the administration, legislation and court," he said. "Powers should be extended also to regions away from the center, so that inhabitants in rural areas can display their creative ability and contribute to the development of their regions for themselves," he said.

He further said that the deadlocked South-North dialogues would be possibly resumed when the constitutional revision is achieved through partisan accords. "North Korea will come to the negotiation table, judging that it will be difficult to further prompt internal disturbances in the South," he observed.

As to the NDP-demanded release of "political detainees," he said that the DJP would strive to persuade the government to treat the arrested students leniently within the boundary of laws. But, he made it clear that the government should resolutely deal with forces attempting to destroy order and systematic frames of Korea, whose national policy is free democracy. "We, politicians, have to assume initial responsibility to renovate social atmosphere and promote reformative policies consistently in order to prevent radical outcries from gaining public sympathy," he said. "On the other hand, however, the opposition camp is required to clarify that it clearly severs relations with the left-leaning revolutionary line," he said.

DJP Seeks Talks With Dissidents

[Text] The ruling Democratic Justice Party plans to seek dialogue with dissident leaders as part of its effort to take the initiative in constitutional revision. DJP chairman No Tae-u said yesterday, "We will expand the scope of dialogue with various strata of society without any limits. We will go anywhere, if necessary, for dialogue." No made the remarks while presiding over an informal meeting of the party's Central Executive Council.

Briefing reporters on the meeting, party spokesman Sim Myong-po said, "When we say we will not put any limits on our dialogue, we do not refer to Kim Tae-chung or any other specific persons." Sim said, "It is an overall expression of our willingness to have dialogue with all dissident or antigovernment elements."

Earlier this month, No said he is willing to meet with Kim Yong-sam, adviser to the opposition New Korea Democratic Party. As leader of the largest faction of the opposition party, Kim sets the tone of negotiation between rival parties.

The DJP spokesman also quoted No as stressing the need for greater cooperation between the government and the ruling party. "The government has led the political situation up to now. From now on, however, the party will increase its role in leading the political situation," No said. The ruling party will maximize its capabilities to lead national administration as well, the DJP chairman said.

No Sin-yong on State Affairs

[Text] Seoul, June 7 (YONHAP) -- Korean Prime Minister No Sin-yong said Saturday that his government will respect agreements reached by the ruling and opposition parties on the planned revision of the Constitution and that it will do its best to provide necessary measures on behalf of the revision. In a report on state affairs that he presented to the National Assembly's special plenary session, No said he expects the rival parties to work out a revision bill that transcends the interests of a particular individual or political party. He also said that the revision bill should be acceptable by the people and should not be subject to disputes until national reunification.

No said that the government will consider the release of detained dissidents through legal procedures, depending on the seriousness of their offenses and how much repentance they have shown. The enforcement and application of the law cannot be the subject of political negotiations, however, he added. The prime minister said that the government can never overlook the leftist student activists who are agitating and leading violent demonstrations. The government will deal strictly with anti-national destructive student activities that are riding on political events, he said.

The rival political parties intend to form a special National Assembly committee to work on revising the Constitution in the special plenary session, which opened Thursday. The session is scheduled to continue until June 24. The leading opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP) has demanded the release of detained dissidents to pave the way for the formation of the special committee.

No pointed out that Pyongyang has further strengthened its military relations with Moscow and has completed preparations for launching a preemptive invasion into South Korea. He said that the government will continue to promote inter-Korean dialogue, using maximum patience and sincerity, in an effort to consolidate the nation's security posture.

On the economic front, No predicted that Korea's economic growth will surpass 8 percent and that its exports will exceed the government's target of 33 billion dollars. He also forecast that Korea will record a 500 million-dollar surplus this year in its balance of international payments, thereby paving the way for independent growth without increasing its net foreign debt.

DJP To Seek Referendum in 1986

[Text] The Democratic Justice Party plans to seek a national referendum on the forth-coming constitutional revision bill before the end of this year. To achieve this goal, the ruling DJP intends to finalize the amendment bill by November in negotiation with the opposition. The bill will be referred to a national referendum in December after approval by a two-thirds majority in the National Assembly.

The current Constitution stipulates the proposed amendments shall be submitted to a national referendum no later than 30 days after passage by the Assembly and determined by a majority in a referendum. Political sources said yesterday the proposed completion of constitutional reform this year means the advancement of political schedule.

During his meeting with opposition leaders Tuesday and Wednesday, President Chon Tu-hwan said the Constitution may be revised during a regular National Assembly session starting Sept. 20, the sources recalled. "If rival parties work out an agreement, they will be able to advance the timing for constitutional reform," they said.

They said the DJP plans to form a special constitutional committee in the Assembly before June 20. The committee will draw up a final amendment version. The majority party plans to design its own version before the start of the regular session, they said. The sources said the DJP is scheduled to hold public hearings in July and August to reflect a broad spectrum of opinions in its version. As soon as the party finalizes its draft, it will launch active negotiations with the opposition party, they said.

At present, rival parties sharply disagree over the form of next government. A number of DJP lawmakers are recommending a parliamentary government system, and ranking DJP officials are tilting toward a presidential government system. The opposition NKDP is calling for a presidential government system and direct presidential election. Not any of the three major parties holds the needed two-thirds majority, and it is inevitable for them to negotiate for constitutional revision.

The current basic charter, which was adopted in 1980, provides the President be elected indirectly by an electoral college. Meanwhile, rival parties are expected to redress various laws on conjuction with constitutional revision. Political sources said an estimated 120 laws will need to be revised as a result of constitutional amendment. Among them are the National Assembly Election Law, the ruling party has already started collecting materials needed for the modification of the laws, the sources said.

Referring to the rewriting of the Assembly Election Law, they said the current medium-sized constituency system will definitely be overhauled. At present, each of the 92 electoral districts elects two lawmakers and the party which wins the largest number of seats automatically pulls off 61 of the 92 seats reserved for an outline of a proportional representation system. The sources said there are two alternatives: one lawmaker for each constituency or more than three lawmakers for a constituency larger than the present one.

Yi Min-u Sees Compromise

SK070028 Seoul THE KOREA HEARALD in English 7 Jun 86 pp 1, 3

[Text] The leader of the major opposition New Korea Democratic Party said yesterday that the direct presidential elections system could be a subject for compromise in the upcoming negotiations with the ruling party over the constitutional revision. During an exclusive interview with MBC-TV, NDP president Yi Min-u, when asked if the direct presidential election formula could be a subject for compromise, said affirmatively, "I think there is room for compromise."

But he made it clear that "the NDP's attempt to attain constitutional amendment to provide for a direct presidential election by popular vote is aimed at returning to the people the right to select a government, not for a specific person but for the nation as a whole." He recalled he had criticized the basic law of the Fifth Republic in a resolute manner in his recent talks with President Chon-Tu-hwan.

Asked if the NDP is confident of taking power in the presidential election under the projected new basic law, the NDP president said, "I don't think the NDP will definitely take power in the projected new Constitution." He reiterated that the Constitution should not be rewritten for a specific party or person, but for ensuring the people of their basic rights.

Yi said that he has never thought of becoming a candidate for the presidency, adding that he would devote himself solely to attaining democracy in the nation.

Yi said the two opposing parties will be able to work on the constitutional amendment in the special House committee on the basic law "if 'ground' for grand politics is formed as our party has demanded." The 'ground,' he cited, includes the release of political detainees and amnesty and restoration of civil rights for "democratic figures."

"Political parties should not reject a major negotiation by setting up preconditions in advance, Yi said, indicating that the NDP will agree to form the special House panel on the basic law revision in the ongoing extra House session.

As for the increasing radical students' anti-American slogans, Yi said that such slogans will disappear only if the democratization of the nation is achieved. But he added that it is not reasonable for the radical students to demand the withdrawal of the U.S. forces from Korea right now, as long as there are possibilities that North Korea will provoke a war against South Korea.

Rival Party Officials To Meet

[Text] Floor leaders and secretaries-general of rival political parties will huddle jointly within a couple of days on matters related to the creation of a special House committee to work on constitutional amendment. Rep. Kim Tong-yong, whip of the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party, proposed the meeting at a floor leaders' get-together at the Manhattan Hotel in Yoido yesterday.

Kim's counterpart, Yi Sei-ki, of the Democratic Justice Party gave an affirmative answer to Kim.

Rep. Kim made the proposal in line with party president Yi Min-u's instruction to have multi-channel dialogues with the ruling party to tackle the core problem of freeing political prisoners who were arrested for calling for democraccy. The NDP held out the release of the imprisoned persons as a precondition to the formation of the special House panel.

Emerging from the meeting, DJP whip Yi told reporters, "We reached an accord to make our best efforts to establish the committee within the current extraordinary House sitting." The ongoing National Assembly session will continue until June 24.

In the gathering, NDP floor leader Kim strongly demanded the early release of the political prisoners, including Rev. Mun Ik-hwan, leader of a united dissident group. Kim noted, "They were all arrested for calling for amendment of the Constitution. As your ruling party declared itself in favor of revising the basic law, it is very natural to release them at the earliest possible date."

He also demanded the prompt cessation of the police investigation of the United Mass Movement for Democracy and Unification [Mintongnyon], which is led by Rev. Mun.

Kim requested amnesty for "fighters for democracy," including Kim Tae-chung, and the withdrawal of indictments against NDP lawmakers on charges of "floor violence."

Yi replied, "If the NDP forms the special House committee jointly with our party, those matters will be solved naturally."

Party Leaders Outline Positions

SK090750 Seoul YONHAP in English 0733 GMT 9 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 9 (YONHAP) -- The leaders of South Korea's three major political parties Monday revealed their parties' fundamental positions on the proposed revision of the Constitution in the ongoing special session of the National Assembly.

In his keynote speech, Rep. No Tae-u, chairman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), urged the lawmakers to discuss and review all constitutional system "open-mindedly" within the framework of the National Assembly. No did not advocate a specific form of government, but he said that a new constitution should ensure the decentralization of national power, the basic rights of the people, the fair distribution of income and the invigoration of the functions of the political parties and the National Assembly itself.

"Free and fair elections are the basis of democratic politics," he said. "Under this cardinal principle, unreserved discussions and review of each and every constitutional system should be made in the National Assembly to create the nation's new basic law." "The current Constitution should be revised in the direction toward maximizing the protection of the people's basic rights by decentralizing national power," No added. The system of free competition should not be endangered under any circumstances, and wealth should be distributed fairly in order to ensure social justice, the DJP chairman said.

In another keynote speech, Rep. Yi min-u, leader of the major opposition New Korea Democratic party (NKDP), emphasized the need to replce the existing indirect presidential election system, which involves electoral colleges, with a direct election system involving popular votes in order to ensure the people a free choice of government.

Yi noted that constitutional revision is supported by a national consensus and that "the breach of this solemn national consensus in the interest of partisian or personal goals for the long seizure of power would lead to more violent anti-government and anti-state campaigns."

In considering the specific political and cultural conditions of Korea, Yi said, he is convinced that the election of the president under the presidential responsibility system is "the most recommendable system" and that it would fully ensure the people's right to select the form of government through their own will.

Meanwhile, Yi Man-sop, leader of the minor opposition Korea National Party (KNP), expressed his party's support for the presidential responsibility system involving popular votes.

Yi said, however, that the NKDP's basic position reflects the people's hope for democratization through constitutional revision. "But it should not be a required precondition. It should be necessary condition for the creation of an amicable atmosphere for a grand national concilliation," Yi said.

He called for fundamental solutions to the nation's protracted campus unrest, labor-management disputes and farmers' disturbances. These political and social confrontations and frictions are no more than an outlet for the structural discrepancies of the Korean economy, he said.

The 130th extraordinary National Assembly session, which was called into session on June 5 with the purpose of setting up a special parliamentary panel on constitutional revision, will include a week-long question-and-answser session concerning overall state affairs in the fields of politics, foreign policy, national security, economics and society.

Yi Min-u Urges Direct Election

[Text] NDP president Yi Min-u stressed yesterday that as presidential government with a direct popular vote is the best system for assuring "the people's free choice of government." The main opposition party leader said that the envisaged amendment to the Constitution should should be made in the direction of guaranteeing the free choice as rival parties agreed earlier.

He warned, "If the spirit of the agreement is violated for the interest of a political group or prolongation in power, more violent and fiercer anti-government and anti-state movements will take place, even after the basic law is rewritten."

The 70-year-old Assemblyman said, "In view of the specific circumstances and political culture of our nation, I am convinced that the direct presidential election system will most faithfully assure the people's right for free choice of their own government."

Enumerating fundamental principles under which a new Constitution should be written, Yi also accented that guarantees for people's basic rights have to be strengthened. On top of this, he noted, the independence of the judicial power should be guaranteed and the spirit of the separation of the three branches of the government should also be stressed.

He then strongly proposed to insert a new phrase of "the people's right to resistance" against military takeover of power to put an end to the army's intervention into politics.

Asserting that those principles are no less significant than the structure of power, Yi warned, "If those points are not given full consideration, the new Constitution will invite a prompt objection."

Yi went on that a special parliamentary committee to work on the constitutional amendment should be formed during the current extra House session without fail. He reiterated his standing demand for an early release of "fighters for democracy," including Kim Tae-chung, who were imprisoned for demanding constitutional revision. It will demonstrate the government's willingness to rewrite the basic law, he asserted. "They were arrested for calling for the constitutional amendment while the current regime vowed to safeguard the Constitution.

"Now that the revision of the basic law has been agreed, it is only natural that they be set free. I declare here again that whether or not the government will free them will be a touchstone measuring its will for the constitutional amendment," Yi stressed. He said that the fetters of dictatorial rule brought serious adverse effects to the social, economic and cultural areas.

Yi Man-sop Urges Passage by Fall

[Text] KNP president Yi Man-sop claimed that an amendment bill to the Constitution should be acted on during the regular fall session of the National Assembly by all possible means. "Then," Yi said, "a national referendum should be held by next January, at the latest, to finalize the revised Constitution, taking into consideration the heavy political schedule subsequent to constitutional amendment."

He went on, "the projected revision on the basic law will have to be based on a 'grand compromise' between the ruling and opposition parties," because no single political party can meet the quorum of more than two-thirds of National Assemblymen required for the passage of the revision bill. He stressed that "A schedule for the democratization of the nation" should not be at the mercy of the government and the ruling party any that the National Assembly should take the initiative in working out the political schedule. "To that end, the special House committee on constitutional revision should be set up at any cost during the on-going extraordinary House session," said he.

As for the content of the new basic law, Yi said that it should ensure the people's right to select their government and provide for expanded basic rights of the people. The KNP president reiterated that his party will seek to adopt the presidential government system, including direct election by popular vote, in the new Constitution, "as most of the people have wanted to elect the president directly by their own hands since the birth of the Fifth Republic (in 1981)."

He praised the leaders of the major opposition NDP for having agreed in principle to form the House panel on the basic law during the on-going House session.

Yi said that political detainees should be released at the earliest possible date, "because it is very natural for the government to take steps to release those who were arrested for demanding democracy and constitutional revision, once the ruling and opposition parties have agreed to revise the basic law."

He strongly called upon the people to do away with what he termed "five anti-democratic evils," along with the nation-wide campaign to revise the Constitution, in order to attain genuine democracy in the nation. The "five evils" are: prolonged rule by one man, military intervention in politics, the vicious circle of political retaliation, repression by authoritative power and social polarization through black-and-white logic.

Yi focused his address on the restoration of public confidence in politics and politicians and stressed dialogue and compromise between the ruling and opposition parties on the constitutional revision issue.

[Text] Hanoi VNA June 9 -- The 10th Plenum of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam was held in Hanoi early this month. In his opening address, party General Secretary Le Duan pointed out that the plenum's main task was to prepare the contents of the upcoming 6th C.P.V. Congress and, therefore, its success would be a decisive factor for the triumph of the congress.

The meeting discussed and unanimously adopted the draft political report to be submitted to the 6th C.P.V. Congress.

The Central Committee, the Political Bureau and the Secretariat of the C.P.V. and the Standing Committee of the Council of Ministers, by promoting the spirit of self-criticisms and criticism, analysed the shortcomings and weakness of their leadership, guidance, and execution and worked out measures to enhance the efficiency of their work.

The party Central Committee discussed a number of questions relating to the supplement and revision of the party statute aimed at further heightening the class and militant characters of the party, the vanguard and exemplary characters of each party member, and ensuring the party's principle of democratic centralism.

The plenum, after reviewing the implementation of the resolution of the 8th plenum on prices, wages and money, insisted that with its correct content the resolution has demonstrated the party's strategic resolve to abolish bureaucratic centralism and the mechanism of subsidy-based management and shift to socialist economic accounting and business transaction. These things actually marked the party's growth in economic leadership.

The 10th CPV Plenum called on the entire party and people to actively take part in labour emulation drives to fulfill the 1986 State Plan and welcome the party congress at different levels and the 6th National Congress.

["Notice" [thoong baos] of the 10th Plenum of the CPV Central Committee, Fifth Term]

[Text] In late May and early June 1986, the CPV Central Committee, fifth term, held its 10th plenum. CPV General Secretary Le Duan delivered an opening speech. He said: This party Central Committee plenum is held to prepare the contents of the Sixth CPV Congress. As a result, its success will be a decisive factor for the triumph of the coming congress.

The party Central Committee plenum discussed and unanimously adopted the draft political report to be submitted to the Sixth CPV Congress.

With the high sense of responsibility and for the party's and people's revolutionary cause, the Central Committee, the Political Bureau, and the Secretariat of the CPV, and the Standing Committee of the Council of Ministers scrupulously conducted criticism and self-criticism, pointing out strengths and profoundly analyzing shortcomings and errors in leadership, supervision, and execution of tasks, while taking effective measures to overcome these difficulties.

The plenum firmly believed that conducting satisfactory criticism and self-criticism in the entire party from the central level to various echelons and grass roots units will create an encouraging atmosphere to enhance the people's confidence in the party leadership.

The party Central Committee discussed a number of questions relating to the supplement and revision of the party statutes aimed at further heightening the class and militant characters of the party and the vanguard and exemplary characters of party members, while firmly maintaining the party's principle of democratic centralism.

After discussing and analyzing shortcomings and errors in supervising tasks relating to prices, wages, and money, the party Central Committee affirmed that the spirit and basic contents of the party Central Committee eighth plenum's resolution are correct and bear a profound revolutionary significance. The resolution has demonstrated the party's strategic resolve to abolish the bureaucratic centralism and state subsidies and shift to socialist economic accounting and business transaction, thereby marking our party's growth in economic leadership.

The party Central Committee plenum set forth targets to be attained by the entire party and pointed our urgent tasks to implement the policy on prices, wages, and money in order to gradually stabilize the socioeconomic situation and correctly implement the resolution of the party Central Committee eighth plenum and resolutions of the party Central Committee Political Bureau.

After this party Central Committee plenum, our entire party will concentrate their efforts on preparing the Sixth CPV Congress. The immediate task now is to ensure fine success for congresses of delegates of various echelons.

The CPV Central Committee 10th plenum called on the entire party and people to uphold the revolutionary impetus, strive to overcome difficulty, enthusiastically participate in labor productivity, improve management, practice thrift, fulfill and overfulfill the 1986 state plans, and strive to score concrete achievements to welcome the congresses of delegates of various echelons and the Sixth CPV Congress, thereby contributing satisfactorily to the two strategic tasks of building socialism and defending the socialist fatherland.

[10 June NHAN DAN editorial: "Let Us Do Our Best To Ensure Fine Success for the Sixth CPV Congress"]

[Text] The fifth party Central Committee's 10th plenum has ended successfully.

Comrade General Secretary Le Duan said in his opening speech: This time the party Central Committee's plenum is held to prepare the agenda for the Sixth CPV Congress. The success of this plenum will constitute an initial step of decisive importance for the success of the forthcoming party congress.

The success of the party Central Committee's 10th plenum is of great significance in many respects:

First, the party Central Committee approved a draft political report to be presented at the sixth party congress, clarified many big problems, unanimously agreed on policies and viewpoints and on the evaluation of the situation in all respects over the past 5 years, affirmed great achievements, and, at the same time, analyzed shortcomings and errors in providing leadership and guidance for work implementation, pointed out the reasons for these shortcomings and errors, and set forth the orientation and tasks for our country's revolution for the years ahead. The unanimous approval of the draft political report by the party Central Committee's plenum is regarded as an important step in holding party organization congresses at all levels as scheduled and in organizing a broad gathering of views from our entire party, people, and Armed Forces to be presented at the party congress following efforts to make these views look perfect.

Second, with its scrupulous attitude of look directly at the truth and with its high sense of responsibility toward the undertaking of the party and the people, the party Central Committee conducted self-criticism and criticism in a frank manner, asserted the revolution's gains, pointed our errors and shortcomings in the providing of leadership and guidance for work implementation, and decided on specific correctional measures. This self-criticism and criticism spirit of the party Central Committee serves as a good example for the entire party to carry out satisfactorily the self-criticism and criticism drive, and to take severe disciplinary actions against those units and individuals committing errors. The sense of responsibility of the highest leadership organs of the party shows that our party has always been steadfast and has always concerned itself with fulfilling its lofty duty toward the fatherland and the people in accordance with the highly treasured tradition built up by esteemed Uncle Ho.

Third, after discussing and analyzing shortcomings and errors in providing guidance for the implementation of the resolution of the party Central Committee's plenum on prices, wage, and money, the party Central Committee's 10th plenum once again strongly asserted that the spirit and the basic contents of the resolution of the party Central Committee's eighth plenum are correct and are of profoundly revolutionary significance. The resolution of the party Central Committee's eighth plenum reflects the thoughts and determination of our party and people to discard the system of centralization, bureaucracy, red tape, and state subsidies and to shift to the system of economic accounting and socialist business in economic managment.

In order to implement correctly and scrupulously the resolution of the party Central Committee's eighth plenum and other resolutions of the Political Bureau, the party Central Committee's 10th plenum carefully analyzed the situation and unanimously set forth a number of urgent measures on prices, wage, and money aimed at gradually stabilizing the socioeconomic situation and spurring production and other fields of activity.

Fourth, the party Central Committee's plenum discussed a number of points on amending and revising the party statute to be presented at the sixth party congress in order to increase the party's fighting strength, maintain the principle of democratic centralism, heighten the vanguard and exemplary role of party members, and ensure the party's political, ideological, anhd organizational steadfastness.

This is the initial step in the process of renovating the oganization of cadres with view to deploying high-quality and competent cadres at all levels -- from the central down to the lowest levels. This is to ensure the continuity and succession [tinhs kees thuwaf] and to make it possible for our party to fulfill all its tasks in the new revolutionary stage.

The socialist construction and the building of the collective mastery system by the laboring people in our country through enjoying many basic advantages, has encountered numerous great difficulties. The Chinese expansionists and hegemonists' attempt to weaken and annex our country constitutes a long-term threat to our people while imperialist and reactionary forces continue to pursue their hostile policies against our people. It is the sacred duty of our entire party, people, and Army to implenent victoriously the two strategic tasks -- building socialism successfully and defending the socialist fatherland firmly.

We must constantly concern ourselves with consolidating our all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union, intensifying militant alliance and all-round cooperation with the fraternal countries of Laos and Cambodia as well as the rest of the socialist community and supporting the struggle of the peoples in various countries against imperialism and reactionary forces for peace, national independence, democracy, and socialism.

At present, we are faced with numerous great and important tasks. In the light of the party Central Committee's 10th plenum and following the pattern set at the plenum, let our entire party further uphold its sense of responsibility, conduct the self-criticism and criticism drive carefully, and make necessary preparations to ensure that the party congresses at all levels and the national party congress produce fine results.

The success of the party Central Committee's 10th plenum serves as a source of encouragement for all of us. The party Central Committee's high sense of responsibility encourages us to overcome all difficulties and to do our utmost with the motto: All for the Socialist Fatherland and for the People's Happiness.

Responding to the earnest appeal by the party Central Committee's 10th plenum, let our entire party, Army, and people enhance our unity and singlemindedness, enthusiastically emulate in engaging in productive labor and practicing thrift, renovate the system of economic management, and concentrate our efforts on resolving urgent tasks in order to stabilize the socioeconomic situation, fulfill and exceed the 1986 State Plan targets, and score realistic achievements to welcome the party congresses at all levels and the national party congress.

OFFICIALS VIEW CAMBODIAN POLICY, AREA ISSUES

PM091120 Paris LE FIGARO in French 24-25 May 86 p 2

[Francois Nivolon dispatch: "Hanoi Explains Cambodian Policy"]

[Text] Hanoi -- Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs Vo Dong Giang, who is Nguyen Co Thach's immediate deputy, is an expert on Cambodia. He explained Vietnam's viewpoint to me: "The U.S. and Chinese Policy aims to make Vietnam pay dearly through an economic blockade and diplomatic isolation, if it rejects a solution in Cambodia based on the so-called coalition government, which is a UN-supported front for Pol Pot. This carrot and stick policy is not new. It is doomed to failure. The economic embargo is causing us additional problems but it is not killing us.

Moreover, it is not the UN support which will be decisive but the situation in Cambodia.... Time is on our side. But it is working against those who are trying to force our hand. Indeed, we will withdraw all our troops in 1990 whether or not there is a political solution in Cambodia."

With regard to a request from Heng Samrin's regime for some of the Vietnamese troops to be kept in Cambodia after 1990 if the Khmer Rouge are still active, Vo Dong Giang said: "There will be no such request even if small Khmer Rouge Groups are still active. After all, the existence of small groups of rebels is almost natural in Southeast Asia, in the Philippines, Malaysia, Thailand, and even Vietnam with FULRO (Footnote) (FULRO: United Front for the Liberation of Oppressed Peoples -- an organization of Montagnards in the Ban me Thuot region which is not very active), but it would not be serious, merely an irritation. That would not prevent us from withdrawing our troops."

In reply to a question on the meeting in Bangkok on 21 April between Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Savetsila and his Vietnamese counterpart Nguyen Co Thach, Vo Dong Giang said: "We appreciate the fact that the meeting took place, although it did not produce anything new. Let us say that Thailand has taken one-fourth of a step forward because it is likely to be isolated sooner or later. With regard to the clear hardening of China's line, we think that it is in a position of weakness because ASEAN is in favor of negotiations. China reminds us of cowards shouting in the dark to allay their fear of ghosts. Beijing's tougher line is aimed at curbing dialogue between Indonesia or ASEAN and Vietnam."

After a pause, the minister continued: "As far as we are concerned, we prefer a negotiated political solution in Cambodia, which would give us more time and would be less costly.

Border under Control

"In this solution there are bound to be two aspects to consider: one is internal and is the Cambodians' affair. The other is the external aspect, formed mainly by the presence of our expeditionary corps in Cambodia and the maintenance of sanctuaries for the 'Pol Pot-ists' and others on Thai territory. vietnam could discuss the external aspect with either Thailand or China since everybody knows that Beijing is supplying the weapons. It is possible to discuss the two aspects one after the other, the internal aspect then the external aspect, or in the reverse order, or simulataneously. In the same way the Cambodian question could be settled first and then that of stability in Southeast Asia or stability in the region could ber negotiated first and then a solution for Cambodia. We would prefer the two problems to be solved at the same time."

With regard to the role played by Prince Sihanouk and the Khmer Rouge, Vo Dong Giang said: "Only thos who had separated from Pol Pot by then could take part in drafting a solution. With regard to Sihanouk, an attempt to arrange a meeting with Hun Sen in Paris in 1984 failed. We could still try to arrange it. But what is Sihanouk's game? I wonder."

With regard to the military situation in Cambodia, General Iran Cong Man, editor of QUAN DOI NHAN DAN, the Vietnamese army paper, told me in impeccable French -- he was planning to be a French literature teacher in 1945 -- "None of the 16 border bases which we captured well over 1 year ago has been reoccupied by the supporters of Pol Pot, Son Sann, and Sihanouk. We have remained in the area and, on the whole, we control the border (between Cambodia and Thailand). However, it is very difficult to prevent minor infiltrations of 10, 20, or even 50 men. There has been no major offensive by Pol Pot's troops inside Cambodia.

These are not occupying major bases but small positions in the Battambang and Pailin Provinces, in the mountains close to Pouthisat, and northwest of the great lake of Tonle Sap. They mine the roads from time to time and attack villages, especially those where there are no Vietnamese troops, kidnap young people, who they enlist, and steal food."

Still on the subject of the Khmer Rouge, Gen Tran Cong Man told me: "They lay ambushes and launch harrassment attacks. There was even a small-scale attack near Oudong, 40 km north of Phnom Penh. In the region southwet of Pouthisat control is difficult because the Khmer Rouge have weapons and munitions which are brought in from Trat (in Thailand). We are also seeing some activity north of Kompong Thom, but it is no real threat. But northwest of Tonle Sap, which is a marshy region, it is difficult to carry out mopping-up operations."

With regard to the situation on the Chinese border, Gen Tran Cong Man told me: "there have been very few (Chinese) infantry attacks in the past year -- three or four involving a company in the province of Ha Giang, in the Ha Tuyen District. This bears no relation to the situation in 1984 when the Chinese put battalions into action."

Gen Tran Cong Man continued: "We have received artillery fire in the Ha Giang Province and some in Cao Bang and Lang Son Provinces from guns with a range of 10 km and from mortars. In fact they used mainly mortars because our positions are very close to those of the Chinese. The border is very calm in Lao Cay Province."

The general concluded with a broad smile: "There will be no second lesson but we must remain very vigilant. On the other side of our common border China has two army corps, each comprising five infantry divisions, one armored division, artillery regiments, and air defense corps. But our own defense is very strong and has even been improved."

NHAN DAN RECALLS THAI OCCUPATION OF LAO HAMLETS

[NHAN DAN 7 June Commentary: "They Should not Forget the Lesson of the Three Lao Hamlets"]

[Text] Two years ago the Thai administration dispatched troops to seize three Lao hamlets -- Ban Mai, Ban Kang, and Ban Savang in Sayaboury Province. Faced with the gallant struggle of the heroic Lao Army and people and a wave of protest from the peace-and justice-loving public in the world, the ultrarightist reactionaries in the Thai ruling circles were compelled to declare the withdrawal of their troops from these hamlets.

Despite their fabrications and distortions, the Bangkok authorities can in no way justify their occupation of the three Lao hamlets. More than 100 years ago, the Kingdom of Laos set up Ban Taseng in Sayaboury Province. This hamlet was later renamed Ban Mai -- name that has existed until today. At the beginning of the 20th century as a result of the expansion of Ban Mai, another hamlet known as Som Puai Pai was set up. Later, the hamlet changed its name as Ban Kang. Some time in 1945, a third hamlet was established under the name Ban Savang. The residents in these three hamlets belong to the Lao Lum tribe and they speak the Lao language.

The Thai administration itself has also admitted that these hamlets are under the administrative and military jurisdiction of Laos.

However, in later May 1984, the Bangkok authorities produced new evidence to claim that Ban Mai, Ban Kang, and Ban Savang are part of Thai territory. On 6 June of the same year, they sent troops to attack and seize these hamlets.

That brazen act of aggression was part of a scheme to build a greater Thailand by the ultrarightist reactionaries in the Thai ruling circles. It was also coordination between Bangkok and Beijing in launching military counterattacks against the three Indochinese countries.

Not long after, the Beijing reactionaries launched an extremely barbarous and fierce land-nibbling attack along Vietnam's northern border and instigated various groups of Khmer reactionaries to perpetrate crimes at the Cambodian-Thai border in April 1984, the Thai reactionaries dispatched troops to attack and seize the three Lao hamlets in an attempt to reverse the situation in a way favorable to them. However, Bangkok and Beijing made an error in their calculations and received a heavy rebuff. Although the Thai authorities declared the withdrawal of their troops from Ban Mai, Ban Kang, and Ban Savang, they urged that Laos take responsibility for the losses and prevented Lao citizens forcibly taken to Thailand from returning to the native places. In fact, Thailand still persists in its scheme of turning those hamlets into a contested area in order to demand reconsideration of the whole Thai-Lao border. This act is part of the hostile policy of the ultrarightist reactionaries in the Bangkok ruling circles against the LPDR, against the three Indochinese countries, and against the trend of peace, stability, and cooperation in Southeast Asia and the world.

The Thai ultrarightist reactionaries, abetted by Beijing, has turned down Laos' proposal to resume negotiation on the issue and continued with acts of provocation against the LPDR, including violations of Lao airspace, artillery shelling of populated areas, intrusion into Lao territorial waters, and attacks on islets in the Mekong River. They also continue to provide support for the Lao reactionaries in exile in Thailand to harass Laos. Working hand in glove with Beijing and Washington, Bangkok continues to spread fabrications and slanderous allegations against Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia.

Recalling the incident took place 2 years ago at Ban Mai, Ban Kang, and Ban Savang, the Lao people once again affirm their unchallenged sovereignty over these hamlets, clearly expose the reactionary nature of the Thai ruling circles, and heighten their vigilance and determination to defend the territorial sovereignty of their country. It is the unswerving policy of the LPDR Government to always consider peace and friendship with neighboring countries, including Thailand, as its loftiest interest in accordance with the spirit of the 1979 Lao-Thai joint communique.

A broad sector of public opinion supports the constructive efforts of the Lao Government and people in relations with Thailand. The efforts of the LPDR, Vietnam, and Cambodia to solve existing regional problems -- which were expounded in various Indochinese foreign ministers conferences -- menifest the definite stand, good-will attitude, and high sense of responsibility of the three countries. These efforts have drawn great attention from the peoples in Southeast Asia as well as in the world.

Our government and poeople consistently support the unflinching and good-will stand of the Lao Government and people. As long as the Bangkok authorities still follow the U.S. imperialists and Beijing reactionaries in pursuing a frantically hostile policy toward Laos, Cambodia, and vietnam, they will continue to court new failures. They should not forget the lesson of the three Lao hamlets.

AQUINO BRANDS KBL CRITICISM 'SOUR GRAPES'

HK091546 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 7 Jun 86 p 19

[Excerpts] President Corazon Aquino branded yesterday as "sour grapes" the leaders of the Kilusang Bagong Lipunan for their assessment of her first 100 days in power. In a press conference in Malacanang marking the end of her three-month self imposed transition period, the President said that she "feels sorry" for the leaders of the party of deposed president Ferdinand Marcos. "They're just sour grapes," she said. "Let them say what they want."

The KBL leaders said in a press release last Wednesday that the Aquino government "have sunked (sic) the national economy deeper into shambles, further divided the people into confusion, despair and hate, and delivered the country closer into the waiting open arms of the communists."

The assessment was made by a KBL special committee composed of former Members of Parliament Loenardo Perez, Manual Garcia, Gualberto Lumauig, Mariano Logarta, Gerardo Espina, Antonio Tupaz and Jose Tumbokon.

President Aquino added, however, that if she were to start all over again, she would travel around the country more than she did in the first two months of her presidency.

During the press conference, Mrs. Aquino also said she is willing to "forgive and forget" those who perpetrated the assassination of her husband, former Sen. Benigno S. Aquino Jr. as long as she finds out all the facts about the murder.

She also stressed that those involved would have to come forward and make amends. "In the business of forgiving and forgetting, there is the necessity for the guilty party to admit its guilt and to ask for forgiveness," she said.

Responding to a question, the President revealed that some military men have expressed the desire to "tell the truth." She did not elaborate. However, she said that the matter of going after the conspirators is not for her to decide but for the committee on Human Rights headed by former Sen. Jose Diokno.

AQUINO CLAIMS MARCOS BEHIND LOYALISTS' RALLY

Mrs. Aquino's remarks followed the discovery of 19 petrol bombs at the venue of a Philippine independence day parade she is due to attend.

At least eight persons were injured in clashes Sunday between riot police and Marcos supporters marching on the presidential palace here to press for Mrs. Aquino's resignation and the return of Mr. Marcos from exile. The march followed a rally in Rizal Park here of some 10,000 Marcos loyalists.

Said Mrs. Aquino in a written statement: "It is so clear to me and to others in government -- as it must be to many of our citizens -- that these loyalist troubles are caused by the deposed president's urgings to his followers here conveyed by telephone and by other means." She added: "I truly deplore the ways in which the former president continues to foment trouble in this ravaged country."

Opposition leader Blas Ople criticized the forcible dispersal of the Marcos supporters, saying this was "beginning to define a pattern of repression." Mr. Ople, labor minister under Mr. Marcos, said in a written statement Mrs. Aquino should offer to enter into dialogue with Marcos loyalists.

"As to Marcos's statements that my government has sent some emissaries to him or that my campaign was financed by the Roman Catholic Church, not a grain of truth can be found in them," Mrs. Aquino said. Mrs. Aquino came to power in a popular uprising that toppled Mr. Marcos in February after she lost a presidential election widely considered fraudulent.

Mr. Marcos, who fled to the United States after the revolt, told a U.S. journalist in an interview that Manila had "sent some emissaries" and sent him messages by telephone, but that he was "not free to talk about it." He also asserted that the Roman Catholic Church had contributed 30 million dollars to Mrs. Aquino's election campaign in the last two weeks of February, and called the church a communist hotbed. He added that he was "ready to negotiate on political matters." Mr. Marcos is said to be planning to return to his country.

"All I know is that the report is not true. We did not send anybody," Mrs. Aquino's Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo told reporters.

Earlier, 19 molotov cocktails were found in Rizal Park, police Corporal Edgardo Javier told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE. Government television quoted police officers as having said Marcos supporters could have planned to use the petrol bombs on the palace Sunday.

Cpl Javier, a member of a police detachment at the seaside park, replied that he had "no opinion" when asked if he thought the petrol bombs were intended for use against the palace, or against Thursday's parade. Spokesmen for the Marcos supporters could not be reached for comment.

Police and paramilitary forces set up checkpoints on roads around the capital Sunday to search for unlicensed firearms before Thursday's Independence Day parade.

BARANGAY LEADERS SUPPORT AQUINO ADMINISTRATION

[By Precy M. Yadan]

[Text] The country's 42,000 barangay governments have pledged to give all-out support to the administration of President Aquino following the official announcement made by Local Government Minister Aquilino Pimentel Jr. that there will be no indiscriminate replacement of the 42,000 barangay captains.

The tenure of office of almost 500,000 elected village government officials, including barangay captains and councilmen, which has yet to expire by 1988, has been assured by President Aquino.

Earlier, the Pambansang Katipunan ng mga Barangay (PKB), national organization of the country's barangays, through its official spokesman, PKB national director Nick T. Enciso, submitted a memorandum to President Aquino through Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo, that earlier suggestions made by some government quarters to change barangay captains after the municipal officials have been replaced, would contribute greatly to the political destabilization of the country.

Enciso, who is also the president of the association of barangay captains in Tagaytay City and president of the Federation of Barangay Councils of the 11 provinces and 8 cities in Southern Luzon (Region 4), emphasized the invaluable services of the barangay officials, who work for free and are mainly responsible for the peace and order and the economic improvement of their villages.

Premature replacement of officials with grassroots support, who were elected mostly because of their own personal leadership in their respective villages, will also court anger from their followers, which would result in untold divisiveness among the people, he said.

Lawyer Alvaro G. Abenes, PKB vice president of Mindanao, and Hadji Sacar Asnar Basman, PKB director and president of the federation of barangay councils of Region 7, said Pimentel's announcement assuring stability of the present barangay captains is very timely.

Barangay captains, who at first had been lukewarm in supporting the present administration after being informed by previous newspaper reports that they would also be replaced, he said, can now start anew.

Florencio B. Sales, assistant spokesman of the PKB and president of the barangay federation for Northern Luzon (Region 1), stressed that the country's barangay captains whose terms expire in 1988 and who have been assured of their term unless removed for cause, can now give their all-out support and contribute to the overall progress and stability of the nation.

Other regional presidents of the country's national federation of barangay councils who are now ready to help the administration of President Aquino and prepared to work with Minister Pimentel head of the Ministry of Local Government are: Wilfredo T. Dayrit, Region 2; Col. Filemon L. Velencerina, Region 3; Benjamin Imperial, Region 5; Mira Ford, Region 6; Lawyer Romulo Senning, Region 7; Nora Petinez, Region 8; Democrito Plaza II Region 10; and Robert Alan Lismo, Region 11.

USSR ACCEPTS APPOINTMENT OF MELCHOR AS ENVOY

[Text] The Soviet government has formally accepted the appointment of Alejandro Melchor Jr. as the Philippine ambassador to the Soviet Union.

This was confirmed by Soviet ambassador to the Philippines Vadim L. Shabalin to the members of the Philippine-Russian Friendship Society at a recent gathering.

Melchor, former executive secretary, undersecretary, Ministry of Defense, ambassador-at-large, and until last month, a director of the Asian Development Bank is no stranger to Moscow. In 1970, he was sent there to start the first official links to the Soviet Union.

A graduate of the US Naval Academy in Annapolis, Melchor served in the Philippine Navy from 1952 to 1967. He received many awards and citations, including the "E" awards as a commanding officer of a naval ship and the "Bronze Cross" for bravery for his role in the surrender of Kamlon. He spent two months tracking down Kamlon in the jungles of Sulu.

In 1969, in a speech at the Philippine Military Academy, he hit the political interference which he said, was destroying professionalism in the Armed Forces. He was then the undersecretary for national defense.

El-Tohhamy, secretary-general of the Islamic Council, asked for him to negotiate with the MNLF. He met with Nur Misuari and he refused to give in to Misuari's demands in spite of the latter's threat to hold him hostage.

Emmanuel Pelaez and Sixto Roxas then tapped Melchor to help organize the country's first serious attempt at economic development. He was appointed deputy director general for operations of the Presidential Economic staff.

The early Marcos years marked serious development plans and reforms for its various institutions. Melchor served as executive secretary. He always said he was ready to step down anytime once the objectives were attained. When he resigned from the Marcos administration, he was appointed ambassador at large and later went on to the ADB. Melchor is married to the former Rosario Hechenova who is the secretary-general of the Rosary Movement in the Philippines. They are both Opus Dei members.

AQUINO LAUDS CARDINAL SIN'S ROLE IN REBELLION

[Text] Jaime Cardinal Sin warned yesterday that the Filipino nation runs the risk of being divided if President Marcos will return to the Philippines. Mr. Marcos' life would also be endangered by his return, the Cardinal told Malacanang reporters in a brief interview after attending the oath-taking of Howard Dee as the new Philippine envoy to the Holy See.

The Cardinal said it would be better for all concerned if Marcos remained in Hawaii where he has been living in exile since he and his family fled from Malacanang at the height of the military-civilian uprising against his regime last February.

Dee, 55, is the president of Bahay Maria, a civic organization involved in Marian works in the Philippines. He is a management graduate of the University of the East. He replaced former Ambassador Bienvenido Tantoco.

The President also inducted into office Antonio Arizabal as director-general of the National Science and Technology Authority. Arizabal, a chemistry graduate, of the University of the Philippines, replaced Emil Javier. A licensed industrial chemist, he also holds a doctorate degree in metallurgical engineering from the Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

In the evening, the President paid tribute to Cardinal Sin, citing the role played by him in the February rebellion that toppled the Marcos dictatorship.

"On behalf of the Filipino people, I thank you for what you have done for us. We hope we shall always enjoy your blessings and sage advice," the President said at a dinner marking the 10th anniversary of Cardinal Sin's ordination as a prince of the church.

The President observed that Cardinal Sin "follows in the great and controversial tradition of Cardinal advisers and spiritual guides to sovereigns."

By serving God through his people, she said, Cardinal Sin resolved the dilemma of the English martyr Thomas More, enabling him to avert a bloodbath and save many lives last February.

More, chancellor of England, when Henry VII was killed, had refused, to go along with the king's plan to divorce the queen and marry Anne Boleyn. More's dilemma, as he himself put it, was: "I am the king's good servant, but God's first." He lost his head at the chopping block.

CON-COM COMMITTEES ORGANIZED, MEMBERS NAMED

[Text] The Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] has completed the lineup of 15 of its 17 working committees, and expects to affirm their chairmen and members when it reconvenes at 3 p.m. tomorrow.

Six of the chairman are veteran politicians, three are civic leaders, two are economists, and the others are a former chief justice, a former ambassador, a newsman, and an educator, it was learned yesterday.

Jose F. S. Bengzon Jr., was named chairman of the executive committee; Hilario G. Davide Jr., the legislative committee; and Jose F. Suarez, the amendments and transitory provisions group.

While Con-Com members stressed that these committees are pivotal in framing a new Magna Carta, they said these bodies are bound to be the most controversial.

The executive and legislative committees will determine the future form of government which will be discussed before other constitutional issues, said Floorleader Napoleon G. Rama.

The Amendments and transitory provisions group will settle questions on the incumbency and tenure of President Aquino and Vice President Salvador G. Laurel as heads of the transitional government, he said.

Blas F. Ople, representing the opposition as president of the Partido Nacionalista ng Philipinas, warned that the Con-Com's unity could crack as debates on the transitory provisions may spawn political alignments.

The assembly failed to select the chairman and members of the committees on human resources and of social justice as their creation was approved just before it adjourned last Friday.

Some commissioners said they expected some last minute changes on the membership of the committees. Rama said the members were assigned to committees in accordance with a computerized tally of their preferences.

MARCOS WISHES TO 'BUY PEACE OF MIND', RETURN

[By Teodoro Benigno]

[Text] Manila, June 10 (AFP) -- Ex-President Ferdinand Marcos wants "to carve his niche in history" and "Buy peace of mind" by turning over 2.1 billlion dollars to the Philippine Government, a lawyer said here Tuesday.

In an interview with AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE, lawyer Juan David said that during five days of talks May 19-23 with the deposed president in Honolulu, he succeeded in convincing him it was futile to try to topple President Corazon Aquino.

President Aquino has remained silent on the talks between Mr David and Mr Marcos, although Mr David sad he expected to call on her sometime this week and discuss the possibility of a dialogue with Mr Marcos in Honolulu, where he is living in exile.

Mr David, a former lawyer of Mrs Aquino's murdered husband Benigno, said that any such dialogue would last a week at most and could result in Mr Marcos agreeing to turn over 2.1 billion dollars to the Philippine Government, 70 percent of the Marcos fortunes, and keep the remaining 900 million dollars.

He indicated that the ex-president and his wife Imelda had admitted to him that they indeed had assets worth three billion dollars.

Mr David said he told the ousted president that any effort on his part to return to power in the Philippines was futile since the U.S. Government would "never allow him to do so" and was supporting the Aquino government. "Your luck has ended," Mr David said he told the deposed chief of state who ruled the Philippines for 20 years until a non-violent "people power" four-day revolt led to his fleeing the country for Honolulu in late February.

Mr David said Mr Marcos did not flinch as he said this, and he added that "the Lord God created a miracle" in the ascent of Mrs Aquino to power and it was time Mr Marcos came to terms with politically reality here.

He said Imelda Marcos was all for the transfer of Marcos wealth and during their conversations reportedly said: "We do not really care if we lose all our wealth so long as we can return to the Philippines."

The lawyer said the Marcoses were seeking to extricate themselves from all legal problems having to do with their wealth, which the Aquino government said was "plundered" from the Filipino people. The main items of this alleged wealth are choice real estate properties in New York's Manhattan area and other U.S. cities, 800 million dollars reportedly deposited in Swiss banks, not to mention jewelry and art collections.

Mr David said the ex-president was "buying peace of mind" and would not want to transmit to his grand-children the problems of the Marcos elders. The lawyer denied he was anybody's emissary in the Honolulu talks, and called himself a "peace broker" who the deposed president seriously ilstend to because he had "no ulterior motives" but the good of the country.

He said Mr Marcos was "using the idea of mounting a revolution" against the Aquino government as a lever to negotiate, adding that the Marcoses abhorred the idea of "living out the rest of their lives" in a Honolulu bungalow "with the contempt of the U.S. public."

Mr David said the U.S. Government would have to participate in the proposed Honolulu dialogue as an "interested mediator" since Washington was vitally interested in the Philippines' political future. The United States' two largest overseas military bases are in this country.

Mr David also said that time was of the essence, asserting that if the ex-president should die, the Marcos properties would be passed on to his children and other heirs and could no longer be claimed by the government.

The Filipino lawyer, known for his legal defense of top communist suspects such as alleged ex-chairman of the Communist Party Jose Maria Sison, said Mr Marcos was agreeable to holding the dialogue "at the earliest possible time." He said Vice-President Salvador Laurel, Ambassador to Washington Emmanuel Pelaez, Constitutional Commission Presidnet Cecilia Munoz Palma and Solicitor General Sedfrey Ordonez were acceptable to Marcos as negotiators.

KBL INVESTIGATES ALLEGED HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS

HK090541 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 7 Jun 86 p 13

[Text] A five-man Kilusang Bagong Lipunan (KBL) special committee began gathering documented evidence yesterday against alleged violations of human rights by the Aquino administration.

The investigations were expected to center on the violent dispersal of anti-administration rallies and demonstrations, sequestrations, and hold orders imposed on Filipino citizens.

The human rights probe body was created by the 30-man KBL central committee, headed by former Manila MP Arturo M. Tolentino and former Speaker Nicanor Yniguez.

Former Political Affairs Minister Leonardo B. Perez, human rights committee chairman, said he will submit the report to the central committee with all the necessary supporting documents. He said charges will be brought before the proper forums, including international bodies currently investigating alleged violations of human rights throughout the world.

The committee is composed of retired General Lucas Cauton, former MP's Antonio Diaz (Zambales) and Salvador Britanico (Iloilo), and former Manila Assemblyman Gerardo Espina.

Meanwhile, the KBL central committee returned from a series of conferences with KBL leaders from Regions 1-2 (Ilocos and Cagayan Valley) in Baguio City, Region 11 (Southern Mindanao) in Davao City, Region 6 (Western Visayas) in Iloilo City, Region 8 (Eastern Visayas) in Tacloban City, Region 5 (Bicol) in Naga City, and Region 3 (Central Luzon) in Cabanatuan City.

The KBL headquarters reported that Tolentino and Yniguez asked party leaders to remain united and strong for the coming elections. The regional conferences were followed by rallies in all cities visited, the KBL said.

Yniguez said the conferences and rallies were attended by former provincial governors, vice governors, mayors, vice mayors, sanggunian members, and barangay leaders. On reports that some KBL leaders have joined the Nacionalista Party (NP), Yniguez said he doubted whether the former local executives would join a party, whose leaders may have been responsible for their present predicament.

TOLENTINO SAYS AQUINO AIDES 'NEW DICTATORS'

[Text] Cebu, Philippines, June 10 (AFP) -- Opposition leader Arturo Tolentino believes President Corazon Aquino is not a dictator like her predecessor Ferdinand Marcos, but claims people around her are the new dictators.

The former MP, who insists he is the acting president while Mr Marcos is in exile in Hawaii, also told a press organization here at a dinner Monday that "several dictators" were in the government but did not name names. "She is not a dictator," Mr Tolentino said, adding that "the people around her are the dictators and sometimes even dictate upon her," unlike before when "there was only one dictator."

Mr Tolentino was the running mate of Mr Marcos in February's presidential election. Poll frauds sparked a revolt that reversed the official proclamation of the Marcos-Tolentino ticket and swept opposition bet Mrs Aquino to power.

Mr Tolentino said recent protests by so-called Marcos "Loyalists" were being held "not to oust the present government... but to help the government change its policies for the welfare of the people." He denounced recent police dispersals of protests as signs of insecurity.

He said the government had "no plan of actions," and added that "this government can never be stabilized because it is a revolutionary government." Mrs Aquino Monday said the protests were being financed by Mr Marcos to destabilize her government.

ENRILE ON COMMUNIST CAPABILITY, STRATEGY

Denies Threat Serious

HK091221 Quezon City ANO PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 4 Jun 86 p 2

[Excerpt] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said yesterday [3 Jun] the country's armed communist movement, led by the Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP] and its military wing the New People's Army, is not capable of engaging the military in a "conventional warfare" now or in the future.

Enrile issued the statement as he gave his assessment on the first 100 days in power of President Aquino. He denied published reports saying that he sees the communist threat as serious.

He said the CPP's program of overthrowing the government by force or by infiltrating mass organizations has been failing because of the peace efforts and reconciliatory moves of the government.

Enrile said the CPP has 10,900 armed regulars. They are active in at least 17 percent of the 41,615 barangay, in 373 municipalities and cities in 62 provinces. The CPP-NPA has been waging a 17-year guerrilla warfare to take over the reins of the government. But it was said to have lost some ground since President Aquino came into power.

Enrile said the communists have taken advantage of the peace and reconciliation efforts of the government by launching attacks against government troopers in order to improve their positions when ceasefire negotiations take place.

Enrile said the CPP-NPA is sustaining three main thrusts to seize power: army building, party building and united front building. He said the communists, however, were caught flatfooted on the conciliatory moves taken by the President, prompting them to reassess and rebuild the party.

On the secessionist movement, Enrile said the Moro National Liberation Front has been dwindling in membership due to the factional differences. Enrile placed the armed strength of the secessionists at 5,300 regulars. But he said they do not pose any serious threat to the country's security.

Warns of Infiltration

[Text] Manila, June 6 (PNA) -- Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile has bared communist efforts to infiltrate the national government of various levels while it is still in a stage of transition. Enrile disclosed this in a speech Thursday on the occassion of the 16th national road safety convention sponsored by the Safety Organization of the Philippines.

One area of infiltration, Enrile said, appears to be our strategic industries whose viability is indispensable to the economic stability of our country. He said it is now quite clear that the objective of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) is to subvert the body politic, the state and the economic system from within, and erode the will of the people through systematic violence and terrorism.

The defense chief said that on the political side, the communists are renewing their attempt to forge a tighter alliance between elements of the far left and the left-to-center in the political spectrum. Enrile said these groups were somewhat drawn apart as a result of the February revolution.

Whether such alliance would materialize, whether it will eventually enter into a contest for power within the confines of our democratic system, or whether it will opt to promote armed struggle as the means of attain power remains to be seen, Enrile said. But Enrile said, the CPP appears to have given armed struggle more weight in their fight against the government.

Disclosing the tactics of the subversive elements, Enrile said: The operational repertoire of this new alliance is characterized by intensified mass actions and strikes that would hopefully further aggravate the economic crisis. There are moves on the part of the communists to exploit the instability generated by the reorganization of the local government, apparently referring to the appointments of local elective officials or by officers-in-charge.

Enrile also noted that the NPA rebels are attempting to operate in large numbers in an effort to propagandize that they are prepared to transcend the so-called strategic defensive stage of their struggle and enter the so-called strategic stalemate in which they are supposed to be at par with our forces. [Words indistinct]

Lately, the NPA has suffered heavy casualties in encounters with government forces, he said.

Figures show that during the past three months, the casualty ratio in such encounters stands to two-to-one in favor of the government, he said. During these encounters Enrile said, it showed that the NPA is still too weak to sustain extended firefights. They do not have any capability at all to launch conventional assault against the armed forces, Enrile said.

However, Enrile said, the government is not primarily concerned with the military build up of the insurgents as much as we are concerned over their party building and united front building activities. We must never underestimate the capability of the movement to exploit the present transition period to turn the people against the government or perhaps even worse to pit against each other the institutions within the government as well as within the private sector, he said.

GROWING POLITICAL TENSION WITHIN RULING GROUPS

HK070905 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 2 Jun 86 p 4

[Column by Renato Constantino: "A Fragile Unity"]

[Text] The reunion at EDSA Epifano De Los Santos Avenue sought to recapture the emotions that had united diverse elements in the anti-Marcos movement which effected the collapse of the dictatorship. Three months after the event, the euphoria that attended the installation of the new government has gradually dissolved in petty bickering and personal positioning as well as in the articulation of basic differences of perception and principle among different sectors of the coalition.

The different middle and upper class sectors who predominated in the civilian support for the military revolt now have representation in the government. Despite the populist rhetoric of the administration, apart from some initial moves, there is as yet no clear sign that the long-term interests of the majority are the central preoccupation of the Aquino administration.

Fr. Joaquin Bernas made a significant observation in his VERITAS column of May 22, when he quoted Fr. John Carroll who had said of the February revolution that the "poor were not present in numbers proportionate to their representation in the wider society of Metro Manila." Fr. Bernas further asked "whether the poor will benefit from the EDSA revolution." This question appears to have been buried underneath the escalating intramurals within the Aquino government. Centripetal forces have been replaced by centrifugal tendencies. There are numerous indications of growing tensions in various areas of the coalition.

In the last few weeks, statements from Minister Enrile and interviews with RAM [Reform of the Armed Forces Movement] officers have sought to point out that the February action was in reality part of a military plot to unseat Marcos. In no uncertain terms, Minister Enrile revealed that Mrs. Aquino was only the third option in their plans. Considering the relative coalition, the civilian government, it seems, is being reminded where the fulcrum of power lies.

The tension with the military component is patent in the ceasefire policy. The President is obviously attempting to give the insurgents time to consider their positions before launching an all out offensive against hardcore holdouts; the military on the other hand has made ceasefire a difficult goal by conducting search and destroy operations. One is hoping that ceasefire will be a step toward eventually defusing the rebellion; the other, while humoring such a hope, can hardly wait to get on with its military solution.

Marcos united Minister Enrile and the commissioners of the PCGG [Presidential Commission on Good Government] in EDSA; Marcos had disunited the coalition partners on the issue of the SMC [San Miguel Corporation] and the UCPB [United Coconut Planters' Bank].

In another front, political careers have become a day-to-day concern of the PDP-Laban [Philipino Democratic Party-Lakas ng Bayan] and the Unido [United Nationalist Democratic Organization] in the matter of local OICs [officers-in-charge]. Positioning for their political future characterizes the behavior of some of the Aquino ministers.

Many of the businessmen who actively participated in the yellow movement are dismayed by the pro-labor pronouncements of Minister Sanchez, whose knuckles were gently rapped by the President. Labor, on the other hand, awaits implementation of the President's Labor Day announcements.

Business sectors are impatient about the lack of a declared economic policy by the administration which seems to be waiting for the results of the efforts of the minister of finance in negotiating a new agreement with the IMF. Filipino businessmen are uncomfortable about the militant and "interventionist" activities of some commissioners of the PCGG.

There are cabinet members who silently resent the domineering attitude of the minister of finance and the power of the members of what they call a cordon sanitaire.

In the government service, there is an overall atmosphere of uncertainty as a result of the over-eager actions of task forces and enthusiastic OICs who, despite repeated assurances of the President that career services will be respected, have gone on a rampage of dismissals without, in some cases, the benefit of due process.

The fading of Marcos as an obsession has allowed forces defending particular material and political interests to come into play. The resulting state of disunity is breeding anxiety and apprehension in many quarters. It has led to expressions of concern about the indecisiveness of President Aquino in resolving the conflicting positions within the coalition she leads. This impression has been buttressed by the ambiguities in her own policy statements -- the inevitable result of lack of a strategic vision.

The narrow outlook of the purely anti-Marcos orientation of the coalition, has been further delimited by the pervasive role of external forces. These forces have impeded and will continue to impede the administration from resolving the disparate issues categorically in favor of a pro-people policy. What is needed is a decisive break from the parameters they impose, while the President still has both popularity and credibility. If these are eroded further, it will be too late.

Only policies based on the needs and aspirations of the deprived majority and not merely elitist sectors can bring about the unity that eludes us now. Unity with the masses is not attained by occasional fraternal commingling with them in mass actions and festivities nor by merely conducting a "revolution" in their behalf. Only a concrete, unambiguous program based on the long term interests of these broad masses can bring about that real and lasting national unity that will transcend in significance the joyous February revolution.

EXAMINATION OF POSSIBLE CHALLENGES TO AQUINO

HK100524 Quezon City WE FORUM in English 3-9 Jun 86 pp 2, 3

[By Arichie Benavides]

[Text] The prophets of doom have been giving Cory Aquino her last few days. Each step she takes, each pronouncement she makes is read as a sign of weakness, of power slipping through, of getting dissipated. The dire predictions that hang over the new president has come in the form of a coup d'etat, from as many sectors as there are leaders who want to be president.

The loudest coup movements come from the Enrile camp. It is widely believed that being the chief architect of martial law in the Marcos regime, Enrile is the most capable of usurping the reins of power. He is also one of the most brilliant, and some say foxy, minds to ever rise in Philippine politics. That he is in the Ministry of National Defense, maneuvering his power to gain military clout, makes him very capable of building an armory of goodwill.

Enrile banks on the support, not only of his trusted aides like Col Greg Honasan, but more importantly, of his deputy defense minister, former ex-future [as published] chief of staff Gen Rafael Ileto. The general, having seen field action in Vietnam and other politically unstable countries is also known to be the fair-haired boy of the Americans who rule our lives. His is the ultimate military complement to Enrile's political maneuvering ability.

While the strongest probability of a coup comes from the most obvious, few will realize the Rasputin-esque moves of the Jesuits, led by Fr. Joaquino Bernas himself, who has gained the closest inroad of the power center. While everyone picks on Aquilino Pimentel, blaming him for one faux pas OIC [officer-in-charge] appointment after another, not a peep has been mentioned tht the real appointing adviser, especially for the most sensitive and pivotal government positions has been no less than presidential adviser, Bernas S.J., himself.

Through history, it will be traced that the Jesuits, along with their co-cassocked Augustinaians and Franciscans, have exerted a most powerful political cout, not only over their constituents but more importantly, over the leaders of their respective countries. Their seemingly religious cover serves as a smokescreen to the more temporal concerns, something as mundane as national politics.

The clerico-political maneuverings are so subtle, if not secret that no big scandalous moves have been associated with Fr. Bernas, and the so-called "Jesuit Mafia." It is possible, though, that the Jesuit-clique, also known as the Ateneo boys, are closing ranks to flank in the new president, as the neo-cordon sanitiare. The danger from such a move creates blinders for the new president, who despite provincial sorties, ala-Magsaysay may fail to see current realities as they are.

Another sector capable of wresting power from Cory is the Unido [United Nationalist Democratic Organization] faction, led by no less than Vice-President Salvador Laurel. It should be remembered that Laurel was the original oppositionist who came closest to the presidency until Cory came along and upset everyone's including the Americans', timetable. Laurel has his own political clout to wield, plus political firepower currently in the making.

From whatever sector and combination of sectors a coup will be sprung, one thing is certain: not one will succeed in toppling Cory Aquino if the American gods do not deem it so. At this point, it is too early to tell if the Americans are happy with the Aquino performance. In fact, they are dangling promised aid more like a Damocles sword to exact onerous treaties and agreements from the the new dispensation -- than the package of relief they had pledged upon Marcos' ouster. The spate of double-speak coming from American representatives, as well as the ambivalent position of Ronald Reagan himself, has not merely contributed greatly to the unstable nature of the Cory government, but has more importantly slain any hope of economic relief and recovery.

At this point, it is useless to even consider a Marcos-comeback. In time, he will, as he might have to fulfill a dutiful son's rite, but even as he might be around, he has become the worst political lameduck in contemporary history. Should he choose to remain and contribute some more to destabilizing Cory's rule, this will only serve to strengthen the influence of the Left. The Left, at this point, harbors no illusions of even coming close to entering the race for a coup d'etat. For one thing, it does not believe in a cosmetic change of leaders but in a total upheaval. A coup is merely a game of musical chairs, with the systemic disorder still very much prevalent. A revolution is not a coup d'etat. Or a four-day picnic on EDSA [Epifanio de Los Santo Avenue].

It will take a few more political mistakes in the rightist conservative leadership for the masses of Filipinos to wise up to the banana republic syndrome. As of now, the patience of the Filipino has not yet worn thin, but give it less than a decade, especially if the Left maintains its vigilance and militance, and there, lasting change will push through.

There will be threats and talks of a coup almost on a daily basis. And these will persist until the sectors hungry for power get tired and go on ahead with it. At some point, the Americans, who oversee our political and economic affairs, will also get lost somewhere in the gibberish of rhetorics and stage their own sequel coup to the recent moro-moro [charade].

Meantime, the ordinary man of the street will just have to sit back, or align themselves to the strongest wave that may sweep them. But for those who may have gleaned the light of change, to sit this out can only mean to work clandestinely for the main event. And it may come sooner than expected.

MILITANT LABOR GROUP TO ADOPT STRIKE 'RESTRAINT'

HK091158 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 3 Jun 86 p 3

[By Staff member Joey Salgado]

[Text] The Kilusang Mayo Uno [KMU] is set to adopt a policy of "Maximum restraint" in calling for strikes. The policy will be formalized in a meeting of its National Executive Council tomorrow.

KMU leaders said the call for restraint "is merely a reiteration" of the same internal policy adopted by the labor group after the Aquino government took power in February. This time, however, the policy will be accompanied by a memorandum to all KMU members nationwide, placed at around 5000,000 outlining the principles and the mechanics of the new policy.

Among other measures to curb industrial unrest to be proposed by the KMU to the Aquino government is the creation of labor, business and government bodies in every industry to assist in dispute monitoring and settlement.

KMU officials said they have reached an informal consensus on this matter and ruled out the possibility that the KMU would call a six-month strike moratorium. "The conditions do not warrant a moratorium," a member of the national council told MALAYA, pointing to the continued absence of a viable economic program from the Aquino government and the upsurge of labor unrest over alleged union-busting.

They also said a moratorium call could not be issued by KMU alone since this would entail the consensus of all major labor groups under the broad Labor Advisory Consultative Council [LACC].

President Aquino has expressed concern over the upsurge of strikes, majority of them staged by KMU, and asked the militant labor group to declare a moratorium. "It would be improper for us to agree to an unconditional moratorium, without the proper terms stipulated," a KMU official added.

This would include a commitment on the part of the business community to call a moratorium on layoffs. The moratorium proposal would not cover disputes arising from union busting and deadlock in bargaining negotiations, where strikes are "unavoidable," the KMU stressed.

The call for maximum restraint would entail the strengthening of the task force formed by KMU to look into strikes staged by their members and assist in settlement. "We will work to comply with existing requirements before going on strike, such as the necessary strike notice and strike vote and the cooling off periods," the KMU official added. Unions will also be urged to exhaust the grievance machinery and bring their cases to the labor ministry for voluntary arbitration.

Alongside this step is the proposal to set up tripartite bodies in the various industries made up of representatives from the LACC, business and the labor ministry.

A proposal to set up industry-level tripartite bodies was submitted for approval during th National Tripartite Conference last week. No agreement was forged between labor and business representatives on the said issue.

The KMU explained that the industry-level tripartite bodies can act as "early warning devices" on potential trouble areas and can asist in conciliating disputes before they erupt into fullblown walkouts.

The setting up of tripartite bodies are among the measures to be submitted by the KMU to the Aquino government as part of a general proposal to solve industrial disputes. The proposal, which will be drafted by the KMU's working secretariat, will include long-term and short-term solutions to the problem of industrial unrest.

The KMU also said it is requesting th government to release the implementing guidelines of the Labor Day pronouncements of the President. Aquino ordered on Labor Day changes in existing labor laws. But the KMU said these have yet to be signed by the President for it to take effect. "Putting the Labor Day policies in writing would remove much of the confusion that has set after Labor Day between labor and business circles," the KMU said.

26 LABOR UNIONS TO FORM 'THIRD LABOR FORCE'

[Text] Twenty-six independent labor unions agreed Friday night to unite and form a third labor force that will neither be leftleaning like the Kilusang Mayo Uno (KMU) nor as rightist like the Trade Union Congress of the Philippines (TUCP).

The new labor group, still unnamed, pledged to be "truly Filipino, truly democratic and free from foreign control," in a preorganization meeting held at the Casino Espanol Friday night.

Jose Eduardo "Jojo" Oca, head of the Philippine Transport and General Workers Organization (PTGWO), has been serving initially as acting chairman of the group. Oca said he expects to draw adherents from both the leftist and rightist groups who have expressed disappointment over the recent pronouncements and actuations of their leaders.

The present TUCP president is Democrato Mendoza, who succeeded the late Roberto S. Oca, Jojo's father and original organizer and president of the TUCP. Under the dynamic stewardship of the deceased Oca, the TUCP was genuinely open and democratic, Jojo Oca said.

Leaders of the new group said the current labor situation is obviously being dominated by the American supported TUCP, which, in turn, is being dislodged from its leadership by the leftist KMU. Actually, according to the new third force leaders, the TUCP today is thoroughly dominated by the Associated Labor Unions (ALU), a Cebu-based federation led by Mendoza. Recently, Mendoza abolished all vice presidential positions which have been held mostly by non-ALU leaders.

With its new setup, all TUCP leadership is now centered on a president (Mendoza), a secretary general (Ernesto Herrera), a treasurer and a board of directors controlled by ALU men.

Speaking for his new group, Oca said the obvious drift of the new labor ministry toward the left is lamentable and should be stopped. He said the new third force, once consolidated will do everything to curb this drift. He expressed particular concern over recent labor cases wherein leftist unions who are in the minority won their disputes with management. He said these surprising victories made by minor leftist trade unions could not have been possible were it not for the support given by certain MOLE [Ministry of Labor and Employment] officials who have been openly leftist.

NATIONALIST GROUP LAUNCHES PROTECTIONIST CAMPAIGN

HK030437 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINE DAILY EXPRESS in English 31 May 86 p 9

[By Rudy Brul]

[Text] A nationalist economic organization of small and medium businessmen and professionals yesterday launched the "Pilipino Muna" (Pilipino First) policy campaign that favors Filipinos priority in the allocation of the country's foreign exchange resources, access to the financial and credit resources, and in the exploitation and development of the nation's natural resources.

The National Economic Protectionism Association (NEPA) explained that the Filipinization of the country's business and industry mean that only Filipinos shall be allowed to own and control those sectors that can be adequately served by Filipinos and not by foreign investors. It added that the national goverment should assist its own citizens in the take-over of ownership and control of foreign firms operating in these sectors.

Multinationals in the country should eventually divest their holdings here through legislative measures, Calixto Chikiamco, head of NEPA's Bureau of Economic Research, said. NEPA president Salvador Enriques Jr. said "these must be done in order to redress the historical inequality in which Filipino citizens became junior citizens in the operation of domestic enterprises." NEPA buttressed its position that the local economy is under the control of foreigners, particularly, multinationals by disclosing the following:

-- About 17 percent of multinational subsidiaries account for 66 percent of the combined net income of the top 1,000 corporations in the country excluding income earned from joint ventures or partnerships.

-- Six out of ten advertising firms in the country are owned and controlled by multinationals which corner the bulk of advertising accounts and that multinational advertising firms have been allowed into the country although they bring no technology and little, if any, capital.

-- Foreigners are even invading the accounting profession. NEPA cited the recent entry of the U.S.-based Arthur Anderson and Co.'s into the giant SGV group. [Sycip, Gorres and Velayo, accountants]

--Multinational banks have been pressing the government to "privatize" so they can pick up government corporations and assets at bargain prices. Recently, it said, the Central Bank allowed Offshore Banking Units (OBUS) to handle inward dollar remittances.

-- The components of IMF economic policy -- tariff and import liberalization, high domestic taxation, high interest rates and monetary restraints, forcible bank mergers and consolidations, increasing foreign debts to cover maturing obligations, and wage restraint -- are meant to satisfy the interests of foreign banks first and foremost at great cost to the Filipinos.

-- Foreign firms are crowding out Filipino-owned corporations from scare [word as published] credit and foreign exchange resources under the guise of a "free market" policy.

Meanwhile, NEPA members in yesterday's press conference charged that employers and businessmen in the just concluded Tripartite congress represented only the big businesses. "These chambers of commerce and industry do not represent the small and medium businessmen who account for 90 percent of the industry," Jorge Sibal, NEPA vice president, said. He also charged that the present government's dearth of new economic policy makes economic recovery to stay in limbo. Sibal, however, expressed optimism that the Aquino administration would support the "Filipino Muna" policy campaign based on her pronouncement that the new administration is pro-Filipino.

RECONCILIATION OF 2 MNLF FACTIONS REPORTED

[Text] The two warring factions of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) led by Nur Misuari and Hashim Salamat have rejoined forces even as rival MNLF reformist leaders made representations with the highly influential Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC) for the start of government negotiations on the Muslim problem.

Mohammad Abdu, Misuari's political emissary, disclosed yesterday that as early as last January the two splintered factions of prosecessionist Misuari and pro-autonomy Salamat had already reunified as one MNLF with Misuari as chairman and Salamat as his vice Chairman. Abdu pointed out that this was the resolution made by the MNLF central committee during its meeting in Jeddah last January 1986.

The unification was made through the intercession of the OIC, the world Islamic body which sanctioned and recognized the MNLF's Muslim struggle in Mindanao. It will be recalled that Misuari and Salamat parted ways when Salamat rejected Misuari's hard-line secessionist line.

The disagreement caused a political and organizational split in the MNLF when Salamat was ousted from the separatist movement. Salamat and his followers later formed their own armed Muslim organization, the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), and declared a religious Islamic war of "jihad" against the Marcos government. MNLF Reformist spokesman Macapanton Abbas, Jr., on the other hand, recently made representation on behalf of the MNLF regarding the latter's trip to Manila for talks with Jaime Cardinal Sin and with the new government.

NAKASONE STRESSES BENEFITS OF STRONG YEN

[By Shiro Yoneyama]

[Excerpts] Sapporo, June 11 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, kicking off a weeklong nationwide stumping tour here for the July 6 twin election, emphasized Wednesday the strong yen is benefiting resources-poor Japan in the form of a reduction in utilities charges. "The strong yen is better than inflation and high prices," he told an audience of over 2,000 people at a hotel here. "The Japanese people as a whole are benefiting from the yen's appreciation."

Nakasone, president of the governing Liberal-Democratic Party, chose this capital city of Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island, as the first stop of the weeklong stumping tour that will take him to Fukuoka, Nagoya and other cities as well as Tokyo later this week and early next week in a bid to achieve victory in the July 6 poll.

In a 40-minute speech before the LDP supporters, Nakasone spelled out his pledges to carry out educational, tax and administrative reforms and to assist smaller enterprises affected by the yen's big surge in exchange value against the U.S. dollar. The prime minister also told the audience of largely middle-aged LDP supporters that his government is taking steps on medical care, pension and in other areas to cope with Japan's aging society now that people aged 65 and older account for 15 percent of the total population. "I am one of the elderly," said Nakasone who turned 68 May 27.

Stressing the benefits of the strong yen, Nakasone said the yen's appreciation has prompted Japanese electric power and gas companies to reduce charges by 2,800 yen per household a year. "That is equal to a tax cut of 1.1 trillion yen," the Japanese leader said. A one dollar decline in the barrel of crude oil means a saving of about 1.2 billion dollars, he added.

During a news conference prior to his speech, Nakasone predicted that next month's election will be "tough and difficult" but provide him and his government the opportunity to seek the electorate's support for overhauling the nation's educational, tax and administrative systems.

TRADE SURPLUS REACHES 'RECORD' HIGH IN MAY

[Text] Tokyo, June 10 KYODO -- Japan's trade surplus rose to a monthly record of 7.53 billion dollars in May, surpassing the previous high of 6.83 billion dollars set only in April, the Finance Ministry said in a preliminary report Tuesday. Ministry officials attributed the increase to a sharp rise in exports of automobiles and auto parts and a drop in crude oil imports. Japan had a trade surplus of 3.37 billion dollars in May 1985.

The country's exports on an FOB (free on board) basis jumped 24 percent in May over a year earlier to 17.89 billion dollars -- the second largest figure after a record 17.96 billion dollars last December. Exports in April totaled 17.74 billion dollars. In contrast, imports on a CIF (cost, insurance and freight) basis decreased 6.3 percent from a year before to 10.36 billion dollars in May. The figure was 10.91 billion dollars in April.

Japan's trade surplus with the United States rose to 4.06 billion dollars from 3.41 billion dollars in May 1985. A record monthly high of 4.76 billion dollars was scored in April. Exports to the U.S. showed a 21.6 percent increase over a year before to 6.93 billion dollars, while imports from the U.S. rose 25.6 percent to 2.87 billion dollars. Asked when the yen's appreciation against the dollar since last September will help reduce Japan's trade surplus, a senior ministry official said such effects should start to surface from now on.

Notable among exports in May were a 30.3 percent year-on-year increase in the value of automobile shipments to 3.92 billion dollars and a 68.6 percent jump in auto parts to 691.5 million dollars. Japan's car exports to the U.S. rose 33.7 percent from May 1985 and auto parts shipments climbed 84 percent.

Falling crude oil prices and the yen's upsurge pushed down Japan's overall imports. The value of oil imports registered a 61.6 percent year-on-year drop to 1.1 billion dollars, while showing a 15.7 percent decline in volume. Crude oil cost about 12.89 dollars a barrel in May, compared with 16.46 dollars in April and 28.31 dollars in May last year.

Japan had a surplus of 1.5 billion dollars with the European Community, compared with 1.4 billion dollars in April and 696 million dollars in May last year. Shipments to China continued to drop, due mainly to the yen's upswing, falling 31.9 percent from a year earlier to 739 million dollars in May, while imports fell 30.3 percent to 408 million dollars.

U.S. ECONOMIC GROUP ON STRUCTURAL REFORM

[Text] Tokyo, June 9 KYODO -- Beryl W. Sprinkel, chairman of the U.S. Council of Economic Advisers, Monday urged Japan to further expand domestic demand in order to rectify the huge Japan-U.S. trade imbalance, Japanese officials said. The officials quoted Sprinkel as telling the 14th Japan-U.S. Economists' Meeting in Tokyo that correction of such trade imbalances only through realignment of exchange rates would result in a much higher yen, which is not desirable for either Japan or the United States.

The recent sharp depreciation of the dollar against the yen -- more than 30 percent since last September -- will require 1.5 to 2 years before it will have a favorable impact on U.S. industry, he said. The meeting, routinely held to discuss macroeconomic policies of the two countries, was the first cabinet-level exchange of views on structural adjustment issues the Japanese Government is trying to tackle to transform the economy to one more dependent on domestic demand than on exports.

Sprinkel's statement echoed recent similar remarks by other senior U.S. administration officials calling for greater Japanese efforts to pump up its economy, including an official discount rate cut. The Bank of Japan has already lowered its key lending rate three times this year -- to a record 3.5 percent a year. Sprinkel also asked Japan to come up with a concrete program to implement its structural adjustment plan worked out recently by Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's private advisory body, headed by former Bank of Japan Governor Haruo Maekawa.

Wataru Hiraizumi, director-general of the Economic Planning Agency, explained about the basic government policy of expanding the economy through domestic demand and promoting imports. He also pointed out that the government adopted a package of economic measures in April aimed at improving Japan's economic performance by making use of the stronger yen and lower crude oil prices.

NODONG SINMUN URGES STUDY OF KIM IL-SONG LECTURE

[NODONG SINMUN 9 June editorial: "Let Us Deeply Embody the Great Experience in the Construction of Our Party"]

[Text] Our workers and functionaries, regarding the text of a lecture written by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song entitled "The Historical Experience in the Construction of the WPK" as a great classic that summed up the experience attained in the construction of a chuche party, are strengthening their study of the elaborate work. This shows our people's lofty political enthusiasm for staunchly defending and brightening the achievements and experience attained by our party and completing, to the end, the cause of building a chuche party and the revolutionary cause.

The transcript of a lecture by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song entitled "The Historical Experience in the Construction of the WPK" is a basic textbook that all functionaries, party members, and workers must deeply study and embody.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The experience attained by our party in the construction of the party will become a valuable asset for further strengthening and developing our party in the future. By deeply studying the historical experience attained in the construction of the party, the party functionaries must heighten their political and working capabilities and further deepen and develop the party work.

Our party has trodden the arduous and honorable struggle path and in this process, has accumulated immortal achievements and plentiful experience. The work of the great leader Comrade Kim IL-song is a collection of books on the theory on party construction that summed up this proud history and our immortal achievements of the experience attained through struggle.

Included in the work are the historical experience in founding our party, the experience in building a chuche revolutionary party, the experience in realizing the party's organizational and ideological firmness, the experience in firmly guaranteeing the unity and cohesion of the party and the popular masses, the experience in realizing the party's leadership in the revolution and construction and achieving the art of the party's leadership, and the experience in building the party in a prospective manner. The work is an encyclopedia that sums up the precious experience in and the theory on party construction, which will have a perpetual vitality not only today but also in the communist society of the future, and is a proud document on the experience in the construction of the greatest party that a party of the working class can create. Because of this, the work is a very precious revolutionary treasure for externally strengthening and developing our party into a chuche revolutionary party.

For the party members and workers to embody the experience of our party by deeply studying the work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is an important work for them to train themselves to be chuche-type revolutionaries who are endlessly loyal to the party and who have lofty political and working-level capabilities. True revolutionaries are those who have a firm revolutionary view of the world, who firmly believe their party, and who share the same destiny with the party to the end. To become such a revolutionary, one must know the history, achievements, and experience of his party well and must think and act in accordance with the ideology and spirit of the party at any time and any place.

Precious revolutionary provisions which the party members and workers must possess are contained in the experience of our party. Therefore, when the party members and workers deeply embody the experience of the party, all of them can strongly arm themselves with the revolutionary spirit of our party and chuche idea, can firmly possess the chuche revolutionary view of the world, and can further heighten their political and working capabilities.

Deeply embodying the experience of the party by studying the work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a guarantee for further deepening the party work and for accelerating socialist construction.

The historical experience of our party is a revolutionary treasure that makes the party more matured and refined and an eternal chuche revolutionary party. When the whole party strongly arms itself with this precious experience and brightens it, the might and combat strength of our party will be further strengthened.

Today, the heavy task of attaining the complete socialist victory, of realizing the independent reunification of the fatherland, and of attaining the ultimate victory of the chuche cause ahead of time is laid before us. The key to all this work is for the party members and workers to strongly arm themselves with the great experience of the party. The experience of the party is a source that makes the party members and workers possess a great pride in their party and an absolute trust in their own party and is a foundation that makes them carry out all revolutionary works according to the will of the party. Therefore, only when the party members and workers know the experience of our party well, can they, satisfactorily, in accordance to our way of doing things, carry out the revolutionary tasks of deeply embodying the justness and vitality of the lines and policies on socialist construction, which the party has historically presented; of thoroughly implementing them, of developing economy and culture; and of improving the people's lives and all other revolutionary tasks.

Deeply studying and embodying the transcript of a lecture by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song entitled "The Historical Experience in the Construction of the WPK" is a noble responsibility that is presented before all party members and workers. An important question in developing the custom of studying the work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song by the whole party is for the party members and workers to grasp the historical significance and the essence of the work.

The recent work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song assumes a special status in the ideological and theoretical activities of the leader and in the development of our party and the revolution. Our party, which has trodden the long and glorious path, is really at a glorious time. The recent work, which was released at a time when endlessly bright prospects have been opened before the party, is of great significance for the development of our party and the revolution. The functionaries and workers must deeply comprehend the status and significance of the work in relation to the historical environment which led to the release of the work.

Grasping well the basic spirit and essence contained in the work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is an important question. The idea contained in the work from the beginning and to the end is to brilliantly complete the revolutionary cause by advancing the cause of building our party along the road cultivated in the Down-With-Imperialism union movement. The functionaries and workers must harbor, as a conviction, the spirit contained in the work by grasping the work in a monolithic manner through linking all sentences, ideologies, and propositions contained in the work.

In studying the work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the party members and workers must make efforts to grasp the greatness of the leader and embody the truthfulness of the chuche idea. All noble and plentiful experience attained by our party is related to the greatness of the leader. The experience of our party is an embodiment of the wise leadership of the party and the leader and is a fruit of the outstanding ideological, theoretical, and practical activities by the leader.

The party members and workers must perceive that every proposition and ideology contained in the work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the noble truth attained in the process of the arduous and long revolutionary struggle by the great founder and greater leader [yongdoja] of the party, not a simple theoretical generalization. The experience of our party is endlessly noble and diverse because it is based upon the chuche idea from the beginning to the end. The truth of the great chuche idea is contained in every sentence and expression in the work, and the experience in the construction of our party is, in the work, systematized and profoundly analyzed on the basis of the principle of the chuche idea. By deeply grasping the principle of the chuche idea contained in the work, the party members and workers must know well how proud our party is to have been founded, strengthened, and developed along the creative road of its development.

Substantially studying the work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in various forms and methods is an important question in developing the custom of studying his work in order to embody the experience of the party. Studying the text of the transcript of a lecture by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song entitled "The Historical Experience in the Construction of the WPK" is a basic in the study of his work. The party organizations must attach importance to studying the text of the work, and substantially organize the study of the work through individual study, collective study, debate, discussion, and various other forms and methods.

Making efforts to correctly perceive creative ideologies and propositions put forth in the work is important. By perceiving the recent work in relation to the ideologies and propositions expressed in the works and the party documents on party construction, which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song released in the past, the functionaries and workers must historically and wholly perceive the chuche theory on party construction and must embody its creative and profound nature. An effective method of making the functionaries and workers embody the experience of our party is to study the work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in relation to the history of our party and their experience.

The experience attained through achieving unity between the theory and practice is contained in the theories and propositions in the work, and it is a record of the history of our party. All of our generation is the one which has created, experienced, and witnessed the proud history of our party.

All party members and workers must perceive each sentence, theory, and expression in the work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in relation to the history of our party and their experience. We must make the party members and workers perceive in relation to their own experience how our party held fast to the banner of independence and established chuche during the period after the war and other stern and arduous periods, and how valuable achievements were attained in this process. In this way, they can deeply perceive how honorable a path they have trodden with the party and deeply embody the profound ideologies, principles, and propositions contained in the work.

Studying the work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in relation to the practical activities is important.

The purpose of studying the work is to successfully carry out all works, regarding the experience attained by the party as weapons for practical activities. As for continuously accelerating the cause of building our party, the work has presented a new task and objective in the struggles. By studying the work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, all functionaries, party members, and workers must correctly perceive the tasks presented before them and (?their party) and must make the achievements in studying the work bring about practical successes in accelerating revolution and construction. The party functionaries, in particular, must successfully carry out the work of heightening the combatant skill and role of the party and of organizationally and ideologically strengthening our party.

On the basis of the principle and rule for party construction presented in the work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the party functionaries must find ways and methods for carrying out the construction of party organizations and party ideological works. The functionaries and workers must adhere to an important question: Strongly arming themselves with the ideology and theory on party construction, which was elucidated by the dear Comrade Kim Chong-il, and brilliantly embodying them in carrying out all works. By more substantially and diversely carrying out the work of studying the work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in accordance with the high fervent will of the party members and workers, the party organization of various levels and functionaries must strongly arm the whole party with the experience of the construction of our party and make it bring about an endless advance in the work of strengthening the party.

SEOUL OLYMPICS SCHEME FOR PERMANENT DIVISION

South Minister's Remarks Hit

[NODONG SINMUN 7 June commentary: "A Splittist Outburst With the Sound of a Broken Drum"]

[Text] The puppet prime minister said that the success of the Asian Games and the 1988 Olympics depends on achievement of the entry of South Korea into the United Nations and of cross-recognition. Raving that someone's disturbance maneuvers are expected to take place during the 1988 Olympics, he again put forth a theory of crisis within 2 or 3 years. He made such remarks when he came to the site of a war exercise codenamed "Pilsung Pangpae-86" ["Victorious Shield-86"]. The puppet prime minister's maneuvers revealed his criminal purpose in holding the Asian Games this year and the 1988 Olympics in South Korea.

As for the issue of entry into the United Nations and cross-recognition frequently raved about by the puppets, it is a plan for the nation's division worked out by the U.S. imperialists to internationally legalize two Koreas. The puppets are abusing the Olympics to permanently divide the nation. At a time when the people have put forth national reunification as a supreme task and the peace-loving people of the world are unanimously aspiring for Korea's reunification, the puppets are attempting to make the nation's division a fait accompli by abusing even the international sports games. This is an intolerable mockery against the people's desire for reunification.

Indeed, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is a group of peerlessly vicious traitors who are scheming to prolong their filthy lives as colonial stooges with the price received in return for permanently offering South Korea to the U.S. imperialists as their colony and military base and by fabricating two Koreas, paying no attention to the destiny of the nation and the people.

What is also detestable is that the puppets attempted to conceal their criminal maneuvers while raving about someone's disturbance maneuvers and threat against sports games. In a statement issued on the so-called Memorial Day, the puppet prime minister again stressed the theory of southward invasion. It is clear to the entire world that the threat of aggression on the Korean peninsula comes from the South, where more than 1,000 nuclear weapons are deployed; where more than 40,000 U.S. aggressor forces and the 1 million-strong puppet army, as well as the more than 10 million-strong paramilitary forces, are stationed; and where a large-scale test war is being staged continuously, simulating northward aggression.

Those who have perpetrated the "Team Spirit-86" nuclear war exercise against our Republic together with the U.S. imperialists and who are staging a large-scale northward offensive operation exercise are now propagating the threat by someone. How shameless and mean an act this is! Those who drove the North-South dialogue to the status of suspension by causing the report of guns and rifles to resound and who are staging a war exercise are the puppets and those who are watching for an opportunity for invasion after having assembled 80 to 90 percent of the puppet armed forces in the frontline area in accordance with the U.S. imperialists' strategy of northward invasion are also the puppets. The puppets' theory of the threat of southward aggression is a slogan for northward offensive. The puppets are more noisily beating the broken drum called threat of southward invasion because their situation is not comfortable.

Today, assertions that South Korea, which is the U.S. imperialists' colony and a forward nuclear base, and which is an exhibition of its atrocious human rights violations, is not a proper venue for the Olympics have been continuously raised by the peace-loving people of the world. Stressing that democratization is more urgent than the Olympics, the South Korean students and people are resolutely opposing the Olympics and calling for the resignation of traitor Chon Tu-hwan. Rumors that the Chon Tu-hwan regime will be ruined by a time bomb called the Olympics, which will explode in 1988, are circulating. If there is any threat in South Korea, it is the fierce resistance of the people threatening the puppet regime.

The fact that the Chon Tu-hwan clique is continuously raving about the disturbance maneuvers by the North against the Olympics is a premeditated, slanderous scheme aimed at triggering a war against us and shifting the responsibility onto us when it faces a crisis in power and the Olympics faces a destiny of rupture.

The puppets are attempting to realize their long-term power and create international circumstances favorable for fabricating two Koreas by successfully holding the Olympics at any cost. However, the situation will not develop as desired by the puppets. The South Korean students and people who rose in the struggle chanting slogans calling for the overthrow of the fascist regime will not tolerate the Olympics, which will make the dictator survive and deepen the nation's division. The peace-loving people of the world will not tolerate the Chon Tu-hwan clique, which is scheming to use the Olympics for its impure political aims.

Said Challenge to Reunification

[Text] Pyongyang June 7 (KCNA) -- In case the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets are given free hand to stage the Olympic Games in South Korea only, participation in them will mean approving the occupation of South Korea by the U.S. forces and encouraging their moves to aggravate North-South confrontation and split our country by creating "two Koreas", declares NODONG SINMUN today.

Pointing to the scheme of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets to abuse the 24th Olympics for the creation of "two Koreas" by staging it in Seoul, the author of the article says:

By approaching the socialist countries and non-aligned nations through the Olympic Games, the Chon Tu-hwan group hopes to improve its position in international isolation and, furthermore, disguise South Korea as an "independent state", thereby justifying the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and creating a climate favorable for the creation of "two Koreas".

Were the Olympic Games to be forced in the southern part of the Korean peninsula where North and South stand confronting each other, in spite of the opposition of many countries, this would result in leaving a shameful stain on the Olympic history and splitting the Olympic movement itself. The South Korean rulers would never evade the responsibility for this.

The way of saving the Olympiad from the crisis and ensuring a smooth opening of the games lies in its cohosting by the North and the South of Korea. We will regard the staging of the Olympic Games in Seoul only as a challenge to the noble cause of national reunification. The Olympic flag must not be abused for the "two Koreas" plot of the splittists.

Anyone interested in the healthy development of the Olympic movement with reason should heighten vigilance against the criminal schemings of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets to make a political capital out of the Olympics and should pay a serious attention to saving the Olympic movement from the crisis.

OPPOSITION TO OLYMPIC HOSTING INCREASING IN SOUTH

[Text] Pyongyang June 8 (KCNA) -- Broad segments of the South Korean people are denouncing and rejecting the criminal moves of the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique to host the 1988 Olympiad in Seoul. More than 1,500 students of Yonsei University, holding an anti-U.S., anti-"government" demonstration some time ago, shouted the slogans "U.S. imperialists, get out," "Down with the dictatorship" and "Boycott the Olympic Games increasing foreign debts".

Students of universities and colleges in Seoul and Pusan widely distributed printed material calling for "resolute opposition to the Olympiad" together with anti-"government" leaflets. The "National Federation of Students" of South Korea in a recent statement strongly called for "resolute opposition to the 1988 Olympic Games."

Speaking at a meeting for the signature campaign for constitutional amendments, Kim Tae-chung denounced the moves of the Chon Tu-hwan military hooligans to stay in power indefinitely under the signboard of the 88 Olympiad, saying that the "Olympic Games are no more than a big function of sports in every respect" and "the greatest work of the nation is to realize democracy".

Kim Yong-sam also criticized the plot of the puppets to put off the "constitutional" amendments under the pretext of the Olympics, saying that "our people exist not for sports games."

According to the opinion poll by a South Korean newspaper, 64 percent of the South Korean population held that the 88 Olympics would bring additional economic burden to the people and intellectuals in their twenties, in particular, expressed strong opposition to the Olympiad, saying that it would further aggravate the economic stagnation. And over 56 percent of the population rejected the Seoul Olympiad, saying that it would result in increasing the tensions between the North and the South.

USSR'S GARMON SUPPORTS DPRK COHOSTING PROPOSAL

[Text] Moscow June 7 (KCNA) -- M. Gramov, president of the USSR Physical Culture and Sports Committee, said that the staging of the 1988 Olympic Games in the North and the South of Korea would mean a step toward the realization of the Korean people's desire to reunify the country peacefully.

Referring to the Olympic cohosting proposal of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea at a press conference on the sports games to be held in Moscow on July 5, he declared: We support the proposal of the representatives of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to stage the 1988 Olympic games in Pyongyang, too. They are making every effort possible to stage the games on an up-to-the-standard level in conformity with the rules and tradition of the Olympic Games.

The stand of the USSR Physical Culture and Sports Committee supporting the cohosting proposal was notified to the president of the International Olympic Committee, he said.

PAPERS RAP JAPANESE HISTORY BOOK REVISION

SK110439 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0429 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] Pyongyang June 11 (KCNA) -- Papers here today criticize the Japanese authorities for grossly misrepresenting the past aggressive crimes of the Japanese imperialists in Korea and other parts of Asia in the history textbooks of middle and high schools. The Japanese authorities distorted many historical facts. They prohibited the use of the words "aggression" and "invasion" in the new textbooks in dealing with the Japanese imperialists' conquest of Asia in the past. Worse still, they reduced the number of Korean people who were murdered and injured by the Japanese imperialists at the time of the March first, 1919, popular uprising and who were taken to Japan by them for forced labour.

Noting that this is part of their despicable, shameless moves to veil the bestial crimes committed by the Japanese imperialists against the Asian people in the past and whitewash their history of aggression, the author of a NODONG SINMUN commentary says:

The shameless distortion of history eloquently shows that the Japanese authorities refuse to recognize the past aggressive crimes of the Japanese imperialists and are unwilling to deeply repent of them.

In the new history textbooks of high school they describe patriotic martyr An Chung-kun as a "loafer". The Korean people can hardly repress national indignation at this.

The Japanese reactionaries' insult to An Chung-kun is aimed to approve the aggressive acts of Hirobumi Ito, one of the ringleaders of Korean aggression, and, further, encourage the younger generation of Japan to invade Kora and conquer the whole of Asia, following in his footsteps. The malrevison of textbooks is hastened under the coercion of the government to imbue youth and children with the idea of militarist aggression. This is dangerous developments leading Japan again along the road of fascism and war.

MINJU CHOSON stresses: their distorition of historical facts show that there is no change in the Japanese reactionaries' design for overseas expansion to become the "leader" of Asia and, they are now sharpening the sword of aggression with increasing eagerness.

Papers Express Support

SK110447 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0435 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] Pyongyang June 11 (KCNA) -- Papers today in articles printed upon the lapse of 16 years since the Libyan people abolished a U.S. imperialist air base in their territory and completely ousted the U.S. imperialist aggression forces express solidarity with the struggle of the Libyan people who are advancing under the uplifted banner of independence against imperialism.

A signed article of NODONG SINMUN says that the Korean people are standing firm on the side of the Libyan people and express full support to and firm solidarity with their just struggle.

The revolutionary step of clearing Libya of imperialist aggression forces and military base was a historical event which brought about a radical turn in carrying out the Libyan people's cause of independence against imperialism, the article says, and continues:

Since the victory of the revolution, the Libyan people have effected a great change in the struggle to defend national independence and sovereignty and build a new society under the leadership of Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Great September First Revolution of the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah.

Adhering to chajusong and pursuing non-aligned policy, Libya actively strives for a fair solution of the Middle East problem and promotion of the cause of complete liberation of Africa, defending the dignity of the Arab nation and supporting the liberation struggle of the Palestinian people and all other oppressed people.

Recalling that the U.S. imperialists committed without hesitation heinous criminal acts to stifle the leadership of the Libyan revolution and savagely bombed even the capital of Libya, the article says: The U.S. imperialists' armed invasion of Libya was an act of state terrorism.

With no threat or blackmail, could the U.S. imperialists frighten the Libyan people or hold in check their advance.

JOINT NAVAL EXERCISE WITH U.S. DECRIED

[NODONG SINMUN 8 June commentary: "A Dangerous Game of Playing With Fire That Disturbs Peace"]

[Text] According to an announcement of the U.S.-South Korea Combined Forces Command, a joint naval exercise of the U.S. 7th Fleet and the South Korean puppet navy is to be conducted in the East Sea of Korea from 8 to 14 June in order to enhance the so-called joint operational capabilities.

Enhancing the joint operational capabilities is anonymous with war whenever the U.S. imperialist aggressors, together with the South Korean puppets, conduct a war exercise of northward invasion. What draws our serious attention is the fact that the U.S. imperialists are mobilizing, in this war exercise, the 7th Fleet which forms the main force of the U.S. Pacific Fleet forces.

The U.S. 7th Fleet is a notorious pirate fleet that was dispatched to the waters off the Korean peninsula within 2 days of the provocation of war during the Korean war in the past and carried out bombardment of our peaceful cities and villages and various other barbarous acts throughout the 3-year war.

It is well-known that the gunboats of the 7th Fleet, whose strategic deployment center has been moved to the East Sea of Korea, are directed against the Korean people today as well. Whenever the U.S. imperialists have conducted the "Team Spirit" war exercises, the test war exercises aimed at launching a surprise attack on our Republic, they have dispatched the U.S. flagship, aircraft carrier, and many other warships of the 7th Fleet and perpetrated dangerous games of playing with fire.

During this year's team Spirit" war exercise as well, with the participation of the carrier "Midway" and other 7th Fleet forces and the puppet warships, a joint landing exercise was conducted on the coast of the East Sea in an atmosphere simulating a real war.

The fact that the U.S. imperialist aggressors are again conducting a joint exercise with the puppets in the East Sea of our country with the aftereffects of the criminal "Team Spirit" war exercise still lingering is a sure proof that they are attaching great importance to Asia, expecially the Korean peninsula, in their aggressive world strategy and that they are not hesitating to wage a new aggressive war, a nuclear war, here. This reveals once again the heinous nature of the U.S. imperialists' agressive ambition against Korea and Asia, and it clearly shows the nature of the military adventurism of the U.S. imperialists against Korea and Asia.

The fact that the U.S. imperialists are conducting a new war exercise, at a time when the entire Korean people and world's people are further raising their voices calling for the withdrawal of th U.S. forces and are desirous of the alleviation of tension on the Korean peninsula and the resumption of North-South dialogue is a grave challenge to opinion at home and abroad. The reckless war maneuvers that are becoming more open with each passing day are a ciminal act straining the situation in and around the Korean Peninsula, putting a stumbling block in the way of the resumption of North-South dialogue, and threatening peace in Asia and the rest of the world.

At present, 80 to 90 percent of the U.S. imperialist aggressor forces and the puppet armed forces are deployed in the forward area along the Military Demarcation Line, waiting for an opportunity to wage an attack of northward invasion at any time they choose. With frequent games of playing with fire, fire will break out. Recalling the piratic barbarity commited recently by the U.S. imperialists against Libya at a time when they were pretending to stage a military exercise in the seas off Libya, there is no guarantee that the joint exercise which they are waging in the East Sea of our country will not bring about grave consequences.

By conducting a large-scale joint exercise in the East Sea with the puppets, the U.S. imperialists are pursuing the criminal aim of propping up the Chon Tu-hwan ring, which is experiencing a serious political crisis in the face of the daily growing anti-U.S., antifacist struggle of the South Korean students and people, and goading it into suppression of the poeple and war clamor, while cowing the South Korean people who have risen up in struggle.

But the U.S. imperialists should know that they can frighten no one with their military adventures and threats. The more the U.S. imperialists and the puppet clique step up their new war provocation maneuvers, the higher the South Korean people will raise the banner of the anti-U.S., antiwar, and antinuclear struggle.

Because of the reckless policy of military adventurism of the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan ring, there is a constant danger on the Korean peninsula that a war could break out at any time. Today, Korea has become a place where the situation is the most tense and acute in Asia.

The Korean people who desire peace in the country and its peaceful reunification will never tolerate the reckless war scheme of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges, nor will the world's peace-loving people tolerate such a scheme.

The U.S. imperialists and the south Korean puppets should squarely see the general trend of the times, act sensibly, and immediately stop the dangerous game of playing with fire disturbing peace in Korea and Asia.

SOUTHERN SURPRISE ATTACK EXERCISE SCORNED

SK101018 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1001 GMT 10 Jun 86

[Text] Pyongyang June 10 (KCNA) -- The Chon Tu-hwan military hooligans staged what they called surprise attack exercise against possible takeover of the Japanese Embassy and other "major buildings" in Seoul by students on June 3, the 22nd anniversary of the June 3 uprising of South Korean students against the reinvasion scheme of the Japanese militarists, according to a South Korean newspaper report.

The exercise that morning began with policemen disguised as students breaking into the chosen building, throwing sham molotov cockgails and elbowing aside the guardsmen.

After the policemen disguised as students forced their way into the compound of the building, riot police stormed there, letting out a cry, and dragged out the"occupiers".

The surprise exercise indicated the uneasiness of the fascist clique frightened by the fierce struggle of people of a strata against outside forces and once again revealed the ugly sight of the pro-U.S. and pro-Japanese flunkeyist traitors estranged from the people.

VNS ENTREATS UNITY OF ANTI U.S. RENSISTANCE

["Notice to the listeners of the Voice of National Salvation and the People" -- read by announcer]

[Text] We issue this notice to the listeners of the Voice of National Salvation of the South Korean National Democratic Front and the people. Embarrassed by the strong anti-U.S. and antidictatorial resistance of our masses, the pro-U.S. Chon Tu-hwan regime is now perpetrating a suppressive operation against the people, a suppressive operation unpredWith accordance with the new directive of the United States.

At the same time, while talking about constitutional revision, release of the detained people, and enforcement of the local autonomy system in the wake of the so-called Chongwadae talks of leaders of the ruling and opposition parties and the exclusive talks with the opposition party leaders at Chongwadae, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is perpetrating all sorts of maneuvers to dazzle the people and to paralyze the strong anti-U.S. and antidictatorial resistance spirit of the masses through the use of all sorts of flowery words such as politics through dialogue, national consensus, and democratic development. In a nutshell, this is a cunning trick designed not only to obliterate the anti-U.S. and antidictatorial resistance spirit of our masses, which it was unable to obliterate even through the bloody massacre of Kwangju in the past, but also to sever the ties between the people and the opposition parties.

The people throughout the country should enhance their vigilance against this and should unite more firmly than ever before in order to counter the new suppressive offensive of the Chon Tu-hwan ring with a strong resistance. At the same time, they should boldly unfold an operation for saving the arrested patriots and actively protect those patriotic fighters wanted by the police.

In particular, the masses of all strata should not only keenly watch the Chon Tu-hwan ring's maneuvers to divide and alienate the opposition forces and the patriotic masses of all strata and to destroy them on by one, but should also smash this in a timely manner.

People throughout the country: All the people who want independence, democracy, and reunification should more firmly unite as one, overthrow the pro-U.S. Chon Tu-hwan regime through the powerful anti-U.S. and antidicatorial resistance, and establish a new country of independence, democracy, and reunification on this land.

STUDENT ATTEMPT TO OCCUPY U.S. EMBASSY PRAISED

SK110048 (Clandestine) Voice of National Salvation in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 7 Jun 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] In this hour, I will talk about the anti-U.S. struggle of the attempt to occupy the U.S. Embassy by the students. As has been reported, Mr Yi Ui-song, a senior at the Environmental Engineering Department of Seoul Municipal College, who attempted to occupy the U.S. Embassy while carrying the Stars and Stripes and leaflets entitled "A Letter of Declaration for the Struggle for the Nation and Democracy" and other leaflets, was arrested in a surprise police check.

According to a police announcement, on the morning of 5 June, Mr Yi attended a meeting of the Eastern District Council of the League of Students for the National and Democracy [Minminhangnyon] held at Tongguk University, and at the meeting, he and some 10 other students of Korea and Hanyang Universities decided to occupy the U.S. Embassy at 1230 on the afternoon of 5 June.

Incidents involving the occupation of official U.S. buildings and installations and the staging of sit-ins there, which are continuing indefinitely following the occupation of the American Cultural Center in Seoul in May of last year, are those that reflect our masses' will and fervent wishes to put an end to the U.S. occupation of South Korea and its colonial rule there, and to build an independent society free from U.S. interference. As an expression of our masses' anti-U.S. semtiment, the recent incident involving the attempt to occupy the U.S. Embassy is part of the anti-U.S. struggle for independence, which is expanding and heightening in this land with each passing day.

As is well known, following the great Kwangju massacre, which was provoked by the 17 May coup d'etat [as heard], a great qualitative change took place in our masses' view of the United States. Even those people who, seized with the idea of revering and respecting the United States, had regarded the United States as South Korea's ally and the South Korean people's one and only friend, began to recognize that the United States is a ruler in South Korea and an enemy of our masses, our nation, and democracy. This is clearly shown in the fact that the struggle to oppose the U.S. military occupation of South Korea and its colonial rule there and to realize national liberation and independence in the society is fervently expanding and heightening with each passing day.

The Kwangju tragedy and the reality of South Korea-U.S. relations, a state that has lasted for more than 40 years in this land, have made our masses clearly realize that it is of no use harboring any illusion or expectations toward the United States. This is why the students and masses of all walks of life in Seoul, Pusan, Taegu, Kwangju, Inchon, Chonju, and various other places across the country, almost daily, took to the streets, staged demonstrations, and chanted the slogan "U.S., go home!" This is also why they successively occupied U.S. buildings and desperately staged sit-ins there, denouncing the U.S. policy of aggression. The recent attempt by some 10 students to occupy the U.S. Embassy was designed to express such an anti-U.S. sentiment of our people.

Even though the struggle plan by the students to display our popular will to oppose the United States and to inspire independence after occupying the U.S. Embassy could not be carried out, their act reflects the public sentiment and represents the aspirations of the nation. This is also a just patriotic struggle worthy of praise. Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan group took Mr Yi Ui-song to the police station and harshly interrogated him. It also totally encircled the U.S. Embassy and frantically strengthened security around it. This again showed its antipopular character running counter to public sentiment; and the pro-U.S. toadyist, and nation-selling character of the current regime which is seeking security in its rule and luxurious lives, while nestling in the White House.

The dictatorial regime that is attempting to maintain its existence by running counter to the masses' aspiration and currying favor with foreign forces will definitely not last long. If it continuously adheres to the reckless plot to seek security in its rule and to extend its rule, while suppressing with guns and bayonets the students and patriotic masses who are desperately shouting "Let us revive the country that was ruined because of the pro-U.S. policies through an anti-U.S. struggle," the Chon Tu-hwan ring will meet an end more miserable than that of its preceding dictators.

3D SOUTH-NORTH OLYMPICS TALKS HELD IN LAUSANNE

ROK Delegation Arrives 9 Jun

SK090902 Seoul CHUNGANG ILBO in Korean 9 Jun 86 p 1

[Correspondent Chu Won-sang, from Lausanne]

[Text] A delegation of the Korean Olympic Committee headed by Kim Chong-ha, senior member, arrived in Lausanne on the morning of 9 June to attend the 3d North-South sports talks, to be held in the headquarters of the International Olympic Committee [IOC] in Lausanne, Switzerland, for 2 days, on 10 and 11 June. The delegation checked in at the Palace Hotel.

The North-South sports talks, arranged this time by the IOC to discuss the issue of North Korea's participation in the Seoul Olympics, are the third such talks, following the talks last October and January of this year.

The North Korean delegation arrived here on 8 June, one day before the South delegation.

Seoul May Offer Events to North

[Text] Lausanne, Switzerland (YONHAP) -- The head of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), opening the third inter-Korean sports meeting on North Korea's participation in the '88 Seoul Olympics, Tuesday expressed the hope that a progress would be derived from the Lausanne meeting this time. In a terse remark at the opening session of the conference, IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch said, "The meeting could produce a progress toward certain success."

Olympic officials from South and North Korea gathered around a long oval table Tuesday to begin their meeting, the third round since last October. They last came together in Lausanne last January. At the opening-day meeting, chief Seoul delegate Kim Chong-ha reiterated its earlier position that Seoul, the host city of the '88 Olymlpics, will remain open to any Seoul Olympic participants including North Koreans.

And they once again addressed North Koreans and others that the question of Pyongyang's participation in the '88 Olympics could be taken up for discussion only after North Korea openly pledges its intention to honor the IOC charters as well as the 1981 IOC approval of Seoul's bid for the Summer Olympic Games in Seoul. Korean officials indicated that Seoul this time will be flexible, even ready to offer some of the Olympic events to the North. Seoul, the South Korean capital, was awarded the Games in 1981, and the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee has said it will consider any "reasonable proposals" from the North.

In reply, North Korea's Yim Yu-sun reiterated Pyongyang's assertion that it would be fair to "distribute and conduct" in the South and North the '88 Olympic events, letting it be understood that the North has remained stuck to its "co-hosting" demand, but some observers said it was noteworthy that Kim used new term by offering to "distribute the Games" instead of the controversial word of "co-hosting."

The discussions were being held in private and, after the formal opening, in separate sessions between the IOC and each delegation on the first day of the two-day meeting. Samaranch heads the IOC delegation at this week's talks, with other members including the committee's three vice presidents and Shaykh Fahd al-Ahmad al-Sabah of Kuwait, president of the Olympic Council of Asia. From South Korea come Olympic Committee president Kim Chong-ha, vice presidents Chang Chung-sik and Choe Man-nip, and committee members Yi Chong-ha, Im Tae-sun and Nam Chong-mun.

DPRK Rejects Compromise Plan

[Text] Lausanne, Switzerland, June 10 KYODO -- North Korea rejected International Olympic Committee (IOC) President Juan Antonio Samaranch's compromise plan on the 1988 Seoul Olympics in the first round of the two-day sports talks between North and South Korea held here Tuesday. Speaking after the first meeting with the IOC, Chin Chung-guk, vice president of the North Korean Olympic Committee, said the content of the plan to let North Korea hold some sports, preliminaries through finals, is unacceptable though he did not name the sports or the number of sports offered.

Chin also denied Western newspaper reports that the communist North has given up the idea of co-hosting the Olympics, adding the nomenclature of the 1988 Olympics and other basic matters also need to be discussed as a package.

While Samaranch, given full discretionary power by South Korea in his troubleshooting effort with North Korea, is said to have offered such sports as table tennis, fencing and archery, the North is understood to have demanded seven to eight sports, including soccer, out of the 23 Olympic sports.

Given the wide gulf between the two sides, the IOC is now said to be shooting for a more modest basic agreement on the number of sports to be staged by North Korea, leaving other problems to be settled at future talks.

After the day's talks, Samaranch said the negotiations were far from satisfactory. A press conference by Samaranch, originally slated to be held directly after the second-day talks, will be delayed considerably as the parties concerned will go into huddles until the last minute to try to avert another rupture of the talks. The past two sessions of talks, held last October and in January this year in Lausanne, ended with the communist North sticking to the idea of co-hosting.

JAPAN DEFENSE OFFICIAL CITED ON DEFENSE PLAN

[Text] Tokyo, June 11 (YONHAP) -- Japan's top defense official said Tuesday that his country is mapping out a contingency plan to defend its three straits and the 1,000-nautical-mile sea route linking Japan, Guam and the Philippines to ensure the safe transport of materials. "Japan has to take defensive actions to ensure the safe transport of materials on the sea," said Koichi Kato, director general of the Japanese Defense Agency. "Therefore, we are considering the defense of the 1,000-mile sea route and the blockade of three straits -- Tsugaru, Soya and Tsushima."

In a press conference with a group of visiting South Korean reporters, Kato said that the contingency measures are for defensive purposes only, in the event of an attack on Japan. "As long as there is no possibility of Japan being attacked, there will be no actions such as blockading the straits," he added. Kato did not mention, however, if the contingency defense plans are aimed at deterring the advance of the Soviet Union's Far East fleet into the Pacific, South Sea and Indian Ocean. He said that military stability on the Korean peninsula is "a matter of great interest" to Japan. "Japan evaluates highly the South Korean Government's efforts to reduce tensions on the peninsula and hopes that the military tension on the peninsula will be resolved at an early date, he said. Regarding the increase in the exchange of visits by high-ranking Japanese and Chinese defense officials, Kato said that the Japanese Government views the improvement in relations with China as an important issue because China has great influence in the maintenance of stability in Asia. "However, Japan is not considering military cooperation with countries other than the United States at the present stage," he said. Kato said that the Japanese Government is now trying to hold fast to the defense spending ceiling of one percent of its gross national product, which was set in 1976. "But if the government finds it unavoidable to exceed the limit in the future, we will carefully consider it, respecting the opinion of the public and the parliament," he added. Kato pointed out that Japan's has no intention of attacking any other nation, and therefore, it will not be a military superpower or possess nuclear weapons." Japan has no long-range bombers or aircraft carriers, he added.

CONTROVERSY OVER JAPANESE TEXTBOOK CONTINUES

Government Preparing Action

SK110046 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 11 Jun 86 p 8

[Text] The government is preparing an action against the reported Japanese move to approve a new history textbook, on the grounds that the text is filled with distorted accounts regarding the past relations between Korea and Japan. Government sources said now the government is documenting distorted parts in the new textbook. The new history textbook was prepared by a nationalist group in Japan. The draft of the textbook was already screened and passed by a committee of Japan's Education Ministry. The government action of urging Japan to set the records straight will be made through diplomatic channels.

The sources took note of the fact that the Japanese government promised to correct distorted parts in textbooks being used in 1982 when a similar issue concerning textbooks flared up. Reports from Japan have it that the new history textbook covered up most of the cruelties and savageries against Korea and other Asian countries before and during the World War II. Meanwhile, the International Human Rights League of Korea yesterday sent a letter to Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, criticizing the alteration of historical facts concerning its colonial rule as a "cunning scheme to beautify its past wrongdoings."

Rights Group Write Nakasone

[Text] Seoul, June 11 (YONHAP) -- The International Human Rights League of Korea Tuesday sent an official letter to Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, criticizing Japan's renewed attempt to distort historical facts in its high school textbooks.

In the letter, the league said that the Korean people cannot sit by idly watching the Japanese effort to gloss over its invasion of Kora and subsequent colonial rule (1910-45) because such an action infringes on Korea's sovereignty and blasphemes Korea's spirit of independence and national identity. "Friendly relations between Seoul and Tokyo are possible only on the premise that the Japanese Government recognized the historical crimes it committed during its colonial rule over Korea," the letter continued.

In addition, Korea cannot condone Japanese textbooks' descriptions of a Korean independence fighter, An Chung-kun, as a "hoodlum" it said. An assassinated Hirobumi Ito, a Japanese governor-general who was an architect of Japan's annexation of Korea.

The letter warned that Japanese efforts to rewrite history in a distorted manner will only bring greater misfortune upon themselves. Four years ago, Japan made a similar attempt to cover up its past wrongdoings, provoking sharp protests from Asian nations, including Korea and Chian. At the time, the Japanese Government promised to rectify any erroneous or misleading descriptions in Japanese history textbooks.

MIDDLE EAST TO PAY FOR CONSTRUCTION WITH OIL

[Text] Seoul, June 11 (YONHAP) -- Choe Chang-nak, South Korean minister of energy and resources, said Tuesday that his ministry has decided to receive crude oil from some oil-producing countries in the Middle East as payment for construction projects completed by Korean firms. The receipt of crude oil would be one way to settle the accounts receivable stemming from the Korean companies' overseas construciton projects, according to Choe, who said that his ministry would have no reason to oppose that method of payment if the crude oil is provided at a reasonable price.

Korean officials from the Economic Planning Board and the Ministries of Finance, Construction, and Energy and Resources have discussed the matter of receiving the payments in the form of crude oil in view of the fact that the oil-producing nations have had trouble paying for the construction projects as a result of the recent fall in oil prices, Choe said.

In a meeting with reporters in his office, the energy and resources minister said, "Construction fees that oil-producing nations have declined to pay, due to fraudulent work, will not be settled in such a way, however."

The Construction Ministry has reportedly asked the energy-resouces ministry to accept proposals made by Saudi Arabia and Libya that they pay Korea for the construction work with crude oil. The uncollected construction fees total 2.13 billion U.S. dollars, according to the Construction ministry.

Choe also said that his ministry is considering negotiating for a reduction in the price of liquefied natural gas (LNG) which Korea earlier agreed to import from Indonesia, because the price of LNG was set before the price of oil began to plummet on world markets. Choe said that the Korean company that is working on an oil development project in Indonesia's Madura Sea zone should consider pulling out of the project without hesitation if the zone proves to be unviable in terms of oil and gas production.

USFK KOREAN EMPLOYEES RESUME TALKS OVER WAGE HIKE

THE KOREA HERALD Report

SK110122 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 11 Jun 86 p 8

[Text] Representatives of the Korean employees working for U.S. Forces Korea (USFK) and U.S. officials yesterday resumed their negotiations over a layoff plan, a wage hike for Korean employees and other issues at the Eighth U.S. Army Headquarters in Seoul. Kang In-sik, president of the USFK Korean Employees Union, said both sides tried to seek a compromise over the issues but failed to reach any agreement during two rounds of talks in the morning and afternoon. They will meet again today.

The negotiations were continued after nine days of recess as Gen. William J. Livsey, commander of the USFK, returned to Korea Monday after visiting his country where he reportedly discussed the union's demands with relevant officials.

Kang said, "I will do my best to yield good results. But the prospect is not so bright, as the U.S. side does not present any clear-cut stance on our proposals."

Koreans working for the USFK once went on a brief strike late last month, demanding a 14.25 percent pay raise, the abolition of a plan to lay off 760 Korean employees and the improvement of working conditions. Korean employees called off the strike in 12 hours and returned to work with an agreement that negotiations would continue.

U.S. authorities were earlier quoted as saying the manpower reduction is inevitable because of the overall cut in the U.S. armed forces budget, while the 14.25 perecent wage hike is not feasible.

U.S. To Reconsider Layoff Plan

SK110621 Seoul YONHAP in English 0609 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 11 (YONHAP) -- Officials of the U.S. Forces Korea (USFK) -- Wednesday agreed to reconsider a plan to lay off 760 Koreans who work for the USFK. The decision was part of a five-point interim agreement between representatives of the Korean employees' union and USFK officials. The accord came two weeks after the trade union staged a one-day strike triggered by the annoucement of the U.S. layoff plan.

Under the agreement, USFK Officials will try to reduce to 202 the number of Korean employees to be laid off. The agreement also stipulates that the U.S. Eighth Army should not take actions against the workers who played leading roles in the May 29 strike involving some 18,000 Korean workers. In addition, the two sides agreed to resume negotiations over the wage issue after two weeks. The union has demanded a 14 percent pay hike, but the USFK has offered to increase wages by only 6.8 perecent.

MORGAN BANK SAYS 'OVERESTIMATED' CAPITAL FLIGHT

[Text] Seoul, June 11 (YONHAP) -- The Morgan guaranty Trust Co, in response to the Korean Government's demand that it explain high estimations of Korea's capital flight over the past decade, expressed regret for "any misunderstanding that may have occurred." In a message of explanation sent Monday to Korean Finance Ministe Chong In-yong, Morgan guaranty said, "The bank's intention in the March issue of WORLD FINANCIAL MARKETS was to analyze the problem of capital outflows from borrowing countries in general, and in this context comparative statistics were included for a number of countries." In the March issue, the bank reported that an estimated 198 billion U.S. dollars had fled 18 developing countries, including Mexico, Venezuela, the Philippines and Korea, between 1976 and 1985. The bank estimated that Korea's acumulative capital flight over the past ten years totaled nearly 12 billion dollars.

Morgan Trust explained in the message, "While Korea was not specifically discussed in the text of the article, Morgan regrets any misunderstanding that may have occurred." The message went on to say, "As noted in the March article, certin transactions normally included in standard calculations of capital outflows, such as export credits, do not constitute capital flight in the usual sense of the term." "More recent data also indicate that net capital outflows amay have been somewhat overestimated in the article," the bank continued. "It is clear that in relative terms, capital outflows from Korea have been comparatively modest."

At the end of May, the Finance Ministry, pointing out that Morgan's report took into account a large volume of normal capital trade in Korea's estimated net capital flight in the cited period, asked the bank to explain the mistakes in detail in the report.

According to Korea's central bank, the Bank of Korea, the calculation of Korea's capital flight included such normal capital transactions as short-term and long-term trade credits to foreign importers, capital contributions to the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the the Asian development bank (ADB) and overseas investments made by domestic banks and business enterprises.

In the message, Morgan further pointed out that in the March 1984 issue, which was devoted entirely to the Korean economy, world financial experts observed that "there is much in Korea's experience that other countries can usefully seek to emulate."

FRENCH STATE SECRETARY FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS VISITS

Arrives in Seoul 7 Jun

SK071242 YONHAP in English 1235 GMT 7 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 7 (YONHAP) -- Didier Bariani, French secretary of state for foreign affairs, arrived in Seoul Saturday for a four-day official visit to mark the centennial of the establishment of relations between Seoul and Paris. Shortly after he arrived at Kimpo International Airport, Bariani told reporters that relationship between Korea and France will be extended in every field including trade and exchange of industrial technology. "I believe that the relationship between Seoul and Paris which marks the centennial this year will be broadened particularly in economy, trade, industry and exchange of technology," Bariani said.

Noting that last April's visit by President Chon Tu-hawn to Paris narrowed the distance between the two nations, the French secretary said that French Government leaders including President Francois Mitterrand and Prime Minister Jacques Chirac are much interested in the deepéning of the bilateral relations.

While in Seoul, Bariani will convey to Chon messages from Mitterrand and Chirac and meet with Foreign Miniter Yi Won-kyong and National Unification Minister Pak Tong-chin. He will also attend the Korean-French economic symposium to be opened Monday at Hotel Shilla and inspect the truce village of Panmunjom in the Demilitarized Zone dividing South and North Korea.

The French secretary arrived in Seoul Saturday for a four-day official visit to mark the centennial of diplomatic relations between Korea and France. While here, Bariani led 27-member French delegation for a conference on Korea-France economic cooperation held at the Shilla Hotel here June 9-10.

Through his meetings with Korean Government leaders, including President Chon Tu-hwan, Deputy Prime Minister Kim Man-che and Foreign Minister Yi Won-kyong, the two countries further strengthened bilateral ties, Bariani said. He said that Chon's visit to Paris last April also helped deepen the relations between the two countries. THE KOREA TIMES VIEWS KBS REORGANIZATION STEPS

[Editorial: "Remedy for KBS Operation"]

[Text] Noteworthy is a package of measures designed to renovate the overall operation of and, particularly, to ensure balanced and objective news reporting and programming by the Korea Broadcasting System (KBS) as a public-run radio-television media. Included in the extensive remedial steps to this effect was the governent's move to appoint three lawmakers recommended by rival political parties to th KBS advisory board as part of its endeavors to guarantee balanced news reporting in the eyes of its audience.

The drastic remedial move for the KBS program was announced by the Ministry of Culture and Information over the weekend, in the wake of heated controversies among the people over the allegedly "biased and unfair" news reporting on the state-run media, which had touched off a campaign to boycott the payment of subscription fees and to reject viewing its programs. Along with the new measure, the goverment is also to strengthen the supervisory role of the Korean Broadcasting Commission (KBS) concerning KBS management, program production and news reporting.

At the same time, the function of the KBS advisory board will be invigorated to make closer surveillance, as well as suggestions with binding force, on KBS programs in order to promote the fairness of news reports. The board is required to report the results of its activities to the KBC, which in turn will come under the watch of the National Assembly. Aside from the lawmakers, the members on the advisory board will be selected by KBC from among those recommended by various functional circles, with the number of members to increase from the present 21 to 30, according to the new scheme.

The comprehensive reform program for KBS provides that the KBS-TV will phase out "block spot commercials" shown during prime time from next month. Yet, KBS will continue commercials for sports and public campaigns till 1988, the year the nation is to host the Olympics in Seoul.

Initial public reaction to the latest remedial measure for KBS seems to be affirmative to a certain extend. Nevertheless, there are those people who are still dubious or skeptical about the real outcome of the renovation measure, despite the government pledge to secure impartial news reporting. Accordingly, more convincing the KBS audience and the general public would be the legal arrangements made to institutionalize fair and balanced news reporting and streamline management in this reagard, free from excessive government influence even on a gradual basis, so as to make KBS a public broadcasting agency in a truer sense.

[Text] A student of Seoul National University yesterday visited opposition New Korea Democratic Party president Yi Min-u at the NDP headquarters to convey SNU students' assertions with regard to constitutional revision. He was Hwang I-su, acting president of the SNU student association.

Yi met the student for half an hour from 9:30 a.m. Hwang questioned why the NDP softened its stand and sought compromise with the ruling party on the constitutional amendment. He also asked about some "dubious" remarks by opposition leaders, which were reported in newspapers.

Yi told the visitor, "Politics cannot be done with emotion alone. As you know, we could not utter a word about the constitutional revision until rather recently, but we can say anything freely about it now. I think that all this is the result of politicians' efforts."

Hwang presented a statement issued in the name of the SNU student association, which made a six-point demand, including one request that the NDP should strive to have the direct presidential election system adopted in a new Constitution.

COURT ACQUITS STUDENT LEADERS OF PROTEST CHARGES

[Text] A judge at a district court in Suwon, Kyonggi-do, acquitted three students Monday of charges of leading a campus demonstration demanding a constitutional amendment to provide for direct presidential elections. Judge O Sang-hyon said in the ruling that their call for constitutional revision did not necessarily define their assembly as one "designed to foment remarkable social unrest." The sentence is the first formal aquittal for student defendants arrested and indicted for participation in campus protests.

With the Monday ruling, the three student defendants, Ko Tuk-song, 23, Kim Kum-myong, 23, and Paek Yong-ok, 24, were released from the Suwon Prison late on the day. The students, all from the Suwon campus of Songgyungwan University, were arrested after they played a leading role in a campus demonstration on March 8, calling for election reforms and the resignation of the current regime.

"The defendants are found to have staged the campus protest in a peaceful manner, not resorting to throwing rocks nor petrol bombs," Judge O ruled. The ruling also said that furthermore, their voices for election reforms can be acceptable in that the current developments are headed toward a constitutional amendment.

COVERAGE OF RETURN OF 'MISLED' PERSONS

2,038 in Past 5 Months

BK060639 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0400 GMT 6 Jun 86

[Text] Phnom Penh, 26 Jun (SPK) -- During the first 5 months of this year, 2,038 misled persons left sanctuaries on Thai territory and returned to the revolution.

According to statistics provided by the Proselytizing Committee, the returnees -- 65 percent of them from the Pol Pot group, 20 percent from the Son Sann group, and 15 percent from the Sihanouk group -- handed over 1,237 assorted weapons to revolutionary authorities. Some of the returnees were battalion and company commanders.

This figure already represents more than half of that registered in all of 1985. Once returned to the fold, these returnees spoke about their hard life in the jungle due to the shortage of foodstuff and medicine and the constant fear of death during their intrusions. They have received from the people's revolutionary authorities a piece of land and consumer goods and enjoyed every civil right in order to start their new life. Some of these rallied men voluntarily undertook to persuade their companions still among enemy ranks to return.

According to the Proselytizing Committee, the increasing number of returning men is due partly to the active participation of the masses in spreading the 6-point clemency policy of the Cambodian party and state; and partly due to the disastrous disintegration of the Cambodian reactionaries since their severe defeat along the Cambodian-Thai border in the 1984-85 dry season.

It should be recalled that the Proselytizing Committee, founded in 1984, has 11 members and is directed by Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, and defense minister.

Furthermore, deprived families have pursuaded another 14 misled persons to return to the fold. Currently, enemy sodiers and their commanders have a deeper understanding of the 6-point clemency policy of the party and state. They also have firm faith in the Cambodian revolution and are deserting the enemy ranks.

REPORTAGE ON CHEA SIM VISIT TO SIEM REAP

Visits Combatants, Monks

BK071105 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1300 GMT 6 Jun 86

[Text] A high-ranking delegation of the KUFNCD National Council led by Comrade Chea Sim, Political Bureau member of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the National Assembly and of the KUFNCD National Council, on 2 June paid a visit to cadres and combatants of Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province. During its stay in the province, the high-ranking delegation was warmly received by Comrade Neou Sam, alternate member of the KPRP Central Committee and secretary of the province's provisional party committee, and cadres and personnel of offices and units throughout the province as well as several cadres and combatants of the local armed forces. The delegation also attended the sixth Buddhist clergy congress of Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province.

Addressing the congress, Comrade Chea Sim highly appreciated the participation of all Buddhist monks in the triple revolutionary movement, especially in the proselytization of the misled persons, persuading them to return to their families and the revolution. He stressed that despite successes, we must heighten our revolutionary vigilance, for the counterrevolutionary enemy continues to seek by all means to sabotage our revolution.

He went on to say that the victories achieved by the monks are attributable to the aggregrate strength of the masses in all strata. Therefore, all the good experiences displayed during the congress must be developed and be realistically implemented in the localities in contribution to the defense of the fatherland and to bringing prosperity to it so that it can advance step by step toward socialism.

THAI AIR, SEA 'VIOLATIONS' IN MAY REPORTED

BK071300 Phnom Penh SPK in English 1113 GMT 7 Jun 86

[Text] Phnom Penh SPK June 7 -- In May, Thai aircraft of L-19, A-37, F-111 types and helicopters made 78 reconnaissance flights from 2 to 15 km inside the Kampuchean territory.

The flights were conducted over the areas of the tri-border intersection of Kampuchean Laos and Thailand, the Preah Viheard temple, Anlung Veng, Ampil, Yeang Dangkum, Poipet, O Da and other places along the Kampuchean-Thai border.

On sea, Thai armed vessels on 757 occasions intruded into Kampuchean waters from 5 to 35 miles off Koh Kong, Koh Tang and Poulo Wai islands. Noticeably, on May 7, two Thai armed vessels many times operated in Kampuchean waters, 10 to 20 miles northwest of Koh Kong.

In the same period, many Khmer reactionary groups, from their Thai-based sanctuaries, infiltrated into the country for sabotage activities against the peaceful life of the Kampuchean people.

The Kampuchean Armed Forces, in cooperation with the Vietnamese Army volunteers, duly intercepted the enemy, putting 755 intruders out of action including 115 captured, and seizing 324 assorted weapons, one tonne of munitions, 144 mines.

Worthy of note is that among the 755 put-out-of-action enemy troops, 453 were wiped out by Kampuchean combatants themselves.

COMMENTARY ON THAI 'SLANDER' ABOUT SRV SHELLING

BK070307 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1300 GMT 6 Jun 86

[Station commentary: "A Threadbare, Groundless Slander"]

[Text] Being by nature a bunch of dupers of the public, the ultrarightist circles of the Thai authorities recently fabricated threadbare, groundless slander alleging that the Vietnamese Army volunteers in Cambodia had fired artillery shells into the so-called refugee camp No 8 in Thai territory. How perfidious these lies can be!

As is widely known, whenever they are vigoriously condemned by the public for their violations of the PRK's territorial integrity and sovereignty, the Thai ultrarightist ruling circles reveal their true nature by fabricating this or that excuse to cover up their own ugly features and fool the public. They frequently make up stories about Vietnamese Army volunteers in Cambodia violating Thai territorial integrity. However, along with the support it gives to the activities of the remnant Pol Potson Sann-Sihanouk bandits who are opposing the rebirth of the innocent Cambodian people, Thailand constantly violates the PRK's sovereignty and territorial integrity on the ground, in the air, and at sea. In fact, within 1 week, from 16 to 23 May 1986, Thailand sent L-19s, F-111s, A-37s, and helicopters to conduct 40 reconnaissance flights -- an increase of 31 flights -- 2 to 15 km deep into Cambodia's airspace over the sectors of the junction of the three borders, Perah Vihear temple, the area north of Anlung Veng, Southwest Ampil, Yeang Dangkum, Poipet, Soda, west O Da, northwest Kamrieng, the end of Route No 56, and other areas along the Cambodian-Thai border. At sea, a total of 129 entries by Thai vessels were reported in areas between 10 and 70 km from Kaoh Kong, Kaoh Tang, and Poulo Wai islands. On land, with Thai backing, the Cambodian reactionaries infiltrated Cambodian territory on several occasions in order to conduct sabotage activities and rob and kill the Cambodian people along the border areas. However, our Cambodian Border Defense Forces put out of action 254 intruders, including 115 killed, 22 taken prisoner, and 117 forced to surrender. Our Border Defense Forces also seized 103 assorted weapons and a quantity of war materiel. This is clear and irrefutable proof of Thai violations of PRK territorial integrity.

The PRK and the SRV in particular and the three Indochinese countries in general desire to coexist as good neighbors with Thailand and all other countries in this region. This is clearly defined in the communique of the 12th conference of the three Indochinese foreign ministers. On the contrary, Thailand has turned a deaf ear to and continued to openly oppose the goodwill of the three Indochinese countries. The Thai authorities have tied themselves tightly to the chariot of war of the Beijing Chinese and U.S. imperialists and sold out their land for use by the Beijing expansionsts and U.S. imperialists -- their masters -- as a springboard in serving their expansionist design against Southeast Asia. The ultrarightest circles of the Thai authorities and the Beijing reactionary rulers have often exchanged visits in order to seek means for realizing their dark designs. Moreover, when Weinberger visited Thailand in April, the Bangkok ultrarightist group agreed to let the United States set up an arms stock on Thai soil despite the strong opposition of the progressive public opinion in the regional and even the Thai people. Worse still, the Thai authorities have colluded with the U.S. imperialists in conducting recent exercises codenamed "Logex 29" along the Cambodian-Thai border and will conduct another exercise codenamed "Cobra Gold-86" later.

It is widely know that the Thai ultrarightists are the ones who provide shelter for and foster the remnant Pol Pot-Son Sann-Sihanouk bandit groups at the order of the Beijing expansionists. After these bandits suffered serious defeats during the 1984-85 dry season and underwent internal conflicts, the Thai authorities hurriedly bustled for help and begged the U.S. imperialists to help reconcile these disputing groups.

This clearly proves that the Thai ultrarightist circles have never abandoned their design to annex the Indochinese countries and their opposition to the PRK.

During more than the past 7 years, the PRK has advanced firmly in all aspects. Allthe perfidious maneuvers of the enemies who have waged an undeclared war against the PRK have been thoroughly trampled upon. The KPRAF have gained a firm footing along the Cambodian-Thai border. All of this has provided facilities for the fifth partial withdrawal of the Vietnamese Army volunteers from Cambodia. World public opinion in this region and elsewhere throughout the world has welcomed and praised the good will, love, and respect for each other between the two governments of Cambodia and Vietnam. Obviously, the Thai authorities' abject slander is just a groundless fabrication to deceive the world public and conceal Thailand's dark design regarding the so-called Cambodian problem. This slander also aims at concealing Thailand's dark design to exploit the problem of refugees for its own benefit, obstruct the trend of dialogue in the region, and maintain serious tension along the Cambodian-Thai border.

Like the SRV and LPDR, the PRK has repeatedly declared that we always respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of other countries. However, we have the right to protect ourselves and to retaliate against any hostile act. Therefore, Thailand must be responsible for its hostile acts and must immediately put an end to these acts for the sake of peace and security in this region.

PASASON CALLS FOR THAI RESPONSE TO BORDER TALKS

[7 June PASASON "article": "Thai Side Must Respond to Urgent Aspirations of Two Peoples of Thailand and Laos"]

[Text] Yesterday the LPDR Foreign Ministry issued a statement on Lao-Thai relations on the occasion of the 2d anniversary of the acts committed by the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries in sending a large number of regular troops to invade, nibble at, and occupy three Lao villages -- Ban Mai, Ban Kang, and Ban Savang in Paklai District, Sayaboury Province -- on 6 June 1984.

The statement emphasized the crime committed by the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries, commanded by General Athit Kamlang-ek, supreme commander and former army commander in chief of Thailand, against the Lao people in the three villages. It also clearly pointed out movements of Thai troops along the Thai-Lao border -- movements that constitute preparation for a new aggression against Laos' Sayaboury Province.

Meanwhile, the statement affirmed the Lao side's attitude and correct, consistent stand regarding the peaceful settlement of problems on Thai-Lao relations, caused by the dirty hands of the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries.

Nevertheless, 2 years have passed, and there has been no positive response from the Thai side. The statement once again clearly pointed to the Lao side's stand and good will announced in the Foreign Ministry's 6 June 1985 statement in which Laos proposed that the Kingdom of Thailand appoint its governmental delegation to hold talks with its Lao counterpart either in Bangkok or Vientiane. This clearly shows the stand and correct, consistent, and constructive proposal of the Lao side, which has always done its best to resolve and quickly normalize Thai-Lao relations, aimed at safeguarding and developing the tradition of fraternal relations between the peoples of the two countries.

If the Thai side is sincere as indicated in its statement that it really wants to improve the bilateral relations in the spirit of fraternity, it is not too late for the Thai side to respond reasonably to the Lao side's proposal that the Foreign Ministries of the two sides appoint their officials to meet and discuss right away and work out all necessary preparations to ensure success for the bilateral meeting and talks at the governmental level in accordance with the urgent aspirations of the peoples of the two countries, who always want a quick normalization of Lao-Thai relations.

To respond to the urgent aspirations of the Lao and Thai peoples, there is only one way -- that is, the Thai side must agree to accept for consideration and sincerely respond to the correct, reasonable, and constructive proposal advanced by the Lao side.

The Lao people as well as the Thai people and various peace-loving nations in the region and in the world are awaiting with confidence that the Thai side will adopt a correct attitude and give a positive response for the legitimate interests of the Thai and Lao peoples and for the common interests of the various nations in the region and for peace, friendship, and stability in Southeast Asia and the world.

PRESS CONFERENCE HELD TO MARK THAI 'OCCUPATION'

BK071015 Vientiane KPL in English 0909 GMT 7 Jun 86

["Press Conference on Lao-Thai Relations" -- KPL headline]

[Text] Vientiane, June 7 (OANA-KPL) -- A press conference on the 2nd anniversary of the armed aggression and occupation of the three Lao hamlets by the ultra-rightist reactionary Thai military circles was organised here for foreign and local newsmen.

The conference speaker was Bounteng Vongsai, director general of the Lao News Agency (KPL).

Addressing the press conference Bounteng Vongsai pointed out that the seizure of three Lao hamlets by Thai forces two years ago has led to tension between the two countries. Nevertheless, in order to manifest its good will and strive to restore good neighbourly relations, the Lao side has once and again been suggesting that the Thai Government should appoint governmental level delegation to consult with its Lao counterpart for solving this issue as it was stated in a statement released here last year on June 6 by the Lao Foreign Ministry.

Bounteng Vongsai went on to say that two years have passed since then but the relations of the two countries Laos and Thailand are in a state of tension due to hostile acts of Thai ultra-rightist ruling circles. But in order to improve and normalise the relations of good neighbours between Laos and Thailand once again, the Lao government has suggested that the Thai Government appoints officials of its Foreign Ministry as soon as possible, to discuss with its Lao counterpart and prepare for the consultation at governmental level.

Bounteng Vongsai also answered some questions of foreign newsmen concerning Lao-Thai relations.

Documents on the Lao-Thai relations in the past ten years were also distributed to the participants.

PASASON MARKS THAI SEIZURE OF THREE VILLAGES

BK060832 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 6 Jun 86

[6 June PASASON "article": "Two Years of Indignation in Connection With the Incidents in the Three Lao Villages"]

[Text] Today, 6 June, marks the 2d anniversary of the very brutal, barbarous act of the ultrarightist reactionaries in the Thai ruling circles in mobilizing a large number of regular troops to attack and seize three Lao villages -- Ban Mai, Ban Kang, and Ban Savang -- Paklai District, Sayaboury Province, in 1984. The attacks took place not long after the official visit to Beijing of Athit Kamlang-ek, currently Thai Armed Forces supreme commander, who used to hold concurrently the post of Thai Army commander in chief. The attacks began at around 0900 hours with fierce shelling of Lao territory to pave the way for many battalions of Thai troops to occupy the three Lao villages, thus inflicting heavy losses in life and property on the local people. Later, on 7 June, Thai troops also intruded into Ban Na Fai village, which is some 2 km from the Thai-Lao border. They then raised the Thai flag over the villages they had occupied. They also forced the local Lao people to learn and speak the Thai language. Worse still, they even herded the Lao people from those villages into Thai territory.

These are considered an arrogant and open encroachment upon the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the LPDR, a violation of the Thai-Lao and Lao-Thai joint statements of 1979, and an act sabotaging the relations of neighborly friendship between the Thai and Lao peoples. Such acts run counter to the interests of the two peoples, who have always wished to maintain peace and good-neighborly relations. Following the brutal acts of the Thai ultarightist reactionaries who have pursued pan-Thaism at the behest of the Beijing big-nation expansionists-hegemonists, Thailand has been isolated and strongly denounced by the peace- and justice-loving public and by nations all over the world. This was clearly shown in the 1984 UN General Assembly session. In shame the Thai side was compelled to announce at the UN General Assembly on 2 October 1984 that it would withdraw all Thai troops from the three villages. However, no matter what nice and sweet words they used, in practice the ultrarightist reactionaries in the Thai ruling circles have continued mobilizing their troops to remain on various peaks in the area of the three Lao villages. The Thai side has continued to prevent the Lao people of the three villages, who were forcedly herded into Thai territory, from returning to their native land. It also avoided paying compensation while rejecting the Lao side's proposal to resume Lao-Thai talks to resolve the remaining problems regarding the three Lao villages.

Nevertheless, the Lao side has always adhered to its correct and reasonable stand and attitude on the basis of the policy of establishing and promoting relations between Thailand and Laos. The Lao side has always adhered to the principles of settling disputes in relations between the two countries peacefully. This has been clearly shown in the statements issued on various occasions by the LPDR Foreign Ministry, in particular the letter dated 1 July 1985 of Phoun Sipaseut, minister of foreign affairs of the LPDR. But, it is regrettable that the Thai side has tried to avoid accepting the sincere and creative proposal of the Lao side by playing on words and raising various issues as a pretext to announce unilaterally the suspension of the talks. It later proposed talks at the local level as its justification, and so forth.

Along with using various pretexts to avoid the sincere proposal of the Lao side so as to delay solving problems and normalizing Thai-Lao relations, the ultrarightist reactionaries in the Thai ruling circles have continued to implement the evil schemes of the Chinese big-nation expansionists-hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists by carrying out challenges and provocative activities and creating disturbances in the area of the three villages in Paklai District, Sayaboury Province, and areas along the Thai-Lao border. Between July 1984 and May 1986, the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries mobilized their Air, Naval, and ground forces to conduct provocations agianst the LPDR on more than 30 occasions altogether, including the airspace violations, firing at Lao peole and Lao cargo boats traveling along the Mekong River, and firing small arms and artillery at LPDR territory in the border areas, thus causing considerable losses of life and property to the Lao people.

While carrying out these dirty acts, the ultrarightist reactionaries have even dirty acts, the ultrarightist reactionaries have even made a-hundred-and-one slanderous charges against the Lao side and used them as an unreasonable pretext to carry out economic blockades against the LPDR by hoarding and delaying the transport of Lao goods via Thailand and by banning the transit to Laos of more than 200 types of the so-called strategic goods. As a result of these acts by the ultrarightist reactionaries in the Thai ruling circles, the efforts to seek ways and means to solve the problem of the normalization of Thai-Lao relations has come to the impasse it remains at today. The time-honored, good-neighborly relations between the Lao and Thai peoples have also been affected ever more seriously with each passing day as a result of the dirty hands of the ultrarightist reactionaries in the Thai ruling circles, who have blindly served plots of the Beijing reactionaries.

On the occasion of the 2d anniversary of the deep indignation, the Lao people of various tribes throughout the country once again expresss resolute determination to turn the power of indignation into a great power enhancing the strength of the national defense and public security forces to safeguard securely their independence, sovereignty, and territorial integrity; maintain the revolutionary cause; heighten vigilance; and maintain preparedness to smash promptly all schemes of the Thai ultrarightest reactionaries and fulfill the strategic task of the party and state in order -- together with the people to normalize and improve the fine relations between the two nations in accordance with the urgent aspirations of the two peoples, positively contribute to easing tension, and create mutual understanding in the interests of the cause of peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world.

[Text] A Soviet parliamentary delegation arrived yesterday for a four-day visit as guest of Parliament President Ukrit Mongkhonnawin. Accompanying Mr Salimov are Alexandre Sergeyevitvh Isaev and Faud Enver-ogly Musaeev of the Chamber of Nationalities.

Delegation Press Conference

BK070926 Bangkok BANGKOK WORLD in English 7 Jun 86 p 3

[Text] A group of parliamentarians of the Supreme Soviet this morning spoke out against a proposal to set up a community of Asia and Pacific countries.

The group, here following a visit to Singapore, Indonesia and Malaysia, is led by H.E. Akil Umurzakovich Salimov, vice-president of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR.

Speaking during a press conference this morning, Mr Salimov said that the group held talks with high-ranking government officials of each country they had visited. The discussions, he said, centered on certain issues such as bilateral and multilateral cooperation in economic issues, trade, science and culture. He pointed out, however, that the idea to set up a Pacific forum was a major threat to peace and stability in the region as such a forum would be followed by military cooperation.

The five-member Soviet team, which arrived here on Thursday, will leave for Moscow on Monday.

Meanwhile, Soviet Ambassador to Thailand Valentien Petrovitoh Kassatkine said today that he had recently handed a message from Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon over the accident at Chernobyl. He said that the message also called for cooperation from the Thai Government over the Soviet initiative to create an international organisation of safe functioning for the Atomic Energy Enterprise based on broad international cooperation. The Soviet ambassador also said that the new organisation, if to be set up, should compose of various countries which possess nuclear technology, as well as developing countries which would like to use nuclear energy for peace.

Sitthi Meets With Salimov

[Text] According to a report from the Foreign Ministry, Vice President of the Supreme Soviet Presidium Akil Salimov and his delegation yesterday met Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila at the ministry. The two sides exchanged views on the situation in Southeast Asia and bilateral relations. They agreed that there are still opportunities to expand trade and economic relations between the two countries. The Soviet Union said it is ready to buy more from Thailand.

The Thai deputy prime minister and foreign minister told the Soviet Union of Thailand's and ASEAN's wish to see peace in the region. He called on the Soviet Union to respond with constructive cooperation so that peace can be achieved in the region. He stressed ASEAN's policy of economic and social cooperation among member nations to promote the welfare of their respective peoples. He announced ASEAN's decision to hold a summit next year to outline plans to expand their economic and trade relations. The deputy prime minister and foreign minister expressed Thailand's wish to see the two world powers hold talks to solve global problems and eliminate the nuclear threat based on understanding and compromise. Thailand also hopes that the Soviet-U.S. summit will contribute to solving world problems.

Salimov Interviewed

[By Sinfa Tunsarawu]

[Text] The Soviet Union has proposed to help develop Thailand's industrial projects which require high technology by extending loans to be repaid with shipments of Thai export goods, a leader of a Soviet parliamentarian group said here yesterday.

Akil Salimov, vice president of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, told THE NATION in an interview that the Soviet Union can participate in the construction of hydro-electric and thermal power plants, agricultural product processing factories, development of mineral resources, and others.

"Unlike other trade partners of Thailand, the Soviet Union would be ready to accept the payments for credit, in the form of shipments to our country of Thai traditional export goods," Salimov said.

He said he had raised the proposal during his meeting with Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila and Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong on Friday. "Their response is positive in principle," said Salimov who is leading a five-member parliamentarian team to Thailand.

Soviet Ambassador Valentin Kasatkin who was also present at the interview said they suggested to the Thai side that further discussion should be made during a visit of a Soviet deputy foreign trade minister on June 16. He said the Thai officials accepted the offer.

United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) will hold a trade and economic meeting on June 16-18 in Bangkok, [in] which many economic ministers of the world will participate.

Salimov said the proposal is part of the willingness of the Soviets to transfer their technology to Thailand and other ASEAN countries. He said he had also discussed the idea with other ASEAN countries. His team had visited Indonesia, Singapore and Malaysia before arriving in Bangkok.

The offer to provide loans for industrial projects is another push of the Soviet Union to expand the economic relations between the two countries.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Mikhail Kapitsa had proposed to increase the volume of Thai-Soviet trade during his visit here in late April. Salimov said Moscow is ready to increase its imports from Thailand in exchange for exports of Soviet goods. "We proposed to study the question of expanding trade between our two countries on the basis of barter and mutual contracts." He said the Soviet Union had already bought more than 200,000 tons of rice from Thailand in the past five months.

His ASEAN tour was part of a recently-initiated Soviet policy to begin a wide exchange of views to create a better understanding among countries in Asia and the Pacific region, he said. "The purpose of the visit of our delegation is also to step up efforts for the development of the widest possible cooperation between the Supreme Soviet of the USSR and the parliaments of the ASEAN countries in all spheres," he said.

He said he shared the idea of the President of Thai Parliament Ukrit-Mongkhonnawin that the two countries should exchange parliamentarian delegations more often during their meeting on Friday. It was agreed that the question of trade and economic cooperation will be discussed by the delegations, he said.

The Soviet parliamentarian said members of parliaments of the world could have more contribution to bring about better understanding among the international community by exchange of visits.

Touching on the Kampuchean conflict, Salimov said the Soviet Union, if invited, is willing to participate in any political dialogue to settle the problem. He said the proposals of the Indochinese states provide the basis for such settlement. He said the point is such a political dialogue should be started. Vietnam has required the elimination of the Pol Pot clique as a precondition for any political settlement of the Kampuchean problem. It has always rejected any talks with the United Nations-recognized Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea.

Commenting on the Sino-Soviet relations, Salimov said China is one of the important powers to create security in the Asian-Pacific region. He said the potential for future development of the relations is great. "Its realization would undoubtedly play a substantial role in ensuring Asian security."

He said he characterized the present relations between Thailand and the Soviet Union as "good and friendly" and there is great potential for their future development on the basis of mutual respect and mutual benefit.

PREM INTERVIEWED ON POLITICAL PLANS, ELECTIONS

BK091034 Bangkok Television Service in Thai 1300 GMT 8 Jun 86

[Report on 8 June press conference given by Thai Prime Minister General Prem Tinsulanon in Nakhon Ratchasima Province -- recorded]

[Text] [Unidentified reporter] Dear listeners, I informed you yesterday that the prime minister would speak to reporters on whether he will run in the general elections.

This morning, before returning to Bangkok, the prime minister gave an interview at his residence in Nakhon Ratchasima, saying that he would not run in the upcoming elections because he has to remain neutral in the elections. As to whether he will take the premiership again, he said it is still too early to given an answer.

[Prem] The first question is whether I will run in the general election. I have to make it clear that as a member of a caretaker government, I have to carry out my duties, in particular, supervising the 27 July general elections. The caretaker government has to make sure the elections are orderly and, as the Interior Ministry puts it, honest and fair. It the prime minister belongs to any political party he might be seen to be losing his neutrality, so it is necessary for me to remain neutral in order to ensure that the election is held in accordance with the wishes of the people. This is important because we need candidates who the people want to vote for without any influence from any factor that may make them confused. For the sake of the interest of the majority, I have to remain neutral. I think my reply to the question is clear.

As for the second question, now is not the time to answer because there are still several factors to be taken in to consideration, and those factors will come into play only after the election. So, now is not the time to think about it since we still do not have enough factors for consideration.

Now, I would like to discuss another important point, which you did not ask about. I want all of you to help tell the eligible voters that the general election is an important thing and everyone should exercise their voting rights. Even one person's vote has great value as it will enable us to have the desired persons as mp's. The people should make up their own mind and vote for those they think will work for the interest of the community. Only good persons can do so. The word "good person" means a lot, and I do not have to explain. Please vote for good persons -- those who will really do benefit for the public. They should give no significance to the campaign methods of the candidates, but to the general interests of the community. In conclusion, we have to vote good persons into Parliament. You will be able to do this job well because most people read newspapers, listen to radio, and watch television. If we try to give the right instructions which the people can use as guidelines in voting, we will get mp's who will work for the sake of the people, which will benefit our country's democratic development.

REJECTION OF LAO BORDER TALKS OFFER REPORTED

[Text] Bangkok, June 9 (AFP) -- A Thai Foreign Ministry spokesman Monday reiterated that Bangkok had no border dispute with Laos and therefore would not take up a recent Laotian offer to start a new round of talks to solve it.

Vientiane Friday had proposed talks between officials of the two foreign ministries on sovereignty over three border officials [as received].

But the Thai Ministry's Information Department Deputy Director General, Pratyathwi Tawethikun, said Monday that "we have no dispute with Laos any more on this issue."

The villages of Mai, Klang and Sawang, 220 kilometers (135 miles) west of Vientiane, were at present under Laotian control after Thai troops had withdrawn from the area following armed clashes with Laotian forces in 1984, Mr Pratyathawi said.

He rejected a charge by Laotian authorities that Thailand had stationed 2,000 troops with artillery on three hills overlooking the villages.

Laos said Friday that the hills were on its territory, in a Foreign Ministry statement marking the second anniversary of the dispute.

Mr Pratyathawi also denied that Thailand was carrying out "constant aggressive acts" against Laos and that it was holding 1,000 Laotians in a camp inside Thailand, as Laotian officials had told visiting journalists.

REPORTAGE OF AUSTRALIA'S HAYDEN BANGKOK TALKS

Impact of U.S. Farm Act

BK100148 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 10 Jun 86 pp 1, 3

[Text] Australia supports Thai calls for talks to counter the adverse impact of the U.S. Farm Act among countries which do not subsidise agricultural exports. Foreign Ministry spokesman Dr Pratyathawi Tawethikun said yesterday that Australian Foreign Minister Bill Hayden expressed his support in talks with his counterpart Sitthi Sawetsila last night. Mr Hayden said Australia also suffers a trade deficit with the United States.

Thai and Australian agricultural exports had both been damaged by the Farm Act, which in essence subsidises U.S. rice, making it more competitive on world markets. Australia is concerned about falling commodity prices resulting from protectionist barriers like the Farm Act and the European Economic Community's Common Agricultural Policy.

ACM [Air Chief Marshal] Sitthi proposed that countries, such as Australia, Canada, New Zealand and ASEAN, which do not subsidise their farm exports, meet regularly to map out a joint strategy. Dr Pratyathawi said Australia would further discuss the problem at ASEAN meetings with Dialogue Partners in Manila from June 24-26.

Also discussed yesterday was Australia's new system of trade preferences, to be announced on July 1, which will reduce import duty on goods from developing countries by five per cent from the present 45 per cent. During the talks it was agreed that steps should be taken to double bilateral trade from the present A$250 million. ACM Sitthi also invited Australian tourists to Thailand next year, which will mark the country's Year of Tourism.

ACM Sitthi also briefed Mr Hayden on developments in Kampuchea. Mr Hayden was told the Khmer resistance has made impressive military gains and that the relative quiet along the Thai-Kampuchean border indicated this was the worst year yet for the Vietnamese occupation forces. Vietnamese forces had suffered setbacks, said ACM Sitthi, and this was made clear by their reinforcement of defences around Phnom Penh.

Security, Regional Issues

BK101123 Bangkok BANGKOK WORLD in English 10 Jun 86 p 3

[Text] No discussions were held on Australian-Indonesian relations during a meeting this morning between Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon and Australian Foreign Minister Bill Hayden, Foreign Ministry Deputy Spokesman Pratyathawi Tawethikun said. When asked whether Mr Hayden had asked the Thai side to help negotiate with the Indonesian Government to improve relations between the two countries, the deputy spokesman said the issue was discussed last night by Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila and the Australian foreign minister. He said Thailand felt that the two countries could improve their relations as both countries had played an important role in this region.

During this morning's meeting, Mr Pratyathawi said that several issues, including security and regional problems, were raised for discussion. He said Gen Prem thanked Mr Hayden for Australia's warm welcome to His Royal Highness Crown Prince Maha Wachiralongkon during the Crown Prince's last visit to Australia. The prime minister also praised Australia for the recent signing of a defence cooperation agreement. Although the project was a small one, Gen Prem said it set a good example as well as new era between Thailand and Australia.

On economic issues, the deputy spokesman said that the outlook for the Thai economy is good compared with other countries and there was indication that it was going to be better in the future. He said both countries expressed concern over the protectionism issue. He said Mr Hayden discussed with ACM [Air Chief Marshal] Sitthi the problem of selling Thai rice and the way to seek a solution to the problem.

He said Mr Hayden also showed an interest on joint-venture projects between the two countries such as a joint railway project.

Hayden on Cambodia Peace Plan

BK101225 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 1200 GMT 10 Jun 86

[Text] The Australian foreign affairs minister, Mr Hayden, has urged Vietnam to reconsider its rejection of the peace plan for Kampuchea put forward by the Kampuchean resistance coalition. Speaking at a news conference in Bangkok at the end of a 3-day visit to Thailand, Mr Hayden said the 8-point plan was not perfect but had much to recommend it and afforded a valuable starting point for negotiation.

Mr Hayden said Australia saw the proposal as a progressive development in the region and had contacted a number of countries which had direct interest in the Kampuchean situation. It had recommended to the governments, in particular to Vietnam, that they address themselves seriously to the plan.

Mr Hayden said Australia did not view the proposal a final but believed it contained a number of positive aspects that were worth exploring further.

The plan put forward last March calls for a cease-fire and a 2-part withdrawal of Vietnamese forces from Kampuchea under United Nations supervision. A national government would then be set up to include all Kampuchean factions prior to free elections.

SUNTHATHAN ON DIVERSIFICATION OF TRADE PATTERNS

BK091405 Bangkok MATICHON in Thai 9 Jun 86 p 4

[Article by Sunthi Sunthathan: "A Favorable Trend"]

[Text] Newspaper reports say that this year the USSR will import more than 300,000 metric tons of sugar from Thailand, a several-fold increase compared with last year's 36,631 metric tons. During May and June about 20 Soviet merchant ships will carry 200,000 metric tons of sugar from Thailand. The USSR has become Thailand's biggest sugar customer, replacing China which was Thailand's biggest customer last year with purchases of as much as 1 billion metric tons of sugar. The most important reason why the USSR is buying sugar from Thailand is that its regular suppliers, such as Cuba and the Philippines, face problems of low production. In addition, its sugar production in the Ukraine may also be affected because of the explosion at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant in Kiev.

News reports also say that in the first 4 months of this year the USSR bought 139,399.96 metric tons of rice from Thailand, most of which is expected to be sent to assist Vietnam. Recently, the USSR ordered another 20,000 metric tons of rice worth about 80 million baht for immediate shipment. The source did not disclose where this rice would be shipped.

However, all these purchases are good for Thailand when it is facing stiff competition from U.S. agricultural products, especially rice.

From several sources we have learned that the Soviet Government has been trying to improve its trade relations with other countries -- first, with China and the United States, and then with ASEAN and the EC. It wants to promote relations between those countries and the CEMA. Promoting economic relations is the best way to strengthen political relations and eventually world peace.

Staging trade wars is a phenomenon peculiar to the capitalist world. Now the United States has a Congress which likes to write protectionist legislation and a government which likes to stage trade wars, and this will to stage trade wars, and this will only increase the conflicts within the capitalist world. The conflict resulting from the change in exchange rates between the U.S. dollar and the Japanese yen and West German mark is getting worse. The Japanese and West Germans will not willingly suffer losses in order to help the United States to correct its trade deficit. At such times, promotion of trade with other countries has meaning, no matter who initiates it. Trade promotion is better than protectionism and retaliation among each other. Trade relations which are beneficial to both sides should be expanded and everlasting.

VIETNAMESE LEAFLETS FOUND NEAR CAMBODIAN BORDER

[Text] According to a report from Aranyaprathet, while local people were focusing their attention on election candidates in Prachin Buri Province leaflets were spread by air, landing 3-5 km from the Cambodian border in Tambons Khlong Nam Sai, Phansuk, and Thap Phrik. The first leaflet, 3 by 5 inches, was discovered at 2100 on 8 June. It was written in Thai by hand and reporduced by coping machine. The language used was poor, indicating that the writer was a Vietnamese or Heng Samrin soldier. So far it is not clear how the leaflets were spread -- launched in propaganda shells or dropped from a plane.

The leaflets say: "Fraternal military officers and soldiers of the Kingdom of Thailand, the Cambodian revolutionary people and Army have defeated and occupied the last stronghold of the Pol Pot group and the reactionary Son Sann-Sihanouk group. Therefore, you are asked to cooperate in establishing a peaceful and friendly border for the sake of the Cambodian people's peace and that of the Thai people by not allowing remnant Pol Pot and reactionary Sihanouk soldiers to hide in your territory in order to resume killing Cambodian people or undermining their revival. If you continue to support or harbor them the Thai administration must be held responsible for the consequences." The leaflets were unsigned.

According to the report, the Vietnamese leaflets drew considerable comment from the local people as to whether they were intended to interfere with the election in Thailand.

Military authorities have collected the leaflets and are studying their purpose and origin.

HOANG BICH SON STATEMENT ON THAI 'SLANDER' NOTED

OW101628 Hanoi VNA in English 1506 GMT 10 Jun 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA June 10 -- Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son, in a statement in Bangkok on June 6, rejected the Thai press's reports that he had said the artillery bombardment on the Khmer refugee camp No 8 had probably been conducted by the Heng Samrin force but not by Vietnamese troops.

The false reports appeared on the Thai press on June 6 in its coverage of the June 5 meeting between Hoang Bich Son and Thai Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong at the Thai Foreign Ministry's office.

Hoang Bich Son recalled that during the meeting, when the Thai side had mentioned the artillery shelling, he responded by reiterating the May 30, 1986 statement by VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY categorically rejecting the slander that Vietnamese artillery based in Kampuchea had fired on a Kampuchean refugee camp on the Thai soil.

THAILAND BLAMED FOR PROBLEMS WITH LAOS

[Station commentary by editor Dao Nguyen: "The Thai Side Must Demonstrate Its Goodwill in Its Neighborly Relations With the LPDR"]

[Text] The security situation in the LPDR's three villages of Mai, Kang, and Savang in Sayaboury Province bordering Thailand has not yet returned to normal as expected by progressive public opinion in the region and the rest of the world. It is the Thai side that has created this situation.

According to the Lao Foreign Ministry's 6 June 1986 statement, Thai troops, although forced to withdraw unconditionally from these three villages, have continued to occupy many hills inside Laos in the area adjacent to the three villages along the Lao-Thai border. The Thai side has continued to send its troops to fire artillery and to plunder the Lao people's property in the vicinity. It is especially noted that earlier, while being compelled to withdraw its troops from the three villages, the Thai side forced thousands of the Lao to leave their native places in the area of the three villages and go to concentration camps inside Thailand. Defying progressive public opinion in the country and in the region, the Thai authorities have prevented these Lao from returning to their country. Thai troops have been ordered to fire on Lao escaping from the concentration camps in Thailand, killing many of them.

Not only has Thailand rejected the LPDR's legitimate demand for compensation for the damage caused by its acts of aggression to the people in the three villages but it has also arranged for Lao reactionaries to participate in various military exercises conducted by Thai troops in the area along the border of the two countries. The threat of aggression against the Lao border from the Thai side continues.

The Thai side's attitude and actions have run totally counter to the spirit of the joint Thai-Lao communique signed in 1979 which said: The two sides will resolve their differences through peaceful negotiations.

Over the past 2 years, since 6 June 1984 when Thailand sent its troops to occupy the three Lao villages, the Thai side has repeatedly rejected many constructive LPDR proposals for peace talks aimed at resolving satisfactorily the neighborly relations between the two countries on the basis of the spirit of the joint Lao-Thai communique of 1979.

The joint overtures by the LPDR, Vietnam, and the PRK at various Indochinese foreign ministerial conferences in the past and especially at the 10th, 11th, and 12th Indochinese foreign ministerial conference to restore security and foment fine relations in the spirit of mutual understanding between the group of countries on the Indochinese peninsula and Thailand have also not been met by a positive response from Thailand. Thailand's continuation of its hostile attitude toward the LPDR and other countries in the Indochinese peninsula has obviously benefited those international reactionary forces that are seeking says to create confrontation in the hope of continuing to destabilize the regional security situation.

The Thai side's actions have run counter to the aspirations and interests of the Thai people, who are demanding that the Thai authorities restore the long-established friendly and neighborly relations between the Thai and Lao peoples and between the Thai people and those of other countries in the region.

The LPDR's door to peace remains wide open, and in its 6 June 1986 statement the Lao Foreign Ministry once again reaffirmed its unswerving position and proposed that the Thai side send a government-level delegation to talk with a Lao Government delegation in Bangkok, the capital of Thailand, or in Vientiane, the capital of Laos. To ensure the results of this governmental-level talk, the Lao side also proposed that the foreign ministries of both countries nominate officials to meet in advance and prepare for the talk. The LPDR's goodwill for peace and desire to restore good-neighborly relations with Thailand are totally consistent with the trend of our times and with international relations and international law. The LPDR peace proposal has been and is being strongly welcomed and supported by progressive poublic opinion in the region and throughout the world because it represents the best way to end the conflict between Thailand and Laos.

Together with the previous proposals advanced by the countries in the Indochinese peninsula, this LPDR peace proposal also contributes toward resolving the disagreements between Thailand and the Indochinese countries. Whether peace along the Thai-Lao border and neighborly friendship between the two peoples will be restored as desire by the Thai people and other peoples in the region and by progressive public opinion in the world now continues to depend on the goodwill shown by the Thai authorities toward the peace proposal advanced by the LPDR.

HANOI CRITICIZES REAGAN POLICY ON TERRORISM

BK101457 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 10 Jun 86

[Station commentary: "A New Product of U.S. President Reagan"]

[Text] Following the Strategic Defense Initiative -- also known as "star wars" -- U.S. President Reagan has just made a new product -- the strategic initiative on anti-international terrorism. With this initiative, Reagan wants to bring war to what he calls the den of international terrorism, including territories, cities, and even specific residents in a number of sovereign countries in Asia, Africa, and Latin America.

Right after birth, this initiative has been given much fanfare and experimented in the sovereign state of Libya in northern Africa.

According to Western press, in the attack against Libya under the label of anti-international terrorism the Reagan administration conducted a campaign of strategic air raids. From NATO strategic military bases, strategic espionage equipment [and] weapons of strategic forces such as warships, combat planes -- F-111 swingwings -- have been mobilized to attack what is called strategic target -- that is the residence of the Libyan president.

Is this move of the Regan administration antiterrorism? No. On the contrary, this move further shows that the Reagan administration has [as heard] and is taking the dirtiest and cruelest act of state terrorism in mankind's history.

Obviously, the so-called strategic initiative on anti-international terrorism is a disgusted and rueful one, terrorizing any nation in the world disobedient to the United States. With this initiative, Reagan is trying to blur the limit between the relations among sovereign states and acts of foreign intervention and aggression. Acts of provocation and aggression against a sovereign country are considered by Washington those against several individuals, political or military groups in a certain country. By citing this pretext, Reagan wanted to elude criminal war acts. first of all, he whipped up a propaganda campaign of slanders to incite chauvinist spirit in the United States and deceive public opinion in his country and abroad. However, Reagan's criminal hands and smokescreen cannot cover the (?truth).

Right after the air raids on Libya, a wave of strong protests was raised. Public opinion considered the attack the most braze act of international terrorism. They demanded that Reagan -- the worst international terrorist -- stop committing crimes. The test on the anti-international terrorism strategic initiative has failed, but this does not spell out that President Reagan and other warmongers in the United States step back. People wonder how can such an initiative under a beautiful label attract anyone once it is unmasked.

ARMY INVOLVEMENT IN ECONOMIC PROJECTS VIEWED

[Text] Hanoi VNA June 6 -- While standing ready to defend the country from foreign aggression and performing its internationalist duty towards the fraternal peoples of Laos and Kampuchea, the vietnam People's Army (VPA) has actively engaged in economic construction.

Following are the main forms of its activities in this field:

1- Building new economic zones:

-in Vietnam's Central Highlands: the trination border area of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea.

-in southern Vietnam's eastern region: the former resistance zone D and rubber plantations.

-in the Mekong River delta: the Plain of reeds and areas hemmed in by the Tien and Hau rivers.

-in northern Vietnam: army units have taken part in afforestation in service of paper industry and coal-mine building, and in expanding sea polders along the coast of Haiphong and Ha Nam Ninh Province (10,000 more hectares of newly-reclaimed land have been put under crops). In the 1986-90 five-year plan, the VPA will reclaim large areas in northern hilly regions for tea-oil planting.

2- Building maritime economy:

Alongside increasing its fighting capacity, Vietnam's naval units will continue their side-line economic functions. They will organize more fishing trips to open seas and practise seafood processing.

Army units stationed along the coast have also been assigned to boost maritime economy such as fishing and shrimp rearing.

3- Building bridges and roads:

Many regiments or larger units of the VPA have engaged in building bridges and roads in many parts of the country. Since the liberation of South Vietnam in 1975, they have taken part in constructing and repairing the Trans-Vietnam Railway, upgrading the 1,500-km Truong Son highway, and building several motor roads linking Laos's western provinces to Vietnam's ports in service of the fraternal country's socialist construction.

4- Building irrigation works:

Many irrigation works have been built in Central Highlands by local armymen. As a result, wet rice has been grown on many areas at the height of some 1,000 metres above sea level. In the Mekong River delta, sapper units of the V.P.A. have built a system of irrigation canals totalling more than 1,000 km. This has helped water 160,000 hectares of cultivated land and turn large single-cropping areas into double-cropping fields. These canals have facilitated the transport of food and other commodities in the region.

TRUONG CHINH CALLS AT HANDICRAFT EXHIBIT

[Text] Hanoi VNA June 10 -- Truong Chinh, Politiburo member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and president of the State Council, yesterday called at an exhibition of small industry and handicraft products, currently held in the capital city. The exhibition is jointly sponsored by the Vietnam Union of Small Industry and Handicraft Cooperatives, and the Vietnam Plastic Art Workers' Association. On display are more than 2,000 items selected from over 6,000 entries for the recent first national contest of arts and craft producers.

Speaking on the occasion, President Truong Chinh praised the exhibition as demonstration of the emulation movement for designing new models and promoting the quality of products. The small industry and handicraft branch should forge better cooperation with related branches to help restore and develop traditional trades so as to better serve the people's life and export, the president said.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS APPROVES VINH PHU PLAN

[Text] On 8 June, the Council of Ministers approved the preliminary plan for the development and distribution of Vinh Phu Province's production forces for the 1986-2000 period. The preliminary plan of Vinh Phu clearly specifies that in the next 10-15 years, on the basis of developing its favorable geographical position, its potential concerning labor and lands, its industrial establishments, and the existing scientific-technological facilities, the province will concentrate efforts on steadily meeting the targets concerning grain and food and raw materials for industry and export; vigorously developing the chemical industry, textile, paper, and food industry; sectors, and the Thanh Hoa tea industry; exploiting the Thanh Son mine; developing three large industrial centers in Viet-Tri, Phu Ninh, and Lam Thao; forming a system of three urban population centers at Viet Tri, Vinh Yen, and Phu Tho; and linking these centers with the system of socioeconomic district centers and the King Hung temple tourist center.

DEVELOPMENT IN HA SON BINH PROVINCE REVIEWED

[Text] Hanoi VNA June 10 -- Ha Son Binh Province, southwest of Hanoi, has seen a rapid development of its small industry and handicrafts, chiefly for export. The province now has 1,104 establishments engaged in small industry and handicrafts, employing about 100,000 persons. Apart from traditional trades, the province has developed new ones for export purposes such as woolen knitwear, jute carpet, venetian lace. Exports account for nearly one third of the total output value of small industry and handicrafts in the province.

Last year, Ha Dong town, the main small industry and handicraft centre of Ha Son Binh achieved 30 million dong in output value, 4.2 percent above plan. Thanks to the contract quota system, the To Hieu ceramics cooperative has increased its products from 300,000 to 500,000 pieces per year.

The province is investing more capital and technical equipment in the collective sector of small industry and handicrafts: From 30 to 50 per cent of the foreign currency reserve is devoted to the import of material and equipment for small industry and handicrafts with a view to a 10-12 per cent increase in output per year. This year's plan also calls for a six-percent increase of the workforce compared with last year.

MALACANANG 'BACK TO NORMAL' FOLLOWING ALERT

[By Ding Marcelo]

[Text] President Aquino charged yesterday that anti-government demonstrators who tried to take over Malacanang last Sunday were being funded by deposed President Marcos and his associates with ill-gotten wealth.

The President said she smelled tear gas in her new home near Malacanang when anti-riot policemen dispersed the Marcos partisans at the foot of the Ayala bridge. Mrs. Aquino had just moved in one the same day in her new home on Arlegui St., a few hundred meters from Malacanang, when tear gas fumes entered her kitchen as she prepared dinner for members of her family, according to Presidential spokesperson Alice Villadolid.

Asked what the President did afterwards, Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo said "She continued cooking."

Ms. Villadolid told media men that Mrs. Aquino has urged the police and the military to continue exercising maximum restraint in dealing with so-called Marcos "loyalists" who have held demonstrations for the past several Sundays.

The President said she felt anguished and bothered by the trouble created by the demonstrators. "It is clear to me and to others in government, as it must be to many of our citizens, that these 'loyalist' troubles are caused by the deposed President's prodding his followers here by telephone and by other means. It is also clear that ill-gotten money buys demonstrators," Mrs. Aquino said in a statement read by Ms. Villadolid.

Mrs. Aquino said she deplored the ways "in which the former President continues to foment trouble in this ravaged country using his enormous wealth, of which a small portion was publicly made known when the U.S. customs service investigated their cargo."

Mrs. Aquino asked what the Marcos people are fighting for. "Do they want democracy? We already have it. Do they want to bring back a man who has ruled this country for 20 years? The demonstrators should ask themselves what they are fighting for," she said.

Mrs. Aquino also said that she found it disturbing that so many people would aggressively pursue an activity that is causing unnecessary hardships for some people. She also said that she was anguished by the sight of so many demonstrators working for an unclear cause.

Secretary Arroyo, quoting former Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, said the attitude of the government "is to let the children play."

At Malacanang, however, security was tightened over the weekend with a "red alert" issued. Security was beefed up and soldiers were seen carrying high-powered firearms. Everything was back to normal yesterday although a sizable contingent of soldiers was very visible at the Palace grounds.

The street where Mrs. Aquino transferred her residence was closed to both vehicular and pedestrian traffic. Mrs. Aquino also denied that she had sent some emissaries to talk to former President Marcos. She, likewise, said that there is not a grain of truth to the charge that her political campaign was financed by the Catholic Church.

AQUINO LAUNCHES 6-YEAR REFORESTATION PROGRAM

[By Fred M. Lobo]

[Text] President Aquino officially launched yesterday a six-year national reforestation program designed by the Ministry of Natural Resources (MNR) to rehabilitate denuded forests and private lands as well as critical watersheds throughout the country.

The forestation program, estimated to cost P10.8 billion, would primarily establish and develop "production" and "protection" forests to avert forest products shortage and ecological imbalance, MNR officials said. They pointed out that the program has to succeed through government initiative and support of the private sector to check forest destruction and depletion due to logging, and ecological problems due to the deterioration of watersheds.

The President led in the planting of the "Tree for Peace" in commemoration of World Environment Day at the Parks and Wildlife Nature Center in Quezon City.

The launching ceremonies, likewise, saw the signing of a joint agreement on forestation by the Boy Scouts of the Philippines and the ministries of national defense, agriculture, and education.

The forestation program was presented to the President by Natural Resources Minister Ernesto Maceda and MNR Deputy Minister Dante Sarraga, Rolleo Ignacio and Bienvenido Marquez and Forestry Director Ireneo Domingo.

They said that the program is the answer to forest destruction that threatens to wipe out the country's forests by the year 2,000. Likewise, they said that the program will counter inadequate reforestation work in the past which suffered from low survival rate, funding and administrative programs and public apathy.

If successfully implemented, the program envisions adequate supplies of forest raw materials, a viable and progressive wood industry, more jobs for the masses, a more balanced ecology and better life for the Filipinos.

AQUINO DISCUSSES NEW FAMILY PLANNING PROGRAM

HK100117 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 9 Jun 86 p 3

[Text] A new family program for Filipinos is being finalized by the Aquino government to reduce the country's population growth due to its ravaged economy, Malacanang said yesterday.

Malacanang said the program will be carried out in cooperation with the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) and the Ministry of Social Services and Development (MSSD). The President said the program will entail a massive dissemination on birth control among the people.

"If we are able to educate them, then we will have more success as far a controlling the population is concerned. Education plays a major role in family planning," she said.

"The program," she said would make the people aware of what forms of birth control are available to them so they can best plan their family.

"While we are encouraging the citizens to plan their family," the President added, "we also keep in mind that these individuals have the right to decide the size of their family."

She said the government is taking an active role in reducing the population growth of the country because the Philippines now ranks fourth as the most populated countries in the world. [sentence as published]

LAUREL ON CONDITIONS FOR RETURN OF 'CRONIES'

[Text] Manila, June 10 (AFP) -- Exiled associates of deposed President Ferdinand Marcos may return to the Philippines provided they do not destabilize the new government, Vice-President and Foreign Minister Salvador Laurel said Tuesday.

Mr Laurel was reacting to local press reports that former coconut tycoon Eduardo Cojuangco and banana magnate Roberto Benedicto, both living in exile in the United States, wanted to return here. "If I am convinced that they will not come to destabilize the government, I will let them come. But the moment I will doubt it, I will not -- so that is a matter of appraisal and assessment," Mr Laurel told reporters here.

But he said the final decision would have to be made by President Corazon Aquiono, who is an estranged cousin of Mr Cojuangco. The issue may be taken up in Wednesday's cabinet meeting, he added.

The Philippine Government accuses Mr Marcos's "cronies" of having joined him in plundering the economy of up to 10 billion dollars. The Presidential Commission on Good Government is engaged in efforts to recover the fortune, most of which is said to be kept in foreign banks and invested abroad.

Commissioner Raul Daza Tuesday set conditions for Mr Cojuangco's return, including his willingness to fully disclose the extent of Mr Marcos's "hidden wealth," a pledge not to destabilize the Aquino government, and non-immunity from suits outside of his illeged ill-gotten wealth.

The commission has granted immunity from suits to drug magnate Jose Campos, who has turned over to the new government land titles, money, and stock certificates in firms he admitted having held for Mr Marcos.

Mr Daza told a public relations forum here that Mr Cojuangco's case would also hinge on the "reasonableness" of the amount to be settled.

Minister Jovito Salonga, the head of the commission, told a news conference the U.S. Government had filed a motion to defer a court ruling in the U.S. state of Hawaii that seven million dollars-worth of Marcos assets be returned. The assets were seized by U.S. Customs when Mr Marcos fled to Hawaii following a popular uprising that toppled him in February.

Meanwhile, government television reported here that three service commanders under Mr Marcos were to be summoned by the military's anti-graft board next week to answer charges that they illegally acquired wealth during their tenure. The station identified the officers as former Army chief Major General Josephus Ramas, former Air Force chief Major General Vicente Piccio, and Rear Admiral Simeon Alejandro, the former Navy chief -- all of whom were retired by Mrs Aquino shortly after she assumed power. Members of the graft board could not be reached for comment.

ONGPIN DISCUSSES PROPOSED TAX REFORM MEASURES

[By reporter Conrado R. Banal III]

[Text] The Aquino government will soon introduce major changes in the tax system which will bring it closer to reaching an agreement with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) on the country's economic program.

Some 30 tax measures are awaiting the approval of President Aquino, according to Finance Minister Jaime V. Ongpin, who headed the government panel in last week's talks with an IMF team. The changes mainly seek to "reform" the tax system, Ongpin emphasized, saying the measures which will lead to revenue losses for the government outnumber those which will give additional income. He nevertheless disclosed that the government expects to increase its tax revenues this year as a result of the changes.

Through the measures, the government intends to simplify the tax system, give it a broader base and make it more equitable, Ongpin said.

Some of the measures call for:

-- The imposition of duties on goods covered by the import liberalization program (The rates will vary between 10 percent and 50 percent, depending on the item. The idea is to align prices of imported goods with those made locally to provide local industries protection against an influx of imports which the liberalization program may trigger. The duties will be phased out gradually);

-- The removal of export taxes (This will help promote exports to increase the country's dollar earnings. The IMF recommended this);

-- The introduction of a single business income tax rate (This is to make the corporate tax system simpler and more equitable, Ongpin said. Also, government figures indicate that a large number of firms are declaring incomes of just below P100,000. Firms earnings below this figure pay only a 25 percent income tax, while those with higher incomes pay 35 percent);

-- The scrapping of tax exemptions granted to firms through presidential directives during the Marcos regime (Ongpin said however the tax incentives granted by the Board of Investments will be retained);

-- An increase in the specific tax on petroleum products, cigarettes and liquors;

-- The creation of an amnesty program for Filipinos wanting to bring back assets from abroad, and those with pending cases with the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) regarding tax assessments (For assets brought back from abroad, the tax will be 10 percent. Ongpin said this measure is in response to the fears expressed by Filipinos with assets abroad who want to invest here. These investors want to avoid questions from the BIR. Ongpin disclosed that there is already a group which wants to avail of this amnesty program. It is buying one of the government-acquired commercial banks);

-- The raising of the cut-off level for individual tax exemptions; and

-- The elimination of the requirement for married couples to file joint income tax statements.

Ongpin said the measures are "parallel" with the recommendations of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) tax committee.

The Cabinet approved "in principle" last Wednesday the NEDA agenda for economic reforms which was based on the working paper submitted by the presidential economic task force made up of representatives from the government and private sector groups.

The IMF actually had a hand in drawing up the tax reforms which the Aquino government wants to implement. An IMF team was here last week to discuss with the government these tax measures. It was agreed in the Tokyo consultative group meeting a couple of weeks ago that the IMF and the government should "discuss further" this year's budget and the tax reform package the government wants to adopt.

The budget and the tax package are major aspects of the overall economic program which the Aquino government and the IMF will discuss by mid-July. An IMF-government agreement on the budget and tax measures will pave the way for the resumption of talks on the economic program.

The IMF's grant of a standby credit line to the Philippines will depend on its agreeing to such an economic program. Moreover, the Aquino government can only expect to raise all the foreign aid and concessional loans it wants this year after it finalizes the economic program with the IMF.

During the Tokyo meeting, foreign loans and aid committed to the Philippines amounted to only $770 million. The Aquino government is seeking more than $1 billion to help cover its 1986 financing gap of P32 billion -- P22 billion to fund the shortfall in its budget (the budget deficit) and P10 billion to service its foreign debt.

Ongpin said the funding assistance which the Philippines expects to get from abroad this year is merely "transitional" in nature. Lenders to the Philippines want an assurance that the country can finance its growth in the future from domestic sources. Ongpin indicated that the "comprehensive tax reform package" is important to the Philippine economy's becoming less dependent on foreign funds for its growth.

PIMENTEL URGES NULLIFICATION OF NEGROS PARTITION

HK061434 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 6 Jun 86 p 11

[By F.V. Maragay]

[Excerpt] Local Government Minister Aquilino Pimentel Jr said yesterday he favors a move to nullify a law creating Negros del Norte as a separate province carved out of Negros Occidental.

Pimentel said that the then ruling Kilusang Bagong Lipunan (KBL) railroaded the passage of the parliamentary measure seeking the partitioning of Negros Occidental when it prematurely conducted voting on the measure without first hearing the arguments being put up by the opposition in the defunct Batasang Pambansa.

Pimentel, who was then minority floor leader, and then MP Wilson Gamboa, led the opposition move to defeat the motion on the ground that it would be detrimental to the interest of the local populace.

The local government minister said he has submitted a formal comment to Solicitor General Sedfrey Ordonez who will present the government's position on a petition filed with the Supreme Court questioning the legality of the partitioning of Negros Occidental. He said that even the plebiscite conducted last Jan 3 on the creation of the separate province "appears to have been rigged."

Negros del Norte was formally created by virtue of Proclamation 273 signed by former President Marcos on the basis of the results of a plebiscite which ratified Batas Pambansa 885 which called for its creation. Three cities -- Cadiz, Silay and San Carlos -- were absorbed by the new province along with eight municipalities.

The Commission on Elections, which conducted the plebiscite, reported that out of the 195,134 total votes cast, 164,734 (84.42 percent) voted in favor of the creation of the new province while only 30,400 rejected it.

Asked how the government can nullify the partitioning of Negros Occidental, Pimentel said this can be done by a "legislative action" with the approval of the President.

Pimentel also said he will move for the abolition of the municipality of Pandami in Sulu province because it lacks the capacity to support basic services. "The municipality's income is not even enough to pay the salaries of local officials and personnel," he said. If Pimentel's proposal is approved, the component barangays of Pandami wil be returned to Siasi town.

Pimentel said there is a need for consolidation, instead of fragmentation, of local government units "to make them more viable and responsive to people's needs."

CON-COM MEMBERS SUPPORT REGIONAL AUTONOMY

HK110555 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 10 Jun 86 p 28

[By Tara S. Singh]

[Text] There is a consensus among members of the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] to grant autonomy to regional governments.

Commissioner Jose Nelledo, chairman of the committee on local governments, said his committee supports government decentralization by granting local governments more autonomy and power to manage their own affairs.

Under the proposed autonomous government concept, regions will be given power to collect, retain and spend their own taxes. They can also establish their own legislature to enact local laws. With this, local governments will be more attuned to the needs of the residents.

Nolledo said the autonomous regional governments will "be treated equally." He said Mindanao or any other autonomous regional government will not be given special treatment.

At present there are 13 regions in the country. A 14th, the Cordillera Autonomous Region, is being proposed.

Meanwhile, the Con-Com is considering another venue for convenience and security reasons. Acting floor leader Napoleon Rama said a good number of Con-Com commissioners are asking for moving out of the Batasang Pambansa building in Quezon City. Rama said many Con-Com members wanted to hold session instead at the old legislative building in Manila.

Rama said Quezon City Mayor Brigido Simon Jr. told him that the present Batasang Pambansa building is "very hard to secure." There are reports that "unfriendly elements" including Marcos loyalists have planned to disturb the Con-Com sessions, he added.

Commissioner Lugum Uka said there is a clear and present necessity to move out of the present Con-Com session site because it is too far and inconvenient for members. He then suggested that Con-Com sessions be held at the Philippine International Convention Center.

Con-Com vice president Ambrosio Padilla opposed the move. He said there is no need, no clear and present danger at the Con-Com sessions site. He said the military and the police have given their word to adequately protect and secure the present site. "We will take the risk if any," Padilla said.

Commissioner Jose Colayco suggested that a special committee be created to study the matter.

FASTER RELEASE OF U.S. AID SOUGHT BY GOVERNMENT

[By Conrado R. Banal III]

[Text] The Aquino government wants the United States to release some $700 million worth of funding assistance to the Philippines faster.

This assistance is being extended to the country in return for the US's use of its military bases here. Some $500 million of this fund is still to be released and the government is eyeing this to finance its P110-billion "growth" budget for the year.

Finance Minister Jaime V. Ongpin said such an accelerated disbursement was actually offered to the Aquino government.

The offer, he said, was made by U.S. Congressman Stephen Solarz, who heads the House Subcommittee on Asia-pacific Affairs and who is known to be a close friend of the late Benigno Aquino Jr., President Aquino's husband, Solarz recently sent a cable to President Aquino. Ongpin said the government "of course welcomed it."

Asked whether the Aquino government wants to arrange bridging loans from abroad while it waits for the release of the foreign funding committed to it, Ongpin said such loans remain as options. But he added that at the moment, the government has no plans to seek such loans.

The U.S. Government in 1984, when the Marcos government was having a hard time getting loans from the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and foreign banks, gave the country bridging loans. These loans were to be repaid out of the Philippines's drawings from its standby credit line with the IMF.

Out of the $770 million in indicative and committed loans the Aquino government got during the World Bank-sponsored consultative group meeting in Tokyo early this month, some $250 million came from the U.S. Government. The U.S. commitment includes $200 million in economic support fund (ESF), which the Philippines considers as rental for the U.S. military bases here, and $50 million in food aid. An advanced disbursement of the U.S. military base package nevertheless can help the Aquino government fill up its foreign funding needs this year.

It wants some $1.08 billion in foreign aid and concessional loans, but so far it only has some $570 million in firm commitments from foreign governments and multilateral agencies such as the World Bank and Asian Development Bank (ADB).

Ongpin reported recently to President Aquino that the World Bank consultative group subcommittee for the Philippines estimated that some $770 million in foreign loans would be extended to the country this year. But about $200 million of these loans, including a quick disbursing loan -- a commodity loan -- from Japan's Overseas Economic Cooperation fund (OECF), are to be committed after the IMF approves the government's economic program.

MARCOS TERMS REPORT ON WEALTH RETURN 'LIE'

HK110510 Hong Kong AFP in English 0503 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] Washington, Jun 11 (AFP) -- Ex-President Ferdinand Marcos on Tuesday night dismissed as "a complete lie and fabrication," a report that he was willing to return more than 2.1 billion dollars to the Philippine Government.

In an interview with AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE Tuesday, Manila Lawyer Juan David -- a former attorney of President Corazon Aquino's murdered husand, Benigno -- said the exiled Mr Marcos was ready to turn over 2.1 billion dollars, equivalent to 70 per cent of his fortune, "to carve his niche in history" and "buy peace of mind."

Mr David said that in five days of talks with Mr Marcos in Honolulu last month he had convinced the deposed president that it was futile to topple Mrs Aquino, who assumed power after a peaceful revolution.

In a statement telephoned later from Hawaii to AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE here by a friend of Mr Marcos, the ex-president said the report was "a complete lie and fabrication." Mr Marcos said he had a "copy of the matters that I talked about with Mr David including a tape recording and notes in his handwriting. And I refused to talk with him about any funds and assets." He added: "I have no intention to negotiate about funds or assets." The ex-president said he would ask Mr David to "issue a statement on this matter," otherwise he might take legal action against the attorney.

KBL LEADERS DEPLORE DISPERSAL OF MARCHERS

HK110432 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 10 Jun 86 pp, 20

[By C. Valmoria, Jr.]

[Text] Kilusang Bagong Lipunan leaders deplored yesterday the violent dispersal by military and police forces of Marcos partisans, who, they said, tried to march to Malacanang only to air their grievances.

The Partido Nacionalista ng Pilipinas (PNP) warned the Aquino government that the series of forcible dispersals of Marcos rallies are beginning to show a "pattern for repression" that contradicts the civil rights guaranteed by its own "Freedom Constitution."

Reacting to reports that scores of marchers were hurt and five others were stabbed seriously, the KBL leaders said "neither peace socio-economic recovery nor reconciliation is possible under an administration that has embarked on "a course of vengeance, hate, confusion, and divisiveness." [quotation marks as published]

Thousands of pro-Marcos supporters were said to have been driven back last Sunday by soldiers and policemen with tear gas, smoke bombs, water cannons, truncheons, and barbed wire barricades set up a few blocks away from Malacanang.

Former MP Arturo M. Tolentino, KBL titular head: former Speaker Nicanor Yniguez, acting KBL president; KBL secretary general Manuel Garcia; former MP Salvador Britanico, and former Assemblyman Antonio Tupas, said in a joint statement: "The only alternative to this political chaos, economic insecurity, and government instability, is to hold general elections for president down to the municipal level as early as possible.

"Let the poeple decide once and for all if they are willing to put up with the Aquino government and its policies; after all it prides itself at having been catapulted to national leadership through people power."

Former Labor Minister Blas F. Ople, acting PNP chairman, said the real test of freedom "is freedom for the thought that you hate, not for the thought you like."

Ople said the Aquino government, rather than resort to forcible dispersals with the use of weapons prohibited in the Public Assemble Act, "should not disdain the use of more effective means of promoting understanding such as the dialogue."

"She has offered a dialogue with the CCP[Communist Party of the Philippines]-NPA and the Moro National Liberation Front," Ople said. "She can do no less with the Marcos 'loyalists.'"

ENRILE ORDERS PROBE INTO VIOLENCE-MARRED PROTEST

HK110605 Manila THE MANILA EVENING POST in English 9 Jun 86 pp 1, 8

[By Ed Malay]

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile this morning ordered a ful-dress probe into the circumstances which led to the violence that marred what otherwise was a peaceful demonstration march by Marcos supporters yesterday.

Enrile's instructions were for the military and police commanders who were in charge of the various civil disturbance units that were present in yesterday's demonstration to submit reports on the incident which left scores of rallyists wounded, some of whom were described as being in serious condition.

At the same time, leaders of the so-called Loyalist Movement also announced their intention to bring to the attention of Amnesty International what they preceived to be gross violations of human rights specifically one one's right to express his views and the right to a peaceful assembly.

Enrile's order to investigate the violent clash between government troops and loyalist marchers was precipitated by reports which showed that earlier reports the marchers were set to attack Malacanang Palace were fabricated.

It will be recalled that Enrile had earlier ordered military troops to leave the Marcos supporters alone and to treat them with understanding and compassion, and that force shall be used only when the situation warrants the use and employment of dispersal operation.

Former San Juan Mayor Joseph Estrada, who was one of the leaders in yesterday's demonstration, told THE MANILA EVENING POST that the demonstrators only wanted to march from Liwasang Bonifacio to Freedom Park, a place designated by the government itself as Manila's Hyde Park, where one could express himself freely.

Estrada said the decision to march peacefully to freedom Park was made by the leaders of the demonstrators in line with Enrile's earlier pronouncements that no permit was needed for a rally at Freedom Park for so long as the rally is conducted in a peaceful manner.

The former San Juan town executive said the march was peaceful and that there was no intention to attack the Palace. He said Brig. Gen. Ramon Montano, Capital Command [Capcom] chief, and Brig. Gen. Alfredo Lim, Western police superintendent, have no right to disperse a peaceful assembly conducted within the terms specified by Enrile.

The employment of what witnesses described as harsh and brutal measures by military troopers and policemen in yesterday's dispersal operations was also criticized by certain quarters. These sources said Capcom soldiers went as far as throwing tear gas cannisters at even those who jumped to the Pasig River to escape truncheon wielding troopers.

The other leaders of the loyalist group like lawyer Oliver Lozano added that none of the demonstrators in yesterday's rally was armed. Lozano said the firearms allegedly confiscated from some of the demonstrators by Gen. Montano which precipitated the order to disperse the march have been planted. He said these alleged rallyists who were in possession of firearms were in fact police informers who were ordered to infiltrate the ranks of the demonstrators. The presence of these informers and their subsequent arrest for possession of firearms, he said, will this give the military troops the reason to attack and disperse the demonstrators.

Former Manila Councilor Chito Lucero who was with Estrada who sought refuge at the Shakey's restaurant along San Marcelino said policemen attacked the demonstrators even after they had sought safety inside the restaurant. Lucero joined Estrada in questioning the policy of maximum tolerance by Mrs. Corazon Aquino stressing that yesterday's violent incident was definitely not within the purview of such a policy.

Majority of the people who join the weekly rallies, Lucero and Estrada said, were those who have lost their jobs because of the repressive policies of Aquino's government. These people, they said, definitely have every right to express their feelings as they appealed for understanding from the government.

Leaders of the Marcos supporters said the weekly rallies will not stop and will be held as scheduled every Sunday with or without a permit. The "loyalists" reported that many of them were forced to jump from Ayala Bridge to the Pasig River to escape from the dispersal teams of Capcom who were beating up the marchers with their truncheons in a bid to stop them from proceeding to Freedom Park near Malacanang.

The dispersal teams reportedly met them along the Ayala Bridge and P. Casal street, where they were mercilessly gassed and beaten up, sparing no one, even children and women. This writer saw countless marchers bleeding profusely and screaming in pain.

Agitators were also reported seen at the site sowing conflict between the police and the "loyalist" marchers. A male agitator was arrested by a Capcom police team. The wounded marchers are seeking medical assistance since most of them cannot afford to pay the hospital bills.

ARMED FORCES REFORMERS TO EXPAND MEMBERSHIP

HK101555 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 10 Jun 86 p 26

[Text] Reformists in the Armed Forces have decided to expand their membership nationwide and serve as the "second conscience" within the military. Their new thrust is to actively recruit more members, set up camp and unit chapters, integrate the reservists and intergrees into Reform AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] Movement (RAM), and elect a national leadership.

"We want to have a national character," said Lt. Col. Victor Batac, vice-chairman of the steering committee, which is the highest decision-making body of the movement. He added that the committee members represent only Metro Manila.

Some RAM members envision a steering committee that will include representatives from various regional chapters, which have gained strength after the February military revolt. Some seats will also be allotted to representatives of the reservists and those of the intergrees.

A number of organizations of reservists and integrees were formed after the revolt; some had grievances against the second-class citizen treatment they got from the Philippine Military Academy (PMA)-dominated officer corps of the AFP; and others claimed that key positions have all been given to PMA graduates.

Batac said the RAM which is composed mostly of PMA alumni, has "no problems" with integrees in the various regions because they are incorporated into the RAM chapters. It is only in Metro Manila that the split is showing.

RAM members have started talking to the reservists and looked into their problem of security of tenure. "Their life hangs because their tour of active duty has to be extended yearly," the RAM officer said. "They are susceptible to political pressure."

Batac, however, thinks the organizations of the reservists and integrees have limited following and are motivated by personal reasons. By RAM's experience, Batac said, it is easier to organize under the new government because of the liberal atmosphere. Many "closet reformists" have come out in the open and there is no fear of reprisal.

Lt. Diosdado Valeroso, RAM spokesman, said that the aim of tthis new organizational drive is to help strengthen the reforms instituted by the AFP and assist in making these seep down into the field.

"We first had to settle internal problems. There were also debates -- and this issue was in the agenda for five meetings -- whether we should self-destruct or not. A minority was for discontinuance of RAM," he said. Those advocating this view argued that the RAM, in the face of military reforms, will become redundant.

Batac sees RAM to serve as a "second conscience." He believes the movement should continue and make known its position on issues affecting the Armed Forces such as extension of officers.

Other military officers sympathetic to the movement have second thoughts about revitalizing RAM. They see it is a divisive force. They argue that the New Armed Forces of the Philippines should be an entire reform movement.

Batac however said RAM must consolidate its ranks and institutionlize reforms. After this RAM can self-destruct, he added.

A US defense department official -- Col. William Weiss -- observed, "Within the AFP, RAM leaders seem to sense that their special situation carries with it the potential for sowing disunity."

Weiss wrote a paper, "The Philippine Military After Marcos," for a seminar on the Philippines held last April 30 and sponsored by the Washington Institute for Values in Public Policy, a research organization. Weiss said the RAM members constitute a force in the AFP "with influence beyond what their status as mid-level officers would imply ... RAM has ... continued to play an informal role in military affairs ... Its leaders have generally maintained vigilance over government and military policymaking ... They serve to remind that RAM will remain vigilant."

Some RAM members consider the strengthening of RAM as a means to make the AFP an effective army aginst the insurgents and the loyalists. Others observe however, the RAM should not undertake a separate effort from the AFP because the new government is responsive to reforms. "We just want to take the initiative," a reformist said. But those outside the military, however, welcome the move of RAM.

DEFENSE MINISTRY FORMS ANTI-INSURGENCY FORCE

[Text] The Ministry of National Defense is forming a special military force to counteract insurgency and urban insurrection fomented by various Marcos loyalists groups. Based on memoranda of Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile to New Armed Forces of the Philippines [NAFP] Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, the "appropriate NAFP unit" to be activated will provide security in all ports and airports and maintain a strong and well-trained counteraction force.

Enrile in a separate memorandum said the defense establishment should take a "more active role in preventing the introduction into the country of materials and equipment that may be used to destabilized the government."

A member of Reform the AFP Movement (RAM) told BUSINESS DAY that RAM members are being tapped to play key roles in the proposed urban-based anti-terrorist force. The proposed special force has been discussed in top level circles of the defense ministry and the NAFP, the source added.

As envisioned, the unit will be directly under the defense ministry and will be based in Camp Aquinaldo. It will be composed of anti-terrorist units of various service commands and their specialized equipment. These units will undergo common extensive training to include urban guerrilla wargare and counterinsurgency in the urban areas.

With a single, elite antiterrorist force in Manila, the reformist said, operation against insurgents and loyalists would be faster and more effective.

A reformist said this proposed group was partly patterned after the American experience. During the crisis in Iran, U.S. forces had to reduce American hostages, but it took time to decide what antiterrorist group would be sent to do the mission because there were many of them.

A prominent RAM member painted this scenario: The New People's Army (NPA) will launch offensives in the city. He said he based his forecast on the fact that the NPA has learned the value of urban insurrection, especially after the February military revolt that helped topple Ferdinand Marcos.

Another reformist thinks the loyalists may go for a "prestige activity" in Metro Manila to show their force, probably an assassination. But he does not share the view that the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) and the NPA will be militarily active in the city.

Sources in the AFP said several factors in delaying the formation of the proposed unit: Budgetary constraints and difficulty in getting people from various commands. "This may also be misinterpreted by Malacanang," the military souce sadded. But even without the unit, BUSINESS DAY learned more than a thousand firearms (M-14s) have been allotted to some of the proposed counter-action force proponents, in addition to a number of armored vehicles in Metro Manila.

ILOCOS SUR OIG ASKS FOR MILITARY INTERVENTION

HK100710 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 8 Jun 86 p 3

[Text] The newly-designated officer-in-charge of Ilocos Sur, Sally Villinueva, is asking higher military command to immediately relieve the entire PC [Philippine Constabulary] command in her province in the face of tension now gripping the area because of the refusal of incumbent Governor Luis Chavit Singson to vacate his post. Reports have it that Singson, together with his about 500 armed followers and some soldiers of the Ilocos Sur PC command, have been barricading the provincial capitol to prevent her formal assumption to the governorship at all cost.

Villanueva told newsmen in a press conference yesterday that Singson has been airing over the radio that he will never yield the provincial government even with "threats of arrest of death itself." Villanueva also decried the partiality and onesidedness of the PC command when the soldiers numbering 300 and 500 policemen did not lift a finger to stop Singson's followers from attcking her group as she tried to cross the barricades put up by Singson's men in front of the provincial capitol in Vigan, Ilocos Sur last June 2.

In a video tape shown to reporters, the followers of Singson could be seen jeering and shoving off Villanueva's group in an apparent move to provoke her followers. In the ensuing melee, the tape showed, hundreds of Singson's men headed by the former's son, identified as Randy Singson, over-turning the lead car of Villanueva's motorcade. "The sad part of it, when we were being stoned and attacked by Singson's men which lasted for almost 30 minutes, the military officers, led by Maj. Conrado Epregrino and Col. Wilfred Nicolas, the provincial commander of Ilocos sur, did nothing to stop it," Villanueva said. Villanueva, however, clarified that she is now asking the military higher ups to take action to help restore peace and order in Ilocos and not merely to install her in the governorship. If the authorities could maintain peace in our province, she said, she could easily assume her office with the help of her people.

ILOCOS SUR SITUATION VIEWED 'VERY VOLATILE'

HK110526 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 10 Jun 86 p 3

[Text] Local government Minister Aquilino Pimentel told newsmen yesterday that the prevailing condition now in Ilocos Sur is very volatile with incumbent Governor Luis Chavit Singson and some of his armed followers still holding out at the provincial capitol. To diffuse violence, Pimentel said, he has asked Bishop Lopez to continue holding the dialogue between Singson and the newly-designated OIC [Officer-in-Charge] Sally Villanueva to thresh out the problems.

I was told Singson was amenable to the appointment of anybody to the governorship except Villanueva, Pimentel said. But he said his ministry cannot allow itself to be dictated upon by Singson.

What is of primary importance, he said, in appointing local officials in Ilocos Sur is the interests of the people and not the persons. "IF it is necessary to ue extra force to help install Villanueva, Pimentel said, the government will use whatever means available to oust Singson and his followers, numbering about 1,000 in the provincial capitol," Pimentel said. Pimental however made it clear that there has never been an attempt to replace Villanueva. Villanueva has already been officially installed as governor of Ilocos Sur.

With the appointment of Villanueva as governor, Pimentel said, she can now issue checks for the disbursement of public funds.

APPEAL FAILS TO ADDRESS 'ROOTS OF DISSIDENCE'

HK091224 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 4 Jun 86 p 4

[Column by Renato Constantino: "Insurgency Blues"]

[Text] In her Davao and Cebu sorties, President Aquino reiterated her appeal to communist insurgents to return to the fold of society, reminding them that democracy has been restored as a consequence of the end of the Marcos dictatorship. The chief executive offered rebel returnees rehabilitation, housing, livelihood or employment opportunities.

While these offers may be deemed alluring to those who ran to the hills because of economic misery or military and warlord persecution, they address purely personal economic needs. She said nothing about the political roots of dissidence.

The president seems to be under the impression that the insurgency was primarily a struggle against Marcos and that the demise of that administration automatically removed the rationale for continued armed dissidence.

With Marcos out, she expects the rebels to accept her generous assistance toward their individual rehabilitation. Those who do not do so must be "hard core" ideologues who have opted for violence to gain power for its own sake.

The presidential attitude toward those motivated by political and ideological reasons was reflected in her carefully-phrased ultimatum, which echoed her UP [University of the Philippines] speech. She said, "I shall call for a ceasefire for a definite and inextendable period during which I hope negotiations will take place that will result in an honorable and lasting peace that will address the legitimate demands of the insurgents without detracting from the security of the people, the stability of the new democracy or the honor of the armed forces... I shall assume that the insurgent leadership exercises complete control over their men in the field so that any gross violation of the ceasefire will be taken by my government as a deliberate act and a signal for the resumption of hostilities."

These are indeed serious words, parallel to the statement of Ambassador Bosworth who recently said that hardcore insurgents "will have to be dealt with eventually through other means."

Whether the armed struggle is a valid weapon at this historical stage or not may be a debatable question. But the fact is that those who have opted for this type of struggle have political rather than personal reasons for doing so. The insurgency is an expression of protest against policies and institutions responsible for the economic and social ills that plague Philippine society. Such rebels cannot be enticed by offers of rehabilitation. They appear to be cautious in their attitude towards the new government, perceiving that despite the installation of a popular new leader, the forces at work behind the scenes and the institutions responsible for past iniquities, are very much present. Moreover the basic issue of foreign intervention has not been met.

We quote from the published statement of an NDF [National Democratic Front] spokesman: "We grant the good faith of Cory Aquino. But whatever her subjective wishes, we also have to consider the subjective wishes of the U.S. and the reactionaries in her Cabinet who are even now placing obstacles to reforms being made... What will Mrs Aquino do about them? The people are waiting."

A central preoccupation of the rebels is the military which they feel is still the same institution that was utilized by the dictatorship in its program of repression. The bias is of course mutual and is reflected in the increasing confrontation between the two.

The President's statements reveal a predisposition to shield the military from demands that justice be meted out to some of their men for human rights violations committed in the past. We may presume that the insurgents were not reassured by the President's concern for the "honor of the armed forces" whom she refers to as "my soldiers."

In her press conference in Cebu she replied to a question on amnesty for military violators of human rights: "...if this country is to get going, most of us, if not all of us, will just have to forgive and forget." This is in stark contrast to her previous statement that reconciliation must be accompanied by justice. She also made a revealing slip in referring to rebel activity as a "meaningless insurgency."

One can understand that the president must do some tricky tightrope walking when it comes to the Armed Forces, but when does balancing end and adoption of the military's views begin?

Negotiations cannot succeed without a sincere hearing of the rebels' political views and goals. She will certainly not agree with quite a number of these though some could be acceptable. For negotiations to move forward perhaps the other side would at least have to feel confident that were they to opt for a cessation of armed struggle, they would not have to contend with hostile CHDF [Civilian Home Defense Force] fanatic sects or members of the military and that they will be allowed peacefully and freely to try to convince fellow Filipinos of the merits of their position. Without the promise of a pluralistic society where their political idea can have a hearing, no road is open except the military one.

The President said that the cause of dissidence is poverty. This is true. But the causes of poverty must be reviewed in a wholistic manner, poverty must be analyzed not only within the context of the Marcos despoliation of the national wealth, but also in the light of foreign-imposed economic policies. A piecemeal and hortatory approach to a historic problem can not bring about long term solutions to the dissidence it has spawned.

CEBU NPA EXPRESS FEARS ABOUT POLITICAL MINISTER

HK091542 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 7 Jun 86 p 16

[By Jose D. Logarta]

[Text] Cebu City -- The local committee of the Communist Party of the Philippines expressed fears that Political Affairs Minister Antonio V. Cuenco may be undermining ongoing negotiations between the government and communist rebels with his "unfounded" and derogatory statements on the New People's Army. Cuenco, however, said he was not guilty of disseminating wrong information.

In a statement, the CPP-Cebu accused Cuenco of deliberately maligning the NPA, citing an instance wherein Cuenco prematurely announced a ceasefire in Central Visayas and later publicized the surrender of 34 alleged NPA rebels in Catmon, Cebu whom the CPP disowns.

It also rapped Cuenco for saying that Cebu "has been cleansed of the communist-led insurgency" as was reported in this paper, and for claiming in an interview with a local daily here that "the NPA does not operate in Cebu and that so-called rebels roaming around the mountain barangay here are mostly plain bandits."

On the contrary, the statement read, the NPA is now waging armed struggle both in the cities and countrysides of the province. However, its units maintain a "defensive" posture in line with the party central committee's policy on selected targets. In its most recent operations, the NPA said it meted "death penalties" to at least seven persons who had "blood debts" to the people. The seven included members of the Civilian Home Defense Force (CHDF), alleged military informers and intelligence operatives and Tadtad cultists.

For his part, Cuenco said in a long-distance telephone interview with a local paper here, that he never said there was an official ceasefire in Central Visayas. He said he only meant an "unofficial" ceasefire, as there was no shooting between the rebels and government troops. Cuenco also denied contact with the CPP-NPA in Cebu.

NPA FOUNDER URGES MILITARY TO PROVE SINCERITY

HK090629 Manila THE MANILA EVENING POST in English 6 Jun 86 pp 1, 6

[Text] The big problem that would snag the forthcoming conference between the government and the rebels to declare a ceasefire and put an end to long-drawn and costly guerrilla war is the condition that the military confine the soldiers to quarters.

This condition was previously opposed by Gen. Fidel Ramos, armed forces chief of staff and Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, both contending that the condition is not only impractical but dangerous.

The founder of the New People's Army (NPA) Bernabe Buscayno, in a statement in Cebu City following a report that the top leadership of the communists and President Aquino had agreed on holding a meeting soon to end the 17-year old guerrilla war, threatened to rejoin the NPA should the military continue operations against the rebels. "The first step the military must take in solving the insurgency problems," Buscayno said, "is for the soldiers to pull out of the hills and confine themselves to quarters." That, he said, would prove that the government is sincere in its call for peace.

Buscayno was one of many political detainees released after Aquino assumed power to fulfill a promise she made during the campaign. The insurgent leader has been vocal against many of Aquino's policies, one of which is the land reform program which he said is still strongly fascistic.

It is presumed that former Satur Ocampo [as published], whom the communist party of the Philippines and the NPA have chosen to be their representative to the crucial talks will insist on approval of Buscayno's proposal if ceasefire is to be had.

In a press conference at Malacanang, the Chief Executive said she would name the representatives to the important meeting within 48 hours, indicating that this time the meeting with the rebels, put on and off before, would now be pushed through. But the possibilities of both parties failing to agree on a common ground for a ceasefire has loomed with the Buscayno condition, even before negotiations had started.

Aquino yesterday said that a military crackdown on the rebels would be declared if efforts for a reconciliation which was not possible in six months. She said, however, that all peaceful means will be used before drastic measures will be taken against the insurgents.

EX-CPP HEAD DISCUSSES PRESENT PARTY STANCE

PM091250 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 6 Jun 86 p 12

[Interview with Philippine Communist Party Founder Jose Maria Sison by Pierre Salmon -- date and place not given]

[Text] "The main thing is to keep your sense of humor," he said with a smile. He has obviously succeeded in doing so. Some 9 years of imprisonment, most of the time in solitary confinement, and systematic torture have not broken the man or the militant. The Philippine Communist Party [CPP] founder was released as a result of extremely popular political events. He theoretically holds no official post but has since played the role of standard-bearer for a party which is still clandestine and which carries out a guerrilla war and mass political work simultaneously.

With a smile on his lips, Jose Maria Sison, known affectionately as "Joma" in the Philippines, analyzed the fall of Marcos, who he said, was trapped by the crisis. "The trade deficit and the debt reduced his ability to satisfy the big bourgeoisie and increased conflicts of interests in the ruling class. The murder of Senator Aquino in this context was a fatal mistake. It was an attack on the bourgeoisie and led both the church and the United States to think about who could take over from Marcos, although in the long term. It was the people's involvement which speeded things up. Without that Marcos could have remained in power for a little longer."

He compared the Aquino government to a blurred film. "You can see some things clearly, others badly, and things move. Cory Aquino has inherited the problems which brought down Marcos; she has to reckon with the military, who have succeeded in exonerating themselves, and with a people's movement which is still very active. The people still admire her greatly but are not prepared to 'go home'. All this forms a heterogeneous, inconsistent whole within which everybody is trying to gain the upper hand. But this government is antifascist, and antidictatorial, and we are prepared to give it a chance. We encourage its positive aspects without forgetting its underlying, pro-American, pro-bourgeois tendencies, but we think that anything could still happen -- the best and the worst."

Indeed, in view of the enormous economic problems besetting the country, the lack of capital, and the increasing number of enterprises which are closing, Corazon Aquino's extraordinary popularity could rapidly vanish. "Everything will depend on her decisions. For the time being she is proving very naive and strongly influenced by the Americans in the economic sphere: She believes in free enterprise and competition and thinks that people's misfortunes are due to the greed of a few people. This is the reason for her appeals to foreign investors and her request for a moratorium on strikes.... May Day showed that the workers are much more aware of what is at stake, are not prepared to trust blindly and are capable of winning major victories. The victories on antifeudal and anti-imperialist measures still have to be consolidated, and this is the revolutionary movement's role."

The Philippines, a rich country regarded as the "pearl of Asia," is in fact subjected to an American semicolonial status which focuses on agriculture and labor.

"To change this situation, we need agrarian reform and national industry linked to our agriculture. At present, a large proportion of capital is still frozen by the feudalists and we do not have a domestic market.... The agrarian reform would solve these two problems, it would inspire the peasant masses, and industry would enable us to escape the inevitable debt."

Indeed, the Philippines is among the most heavily debt-ridden countries in the world. In this connection Jose Maria, like Fidel Castro, thinks that these debts should be canceled, but this is a long-term, strategic objective. Meanwhile he described the position adopted by the Philippines Government as interesting: only repaying loans which have "been useful to the people." "This is a stage which makes it possible to negotiate and increase the people's awareness."

In the same way he drew a careful distinction between strategy and tactics, between the long and the medium term, on the subject of the U.S. bases. "We demand their withdrawal. But we are not making it a priority. It will take an extremely strong people's movement to secure this and we are not seeking confrontation with the United States. On the other hand the government might very quickly decide on their withdrawal in principle. All that is required is a stipulation in the draft constitution that no foreign power can have military bases on national territory. On that basis intermediate solutions are possible: restoring national sovereignty over the land, keeping only naval and air crews on the spot, denuclearization, possibility of other powers using them.... They could all be negotiated, unless of course the United States decides to behave like an international gangster. But that would be very dangerous for it."

He thinks it is desirable and necessary to have a good exchange of information between the Communists and Cory Aquino on these questions. However, the latter has asked without success for a meeting with CPP leaders several times. So? "A Central Committee member said that there could be an official meeting at an appropriate time. In my view that means when the president has real control over the Armed Forces, and that is far from being the case. Moreover, this is one of the main problems."

This is also why the guerrillas do not intend to part with their military or political means: "The main thing is to prevent any regression, to support the democratic progress achieved in February, and to move toward far-reaching reforms, social well-being, and independence. In this fight the guerrillas provide a guarantee and are the armed hand of the people's movement; they are carrying out political work, implementing agrarian reform, and administering the areas they control.... This can only displease the big landowners, crooks, the military, and the civil servants appointed by the dictatorship. So far we have observed a cease-fire. But the army is taking an aggressive attitude, it is carrying out an increasing number of 'search and destroy' operations. Why should we lay down our arms? We will keep them. Not against Aquino but against those who intend to oppose her own reforms."

SISON SAYS AQUINO GOVERNMENT 'MERE TRANSITION'

HK100047 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 9 Jun 86 pp 1, 2

[Text] Singapore -- Jose Maria Sison, the founder of the Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP] proposed here on Saturday that President Aquino incorporate the CPP in a ruling alliance. But in Washington, D.C. Sison was quoted as saying the government of Mrs. Aquino is a mere transition before the final communist takeover of the country.

Sison, a former political detainee freed after Mrs Aquino came to power, told a seminar in Singapore that it was to her advantage to have the CPP-- with its 16,000 New People's Army guerillas, who are currently battling the Philippine military -- in the fold.

He said including the CPP in a coalition with the political parties Unido [United Nationalist Democratic Organization] and Lakas ng Bayan [People's Struggle] and the military group which helped her take power would save the nation the devastating cost of a civil war, the threat of foreign aggression, and expand trade and economic relations with socialist countries.

"Under the new coalition government, the NPA can be recognized as part of a national revolutionary army in the same way that the AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] can be," said Sison.

Asked by newsmen to comment on the proposal, Luis Villafuerte, chairman of the Presidential Commission on Government Reorganization, who also addressed the seminar, said he would carry the proposal to Mrs Aquino if Sison gave him the details.

Argued Sison: "It is quite possible for any group within the AFP with or without U.S. inspiration, to make trouble or stage a coup against the Aquino government.

"So long as the people's army stands ready behind people's power, not even the United States nor any anti-Aquino armed group would dare unleash a coup against the Aquino government.... So long as it wishes to rely on people's power and make substantial democratic reforms, the Aquino government can consider the NPA as an armed force to its advantage."

However, he said Mrs Aquino would have to win over even her supporters in the military, the sworn enemy of the CPP, if her current plan to negotiate a truce with the CPP and bring about a ceasefire as the first step to a reconciliation succeeded.

Sison said the CPP, which had built up its strength through "revolutionary struggle and so much sacrifice," could not be expected to accept legalization if it would mean giving up its military strength and "baring its chest to the bayonets of the reactionary state."

He added: "Were Mrs Aquino in full control of the AFP, she could unilaterally effect the drastic reduction of the armed conflict, a standstill between the AFP and NPA or a de facto ceasefire even before a formal negotiated ceasefire."

He contended that the CPP had time on its side and said a cutback in the military campaign would considerably reduce the level of spending on the AFP, which in turn could help reduce dependence on foreign aid for development funds.

Sison urged the government to press ahead with land reforms, which he said would in turn garner active mass support for the coalition government and render the bloody struggle between the NPA and AFP unnecessary.

He said a government incorporating the CPP could dispose of export commodities, the market for which is depressed, through counter-trade with socialist countries, and in return get capital goods and essential consumer items. He contrasted this with Philippine reliance on enormous loans from capitalist countries with conditions attached.

"The Aquino government," he said, "is under order by the United States through its own agencies and transnational firms as well as multilateral agencies like the IMF and World Bank to stick to agriculture, shun industrialization, liberalize imports, attract foreign investments, comply with debt obligations, increase domestic tax burden, freeze wages, depreciate currency and so on."

He added: "The ruling system is deteriorating at a rapid rate. It is simply impossible for the Philippine government to comply with the dictates of the foreign investors and creditors without causing massive social unrest and the intensification of people's war. A California-based anti-communist group -- the Christian Anti-Communist Crusade [CACC] quoted Sison as telling his followers in Manila that Aquino "was playing the role in the Philippines similar to that played by Kerensky in Russia in 1917." Kerensky was the popular Russian leader who took power after the overthrow of the czar and established a democratic government. CACC analyzed the statements of Sison in Manila as published in the Trotskyist communist magazine INTERNATIONAL PRESS in its latest newsletter which is distributed worldwide.

SISON BLAMES AQUINO FOR CONTINUED VIOLENCE

HK110218 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 10 Jun 86

[Text] Released Communist Party founder Jose Maria Sison criticized President Aquino on the cease-fire issue. He said Mrs Aquino has misled the people into believing she has issued the call for a cease-fire. According to Sison, who was interviewed in Legazpi City last Monday, President Aquino has not yet made a formal call for a cease-fire. He blamed this for the continuing violence and encounters between the military and the communist rebels. Sison also insisted on a stop to what he termed as the continuing military buildup. Without touching on the increased rebel atrocities, Sison blamed the military's move to field moore troops to protect communities exposed to communist attacks. He also claimed President Aquino has no control over the military.

NPA ASKS AQUINO TO SEND SOLDIERS TO BARRACKS

[Text] The NPA warns of bloodshed in Negros if the military carries out its "O-Plan Mamamayan" ["Operation Citizen Plan"] in its counterinsurgency campaign. The NPA made the announcement following reports that an additional three army battalions will be sent to beef up forces in Negros. The communists also asked President Aquino to send all soldiers based in NATO-inflicted areas back to barracks before dialogue between NPA emissaries and the government side are held. At the same time, the NPA warns that military units in Negros would be marked as targets of its sparrow units.

19 KILLED IN AMBUSH OF DEFENSE FORCES IN COTOBATO

[Text] Nineteen people were killed when communist rebels ambushed paramilitary troops in South Cotobato. Military spokesman Sergeant Fernando Bulad said 10 rebels and 9 soldiers were killed when two groups totalling about 500 rebels attacked members of the Civilian Home Defense Force Tuesday in (Alabel) and Malapatan. Among those killed were three paramilitary leaders. The rebels burned the house and vehicle of a former village chief in (Alabel). Government troops were sent to the area to pursue the rebels.

JAPAN RESUMES EXPORT INSURANCE COVERAGE

[Text] The Ministry of International Trade and Industry of Japan (MITI) has resumed coverage of export insurance for the Philippines in a move to normalize bilateral relations between the two countries. Official sources said the MITI cover, which was suspended about two years when the Philippines faced a serious financial crisis, was restored at the end of April 1986. The export insurance assures Japanese suppliers that they would be paid for whatever products or services they would deliver to customers in the Philippines. Shortly after the country declared a moratorium on payment of external debt in late 1983, Japan stopped providing export insurance while suppliers held back product deliveries.

Sources said the first kmajor beneficiary of the restored MITI insurance cover would be the state-owned National Power Corp. [NPC] which is overhauling a thermal plant supplying a large portion of the electricity needs of Metropolitan Manila. The facility, called the Malaya plant with a capacity of 650 megawatts, is to be rehabilitated by Marubeni Corp. on a turnkey basis with funding provided by the Export-Import Bank of Japan.

The Export-Import Bank is to shoulder 85 percent of the project cost of 12 billion yen, with the balance to be borne by Marubeni. With the export insurance cover, the financing arrangement is deemed completed but sources said some hitch has developed in the implementation of the project. NPC, under the government of President Aquino, is reported to be insisting that it negotiate directly with Hitachi which is supplying the equipment.

JOINT COMMITTEE WITH JAPAN TO MONITOR LOANS

HK110620 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 10 Jun 86 pp 1, 6

[Text] The Philippines and Japan will set up a joint machinery to expedite the use of Japanese loans and assistance and avoid payment of kickbacks. Vice President and Foreign Minister Salvador H. Laurel, fresh from a stint in Tokyo, told newsmen yesterday that a joint committee will monitor the flow of foreign funds here.

Another safeguard is to require these funds to be coursed through the ministry of foreign affairs. In this way, it was hoped that the foreign loans and aid would be concentrated on the authorized disbursements. This will also preclude the payment of commissions to 10 percenters whether Filipinos or Japanese.

At present, a Japanese government agency is looking into the payment of kickbacks to Tokyo businessmen, allegedly involved in arranging Japanese funded projects in the country during the Marcos rule. However, Laurel, during his stay in Tokyo, did not concern himself with this irregularity since this is already being attended to by the Commission on Good Government.

Laurel, however, has reported to President Aquino that seven of 11 projects under the 13th yen loan agreement have been approved by Tokyo. This means that sixteen billion yen ($18 million) will be available to the new government. Of the remaining thirty two billion yen ($36 million), Laurel said that the government hopes to have this converted into a commodity loan.

USSR REQUESTS LOCATION OF RUSSIAN GRAVES

OW111315 Tokyo KYODO in English 1257 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 11 KYODO -- The Soviet Union requested that Japan located Russian graves in Japan following regular ministerial consultations between the two countries in Janaury, Foreign Ministry sources disclosed Wednesday. In the ministerial talks, Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe had demanded of his counterpart Eduard Shevardnadze that the Soviet Union allow visits by Japanese to their family graves on the Soviet-controlled northern islands. The Soviet side pledged to study the possibility of such visits at that time.

When Abe visited Moscow last month, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev said that the Soviet Union would allow the visit of Japanese to the graves without the issuance of visas on condition Japan permits the visit of Russians to ancestral graves in Japan on the same basis.

In response to the Soviet proposal to locate Russian family graves, the Foreign Ministry listed various gravesites including ones in Matsuyama City in Ehime Prefecture and Oki Island in Shimane Prefecture, both of which were established during and after the Japan-Russian war of 1904-05, the source said. The Foreign Ministry is taking a positive attitude toward the request, they added.

TEXTILE EXPORT RESTRAINT TALKS WITH U.S. BEGIN

OW120241 Tokyo KYODO in English 0238 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 12 KYODO -- Japan and the United States began negotiations for conclusion a new bilateral agreement on Japan's "voluntary" controls on textile shipments in Tokyo Thursday, officials of the International Trade and Industry Ministry (MITI) said.

Japan is represented at the three-day working-level negotiations by Kazuo Takase, councillor at MITI's Consumer Goods Industries Bureau. His American counterpart is Charles Roger Carlisle, chief negotiator for textiles at the U.S. Trade Representative's Office.

The meeting, the second round since the old accord expired at the end of last year, was focusing on a new ceiling on Japanese textile product shipments to the U.S. and on ways to prohibit marketing in the United States of textile products produced in third countries and exported to the U.S. through Japan with "man-in-Japan" labels attached, the officials said.

ANNUAL REPORT OF U.S. FORCES COMMAND DENOUNCED

[Text] Pyongyang June 12 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today comments on the "annual report" the command of the U.S. forces occupying South Korea rigged up recently under the "U.N. Forces" berets. The author of the commentary criticizes the U.S. imperialist aggressors for fabricating data and statistics, claiming that last year the North schemed to launch "southward invasion" and violated the Armistice Agreement on many occasions. He says:

The U.S. imperialist aggressors have never missed an opportunity to cry about fictitious "threat of southward invasion". But the "report" is an unprecedented one in its vicious nature. In circulating such false document with the day when they provoked the war in Korea in 1950 ahead, the U.S. imperialists mainly seek to justify their policy of South Korean occupation and belligerent moves. It is shameless indeed of the U.S. imperialists to misuse the "U.N. Forces" helmets they have been deprived of, while circulating the conspiratorial document.

The "U.N. Forces" helmets the U.S. imperialist aggression forces are now wearing are those which fell to the ground when the United Nations adopted a resolution more than ten years ago on dissolving the "U.N. Forces Command" in South Korea. The document the U.S. imperialists circulated, wearing the rusted steel helmets only stinks of mould.

AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL CITED ON TORTURE IN SOUTH

SK120450 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0442 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Text] Pyongyang June 12 (KCNA) -- The Amnesty International on June 11 released a report on the infringement upon human rights in South Korea, exposing the fascist suppression of anti-"government" forces by the South Korean puppet clique, according to a report. The report says:

Hundreds of dissidents are tortured every year in South Korea. The South Korean authorities try to force "confessions" out of them by electric torture and the methods of making them go without food and sleep and confining them in solitary cells.

In spite of the protestation of the detainees about tortures, South Korean judges give them a guilt decision on the basis of the false confessions. The international standard of fairness is violated in trials in South Korea and the detainees are denied the right to engage a counsel.

DPRK BUILDING INTERNATIONAL GAMES SPORTS COMPLEX

SK112307 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1523 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] Pyongyang June 11 (KCNA) -- A modern sports complex for large-scale international games is now under construction in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. Its area covers nearly one million square metres near Mangyongdae, Pyongyang. The sports complex will have a stadium with 30,000 seats, an ice rink with 20,000 seats, 9 gymnasiums respectively with 2,000-3,000 seats. There will be built various training grounds for football, tennis, handball and other ball games, hotels, lodging houses, restaurants, a clinic, shops, etc.

A sports centre is now also being built on the beautiful Yanggak islet in the River Taedong flowing through Pyongyang. A main thing in the sports centre is a modern football ground with natural turf covering nearly 30,000 square metres and 30,000 seats. There will be a 44-terrace grand stand and two 22-terrace stands on its either side and 18-22 metres long visor above them. Physical training halls, a pool and training halls for heavy games and a 400-metre indoor track will be built there. A soccer training ground, a tennis court and dining rooms for players will be built on the Yanggak islet.

New sports facilities are also under construction on the beautiful Nungna islet in the River Taedong.

Various wonderful sports facilities have made their appearance in recent years in Pyongyang under the wise leadership of dear Comrade Kim Chong-il who is successfully carrying into practice the great leader President Kim Il-song's far-reaching idea of sports.

There is Kim Il-song Stadium with 100,000 seats on the foot of beautiful Moran hill. It is a grand monumental edifice in the era of the workers' party. On the bank of the River Potong there are sports buildings. Among them are an ice rink with 6,000 seats, a skate training hall covering an area of 12,000 square metres, a pool in the Changgwang health complex and the Pyongyang indoor stadium with 20,000 seats. Outdoor and indoor stadiums have been built at provincial seats including Chongjin, Hamhung and Haeju and in all other parts of the country. A wonderful sports complex with a stadium, a gymnasium and a pool has been built in Nampo Municipality, a port city.

Korean sportsmen constantly improve their technique at these sports complexes with excellent facilities to give a good account of themselves at international games. They carried off over 220 trophy cups and 2,500 medals at international games over the last 16 years.

CONGOLESE MINISTER SUPPORTS DPRK OLYMPIC PROPOSAL

SK120443 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0437 GMT 12 Jun 86

Pointing to the repression of the South Korean people demanding democracy in society by the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique, he said: "We express indignation at the repression of the South Korean people by the Chon Tu-hwan group under the pretext of the 1986 Asian games and the 1988 Olympics. We hold that the DPRK's proposal to co-host the Olympic games must be realised to save the Olympic movement from a crisis and create a condition favorable for a peaceful, reunification of Korea. We earnestly appeal to all the world people who love peace and justice to lift up loud voices of justice in demand of the co-staging of the 24th Olympic games by the North and South of Korea."

VNS SAYS SOME OPPOSITION REMARKS HINDER UNITY

SK111240 (Clandestine) Voice of National Salvation in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 8 Jun 86

[Dialogue between Madam Yun Chong-won and announcer Kim Chol-min from the program "Sunday Reception Room"]

[Text] [Kim Chol-min] How are you?

[Yun Chong-won] How are you?

[Kim] Some opposition politicians have recently made remarks hindering the unity of the democratic and patriotic forces and the movement for democratization, thus making the people frown at their remarks and acts.

[Yun] That is true. There seem to be some opposition politicians who are being shaken by the appeasing and deceitful trick of Chon Tu-hwan and the DJP to the effect that if the nationwide signature campaign for constitutional revision is stopped and the ruling and opposition parties discuss the question of revising the Constitution into one providing for a direct presidential election system and agree on the question on the floor [of the National Assembly], the Constitution can be amended even before 1988. Also, there are some opposition party politicians who are undisguisedly preaching about compromise with and concession to the present dictatorial regime. These politicians are denounced as decoys among people.

This is a time when Chon Tu-hwan and the DJP side are bent on conspiratorial maneuvers to disunite, disintegrate, and destroy the ranks of the movement for democratization while intensifying suppressive offensives aimed at stifling the anti-U.S. and antidictatorial struggle for democratization.

[Kim] I think that it is a time when a special alert against the crafty plot of the Chon Tu-hwan group should be increased. As far as the so-called Inchon riot incident about which the Chon Tu-hwan group has recently talked is concerned, the group deployed some 2,000 DJP forces, disguised as students and citizens, at the site of a rally to form the Inchon chapter for the signature campaign for constitutional revision, made them kick up outrageous rackets, and frustrated the rally by making the police indiscriminately fire tear gas bombs at the rally site. This notwithstanding, Chon Tu-hwan and the DJP, by mobilizing patronized mass media, have brazenly misled public opinion, saying that the rally was frustrated by the radical acts of students in the movement circles. They arrested and suppressed many off-stage democratic forces, including Reverend Mun Ik-hwan, chairman of the United Masses Movement for Democracy and Unification [Mintongnyon], and Chang Ki-pyo, chief policy-maker of the Mintongnyon, as well as students, while talking about behind-the-scenes manipulation. This is a scheme to create dissension between patriotic students and opposition party and within off-stage democratic forces and cause disunity between students and people and among students.

[Yun] That is correct. In reality, today is a time when confrontation between democratic and patriotic forces and pro-U.S. dictatorial forces is more acute than ever before. Therefore, reality urgently demands that all democratic and patriotic forces be firmly united and stage the movement for democratization nationwide. Only when all democratic and patriotic forces, including youths, students, workers, peasants, and residents of all walks of life in urban areas, intellectuals, and opposition politicians are unanimously united in rising up in the anti-U.S. and antidictatorial struggle and in taking joint action can the cause of making this land independent and democratic be realized.

To this end, I consider that the firm solidarity and unity of all anti-U.S. and antidictatorial forces opposing the U.S. imperialists' aggression and the dictatorial rule are more necessary. United we stand, divided we fall -- this is the truth. Thus, the Chon Tu-hwan group is more fearful of the unity of our democratic and patriotic forces than anything else. For this reason, the Chon Tu-hwan group is bent on despicable conspiratorial and deceitful maneuvers to destroy the unity of and divide our democratic and patriotic forces. Under this condition, our democratic and patriotic forces should counter the Chon Tu-hwan group's fascist suppression through struggle and maneuvers for division and disintegration with the strategy of unity and cohesion.

[Kim] Nevertheless, some opposition politicians are making remarks hindering the unity of democratic and patriotic forces and benefiting the maneuvers of Chon Tu-hwan and the DJP for division and disintegration, thereby arousing indignation among the people. This is, indeed, regrettable.

[Yun] Man cannot live forever. Such being the case, without living in a righteous manner on the side of the nation and the people, why do they become servants of the dictatorial regime and live humiliatingly while being criticized by the people and glared bitterly by their colleagues? In view of remarks and acts of some opposition politicians, they have easily made, in the signature campaign for constitutional revision and the anti-U.S. and antidictatorial struggle, ambiguous remarks that cannot be differentiated from the utterances of Chon Tu-hwan and members of the DJP, the ruling party.

Some time ago, there was a man who opposed the revision of the Constitution into a constitution providing for a direct presidential election system and made remarks on an election in the National Assembly while talking about the formation of a system embracing all the people and the entire country, and embracing the ruling and opposition parties. Upon hearing his remarks, many people criticized him, asking whether he was a ruling party member or an opposition party member.

[Kim] It is thought that such remarks are nothing but utterances preaching undisguised compromise with the Chon Tu-hwan dictatorial regime.

[Yun] That is true. This type of man plays well the role of a servant of power, receiving a stipend by taking sides with the ruling party. This type of man cannot have his own political views. Therefore, the people criticize these politicians as decoys.

[Kim] As far as a decoy is concerned, Yi Chol-sung cannot be excluded from those politicians. In the past, he was much criticized as a pro-ruling party figure and decoy.

[Yun] When the historical background of those called decoys among opposition politicians is traced, they seem not to have discarded the decoy's nature of flattering power. There is a man who played the role of a decoy in a dirty manner while receiving hundreds of million won and a luxurious mansion from former dictator Pak Chong-hui. Even when Pak Chong-hui established the Yusin dictatorial system and remained in power for a long time while exercising a harsh tyrannical rule, he flattered power and came out with a sordid theory called the theory of integration halfway and the theory on reform amid participation -- theories justifying the fascist dictatorial rule. This made the people frown at him.

[Kim] You have just said that those who flatter power do not give up the nature of decoys. I think that what you say is true. Those who played the role of decoys for the dictators in the past have not discarded their evil custom, but are still playing the role of puppets while currying favor with Chon Tu-hwan and the DJP.

[Yun] Since the proverb says that a childhood habit is hard to break even in old age, an evil habit is really awful. Such a swindling act is the act of being used by the scheme of Chon Tu-hwan and the DJP to impede the movement for democratization and cause democratic and patriotic forces to disintegrate. This act not only benefits the dictatorial group, but does more harm than good to our masses' movement for democratization.

We should be alert to the pro-ruling party acts of some opposition politicians -- acts of laying obstacles to the development of the struggle of democratic and patriotic forces and acts hindering the unity and cohesion of the ranks. Great self-awakening is needed. I think that for that reason, students and citizens urged the self-awakening of opposition politicians during the Inchon demonstration on 3 May.

[Kim] NKDP President Yi Min-u has already accepted the demand as the people's chastisement of his party and has pledged to continue the struggle for democratization along with the masses of all walks of life.

[Yun] I consider that we should bear in mind the truth that united we stand, divided we fall, and overcome, without fail, the manner and characteristic of a decoy, while defending the unity of the ranks. Our people will not yield to and not be deceived by any suppression or intrigue of Chon Tu-hwan and the DJP, but build a new independent and democratic society in this land with united strength.

[Kim] I think that the genuine existence of opposition politicians and the value of their lives lie in the anti-U.S. and antidictatorial struggle that is being waged with our peple. I am convinced that, even though they failed to live together with the people aspiring for independence, democracy, and reunification in the past, some politicians will, from now on, eradicate the shameful legacy of being a decoy and unhesitatingly turn out to the sacred anti-U.S. and an dictatorial struggle along with the people.

SOUTH MINISTER'S REMARKS ON DOMESTIC AFFAIRS HIT

[NODONG SINMUN 10 June commentary: "Dictator's Farce"]

[Text] On 7 June, a fellow holding the office of the puppet prime minister made a report on state affairs at the National Assembly. Dissembling as though traitor Chon Tu-hwan had made a great decision to complete revision of the Constitution before his current presidential term expires on the basis of an agreement between the ruling and opposition parties, the puppet prime minister said that he will do his utmost to put into practice the so-called dictator's will for democratization. This is a brazen tune of counterpropaganda produced out of a distortion of reality.

Do the dictators have a modicum of intention to revise the Constitution as demanded by the people and offer them a gift called "democratization?" People are demanding that all the people imprisoned be set free and that the Constitution be revised in such a way as to institutionalize a direct presidential election system.

However, traitor Chon Tu-hwan, his DJP coteries, and those working inside the puppet administration offices are indiscriminately arresting people who called for constitutional revision favoring a direct presidential election system and for democratrization and who rejected aggresssion by outside forces, and are harshly suppressing them after branding them as being pro-communist and leftist, while showing reluctance to release them from prison.

They even went so far as to intimidate those who called for their release, arguing that the issue related to the release of the imprisoned should not be allowed to be used as a bargaining item for political negotiations, while at the same time babbling about enforcement of laws. Therefore, it is clear what the dictator's will for democratization, which is being noisily prattled about by the puppets, is about, and what they mean by the argument that they will do their best through concession and an attitude of compromise. What they mean is that they will whip the people into abiding by the present fascist legal system and force them to accept their own proposal for constitutional revision, which has made the extension of power by the fascist military elements an established fact.

The puppets' bandying about of such a unilateral and self-righteous attempt concealed under the veil of democratization and their prattling as though they were about to realize something stem from the goal of placating the antigovernment sentiment by diverting public attention. In reality, the dictator Chon Tu-hwan is a despotic tyrant and a butcher of the nation who knows about nothing except knife-wielding. The day before the opening of the regular session of the National Assembly, traitor Chon Tu-hwan said that acts of undermining order and radical demands denying the existence of the present dictatorial system will not be tolerated, while advocating an open, democratic society. To claim commitment to democratization without dropping the hidden knife is an empty word and nothing can be expected from it.

On the same day, the puppet prime minister, accusing us of having unilaterally suspended the dialogue, attempted to portray themselves as advocates of dialogue. This is nothing but a premeditated maneuver aimed at misleading public opinion by laying on us the blame for the suspension of the North-South dialogue which had been arranged after twists and turns.

It is our consistent stand to improve North-South relations through dialogue and to pave a favorable way for peace and peaceful reunification. It is because the puppets, ignoring our peaceful proposals for the relaxation of tension, launched, together with the U.S. imperialists, the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise, the largest ever, an exercise designed to mount a surprise attack against our Republic, and because they are exacerbating tension even at this moment while running riot in confrontation and war commotions that the North-South dialogue is once again stalled after being plunged into a state of suspension.

It is a shameless act of an imposter to have suspended the dialogue and then attempted to pass the responsibility onto others. No matter what propaganda they may fabricate based on the logic of placing the cart before the horse, the puppets will never be able to avoid the responsibility for having suspended the dialogue. The Chon Tu-hwan ring should know that it can never dash the South Korean people's will for democratization or mislead world opinion, no matter what machinations it may employ.

FISHERY STATION WHARVES MOVED ALONG TAEDONG RIVER

[Text] Pyongyang June 6 (KCNA) -- The Nampo barrage, a grand monumental edifice, has been built on the west coast of Korea, to turn the River Taedong into a big natural fish breeding ground, with the result that the wharves of the fishery stations and fishermen's cooperatives on the riverside are moving down the barrage. A vigorous construction project is now going on to move the fishery stations, fishermen's cooperatives and shipyards in Waudo, Hanggu, Taean and Chollima districts of Namp situated upwards the River Taedong on the seashore down the Nampo barrage.

The Nampo Export Fishery Station which has already finished the construction of wharf and structures has moved to a new place and over 10 fishermen's cooperatives including the Taean and Waudo fishermen's cooperatives are pressing ahead with the construction, while continuing fishing operations. With a new large-scale fishery base relocated down the Nampo barrage it has become poossible to develop fish breeding in the River Taedong and bring the fishery stations and fishermen's cooperatives nearer to the fishing ground to increase fish production.

IOC MAKES 'FINAL OFFER' TO NORTH, SETS DEADLINE

[Text] Lausanne, Switzerland (YONHAP) -- South Korea Wednesday revealed its intention to offer North Korea part of preliminaries of an additional Olympic sports event during the '88 Summer Olympics in Seoul, it was learned here at the end of a two-day inter-Korean sports meeting. Kim Chong-ha, president of the Korean Olympic Committee (KOC), was reported to have disclosed this at the second-day session Wednesday with IOC officials, following his earlier suggestion that Seoul was willing to move the competitions of two sports to the North as part of efforts to have boycott-free Seoul Olympics.

At the closing session of the inter-Korean meeting at the IOC headquarters on Lake Geneva, the KOC head also said his side was ready to organize the cycle road-race of the '88 Olympics as a "border-crossing" event linking the south and the north through panmunjom. Kim's proposals were offered on condition that North Korea should openly pledge to fully honor the IOC charter and the 1981 Baden Baden decision by IOC to award the '88 Olympic Games to Seoul, capital of the Republic of Korea.

IOC officials immediately held a separate meeting with North Korean delegates on the new Seoul suggestions before ending the Lausanne meeting of Olympic officials from both sides of Korea and IOC. It was the third such meeting since last October on Pyongyang's participation in the Seoul Olympics.

IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch, summing up two days of discussion, told a press conference that the Seoul proposal to grant the north sponsorship of two unidentified sports events at the '88 Olympics was the "final offer." Samaranch set June 30 as the deadline for North Korea to accept the proposal.

The south-proposed border-crossing cycle road-race will be the 100 km (60 mile) event that may start in the north and finish in Seoul, it was learned.

The IOC chief told the reporters that if the offer is accepted, the fourth round of talks to work out "necessary organizational and operational aspects" will be called, possibly by late July.

ROK ASIAD OFFICIAL CONFIDENT OF PRC PARTICIPATION

SK120345 Seoul YONHAP in English 0320 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 12 (YONHAP) -- Despite the lack of official notification, Yi ha-u, secretary general of the Seoul Asian Games Organizing Committee, expressed confidence Wednesday that Mainland China will send athletes to compete in the 10th Asian Games, to be held in Seoul this fall. Yi also said that a successful conclusion to the negotiations being held this week in Switzerland concerning North Korea's participation in the 1988 Summer Olympics could signal the intention of Pyongyang to participate in the upcoming Asiad. "Nobody is sure what will happen, but if we are patient enough and open our door and make the effort to allow the north to save face they could come," Yi said in an interview on Wednesday evening.

The International Olympic Committee is meeting in Lausanne with representatives from both North and South Korea this week in an effort to head off a possible boycott of the 1988 Summer games. The North Koreans, who do not recognize the South Korean Government, have demanded the right to host a portion of the games.

Regarding the Chinese, Yi was more emphatic. "I have every reason to believe the Chinese will be here," he said "They are to host the 1990 games and by logical inference they may not have a choice." Nations that plan to attend the Asiad, scheduled to begin on Sept. 20, are required to notify local officials of their intention by June 28. "We have excellent relations with the various Asian sports federations," Yi said. "I would safely guess at least 33 or 34 of the 36 nations in the Olympic Council of Asia would attend the games." Thirty-three nations participated in the 1982 games in New Delhi, the largest Asiad to date.

In the In the April meeting of Asian sports federations here, only Afghanistan and Laos were absent.

Turning to security, Yi said that atheletes could rest easy. "Athletes for the Asian Games will be participating under the safest conditions -- I guarantee that," he said. National police this week announced a series of new security measures, including the expansion of anti-terrorist units throughout the country. Yi continued: "Koreans are used to security. Not by choice but by the turn of history. Out of our survival instincts we are very security conscious."

PRC Decision Welcomed

W120025 Tokyo KYODO in English 0014 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 12 KYODO -- South Korea has welcomed a Chinese decision to take part in the Seoul Asian Games this fall. A source with the Seoul Asian Games Organizing Committee said the committee is "extremely happy" with the Chinese entry.

South Korea had feared that China would stay away from the Asian Games, since Beijing is a close ally of Pyongyang and has no diplomatic relations with Seoul. Another sports source in Seoul said he hopes the Chinese entry will contribute toward political stabilization in the Korean peninsula and create conditions favorable to communist countries' taking part in the 1988 Olympic games.

NO AGREEMENTS REACHED AT U.S. TEXTILE TALKS

[Text] Seoul, June 10 (YONHAP) -- Korean and U.S. officials ended two days of talks here Tuesday without reaching any substantial agreements on the volume of Korean textile products exported to the United States.

The U.S. delegation, headed by Charles Carlisle, chief U.S. textile negotiator, suggested that Korea's quota for textiles exported to the United States be frozen at the 1985 level for the next three years, a Trade and Industry Ministry source said Tuesday. The U.S. side also requested that the Korean-U.S. bilateral textile agreement, which expires on Dec. 31, 1987, be revised with this year.

The U.S. delegates called on Korea to cooperate in blocking the passage of the Thurmond Bill, which was vetoed earlier by President Reagan, by agreeing to the freeze. Congress is scheduled to vote on overriding the veto on Aug. 6.

The Korean side, led by Assistant Minister Kim Chul-su, expressed opposition to the freezing of the textile quota. If Korea were to accept the U.S. request for freezing the quota, he argued, it would deal a big blow to the Korean textile industry.

Regarding the U.S. request that the bilateral textile accord be revised this year, the Korean side asserted that the revision would violate the present multi-fiber arrangement rules, noting that textile issues pending between Seoul and Washington should be discussed in accordance with the outcome of MFA extension negotiations, which are now under way. Korean officials called for U.S. understanding, pointing to the recent agreement reached at the Seoul trade ministers' conference, which emphasized the need for a "standstill" in world-wide protectionism. The two sides agreed to resume talks at a mutually agreeable time, either in Seoul or Washington, the source said.

1987 GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURE PROPOSAL ANNOUNCED

[Text] Seoul, June 12 (YONHAP) South Korea's 44 government offices have proposed spending a total of 18.5 trillion won (21.6 billion U.S. dollars: one dollar is worth about 865 won) in fiscal year 1987, representing a whopping 33.9 percent rise from 13.9 trillion won spent this year, the economic planning board reported Thursday. The proposals include 7.3 trillion won in expenditures for public projects, up 66.9 percent from this year.

The government plans to spend 6.5 trillion won for public projects to be carried forward to next year and 798.4 billion won for new projects. Under the proposals, expenditures for salaries and wages would be hiked by 9.9 percent from this year's level. The comparative increase rates were 18.5 percent for defense outlays, 12.2 percent for educational subsidies and 9.6 percent for financial grants to provincial governments.

The Trade-Industry Ministry and the Industry Advancement Administration requested more than 100 percent hikes in their expenditures for 1987.

The comparative increase rates were 50-100 percent for the Sports Ministry and 10 other government agencies, 30-50 percent for the Health-Social Affairs Ministry and seven other offices, 10-30 percent for the National Assembly and 15 other organizations and less than 10 percent for the board of audit and inspection and five other offices.

The EPB plans to reduce the rise in budgetary expenditures for next year to around 12 percent from this year's level.

YI MIN-U MEETS WITH 6 FOREIGN MISSION HEADS

SK120210 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 12 Jun 86 p 4

[From the "Press Pocket" column]

[Text] Yi Min-u, president of the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party met six heads of foreign missions in Seoul at his National Assembly office yesterday. The four ambassadors and two charge d'affaires visited Yi "to hear of Yi's activities during his recent U.S. tour and the latest political developments," according to Amb. Juha Puromies of Finland.

Yi held talks with them for 50 minutes through an interpreter from the Embasssy of New Zealand. They were Amb. John Wingstrand of Sweden, Amb. David George Holborow of New Zealand, Amb. Bernard Freymond of Switzerland, Amb. Puromies, charge d'affaires of Pakistan Eitizaz Husain, and charge d'affaires of Australia David Mason.

The foreign envoys expressed their deep concern about the possibility of partisan compromise on constitutional amendment. Amb. Holborow of New Zealand, saying that he likes seeing the progress made in partisan dialogues, asked Yi about what the NDP would do if parties fail to make an accord. The contents of the talks were reported by Rep. Chong Che-mun.

Yi said, "I am not in a position to say with the premise that agreements will not be made. I hope that the ruling party will come to an agreement." "If the ruling party proposes a bill running counter to the people's will unilaterally, there will be grave consequences of unrest," he was quoted as saying.

When Amb. Puromies of Finland asked him if U.S. leaders have said anything about the amendment, Yi replied, "It is inconceivable for the United States to recommend any specific system of the as more democratic." [sentence as published] "The direct presidential election formula is our political tradition and the desire of the people," he told them.

KIM TAE-CHUNG, KIM YONG-SAM RECONFIRM UNITY

SK110035 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 11 Jun 86 p 4

[Text] Opposition leaders Kim Tae-chung and Kim Yong-sam stressed yesterday that they keep as before their strong comradeship and declared, "We will maintain our firm unity even after the democratization." After a breakfast meeting at Kim Yong-sam's house in Sangdo-dong, they charged the government with maneuvering to create a rift between them.

They reaffirmed that the release of political prisoners is a "prerequisite" to the formation of a special House committee for constitutional revision work. They meet over breakfast, alternating between their houses, on every Tuesday.

THE KOREA TIMES VIEWS POLITICAL DEVELOPMENTS

[Editorial: "Consensus on Democratization"]

[Text] National politics appears to be heading for a new phase of inter-party dialogue with regard to constitutional revision, directed toward the realization of democratization. Backing up such a favorable turn on the political scene, long plagued by heated friction between the government and opposition parties, was a conspicuous consensus that emerged among the three major parties on the necessity of achieving a "grand compromise" on the projected constitutional amendment. The consensus among the political parties came to light in keynote speeches delivered by the leaders of the ruling Democratic Justice Party, the major opposition New Korea Democratic Party and the minor opposition Korea National Party at a plenary session of the National Assembly Monday.

However, as the rival political camps disagreed over the form of government to be established under the newly-sought basic law, it is most probable that the government and opposition parties will have to undergo many ups and downs in the course of inter-party negotiations over constitutional revision. The ruling party, while stressing the need for the projected special parliamentary committee to study all options for the government structure, called for the decentralization of power and the elevation of the role of political decentralization of power and the elevation of the role of political parties and the National Assembly, indicating its preference for a parliamentary cabinet system. In contrast, the two opposition parties renewed their long-standing demands for direct presidential elections.

As for the fundamental approach to tackling the constitutional question, the government party clarified its position to ensure the people's basic rights substantially by facilitating their participation in politics on a wider scale. The major opposition party took a similar approach, stressing the imperative need to guarantee the people's free choice of government. These statements indicate, at least on the surface, that the government and opposition parties share identical basic stands with regard to the constitutional debate.

But then, a question arises as to the extent to which the political parties will be faithful in honoring their manifested political goals in the process of actually dealing with the amendment issues. Another noteworthy point is that the three party leaders shared a common view that the "maturity and diverse changes" of our industrializing society should be properly reflected in the pending constitutional reform.

Indeed, in the course of constitutional debate, the government and political parties are bound to be fully aware of the high degree of political maturity and the great expectations of the people, comparable to the remarkable socioeconomic development they have attained.

POLICE THWART STUDENT PLAN TO SEIZE JAPANESE BANK

SK100529 Seoul YONHAP in English 0519 GMT 10 Jun 86

[Text] Pusan, Korea, June 10 (YONHAP) -- Police arrested a university graduate on Tuesday and are seeking five university students for planning to occupy a branch office of the Bank of Tokyo in this southern port city. Pyon Yong-chol, 24, a graduate of Pusan National University (PNU), and five PNU students allegedly planned to seize the branch office of the bank in downtown Pusan Tuesday morning, according to police.

As evidence, police confiscated a Japanese flag, a U.S. flag, gasoline bombs and printed material containing anti-government slogans at the house of one of the students. Police put the five students, including a coed, on a list of wanted persons. Meanwhile, police stepped up security measures around the building that houses the Japanese office.

7 MORE STUDENTS ARRESTED FOR RALLIES RELEASED

SK120143 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 12 Jun 86 p 8

[Text] Seven more college students who were arrested for their involvement in antigovernment demonstrations were released Tuesday. The lenient actions came amid indications that the government might grant an amnesty to a large number of people arrested for their antigovernment activities in order to promote interparty dialogue regarding the constitutional amendment.

On Tuesday, Judge Chong Tok-hung at the Seoul District Criminal Court handed down suspended jail terms ranging from eight to 12 months to three participants in a massive rally held at Seoul National University on Feb. 4. The three students, including two from Ewha Woman's University, were freed later in the day.

In another trial held at the same court, Judge Yi Chae-hong ordered the release of a Songgyungwan University senior by suspending his one-year prison term for three years. The defendant, Kwon Chae-yong, 22, was on trial for leading a demonstration near Chongnyangni Railroad Station late last year.

In a separate trial held at the Tongbu branch of the Seoul District Court, Judge Yu Won-kyu imposed prison terms of 18 months to two years on two Seoul National University students charged with staging violent demonstrations in Seoul last November. The judge, however, subsequently ordered the release of the two students by suspending their terms for three years.

Meanwhile, the Seoul District Prosector's Office freed a 22-year-old Ewha Woman's University student accused of inciting antigovernment demonstrations on her campus early this year. The prosecution made the decision in favor of Kim Su-yong, a senior majoring in Korean literature and president of the university's student council, by suspending her indictment.

SNU CONSIDERING LENIENT STEPS FOR FREED STUDENTS

[Text] Seoul National University is learned to be considering lenient measures for the students who were freed with the stay of the enforcement of prosecution charges. They will be spared from harsh punishment provided for by school regulations, including possible dismissal and zero credit for failing to meet the class attendance requirement. The lenient position was bared in a meeting of professors with portfolio, chaired by university president Pak Pong-sik. On details of the lenient measures for the "repentent" students, the professors will meet again today.

Recently, more than 50 students were arrested in connection with various antigovernment protests including the attempted seizure of the SNU medical college library.

In the meantime, the government appears to be shifting its heavy-handed police against student activists. Already, a number of students have been freed as the prosecution dropped charges against them. And talks are going on between the ruling and opposition camps over the matter of releasing the people arrested and tried for demanding constitutional amendment.

'ABOUT 150' POLITICAL PRISONERS TO BE RELEASED

[Text] Rep. Chong Sun-tok, secretary general of the ruling Democratic Justice Party, disclosed yesterday that about 150 political prisoners may be released during the current House session, ending on June 24. They are all convicts, serving jail terms, he told his opposition counter-parts in a meeting. Besides them, there are about 750 political detainees which break down to 350 now being tried, and 400 being investigated, he said.

The main opposition New Korea Democratic Party had demanded the release of all prisoners numbering, it claims, 1,482 as a prerequisite for the creation of a special House committee on constitutional revision.

Chong told Reps. Yu Che-yon of the NDP and Kim Yong-saeng of the minor opposition Korea National Party that the parties should let the government decide how many prisoners should be released and when. He, however, stressed that left-leaning radicals and pro-Communists should be excluded from the list of prisoners to be freed on a gradual basis.

But, Rep. Yu made it clear that it would be difficult for the NDP to attend the projected House panel even with a single political prisoner still left in jail. In the meeting, Rep. Yu asked if DJP chairman No Tae-u intends to meet Kim Tae-chung and Kim Yong-sam, noting that No had expressed his desire to meet anyone in the interest of partisan compromise. He also demanded the amnesty and civil rights restoration for Kim Tae-chung.

Chong suggested that he and Yu meet in the near future to discuss the questions. The secretaries-general shared the view that a joint meeting of party secretaries-general and floor leaders is not necessary.

UNIVERSITIES OPPOSE STUDENT SUMMER RURAL SERVICE

SK110105 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 11 Jun 86 p 8

[Text] College students are busy preparing for their rural activities, in defiance of the firm positions of schools and the authorities against the controversial summer camps. Most universities are opposed to student service activities in the countryside, except for medical and technical service.

Provincial authorities have already been instructed not to allow student groups in the farming villages if they are not authorized by universities. Nonetheless, student circles at major universities are going ahead with their plans amid criticism that activist students use the occasion to indoctrinate farmers against the government.

Seoul National University yesterday held a professors' meeting to discuss the issue and decided not to authorize the students' rural activities. Yet, the student council of the top university plans to send off some 3,000 students for week-long labor service in the provinces of Kyongsang-pukto and Chungchong-pukto, from July 1. The organizers are particularly campaigning to attract freshmen and sophomores for the program of helping farmers.

SNJ student leaders are said to be making prepartory visits to the proposed places this week so that students will not be rejected by villagers. Last year, some village people opposed the voluntary student labor service, arguing that the students are more oriented toward the indoctrination of participating students through labor service and of farmers against the government.

Students of Korea University are preparing for rural activities in Kwangwon-do areas. Some 2,000 students are expected to join in. On campus, many banners have been hung, promoting the summer rural activities. A banner on the student hall reads "Out with U.S., Japanese capital that strangles the rural economy!"

Ewha Woman's University students were learned to have completed preparations for working in Imsil and Changsu, in Cholla-pukto, in early July.

Most Seoul Universities, including Tongguk, Hanyang and Kyonghui universities, are holding training sessions for rural service participants. SNU authorities said they would send letters to parents, urging them to persuade their children to turn away from "dubious" rural activities.

GEN THONGLAI KOMMASIT ON THAI RELATIONS

[Text] On 6 June, Comrade Brigadier General Thonglai Kommasit, an officer attached to the National Defense Ministry and former spokesman of the Lao Government delegation to talks with the Thai side on resolving the problem of three villages, was interviewed by Lao and foreign journalistss in Paklai District. He said: Today marks the 2d anniversary of the armed Thai occupation of three Lao villages -- Ban Mai, Ban Kang, and Ban Savang in Paklai District, Sayaboury Povince. A meeting is being held here today to recall the people's grief and, at the same time, to express support for the LPDR Foreign Ministry's statement.

Asked what is being done to resolve the problem of the three villages, Comrade Brig Gen Thonglai Kommasit said: At present, the problem has not been completely resolved because the Thai side has not yet recognized that the three villages are part of Laos, because some Thai troops are still stationed deep inside Laos, because they have refused to return the inhabitants evacuated to Thailand to their native land, and because they have refused to pay compensation to the local villagers for the losses caused by them.

The two sides held talks in Bangkok twice in 1984 to resolve the problem, but without result. The Thai side unilaterally announced the conclusion of the talks. Since then, however, the LPDR Government has proposed to the Thai side solutions to the problem on many occasions, but the Thai side has not heeded this and has presented the view that settling the problem at the governmental level is not necessary.

From this attitude, we believe that the Thai side is insincere in its desire to resolve the problem and to deal with the situation currently existing in the area of the three villages. Thus, it is now easy to cause tension since the Thai side has kept lit the fuse that may lead to the clashes.

The general concluded: Thanks to its good intentions, the Lao side wants all problems to be resolved peacefully in the interests of the Lao and Thai peoples. This is why the Lao side has repeatedly proposed to the Thai side a constinuation of talks between governmental-level delegations as reiterated in the Lao Foreign Ministry's 6 June statement calling for the resolution of all remaining problems and for the normalization of Lao-Thai relations -- an earnest aspiration of the fraternal Lao and Thai peoples.

OLYMPIC COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN ON DPRK-ROK MEETING

BK091456 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 7 Jun 86

[Text] In an interview given to a radio correspondent last Friday, Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, chairman of the Lao National Olympic Committee, expressed his view on a meeting to be held between he DPRK and South Korean Olympic committees in Lusanne, Switzerland, on 11-12 June. He said: The meeting between the two sides will be the third and may be the last to be held under the sponsorship of the International Olympic Committee. The main purpose of the meeting is to try to settle difficulties concerning the 24th summer Olympic Games which will be organized in Seoul, South Korea, in 1988. What is the cause of the difficulties? The difficulties stem from the mistake made by the Executive Committee of the International Olympic Committee which, in 1981, decided to select Seoul as the host for the games without extensively surveying the problems.

The Olympic ideals are to carry out activities for peace, friendship, and understanding among nations throughout the world, for the relaxation of international tension, and to oppose war and discrimination in all forms. Actually, the selection of Seoul as the site for the Olympic Games is against the peaceful reunification of the Korean nation.

To enable the 24th summer Olympics to be organized in accordance with the Olympic ideals, the DPRK National Olympic Committee has proposed an initiative to the International Olympic Committee and various organizations of the Olympic movement that both parts of Korea cohost the 24th summer Olympic games in Pyongyang and Seoul and that athletes from both parts of Korea be put into one team for the competitions. This in order to unify the Olympic activities and is in the interest of the unification of the Korean nation. This reasonable proposal of the DPRK side has been supported by public opinion throughout the world, in particular in fraternal socialist countries as clearly shown in the statement of the top-level leaders of the sports circles of socialist countries in their 34th conference in Hanoi in November 1985, which the chairman of the International Olympic Committee himself also attended on invitation. The various socialist countries have urged the International Olympic Committee and various organizations of the international Olympic movement to scrupulously study the DPRK side's proposal. They have also asked the International Olympic Committee to continue to sponsor the meeting between the national committees of the two parts of Korea until success is achieved.

Singkapo Sikhotchounmani, chairman of the Lao National Olympic Committee, said in conclusion: The past two meetings between the two sides have already paved the way for the settlement of the problem. But, the South Korean side has raised many issues to thwart the good intentions of the DPRK side. The Lao Olympic Committee has unanimously agreed to the stand of the various fraternal socialist countries on the problem of the 24th summer Olympics. In the Olympic movement, there still remain many problems that must be jointly solved by the international sports circles. The problems include the participation of professional athletes in the Olympic games, the use of sports activities to serve commercial interests, the qualification of athletes to participate in the competitions, violence at sports events, racial discrimination or separation into groups, and so forth.

To have the 24th Olympic Games organized effectively, the International Olympic Committee, various international sports federations, and various national Olympic committees, in particular that of South Korea, should study the proposal of the DPRK side in a spirit of responsibility.

BANGKOK PAPERS VIEW PREM DECISION ON ELECTION BID

BK101121 [Editorial Report] Three Thai-language Bangkok dailies -- SIAM RAT, MATICHON, and THAI RAT -- on 9 and 10 June carry an editorial or column commenting on Prime Minister General Prem Tinsulanon's decision not to run in the general election scheduled for 27 July.

SIAM RAT's 9 June 700-word page-5 editorial, entitled "The Prime Minister's Statement and its Consequences," says: "It is the right of every man to engage in or not to engage in any political activity, including a general election. Gen Prem Tinsulanon's decision not to run in the upcoming general election, however, is different because he wants to stay in politics after the voting. he expects the political parties to invite him to be the prime minister in the new government.

"At this point, we can envisage the result of the upcoming general election being similar to that of 1983 -- that is, no political party winning the majority vote so that it can form its own government. Thus, a nonpartisan figure is needed as prime minister and Gen Prem Tinsulanon stands prominently as a candidate for the premiership."

The editorial adds: "Gen Prem and any other general who wants to sit in the prime minister's chair without running in the general election must realize that the people's support that he enjoys will gradually dissolve and that the people might even reject him. He must not stand idle. On the contrary, he must try to work effectively to win the people's confidence."

MATICHON'S 10 June 900-word page-6 editorial, entitled "Gen Prem's Status," says: "The reason cited by Gen Prem Tinsulanon for not running in the upcoming general election -- that his candidacy might be detrimental to this politically neutral stance -- is nonsense and indicates his naivete in modern political science. If people like the prime minister or cabinet members should not join any political party or run in any election for fear that it might affect their political neutrality, the Prime Minister Thatcher, Prime Minister Nakasone, and former U.S. President Nixon, who won elections during their tenures, are the ones who have undermined the democratic system."

The editorial continues: "Thailand's democracy is a sad story. Political parties have to invest huge amounts of money and find qualified people to field in the general election. None of them, however, has ever been able to form a government on its own to administer the policies it promised the people. Instead, the parties must submissively invite a nonpartisan figure who has not run in the election to be the prime minister and form a government."

THe paper concludes that the political party system in Thailand is "obviously fragile and must be further strengthened and developed so that it can serve as the firm foundation for the democratic system."

THAI RAT's 10 June 900-word page 5 column by "Zoom" entitled "Disappointed Eventually," notes that Gen Prem's refusal to run in the 27 July general election has disappointed many of his supporters who want to see him be the prime minister to emerge from an election. The columnist notes that the people admire Gen Prem's "prudence and clean record" and stresses that he is ashamed to see political parties "invite an outsider to be the prime minister" because such a practice is "still far away from the genuine democracy." He then extends his best wished to all candidates running in the election and hopes that "one of them can be the next prime minister."

MINISTER ON COUNTERMEASURES TO U.S. FARM ACT

[Excerpt] The Government yesterday unveiled three counter-measures to the U.S. Farm Act, including the plan to invite the other six non-subsidising countries affected by the American law for a meeting here. Commerce Minister Pol Capt Surat Osathanukho said the measures were decided on during the meeting on Tuesday night of the committee in charge of boosting foreign exchange earnings, chaired by Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister ACM [Air Chief Marshal] Sitthi Sawetsila. Other committee members are Capt Surat and Ecobomics Department Director-General Danai Dulalampha.

Capt Surat said the first of the three measures calls for the Foreign Ministry to submit a protest letter on behalf of Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon to U.S. President Ronald Reagan, indicating the impact of the law on Thai rice in the world market. The letter will be prepared by the ministry.

He said the second measure calls for the Commerce and Foreign Ministries to invite the other six non-rice-subsidising countries adversely affected by the law for a meeting in Bangkok to discuss counter-measures, including the fight within the framework of General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. The six countries are Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Canada, New Zealand and Uruguay. The meeting will be financed by the international trade promotion fund.

Capt Surat said the third measure will see the Commerce Ministry, through the Foreign Trade Department's fund, buying about 200,000 tons of rice from traders for keeping in warehouses. He explained that such purchases are aimed at encouraging traders and exporters to speed up their purchases of rice and paddy, respectively, from farmers, for delivering to the ministry. He said he believes that the volumes of rice held by traders and exporters were rather low and this will help shore up local rice prices and benefit export price fixing. He added that this measure will also dismiss the U.S accusation that low export price fixing of Thai rice has forced the U.S. to pull down its paddy price level.

AUSTRALIA'S HAYDEN HOLDS NEWS CONFERENCE

BK111059 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Feature: "Bangkok AM Special Report"]

[Text] The Honorable Bill Hayden, Australian minister for foreign affairs, came here for another official visit to Thailand during which time he talked with Thai leaders. Yesterday morning, after inaugurating the new office of the Australian Chamber of Commerce in Thailand at the Ocean building on Suriwong Road, he briefed reporters here about his visit and discussions held here.

[Begin Hayden recording]...discussions with Foreign Minister Sitthi and Prime Minister Prem yesterday and today respectively. The main matters which we covered were bilateral ones and in particular trade matters. I thought I had an interesting story for you but I read all the interesting stories in the newspaper this morning, so I risk imposing on your patience by going over some of those matters.

I will try to do it rather fleetingly. I guess the most important matter occupying the minds of the governments of both countries concerns the prospect of the trading situation in farm products. We are both substantial exporters of nonsubsidized farm products; Australia has a far wider variety of farm products, of course, than Thailand. We are, among other things, an exporter of rice, and we are potentially confronted with the situation where the United States will be subsidizing the price of rice to prices below an economic level, and this will have quite serious detrimental effects for countries like Thailand and Australia in traditional rice export markets.

As a consequence of this development and the concern of medium-size developed countries which are farm product exporters and developing countries which are clearly farm product exporters, the Thai government has proposed a meeting of nonsubsidizing agricultural exporting countries. We are keenly interested in that and we will participate in it. We see this as an extension of an initiative already taken by the Australian Government to conduct a series of regional conferences in the Asian-Pacific area to address itself -- that is, the conferences -- to the need for common approach to the next MTN [Multilateral Trade Negotiations] round which will be held later this year.

We also discussed the perennial issue of Kampuchea and the developments there. We have knowledge from information available to us that the Khmer Rouge is performing more actively and aggressively than it has in the past. It has always been recognized that it is a quite effective fighting unit, but it has also been recognized -- and we constantly assert -- a totally unacceptable organization in the international community, and it is because of its participation in the coalition group that we have had, from time to time, some difficulties with initiatives proposed by the coalition group. Most recently, of course, there has been the 8-point initiative of Prince Sihanouk, and we find much in that to recommend that initiative. We see it as a development, a progressive development, in the region, and we have contacted a number of countries with direct interest in the Kampuchean situation -- for instance, we have written to Hanoi -- recommending that the governments of those various countries, particularly the Government of Vietnam, should address itself seriously to the 8-point proposal. We do not propose that the 8-point proposal is the final refinement in proposals aimed at moving toward a resolution of the situation in Kampuchea. We do believe that there are a number of positive aspects within that 8-point proposal which are worth exploring further. [end recording]

Mr Hayden then touched on various issues of mutual concern and interest.

[Begin Hayden recording] The situation in the region, of course, was explored; most particularly the situation in the Philippines. The attitude of the Australian Government has been and continues to be that the president of the Philippines, Mrs Aquino, is the best prospect for the future sucess of the Philippines as a cohesive nation state, and the Australian Government will be doing all that it can to provide support for the Aquino government. It is our belief that Mrs Aquino is working hard to bring about and to maintain success and we would look hopefully towards her contining success in the months and indeed the years ahead. But we believe, however, that it will be necessary for aid donor countries to approach the needs of the Philippines with sympathetic understanding, and that has certainly been our role both on a bilateral basis and also at the multilateral forum meeting in Tokyo recently and again in Manily of a number of aid donor countries to the Philippines. But we believe that Mrs Aquino is the best prospect for the future of the Philippines and accordingly we commit ourselves to be helpful where we can.

The only other matter that I would mention concerns the Australian bicentennial which occurs in the year 1988 and that means it coincides with the extended celebrations of the 60th anniversary of the 60th birthday of His Majesty the King of Thailand. There will be extensive celebrations here to mark that occasion as there will be extensive celebrations in Australia. This morning I explored with Prime Minister Prem, who responsed positively, the prospect of Australia and Thailand in a number of cases arranging an exchange of the sort of celebrations which occur in the respective countries and this, of course, particularly takes in instances were performing groups or exhibitions come to our respective countries from other countries for the occasions. [end recording]

[Begin Hayden recording] We see a number of positive aspects about the proposal and they need to be explored further, and we don't propose to go beyond that, as indeed a number of other countries haven't been prepared to go much beyond a formulation similar to that, for instance the United States. However, we have seen the opportunity to contribute positively by encouraging countries to carefully consider what has been proposed and that is why we have been in communication with Hanoi urging them to seriously address address themselves to those proposals. [break in recording] We have not contemplated that alternative. Our support has been for purely humanitarian commitments in the border areas on both sides of the border and we don't propose to change. We can't speak for other countries. [break in recording] On the joint ASEAN resolution on Kampuchea, Australia hasn't abstained; we have not cosponsored. We have voted affirmatively for the resolution and we will do that this year [break in recording] our position, our complete opposition to the Khmer Rouge quite clear very early and I have done that on a number of occasions, so there is no doubt about our firm attitude on that and the matter wasn't raised. [sentence incomplete] [break in recording] for the Thai authorities to give you their assessment, not for us. We speak only for ourselves. But the intelligence that I have seen suggests that the Khmer Rouge are more active, more aggressively active, and more extensively active. At the same time....I think I would leave it there. [break in recording] under more pressure, but I don't see any evidence that they are going to collapse either immediately or in the near future. I think the fact that they are more aggresively active and more extensively active means that in consequence, they must be applying more pressure. [break in recording]

[Question indistinct] Oh, I hear speculation, much of it public, that the congress may result in a number changes and that as a result of the changes, there may be changes in policy. I would grankly be a big sceptical myself, but I think only time will prove one way or the other whether that is correct. But I do recall, or course, Foreign Minister Mokhtar of Indonesia saying in Kuala Lumpur 1st year that, a military solution was not available for us -- which means the ASEAN countries and countries well disposed ot them, such as our own -- that time was running out and that there would have to be a political solution and he put a time scale on it of between 2 and 3 years, and I am not aware that Dr Mokhtar has changed that assessment. I merely quote his assessment because he is the contact partner with Vietnam for the ASEAN countries and has been, I think, very much making the running on issues related to Kampuchea and Vietnam for this region.

Well, one more question I think. [break in recording] I can't speak for the Vietnamese or what they might do or what thoughts are in their minds or might come into their mind. We have been in contact with them on many more than one occasion, recommending to them that they should respond in a political way to propositions as they unfold.

And, by a political way I mean not rule out completely, absolutely, a proposition which is put forward. Most notably, we did that last year at the time the ASEAN proposal made out for proximity talks, and I think the evidence was that they responded in a more political way, a more receptive way than they had before, and we seek to urge them to do that. That is the only way that dialogue is ever going to get underway -- if, in fact, it is ever to get underway. It is for respective parties in dispute over an issue to accept that there must be points of negotiation on those particular points where they have strong opposition to a proposition. In Australia we have a curious system of industrial relations which is very much based on that sort approach to resolve disputes. It is called ambit claims, where each party stakes out its most desired position, but is prepared to negotiate on matters of detail and commitment after the initial ambit statement is made. And that is the approach we have recommended to the Vietnamese -- with variable success, as you would have obviously noted.

'SOURCE' SAYS SOVIET AID TO LAOS HELD AT PORT

BK110844 Bangkok BANGKOK WORLD in English 11 Jun 86 p 3

[Text] A Soviet ship carrying 120 tons of asphalt to be shipped to Laos has been docked at the transit section of Khlong Toei Port for two months as the Thai authorities have not yet allowed it to pass through Thailand. An informed source said the Thai authorities has not yet allow the passage for fear that the asphalt would be used in the construction of stragetic roads in Laos. The road may pose a threat to Thai security, he said. During the recent years Thailand has delayed the shipment of over 2,000 tons of such construction material from Sweden and Japan to the landlocked country. According to a Laotian diplomat, the Thai authorities did not prohibit the shipment of aid from socialist countries through Thailand. They simply haven't granted a permission yet, he said.

Attacker Said 'Mentally Ill'

BK120507 Hong Kong in English 0458 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Text] Hanoi, June 12 (AFP) -- Police have arrested a young man in a grenade attack on the Czechoslovak Embassy here, eyewitnesses said Thursday.

The grenade caused minor damage but there were no casualties in the Wednesday incident, the eyewitnesses said. The man was arrested by embassy guards. An embassy official said the young man was mentally ill. Unconfirmed reports said he was a Vietnamese worker recently expelled from Czechoslovakia.

There are some 30,000 Vietnamese workers and students in Czechoslovakia. Frequent explusions are reported, attributed by informed sources to the difficulty the large Vietnamese community has in adapting to life in Czechoslovakia.

Attacks on foreigners are rare in Vietnam, although there have been some incidents in recent years involving Soviet citizens in Ho Chi Minh City (ex-Saigon), where anti-communist sentiment remains strong.

U.S. MIA DELEGATION ARRIVES IN HANOI 11 JUN

BK111158 Hong Kong AFP in English 1145 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] Hanoi, June 11 (AFP) -- A team of U.S. experts arrived here Wednesday for talks on tracing the 1,792 U.S. servicemen still listed as missing in action (MIA) during the Vietnam war. The Americans are to hold technical discussions Thursday and Friday with Vietnamese experts led by Nguyen Can, head of the department in charge of searching for MIA's. Both the U.S. and Vietnamese delegations refused to comment on the agenda or on Hanoi's cancellation of the last round of talks in April, officially in protest at the U.S. air raid on Libya.

Hanoi has accused Washington of falling to cooperate in the search for MIA's and for refusing to make a formal commitment to Vietnam's two-year plan aimed at revolving the problem. It has also criticized the contention of some U.S. officials that MIA's were still being held in Vietnam.

Washington, despite heated controversy at home, has so far refused to link the MIA issue, which it considers to be a humanitarian matter, to Hanoi's pressure for a resumption of diplomatic relations between the two countries.

Vietnamese officials gave no reason for the resumption of the technical talks. In recent weeks, Hanoi had hinted it might continue the search on its own if Washington did not cooperate.

Observers expected the talks to center on the records of a number of MIA's and, possible, further searches of the crash site of a U.S. aircraft downed during the war.

Western diplomatic sources said the U.S. team might also take up the issue of the orderly departues program (ODP) of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees [UNHCR]. The number of Vietnamese permitted to emigrate to the United States has dwindled since the start of the year because of disagreements over the selection of participants.

Since the United States and Vietnam began working together on tracing missing servicemen in 1982, Hanoi has located and handed over the reamins of 128 MIA's. The latest ceremony took place on April 10, shortly before Hanoi cancelled the April meeting of experts. Resumption of the talks was announced after U.S. delegation members met Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son in New York on May 31. Meetings had previously been held once every two months. The U.S. team, led by the Hawaii-based director of the U.S. Armed forces' Joint Casualty Resolution Center, Colonel Joe Harvey, included U.S. National Security Council Asian Affairs Adviser Richard Cildress and the director of the National League of Prisoner-of-War/MIA Families, Ann Mill Griffiths.

FURTHER ON CRITICISM, SELF CRITICISM DIRVE

In Hanoi

BK081115 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 7 Jun 86

[Text] On 6 June 1986, the Hanoi party committee held a conference of key cadres from various districts, precincts, towns, and sectors in the municipality to accelerate self-criticism and criticism in the party organization.

All the party committees of districts, precincts, and towns have completed self-criticism and have gathered the views of cadres, party members, and people on the leadership of the party committees as a whole and on individual key cadres, secretaries, and deputy secretaries.

The criticisms of party committee echelons in Hoan Kime precinct and Gia Lam and Long Anh Districts have been reviewed.

Many other primary installations in districts have been selected for self-criticism and criticism so that experiences can be derived and the criticism drive can be expanded to the party organizations of public security forces, food stores, grain stores, materials companies, city wards, and villages.

With a view to satisfactorily conducting self-criticism and criticism, the Hanoi party committee has directed primary installations to complete the review of criticism within June or early in July, and to consider and publicize the mistakes and shortcomings and remedial action taken so that the people can control and supervise the remedial action.

Corrective action must primarily be focused on those paractical issues related to the people's livelihood, Remedial action must be resolutely carried out to secure the people's confidence. The municipal party committee urges all districts, precinct, and sector authorities to provide close guidance for this drive of self-criticism and criticism and to oppose sloppy work.

In Ha Nam Ninh Province

BK110952 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 28 May 86 p 3

[Text] The Ha Nam Ninh provincial party committee recently conducted self-criticism collectively and invidually to prepare for the standing bodies of party committee echelons to look into the suggestions made by various echelons, sectors, and veteran revolutionaries. The committee members dealt directly with problems of concern brought up by the party organization. Three key cadres of the committee made specific self-criticism and criticism. The criticism attitude adopted by the provincial party committee was straightforward, sincere, and open-minded, thereby helping consolidate internal and unity within the committee and its standing body.

The provincial party committee decided to take the following actions immediately: Reexamine violations of policies and law as well as outstanding lawsuits in order to resolve them in a strict and just manner; correct shortcomings concerning the holding of lavish banquets and drinking parties, the persecution of cadres, and oppression of the masses; and quickly resolve cases involving land misappropriation, illegal goods purchases, misuse of public funds, and irregularities in the hiring of personnel. Regarding those provincial party committee members allegedly involved in such practices, their cases must be settled in June 1986, and just and strict measures must be taken against them. From now on, any party member who commits corruption, theft, and other crimes involving giving or taking bribes will be removed from the party. Trade personnel who supply goods to blackmarketeers and commit theft and corruption will be expelled from the state organization. We must resolutely revoke the party membership of those who no longer qualify.

It is necessary to cultivate the habit of working harder and talking less and matching words with deeds, strictly observe regulations and procedures in rafting decisions, cut down on meeting time, and rectify the work methods of the provincial people's committee standing body. Key cadres of various echelons and sectors must spend at least 2 days per month meeting the rank and file and improve their work methods to get on top of the situation. All echelons and sectors must set up pilot units for guidance. It is necessary rearrange the organization, finish the assignment of key cadres to the various echelons and sectors before the fourth congress of the provincial party organizations, and correct some deficiencies in the implementation of the cadre policy.

Roundup on Drives

[Text] So far, 66 central committees and sectors and 36 provinces and municipalities have conducted self-criticism and criticism drives in accordance with the spirit of the directive of the CPV Central Committee Secretariat. Of these organizations and administrative units, 54 central committees and sectors and 25 provinces and municipalities have completed the criticism of their collective leaderships and key cadres, while 12 central committees and sectors and 11 provincial and municipal party committees have finished their criticism of collectives and, since early June, begun self-criticism drives aimed at key leading cadres.

Many central committees and sectors have organized criticism drives among subordinate specialized units and party committees, party chapters, and party members. All localities have completed criticism of a number of committees, sectors, precincts, districts, and installations. A number of localities have basically completed criticism drives of district party committees and party organizations directly responsible to the provincial or municipal party committees.

Under the direct guidance of the Secretariat and a number of comrades in the Political Bureau, many committees, sectors, and provincial and municipal party committees have done a pretty good job in criticizing collectives and key leaders. A number of localities, whose preparations were not sufficiently good or whose criticism drives did not meet the required standard, have made new preparations or conducted new drives.

Many provincial and municipal party committees and committees, sectors, and mass organizations at the central level have collected the views of cadres, party members, and the masses in various ways, such as by holding meetings of lower-echelon key cadres and having them take part in formulating draft criticisms for their respective echelons; dispatching key cadres to the grass-roots levels to contact cadres, party members, the masses, and retired cadres; organizing meetings so that lower-echelon party organizations and the masses can contribute their views on the situation, to be reviewed by higher echelons; and motivating cadres and party members to write to their leaders or use the press to openly contribute opinions to local party committee echelons.

Although the level and results of the criticism drives are of varying degrees, the leaderships of the various committees and sectors and provincial and municipal party committees have been able to pinpoint the major strengths and weaknesses as well as the contributions of lower echelons. The issues of quality, leadership style, and cadre policy, mentioned in the directive of the party secretariat, have often been mentioned in the criticism reports.

Drive Continues Within Party

BK111217 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] The self-criticism and criticism campaign within the CPV in anticipation of the coming sixth party congress is still going on. Party members in all branches and at all levels have reaffirmed the great achievements recorded by the CPV over the past 50 years of leading the Vietnamese people in their revolution. They also pointed to shortcomings and weaknesses in the work, management, and leadership of all party levels and branches.

Late May, at the 10th plenum of the party, the Central Committee, the Political Bureau, the Secretary Committee of the CPV, and the Standing Committee of the Council of Ministers made serious self-criticism and criticism. This has created an atmosphere of trust in the CPV among the Vietnamese people.

In Minh Hai Province

BK111406 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0500 GMT 11 Jun 86

[From the review of NHAN DAN for 11 June]

[Text] The paper carries prominently on page 3 a report on the initial results of the self-criticism drive conducted by the Minh Hai provincial party committee. The report says:

After making self-criticism and criticism, the provincial party committee has adopted measures aimed at developing strong points and overcoming deficiencies. As an immediate step, efforts will be concentrated on satisfactorily guiding the self-criticism and criticism drive within the party organization, resolutely striving to fulfill the production plan for the summer-fall crop season, distributing goods to the people on an equitable basis, resolving the remaining cases involving negativism, stabilizing the market, and improving the people's life.

The provincial party and people's committees have decided to reorganize and consolidate the two provincial hospitals and to remove checkpoints that have been set up in violation of established regulations. The secretary and deputy secretary of the provincial party committee and the chairman of the provincial people's committee will periodically receive the people at the offices of the provincial party and people's committees.

Following the self-criticism conference, first round, of the provincial party committee, the committee's standing body has assigned its members to key districts, cities, and sectors in the province to guide the self-criticism and criticism drive and opened a conference of key cadres from the various sectors, branches, and mass organizations at the provincial level to hear criticisms of the provincial party committee.

Hoang Lien Son Province Results

[Text] To date, all districts and cities as well as all party committees subordinate to various services, organs, sectors, corporations, stations, enterprises, state farms, forestry sites, hospitals, city wards, and villages in Hoang Lien Son Province have conducted self-criticism and criticism in compliance with the directive of the party Central Committee. Many leading key cadres at various establishments have adopted a serious attitude in self-criticism and criticism and have subscribed to the critical opinions of cadres, party members, and the masses.

The executive committee of the Hoang Lien Son provincial party organization has also met recently to review the results of self-criticism and criticism.

The Hoang Lien Son provincial party committee has noted that there are still many shortcomings, especially in economic leadership and in work related to the education of cadres and party members in revolutionary ethics. The provincial party organization has reflected its weakest point in organizing, directing, and supervising the implementation of various resolutions of the party and state.

Despite the fact that it has held quite frequent meetings, the provincial party organization still lacks the practical experience to ensure close and suitable guidance, especially in economic management.

A large number of party members and cadres still adopt a middle-of-the-road attitude and remain sluggish and inactive in their daily life and work. Another number of them -- including those in the provincial party committee -- have degenerated and become degraded in terms of political equality and lifestyle and have grossly violated the party's policies, regulations, and discipline.

The provincial party committee itself still fails to carry out cadre planning and training work satisfactorily, constantly foster cadres and rationally assign work to them, and consider commendation and enforce discipline in a just and strict manner.

Efforts have not yet been made by some localities to analyze carefully and adequately the causes of their shortcomings to enforce countermeasures. In certain localities, key leading cadres with shortcomings have sought to avoid or delay criticism or to conduct it in a perfunctory manner, thus causing the self-criticism and criticism drive to lose its effect. A number of localities and party members have even helped each other conceal shortcomings or threatened those who have criticized them. Many localities have disclosed their shortcomings vaguely or have considered shortcomings as a social phenomenon, thus failing to adopt practical measures for correction.

To conduct criticism and self-criticism more satisfactorily, the standing body of the Hoang Lien Son provincial party committee has inspected all units and localities in the province both regularly and unexpectedly, and has continued collecting the masses' views on party building work.

The executive committee of the provincial party organization has set forth a number of specific taks that must be carried out, such as putting an immediate end to the practices of offering gifts, holding dinner parties, staging entertainment, distributing products and goods among members of production establishments, and engaging in illegal business activities; imposing a ban on alcoholism among cadres and party members; encouraging the people to abstain from alcohol; and resolving the situation in which key leading cadres of certain sectors, districts, and villages seek to buy raw and other material in an unprinciples way for the construction of their houses.

Various responsible sectors have investigated and replaced cadres who have shown a decline in quality or have had less effect on the masses. Hoang Lien Son has also paid attention to improving the living conditions of workers, civil servants, members of the Armed Forces, and the people.

REPORTAGE ON INDEPENDENCE DAY CELEBRATIONS

Coup Plot Seen; Army Alerted

HK111423 Hong Kong AFP in English 1417 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Excerpts] Manila, June 11 (AFP) -- The entire armed forces was placed on full alert Wednesday as the authorities said they had discovered a alleged plot by supporters of deposed President Ferdinand Moscos to take over the presidential palace.

Marcos supporters had hatched a plan to take over by force the Malacanang presidential palace, the government television station, and a Roman Catholic radio, Manila military chief Ramon Montano said in an interview aired over state-run television.

Armed Forces Chief General Fidel Ramos Wednesday placed the 250,000-strong armed forces on full alert to prevent any terrorist attacks during nationwide rites for the 88th anniversary of Philippine independence from Spanish colonial rule, spokesmen said.

Marcos Loyalists Arrested

[Text] The Capital Region Command [Capcom] will field no less than 10,000 men to counteract any trouble Marcos loyalists are intending to create today [12 June] to coincide with Independence Day celebratiions. Capcom chief Brigadier General Ramon Montano made the announcement yesterday even as he disclosed the military had established the identities of certain people behind the plot, codenamed "People Power Part 2." Montano said the plot involves the seizure of Malacanang as well as forcible takeover of government-run television and Radio Veritas. In an interview, Montano confirmed reports that remnants of the Marcos clique are behind the mass actions designed to foment trouble and to destabilize the new government of President Aquino.

[Begin Montano recording] We are sure of this, we have confirmed reports that there is a sinister plot, really, to use this mass action as a cover to take over Malacanang and to take over other symbolic institutions of our government for some sinister reasons. [end recording]

Following Gen Montano's disclosure, the military announced the arrest of former Malacanang troopers suspected of providing (?muscles) to pro-Marcos loyalists. The three were identified as Staff Sergenant (Basilio Ogne), and Sergeant (Narcio Edna), both of the Philippine Constabulary, and Corporal (Leonardo Bulor), formerly assigned with the Army. They were stopped aboard a (?telstar) at the checkpoint of Roxas and (Beni) Avenue in Pasay City. Confiscated from them were (?Cory) Filipino Movement I.D. card and manifestoes, Betamax tapes covering Marcos loyalists' rallies, and a tape of ex-President Marcos' interview in Hawaii. After the arrest, Brigadier General Ramon Montano, Capcom chief, confirmed reports that former Marcos leaders have been supporting the mass actions.

[Begin Montano recording] We know, we know [word indistinct] them, a few of the government officials as well as politicians who are funding this very, very unfortunate plan on their part to destabilize this present government. [end recording]

Protest Rally Canceled

HK120333 Hong Kong AFP in English 0331 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 12 (AFP) -- Supporters of Ferdinand Marcos Thursday called off a planned protest here to mark Independence Day and said the move had the blessing of the former president. The move came a day after troops and police went on full alert against an alleged plot by pro-Marcos groups to take over the presidential palace, the government television complex and a church-run radio station.

Lawyer Oliver Lozano, a spokesman of the Marcos loyalist movement here, told his comrades in a radio broadcast not to push through with a "prayer rally" at a suburban Manila rotunda due to possible violence "managed" by backers of President Corazon Aquino. He said Mr Marcos's chief counsel Rafael Recto, the movement's "adviser," told him to cancel the rally after conferring by telephone with Mr Marcos and his wife Imelda, who fled to Hawaii during the February revolt here.

The protest was to coincide with a parade and rally led by Mrs Aquino in central Manila. There were fears of a repeat of May Day clashes between Marcos and Aquino supporters.

A local radio station aired a taped message from Mr Marcos in which he appealed to "Madame Corazon Aquino," Vice President Salvador Laurel, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Armed Forces Chief General Fidel Ramos to "help build a country that is truly independent."

June 12 marks Philippine independence from Spain.

Aquino Hoists Flag

OW120325 Tokyo KYODO in English 0315 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 12 KYODO -- Ships in Manila Bay blew their horns as the country's first woman president, Corazon Aquino, raised a huge Philippine flag while an artillery squad fired off a thunderous 21-gun salute in Manila's Rizal Park to open celebrations Thursday marking the nation's 88th Independence Day. Hundreds of people who had waited since dawn for the early morning flag-raising ceremony near the monument to the country's national hero, Jose Rizal, cheered as the 53-year-old president arrived in the early morning. The former housewife and widow of former opposition leader Beningo Aquino was given full military honors, including three artillery salutes.

Wearing a yellow traditional two-piece "patadyong" dress, the commander-in-chief smiled as armed forces chief of staff, Gen. Fidel Ramos, cued her on when to return a military salute by Marine honor guards. Aquino laid a wreath and offered a one-minute prayer at the foot of the Rizal monument while a military band played a popular patriotic song. She shook hands with some cabinet ministers and members of the diplomatic corps at the end of the ceremonies as the people, many of them wearing yellow shirts and hats and waving banners and ribbons, applauded and chanted "Cory," her nickname.

Military authorities, who claimed to have uncovered a plot by Marcos loyalists to seize the presidential palace, mounted the tightest security operation around her since she was swept to power in a civilian-backed military revolt which ended 20 years of rule by former President Ferdinand Marcos last February.

Manila policemen discovered more than 15 Molotov cocktails in front of the plush Manila Hotel near the park early last Monday. They claimed Marcos loyalists were planning to use them to disrupt the Independence Day celebration.

The military mobilized at least 10,000 troops and policemen to keep order, while an Air Force helicopter hovered above the park during the morning ceremonies.

Dubbed "alay sa kalayaan at pagkakaisa" (for freedom and unity), the austere Independence Day celebration this year will be in sharp contrast to that of 1985, when Marcos made a show of force to his opponents in an unprecedented military display of tanks and Air Force flypasts. An afternoon parade in front of the freedom grandstand in the park, musical entertainment by popular singers and actors, and a fireworks display in the early evening were to cap the celebration of 88 years of freedom from Spanish colonialism.

This morning, flag-raising ceremonies were held all over the country including one at Kawit, Cavite which was attended by Vice President Salvador Laurel. In his short remarks, Laurel also called for the unity of the nation in order to attain progress. The full report from Marilou Linggad:

[Begin Linggad recording] It has been 88 years since the day General Emilio Aguinaldo waved the Philippine flag to proclaim the country's independence. Speaking on the occasion, Laurel stressed that in order to achieve long lasting political and economic recovery, the Filipino people must unite as one.

As foreign minister, Laurel was the first Philippine official to travel abroad seeking foreign aid for the Philippines. However, more than foreign aid, Laurel quoted Apolinario Mabini [Filipino hero of revolution of 1898] as saying no one will help the Filipinos but the Filipinos themselves, and added that no one will love the Filipinos but the Filipinos themselves.

At the same occasion, attention was focused on a group of war veterans who fought alongside Aguinaldo and his men. Young men in the days of Aguinaldo, they now entered the house of Aguinaldo as old and frail men. However, memories from a war in which they fought for freedom and independence lingered. Aquino Thanks Allies

[Excerpts] Manila, June 12 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino in a Philippines Independence Day message Thursday thanked friendly countries for their support in her successful crusade to topple Ferdinand Marcos. "Your moral support gave us the necessary encouragement to strengthen our resolve," Mrs. Aquino told members of the diplomatic corps and other guests at a presidential palace reception.

Virtually the whole international community had greeted with silence Mr. Marcos' victory in a disputed presidential poll last February. A popular uprising later that month forced him into exile after 20 years in power and installed Mrs. Aquino as the winner.

Mrs. Aquino said that "because of this, future relations with the rest of the world can count on this tremendous amount of goodwill." She was to address a parade and rally later Thursday celebrating the 88th anniversary of Manila's proclamation of independence from nearly four centuries of Spanish colonial rule. Mrs. Aquino said that Filipinos Thursday would "recall with pride our significant contribution to our remarkable achievement in February."

Supporters of Mr. Marcos Thursday had called off a planned protest here to mark the day and said the move had the blessing of the former president. Lawyer Oliver Lozano, a spokesman for the Marcos supporters, told his comrades in a radio broadcast not to push through with a "prayer rally" at a suburban Manila rotunda due to possible violence "managed" by Aquino backers. He said Mr. Marcos's chief counsel Rafael Recto, the movement's "adviser," told him to cancel the rally after conferring by telephone with the Marcoses at their residence in the U.S. state of Hawaii. There were fears of a repeat of May Day clashes between the two sides.

A local radio station aired a taped message from Mr. Marcos in which he appealed to "Madame Corazon Aquino," Vice President Salvador Laurel, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Armed Forces chief General Fidel Ramos to "help build a country that is truly independent."

AQUINO INTERVIEW REVIEWS FIRST 100 DAYS

HK110749 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 8 Jun 86 Sunday Inquirer Magazine PP 9-11, 28-29

[Interview of Philippine President Corazon Aquino in her office at the Malacanang Guesthouse by Sunday Inquirer Magazine Editor Letty Jimnez-Magsanoc on 3 June 1986: "'The Presidency Must be Something; Even My Mother-in-law Apologizes to Me'"]

[Text] Editor's Note: We interviewed President Cory Aquino last June 3 in her office at the Palace Guesthouse to check out the woman who once called herself "only a plain housewife" but who today holds the highest post in the land and is looked up to as a universal symbol of a People's Revolution for freedom and democracy without violence. We were looking for changes -- for better or for worse -- in President Aquino after a hundred days in the presidency. From the following interview, you be the judge....

LJM [Letty Jimenez-Magsanoc]: What would you do differently if you could start over from the Revolution?

Cory: I should have gone out more. In the early days, my indoors. Now that I am going out more it is really so much better. I saw other faces from Times St. to Malacanang.

LJM: Have you scheduled a series of provincial trips?

Cory: Not provincial but at least going out of Malacanang. Some people said before that if I wanted to see people, the people should come to Malacanang to see me. In the beginning I agreed, but then now I'm saying why should that be?

LJM: What looks different to you now that you're in a position of power? Things look different, I'm sure.

Cory: Oh very different. Like when I went to Cebu and Davao, I have met those people before during the campaign, but somehow, they thought that simply because my position has changed even if I was saying this would really not matter much. [sentence as published] Like I have had for example that question of photographs, I have had my picture taken before with them. Sabi nila, a iba 'yon dahil ngayon iba na, presidente ka na. [They say: Oh, it is different now because you are the President.] Things like that. Well I guess each day I begin to find out or experience that people attach, I guess, a lot of importance to the Office of the President. Well, if even my mother-in-law apologizes to me when she comes to the house without an appointment and says "I'm sorry Cory but I have to disturb you," the presidency must be really something. Times have really changed. Just like that.

Media, we just continued what we were doing before the campaign, meaning I had a spokesman. But then now, I don't need a spokesperson all the time. During the campaign it was necessary because I was always out of Manila. But this time I am really more accessible if there's really something urgent, I can just speak for myself. In fact now what I do is I ask Alice (Villadolid, deputy presidential spokesperson) to sit down with me when I meet with all of those different people because, earlier, many of my relatives were saying, "Alam mo [you know] Cory, the way you have been projected, okay you are seen on TV meeting all these people, but you are not saying anything, so they dont' even know what you are doing." And so, now at least with Alice around, because you know, she can write up about it. Whereas before, it's just okay, so I met with so and so, but the Filipino people have to be told that meeting with all of these foreign dignitaries is really not just a social affair. It's really to bring our government closer to their government and also to find out how we can cooperate with each other more fully.

Kamukha noong [like the] Swedish, he is the deputy minister of foreign trade and so in the past the balance of trade clearly has been in their -- in Sweden's favor -- and also for the past two years, they barely had investments here simply because I guess they were hesitant to invest because they were not so sure about what Marcos says or maybe they were sure that Marcos' policies meant he would favor cronies etc over other people. So like today, I was very pleased to meet the area manager for the office of import here.

So it just coincided. That I'm going to meet with 20 people who are in export. Like Mameng Yulo and... these other women who are going to meet with me today because I have promised to get them together with Jose Concepcion [Minister of Industry and Trade Jose Concepcion Jr] because of some of their complaints. But I have asked Swedish officials to come back this afternoon so that they would know what kind of export will be attractive to Sweden. Because Letty (Shahani) [deputy foreign minister] also said we'll have to teach our people not to impose our taste on others. We have to ask, ano ba ang gusto ninyo [what is it that you like] so that we can compete. And so I've asked them to come this afternoon to bring the sample of their products. I've seen Mameng Yulo's products -- shells. And so the Swedish deputy minister told me that we are a very small market really, but if your products make it to our market then this could be the beginning of your daily trade with other European countries. Of course they were also talking about a way of preserving our coconuts. But anyway, he said he's going to meet with Monching Mitra to discuss a joint project because we have the coconut and maybe they can provide their technique when they come. What happens is either the Ministry of Foreign Affairs or my presidential management staff prepares a briefing paper for me. So that I will know what point to touch on and what we need is also to have better share in the garment market in Sweden. Apparently, the minister was telling me they only produce 15 percent of textile, but more on the finished products. Also, we were hoping to get into the textile market.

So, it's not just social calls. Like when I received the Foreign Minister from Korea. Well, I was told already, okay...Kim Tae-chung (Korean opposition leader) is your friend. Don't mention it anymore. I always have to consciously remind myself, okay, your personal life is a thing of the past. You now represent the Filipino people. I will not do anything to upset Philippine-Korean relations. And you know the thing is this, one of Kim Tae-chung's friends came here and delivered a letter to me from Kim Tae-chung. He asked would you like Mr. Kim Tae-chung to visit you. Can he leave the country, if he can visit, well of course, being a friend. But at the same time we have to realize that it is different now. Because how would I feel if Korea was being so friendly to Marcos? At the same time, I also would like to keep my friends. Well, I'm no longer my own boss.

LJM: But you're in charge now.

Cory: No, no, meaning to say like for a simple thing to eat out, I can't. I have to tell Col. Yap or somebody else, Kakain ako dito [I am going to eat here.] Because once without telling them I sent out to eat, they were so upset, na wala pa daw yong advance security ko roon [my advance security had not reached there yet] and when I get invited out to a dinner, it's so embarassing because of all those security with me. Nakakahiya, eh [it is very embarassing.] In fact what I do usually is for us to eat first so that we will not be imposing on whoever invites me. Then of course I no longer take care of my own shopping needs. I mean I have to rely on my daughters to do that for me. I just describe. Everything just has to be done at home. Once or twice already, I have gone to a beauty parlor. I said pabayaan na ninyo, makita naman ako ng ibang tao [leave it at that. Let some people see me.] I guess the security will just have to give me some leeway.

LJM: Will you go on wearing yellow?

Cory: I have so many yellow telas. [textile or clothing fabric] The Korean Minister gave me a yellow material also. Even the Swedish Ambassador was wearing a yellow dress. And all these people who visit me they feel they have to wear something yellow. But, anyway, like yesterday, I had to wear a Filipina dress. The last time I wore a terno [Philippine gown with butterfly sleeves which Imelda Marcos used to wear during official functions] was before martial law. After that what will I do with a terno?

LJM: You're not the President now of Unido [United Nationalist Democratic Organization] or PDP-Laban [Filipino Democratic Party-Lakas ng Bayan] You're president of all the people, what are you doing to make your so-called enemies come to your side, and I don't only mean the insurgents? Have you, for instance, considered a visit to the Ilocos and appeal for reconciliation?

Cory: In fact, Letty (Shahani, deputy foreign minister and an Ilocana) is telling me that. I think that will come later. I mean, it takes time also for them to accept somebody like me because, I think whatever Marcos did, I'm sure that the Ilocanos are really grateful to him for what he did for them. So who am I to say that they should really accept me? So I will let time go by before I go there. I will be going to other different provinces because I promised to bring the government closer to the people. This is part of the consultation with the people.

LJM: How would you reconcile your government of consultation with your very well-known aversion to getting unsolicited advice?

Cory: I think, when I said that, it was to discourage so many people telling me what to do. But my goodness, who am I to say that I know everything.

I do listen to people but it's just that I do not have enough time, so it's really a question of deciding who I would like to listen to. It's really all so different now. Whereas before, I could really give so much of my time especially to people that I like. But now when Ching (Escaler, appointments secretary) comes in with this long list of requests, poor Ching, because she gets blamed for screening people, but the truth of the matter is that she comes with this long list and the first two months, the first month anyway, I was religiously checking everything and then I was willing to meet all of them but a time came when I really needed some time for myself so that at least I could read all of these papers that I'm supposed to read. Plus to look back at what I had been doing and try to find out what I have been doing wrong and how do I correct that and also just to be able to talk to my ministers one on one. That takes time.

LJM: At this point in your presidency, the most significant difference between you and Marcos is he got blamed for everything including typhoons, which you're not blamed for anything.

Cory: Malapit na Malapit na Siguro. [That is probably close enough.]

LJM: Your government is so dependent on the support and cooperation of people and the general perception of people is that some of your ministers have been abrasive. These three months were like their probation period. In response to people's demands, is there a Cabinet reshuffle in the offing?

Cory: Well I guess I am prejudiced. I don't think they've been abrasive. I mean...anyway, abrasiveness would really rank lower to me anyway, as far as effective adminsitration, plus also, so long as they have not done wrong. You know they have not really done something morally or legally wrong then, to adjust to the position takes some time. It's not a question of accepting a new job and getting the hang of it in a matter of a week or two. It takes a lot of time and also choosing the people who will be helping me.

Remember before when I said I'm sure that I can get 50 honest and qualified men and women to help me run the government? It's not that easy after all. You just have to think that at least let me get the best possible rather than get anybody who will not get any flak. I think what I have learned now is that, whatever I do, I don't think even I don't get 100 percent approval but I might as well do what I should rather than allow myself something which I don't really believe in. I'm going to be responsible for something that I truly believe in rather than answer for something that wasn't really totally subscribed by me.

LJM: Has Pimentel [Local Governments Minister Aquino Pimentel] offered to resign?

Cory: Not to me.

LJM: How about Salas. Will you call him back...?

Cory: I haven't talked to him. I talked to him before. In fact I asked him during the campaign if he could help us because I remember Ninoy saying what a good manager he was and we didn't have anyone in full control of the campaign. So I did ask him but at that time he couldn't leave the U.N.

When I was in Davao during the briefing, it wasn't really the eating part. I wanted to blow my nose but naku, nakatinhin lahat ng camera sa akin. Ubo ubo na lang ako [dear, all the cameras were on me. I wanted to cough.] but I couldn't blow my nose. I knew they're watching out for something like that.

About that eating, in fairness to Teddy Boy (Locsin) [Information Minister Teodoro Locsin] you know he was being protective....Okay na sa akin 'yon. [That is alright with me] When I was eating, I could hardly eat because of all those cameras there. Pearlie (Morales of the media office) was asking them let's be fair so the President can eat. But I guess, that's your job as a photographer, you have to take a different pose.

LJM: How are you reining in your relatives. Aside from not appointing them to office, how are you keeping them under control?

Cory: It's just a joke now. In fact they're saying that before, you have to proclaim to the whole world that you are a relative of Marcos. Hindi ko naman kamag-anak si Cory, eh Medyo, Malayo-layo, [Well, I am not a relative of Cory. Well, a bit distant, perhaps,] you know, to get an appointment or something. I guess I never speak of myself as being related to Jobo Fernandez [Central Bank Governor Jose Fernandez] just because he's married to the first cousin of my sister-in-law but somehow people say that I am related to him. If we're going to do that, I'll be related to everybody. Like Ninoy comes from a family of 11 brothers and sisters. I have six brothers and sisters. All of us got married. Medyo dumadami nga ang mga kamaganak. [Our family has sort of expanded.] Some of my relatives ask, Cory, okay ba na magbiyahe kami? [Cory, is it all right for us to travel?] I was so embarrassed. But I was already telling them, because there was an incident in the airport that has really upset me because somebody pretended na kasama din siya ng nephew ko [that he was with my nephew]... and so I called on my niece. Sabi ko tawagin mo yung kapatid mo at ano ba itong dinala niya [I told her to call up her brother and ask him about his baggage which reportedly numbered] because 30 something pieces of baggage. My nephew wrote to me, all I had was one suitcase. I came back maybe 'yong kasama niyang iba, [his companion said those belonged to him] said that those were his. So I said, the next time that person comes in, just open all of their suitcases to buma nga yon. [he came back.] Somebody already told me babalik, [he will return], so I told the Avsecon [Aviation Security Command] babalik na naman yon. Relative ko nga, pamangkin ko. [he will return. He is my relative, my nephew.] I can't imagine because he's a very quiet person. In fact naawa na rin ako [I felt sorry for him]. He wrote me a letter. He said, you know I would never hurt you and I know how very strict you are in fact. They tell me it's a good thing na mahal ka pa nitong mga relatives mo [my relatives still love me].

Like Butz (Aquino) was saying, paano ito, mag-aartista na lang siguro ako [Now is this? I will probably go back to acting.]. And then, once, Maur (Lichauco, Ninoy's sister) came, she said, "puede bang bigyan mo lang ako ng ID?" [can you just give me an ID card] because everytime I go to Malacanang, I have to identify myself. I said we made a rule here that if you don't work in this office you don't get an ID otherwise if we make exceptions. Sinabi ko rin sa kinia [I also told them] all relatives have to make appointments. One day Peping (Cojuangco, her brother) came to my house. Sinabi ko mag appointment ka [I told them he should make an appointment] but anyway, just ride in my car and you can talk to me on the way to Malacanang but after that mayroon ng ibang naka schedule. I'm sorry na hindi na pwedeng singit-singit [there are others ahead scheduled. I'm sorry that you cannot be accomodated] because the schedule will be fouled up and everything is delayed because of somebody saying two minutes or three minutes only. And then towards the end, one hour, one hour and a half... The appointment is two hours delayed. It upsets whoever is also sitting out like some of my friends told me, Cory, two hours kami naghintay, hindi man lang kami pina-inom ng tubig. I just want to tell you that pag naghihintay kami for Marcos may pagkain and all that. Sabi ko naman, tingnan naman ninyo ang nangyari sa gobyerno, kumain na kayo before you come here. So yung [Cory, we waited for 2 hours were not even given a glass of water. I just want to tell you that when we waited for Marcos, there is food and all that. I told them, look what happen to the government then. Eat before you come here. So such] things like that I guess.

But even for these foreign diplomats...in fact I ask should I be serving them something. Sabi huwag na [they said don't] because they only have 30 minutes also and it will take time. But I really haven't given a formal dinner yet to any of these visiting dignitaries because wala pa naman [there is still no] head of state. All heads of government have come. So it's been Doy (Laurel) Vice President and Foreign minister Salvador Laurel] who has been entertaining them and Doy, thank you na lang [very much]. In fact I ask Doy, turuan mo na lang ako mag-offer ng toast. [teach me how to offer a toast]. Send me copies of the toast that you have been making. In fact, yesterday, sa Batasan, ay salamat na lang at si [at the Batasan, thank goodness] Doy was in charge of the closing. I didn't know what to do. Sabi niya, [he said] "Cory I have the script all written up for you." Alam niya lahat ng gagawin. [he knows all that has to be done.]

LJM: If the Con-Com [Constitutional Commission] decides on a national election, would you have the same running mate if you run again?

Cory: Hindi na ako kasali doon [I will not be part of that]. I think I'm just meant for snap elections. In fact one of my daughters was praying na salamat na lang [thank god] if they (Con-Com) will change, at nang mabilis na lamang ako dito. [so that I will pass through here quickly], And they were telling me, Cory don't say that because medyo lameduck ka na [you are somewhat lameduck] but it would be so dishonest of me to say not to say what I've said even before that I'm just for a snap election. Pinapa-alala nga ng mga anak ko [my children remind me], "Mommy remember you promised us that after..."

LJM: Even Kris?

Cory: Kris? Ay naku sobra ang batang 'yan. I was telling her hindi ka ba nagsaswa [oh dear, that child is too much. I was telling her, are you not tired of it?] It's really a nightmare for her security wherever she goes. Noong una [at first] she was allowed two security. She's given two. Ngayaon sabi niya [now she says], because she is so exposed to big crowds, they really mob her, dahil pag hinatak na siya, in fact at Aranenta Coliseum, napunit talaga ang damit niya, from being mobbed, and doon lang sa Tokyo [because they come to her, in fact at Araneta Coliseum, her dress was torn from being mobbed, and over in Tokyo], it seems she was being hauled by four men. I guess because she looks like a Japanese, they liked her or what.

LJM: The most dominant force in your government is the military and among the ministers in your Cabinet Defense Minister Enrile is way up front. There's a belief that this Enrile bloc is powerful enough to act independently of your government.

Cory: No. In fact it would have been impossible for us to work together right away. You know what our past relationship was. I mean, he was in charge of Ninoy before but I think the fact that I'm working on a better relationship with Johnny [Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile] and Eddie [Armed Forces Chief of Staff Fidel V. Ramos] who have really gone out of their way also to work not only with me but with the rest of the civilian government. It just takes time, like everything else, to adjust to each other because, first of all... well, I used to just see him, to ask for priviliges for Ninoy and all of a sudden it's different. It was the first time I really realized that Presidente na ako talaga [I am really the President] when I visted Camp Aguinaldo.

Before I used to be so afraid everytime I go there. I have to get my ID and wait before, finally I'm allowed to see Minister Enrile. Now all of a sudden, its different. There are honors for me. At that time I was still very conscious of my salute. I'd like to do it right for the first time and I didn't really have time to practice.

For the PMA [Philippine Military Academy] graduation, between Bert Yap and Col Gazmin, I said turuan na ninyo ako [I said to them, teach me], because although there was a memorandum that the PMA sent to me that I am not expected to salute, I will just put my right hand over my breast, and somebody told me, hindi ba si Margaret Thatcher nagsa-salute, hindi naman head of state si Margaret Thatcher, [isn't it that Margaret Thatcher salutes, and Margaret Thatcher is not a head of state], but the Queen always salutes because she's the Commander-in-Chief. Nagpaturo na rin ako [I had myself taught], for half an hour, we were rehearsing in Malacanang Park. But I was really so nervous that time.

LJM: You practiced marching and saluting?

Cory: Everything. They were all very serious and I thought I shouldn't smile because it's such a serious thing. But when I got to the PMA tinanoing ko naman kay [I asked] Eddie (Ramos), Eddie is it all right if I smile. Ang Sabi Niya [he said] do whatever you want, in fact I think the people are waiting for you to wave at them that's why I waved back, although some people later on told me I'm not supposed to be waving. When the cannons started firing, Naku, yong puso ko talaga... [oh, dear, my heart almost...] As if my heart would jump out and I think that was my most nervous time. Nagulat talaga ako... [I was really surprised...] I better do well because kayong mga lalaki [for you men] it's very difficult for you to accept a woman as your boss. I think for the military medyo mahirap ng kaunti. [It is a bit more difficult].

ONGPIN ACCUSED OF VIOLATING ANTI-GRAFT LAW

HK120321 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 11 Jun 86 p 9

[Excerpt] The Anti-Graft League of the Philippines (AGLP) yesterday filed before the Tanodbayan a criminal charge against Finance Minister Jaime V. Ongpin for alleged violation of the Anti-Graft and Corrupt Practices Act by enforcing a government contract with a French import surveillance outfit.

AGLP charged Ongpin of conspiring with former President Marcos, former Prime Minister Cesar E. A. Virata, former Trade and Industry Minister Roberto V. Ongpin, Central Bank Gov. Jose B. Fernandez, Oscar J. Kneubuehler of the Societe Generale de Surveillance S. A. and others "to enforce an illegal and immoral contract."

AGLP officials, led by chairman Crispin T. Reyes, executive director Oswaldo A. Garbonnel and secretary-general Braulio F. Cabarloc, said they filed the case against Ongpin and company because "national interest demands that we pursue the four-day revolution against any dangerous scoundrel occupying a sensitive cabinet position who has really no business staying even for a minute."

AQUINO APPROVES NEW ECONOMIC 'POLICY-AGENDA'

[By Oscar M. Guiambao]

[Text] President Aquino has approved a new economic program which will declare a moratorium on strikes, enact a freedom of information law and initiate a broad employment program to generate a million jobs.

The program, a copy of which was made available to the INQUIRER, was approved at last Wednesday's Cabinet meeting, but will only be formally announced on June 12. The program will be submitted this week to the International Monetary Fund for approval.

Based on the program, entitled "Policy-Agenda for People-Powered Development," the government will exert efforts to uphold the tripartite agreement to declare a moratorium on strikes, lockouts, layoffs, retrenchment and illegal dismissal.

The strike ban is set to take effect in the next three months. Meantime, the government will formulate a Code of Industrial Harmony to upgrade dispute settlement as well as to promote collective bargaining and workers' welfare.

According to the document, the government will "whole heartedly" support the rights of workers to organize, bargain collectively and to exhaust all legal means for the redress of their grievances. Also, the "one-union-one-industry" provision of the Labor Code, enacted by the Macao regime, shall be repealed. The government will maintain a policy of non-intervention in wage-setting, the document said.

The government, to ensure the greater anticipation of the people in official decisionmaking will enact a Freedom of Information Act. The program revealed that for the government to induce demands through increased income, the state will launch a comprehensive employment program to generate an additional one million jobs. The program shall provide such jobs as rural road maintenance, communal irrigation, water supply, flood control, small ports and reforestation.

The basic principles that will guide the government in its functions, the program said, will be the respect of human rights, promotion of social justice and poverty alleviation, attainment of growth and greater efficiency and limited government intervention.

NDF'S OCAMPO SENDS OPEN LETTER TO AQUINO

BK120329 Manila PNA in English 0245 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Excerpts] Manila, June 12 (PNA) -- The communist National Democratic Front (NDF) Thursday released an open letter of former newsman Satur C. Ocampo, saying he was thankful to President Corazon Aquino for accepting him as one of the communist leaders who will hold ceasefire talks with a government panel. Full text of Ocampo's letter follows:

In the name of the National Democratic Front, I thank President Corazon C. Aquino for accepting me as one of the representatives of the revolutionary forces who will engage in a dialogue and negotiations with her representatives concerning the question of a ceasefire. Implicit in this acceptance, I believe, is president Aquino's acknowledgment of our mutual sincere desire for genuine and lasting peace and national unity.

President Aquino has stated that if we are to hope reasonably for a lasting peace...the roots of insurgency (which) are in the economic conditions of the people and the social structures that oppress them must be addressed vigorously. That concisely puts in perspective and dialogue and negotiations that the two sides will undertake.

This is no easy task for me and my comrades and for the government panel, not only because the process entails the resolution of many immediate and long-term problems, which may require lengthy and difficult negotiations, but also because there are elements in and out of the government who would rather not see the negotiations proceed and succeed.

Our people's interest and welfare are the uppermost concern of the National Democratic Front, the Communist Party of the Philippines, the New People's Army and other revolutionary forces supporting the armed struggle. A genuine and lasting peace based on justice and democracy will certainly serve our people's interest and welfare. Thus, the National Democratic Front and its affiliated organizations are determined to seek the road to this peace, over the conference table and elsewhere.

For me, this new role is an immense responsibility. Hardly had I recovered from almost a decade of imprisonment by the Marcos fascist dictatorship, hardly had I familiarized myself with the advanced forms and content of the people's revolutionary struggle, when I was asked to assume this task. Humbly but resolutely I take up as an expression of trust in me by the revolutionary forces and [words indistinct] challenge to serve our people more.

Three years ago, President Aquino went to the Bicutan pc-inp jail to visit political detainees, one of whom was myself. Candor and the spirit of a common quest for freedom and justice pervaded that meeting. I hope that these qualities will continue to mark her dealings with me and my comrades as we being this enterprise.

As soon as the necessary arrangements are completed, I look forward to calling on President Aquino and renewing acquaintances and friendships, specially with my colleagues in the press.

OPPOSITION PARTY ON CEASE-FIRE TALKS WITH CPP

BK120349 Manila PNA in English 0322 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, Jun 12 (PNA) -- The negotiations for a ceasefire between government forces and the communists can put new strains in the uneasy civilian-military coalition, according to the Central Committee of the opposition Partido Nacionalista ng Filipinas. It said a proposed coalition government incorporating the communists as one of the ruling groups has already set off a wave of anxieties among members of the new Armed Forces of the Philippines [AFP].

The committee said the Aquino government ought to state a complete policy concerning the negotiations for a ceasefire, its concept of attainable conditions and the limits to which the sovereignty of the government will [be] exposed. The demands of political accountablity and the necessity for secrecy in the negotiations should be reconciled, but in the end accountability should prevail, the committee said.

There is also a danger that in creating false hopes and expectations, the government and its Armed Forces might become unduly complacement, it said.

The committee noted that in Singapore recently, Jose Ma. Sison, founding chairman of the Communist Party of the Philippines, had outlined the conditions for a ceasefire centered in a coalition government that include the ruling party, the new AFP under Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Gen. Fidel Ramos, and Communist Party of the Philippines.

The Aquino government has maintained a discreet silence in these terms, but this may simply be misunderstood as acquiescence, the committee said. The committee said a military coup d'etat, though always a possibility during a revolutionary period, is at this time extremely remote because of the prohibitive cost of such an enterprise and the stabilizing infuence of the United States, which backs up the Aquino government.

However, if the Aquino government is perceived later as capitulating to the more onerous demands of the CPP-NPA, including a coalition government, this political equation can change quickly and the coalition between President Aquino and her military chiefs can collapse, the committee said.

On the positive side for national stability, the committee noted that some 100 million U.S. dollars for the new AFP has been committed for delivery within 1986 by the United States, mostly in terms of logistical support, in addition to some 500 million U.S. dollars for economic support. With a higher morale, greater mobility and improved conditions all around, the new AFP will be in a position to back up the government's position in the event the ceasefire talks have to fail, the committee said.

TOLENTINO REJECTS 'DESTABILIZING' CHARGE

HK120412 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 11 Jun 86 pp 1, 5

[Excerpt] Former MP Arturo M. Tolentino of Manila tossed back to the Aquino administration yesterday the charge of destabilizing the government. "By the very nature of the system -- revolutionary government -- it would be presumptuous for anyone to claim the government is stable," he said.

Tolentino, the Kilusang Bagong Lipunan (KBL) titular head, said "it is what they do and not what the KBL or the Marcos 'loyalists' say that is destablizing the government." "We are being accused of inciting to sedition and to destabilize that Aquino government when we have not even done 30 percent of what they did on the streets during the Marcos era," he said.

Tolentino recalled that when Mrs Corazon C. Aquino asked the people not to pay their taxes to the Marcos government, nobody questioned her, but now that "loyalists" threaten not to pay taxes she says they are inciting to sedition. He said President Aquino is not a dictator "but the men around her are and they dictate upon her." Tolentino said it is only when the government becomes constitutional that economic recovery and political stability can be achieved.

He said Aquino's worst mistake was the abolition of the Batasang Pambansa which, he said, was the symbol of democracy. The KBL leader noted that while the government preaches national reconciliation and boasts of having restored democracy, its action and policies are undemocratic and vindictive.

He cited the sequestration of properties of private individuals, the violent dispersals of marches and rallies of the so-called Marcos "loyalists" and its refusal to adhere to the rule of law.

Tolentino denied that the series of rallies staged by the Marcos "loyalists" were intended to install him as acting president.

"The government should not misinterpret the rallies as aimed at destabilizing the government," he said. "They were merely intended to show protest against government policies. They marched to Malacanang because it is the seat of power."

He urged the Aquino government to initiate reforms, adhere to the rule of law, and change its policies for the welfare of the people so it can attain stability and acceptance.

GEN JOSE MAGNO PROMOTED TO NO 2 IN MILITARY

HK121101 Hong Kong AFP in English 1034 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 12 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino has promoted the military chief of rebel-torn Mindanao to the second-highest rank in the Philippine Armed Forces, the presidential palace announced Thursday. Major General Jose Magno, 53, tipped by many to be the next chief of staff, is now second in rank only to Armed Forces chief General Fidel Ramos, who at 58 is serving beyond retirement age. "The president was impressed by Gen. Magno's grasp of the Mindanao situation," Mrs Aquino's executive secretary Joker Arroyo said in a written statement, adding that she was "eager to reward merit within the ranks of the Armed Forces."

The two-star general, promoted Wednesday, is a veteran of the anti-Moslem separatist campaign in the southern island of Mindanao where he serves as military chief. He also saw action in the Vietnam war and studied in various military schools in the United States and Indonesia.

ONGPIN SEES 'GOOD PROSPECTS' FOR FOREIGN LOANS

[Text] The country stands good prospects of getting more foreign loans both from foreign commercial banks as well as bilateral and multilateral sources after the new economic program now being prepared with the International Monetary Fund is put in place by September this year, Finance Minister Jaime V. Ongpin said over the weekend. "We can still maximize our foreign borrowings because foreign banks are only waiting for the IMF stand-by agreement, which is a seal of good housekeeping," he said.

He said foreign banks and bilateral and multilateral sources of economic assistance are willing to help the government finance a growth-oriented budget and a projected deficit in its budget. "But they want us to get our act together by putting in place structural reforms, like a comprehensive tax reform, that will enable the economy to achieve a positive growth," he said.

The government was able to get some $770 million in firm and indicative loans from the country's foreign sources of bilateral and multilateral aid during the "mini-consultative group" meeting in Tokyo late last month. The assistance was about $300 million short of the total $1 billion needed by the government this year to finance a budget deficit which can rise as much as P32 billion, including debt servicing which can reach as high as P8 billion.

Ongpin, however, said bilateral and multilateral sources of aid like the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank have expressed willingness to sit down with government officials to consider the grant of the additional $300 million in assistance after the stand-by agreement with the IMF is put in place. He also said the government will start talks with foreign commercial banks on possible assistance to the country.

The country still has to draw some $350 million from the last portion of the $925 million new money facility of the foreign commercial bank. The government can still draw from this facility until the end of this year after the completion of talks with the IMF for anew stand-by agreement. Ongpin also said the remaining tranche from the IMF stand-by facility amounting to some 212 million special drawing rights will be incorporated in the new credit facility being worked out with the fund.

AQUINO URGED TO APPOINT NEW COMELEC OFFICERS

[Text] The National Citizens Movement for Free Elections (Namfrel) urged President Aquino yesterday to appoint new commissioners of the Commission on Elections [Comelec] as a first step in accomplishing critical reforms in the electoral process. Namfrel National Chairman Christian S. Monsod identified the critical reforms as purging the voters' registry of "flying voters" along with reinclusion of disenfranchised voters, an effective information and communication system, purging the poll body's field offices of corrupt, incompetent, and partisan officials, and reviewing and amending the Omnibus Election Code.

In his letter to Mrs Aquino, Monsod said on her request, Namfrel submitted a list of nominees last April 29. He said the Namfrel is reiterating the nominations but would add the name of Virgilio Tiongson from Region 2, in lieu of newspaperman Vicente B. Foz who has been named to the Constitutional Commission. To start achieving these reforms and "signal a new beginning for our electoral process, Monsod said the President should appoint new Comelec members. [quotation marks as received] Comelec Chairman Ramon Felipe had earlier been named.

A Namfrel team at the Comelec said purging the voters' list will take at least 20 weeks. Thus, Monsod said that after discussing with Felipe and the reorganization commission, Namfrel would favor "selective general registration" in about 150 "statistically improbable" areas combined with exclusion or inclusion proceedings in the other areas. This, Monsod said, would be more practical and less expensive method than the nation-wide general registration recommended earlier by Comelec. In the case of field Comelec men, Monsod said Namfrel is disturbed by reported political pressures on the poll body to appoint replacements who have been "cleared" by local politicians rather than people whose primary concern is the integrity of the process.

GOVERNMENT 'REGRETS' SOUTH AFRICAN EMERGENCY

OW130431 Tokyo KYODO in English 0401 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 13 KYODO -- Japan expressed regret Friday at South Africa's imposition of a state of emergency and called on the Pretoria government to carry out "courageous" reforms of its policy of apartheid, or racial segregation. Foreign Ministry spokesman Yoshio Hanato said the Japanese Government feels "strong apprehension" about a possible deterioration of the situation in South Africa as a result of the new measure.

Japan has repeatedly voiced "strong concern" over the white minority government's clampdowns on black opposition movements, the spokesman said. Hatano urged South Africa to end its apartheid policy so as to achieve a peaceful settlement of the racial unrest in the country. But Hatano's statement stopped short of giving any hint of additional punitive measures by Japan against South Africa, with which Japan maintains close trade relations. Japan banned exports of computers for South African security forces and took other measures last year in protest against the South African Government's handling of freedom movements for blacks.

LDP LEADERS DIFFER ON ELECTION GAINS TARGET

OW121041 Tokyo KYODO in English 0923 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 12 KYODO -- Top leaders of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP), continuing a nationwide stumping tour across the country, differed Thursday over the party's target in terms of lower house seats at the July 6 polls. Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe, hitting the campaign trail in Muroran in Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island, told a press conference that the LDP is aiming to capture a stable majority of seats in both houses of the Diet in the polls. Abe's comment was taken to mean that a haul of fewer than 271 lower house seats would represent a failure for the LDP. The figure 271 is the number of seats required in the 512-man lower house to control all the 18 standing committees.

Meanwhile, Finance Minister Noboru Takeshita, a prime ministerial hopeful together with Abe and LDP Executive Board Chairman Kiichi Miyazawa, said in Kanazawa of Ishikawa Prefecture that the party can be victorious if it wins a bare majority of 257 in the lower house. It was Takeshita's first comment on the subject since the lower house was dissolved last week.

LDP Secretary General Shin Kanemaru spoke in similar vein at a press conference at Toyama. "I personally want to win more than 270 seats," he said, "but considering the severe situation surrounding the LDP, I'll settle for more than 257." Kanemaru and Takeshita, backed by the LDP's powerful Tanaka faction, usually wield immense influence over the formation of party consensus, political pundits say.

TANAKA DECIDES TO RUN IN JULY ELECTIONS

OW130317 Tokyo KYODO in English 0250 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 13 KYODO -- Former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka has had election campaign pamphlets distributed to voters in his Niigata No. 3 lower house constituency, saying that he will be eagerly seeking reelection in the coming July 6 polls.

The pamphlets say he has been recuperating from a stroke he suffered in February 1985 and is determined to devote himself to contributing to the betterment of Japan. The one-time "kingmaker," of Japanese politics and leader of the largest faction in the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) also says in the pamphlet that he will make his best efforts to continue his political activities for the benefit of the coming generation.

The former prime minister declared last Monday his de facto candidacy for the upcoming poll by allowing several recent photographs taken of him in his Tokyo home to be published in a local party journal called "ETSUZAN," issued by his supporters in Niigata Prefecture. One of the pictures, taken on March 2, shows Tanaka standing with the help of a cane.

SUMITA ON DOMESTICATION TO EASE HIGH YEN EFFECTS

[Text] Tokyo, June 12 KYODO -- Satoshi Sumita, governor of the Bank of Japan, Thursday called for a greater fiscal role in expanding domestic demand while cautioning against easier monetary policy. Sumita said in a lecture meeting in Tokyo that there is a need for not only maintaining the present strong yen but transforming Japan's industrial structure into one oriented more toward domestic demand that exports. In order to achieve a smooth transformation of the Japanese economy, the nation's domestic demand must be expanded as much as possible, he said. He noted there could be room for the national treasury to play a greater role in this regard within the limits of the current government policy of putting top priority on fiscal rehabilitation.

Sumita said Japan's monetary situation has been relaxed sufficiently in a quantitative manner and its interest rates are already at historic lows. "We must be cautious about further lowering of interest rates," he said. On exchange rates, he said the sharp appreciation of the yen against the dollar has unstabilized [as received] the exchange markets, thus forcing the Japanese economy into a deflationary situation with the possibility of an unfavorable effect on domestic demand.

The central Banker pointed out the yen's sharp rise in value against the dollar might result in a greater danger of reigniting inflation in the United States and higher interest rates as a result of a possible sharp decline in capital inflow into the U.S. He said there is now a greater concern not only within the U.S. Federal Reserve Board but other government circles that the dollar may plunge further in future.

U.S. BLAMED FOR SOUTH AFRICA'S FOREIGN ATTACKS

SK130456 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0439 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] Pyongyang June 13 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today denounces the U.S. imperialists and their stooges for ever more unscrupulously intensifying aggressive moves and armed attacks in different parts of the world. In a signed commentary the daily says: In the wake of the U.S. imperialists' recent burglarious bombing raids on Libya, the South Africa racist clique made armed attack on the capitals of Zimbabwe, Zambia and Botswana and attacked the Namibe port of Angola and destroyed establishments, damaged two Soviet ships and sank a Cuban ship there. Such armed attacks are a wanton infringement upon the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of these countries and a piratic act of terrorism and aggression trampling underfoot the publicly recognized norms of international law and international usage.

The escalation of provocation by the U.S., imperialists and their stooges are part of the U.S. imperialists' strategy of aggression by proxy. The U.S. imperialists are zealous in vindicating and encouraging their stooges' armed invasion.

The South African racist clique must put an end to their aggressive moves against sovereign states and the U.S. imperialists stop encouraging them to terrorism and aggression.

NORTH LINK TO LEBANON KIDNAPPING 'GROUNDLESS LIE'

SK130554 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2151 GMT 11 Jun 86

[NODONG SINMUN 12 June commentary: "The Reptile Bugler's Ugly Features"]

[Text] As was already reported, last January, in West Beirut in Lebanon, a secretary of the South Korean puppet embassy was kidnapped. The South Korean puppets, who suffered shame at that time in attempting to link us with the incident, are again spreading a groundless lie to lay the blame on us for the kidnapping, nearly half a year after the incident. Several days ago, saying that the speaker of the Lebanese National Assembly had said this, Seoul radio raved that we were involved in this incident. However, it was immediately disclosed that the puppets' bugle was a concoction.

Enraged by the attempt to use him as a political plaything, Husayni, president of the Lebanese National Assembly, issued a statement and denounced the puppets' groundless lie. In the statement, he firmly said: Friendship between Lebanon and the DPRK is firm. The DPRK has nothing to do with the kidnapping of the South Korean diplomat. As Husayni said, the kidnapping of the secretary of the South Korean puppet embassy in West Beirut has no relation whatsoever with us. This was unrefutably proven during those early days following the incident. At that time, the organization known as (Al-Mustafa Afini Al-Alam) and the organization known as the Green Brigades said that they kidnapped the secretary of the South Korean puppet embassy.

Before the crystal-clear fact that we have nothing to do with the kidnapping, the puppets have kept silent for many months. However, by basely fabricating what allegedly was said by a Lebanese political figure and spreading this as evidence, they are again attempting to link us with the incident.

This shows how cunning and base the puppets are. Why have the puppets been acting like this of late? Their action displays how extremely frantic and uneasy the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique is. It is said that a series of international sports games will be held in South Korea. The puppets are now employing all kinds of means to smoothly host the games and to exploit them for the realization of their ambition for long-term office and for the implementation of the two-Koreas policy. However, the situation is not in favor of the puppets. Instead, the nature of the puppets as the heinous fascist hangmen and splittists is being more fully disclosed.

Our sincere efforts, on the contrary, for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country and our proposal for cohosting the Olympic games are being widely supported and praised at home and abroad. The international prestige of our Republic is growing with each passing day. Dismayed by this contradictory situation, the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique is employing all kinds of means and methods in order to defame the dignity of our Republic and to extricate itself from international isolation. Attempting to link the kidnapping in West Beirut with us is only part of such maneuvers. In indulging in fabrications and in provoking us, the puppets have now moved their stage even to foreign countries and are staging a farce.

Lately, in South Korea, the anti-U.S. struggle for independence and the antidictatorial and antipuppet struggle are being waged more furiously than ever. This struggle is now shaking the foundation of the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique's rule at its root. This is making puppet traitor Chon Tu-hwan very uneasy. This is precisely the reason why the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique is linking the overseas incident with us, thus shocking the South Korean people and diverting their attention elsewhere. This is one of the objectives of saying that the kidnapping was our act. The South Korean puppet clique's attempt to far-fetchedly link the kidnapping in Lebanon with us is also a base act aimed at driving a wedge between our country and Lebanon and, thus, fishing in troubled weaters.

The South Korean puppet traitor has earned the animosity of the Lebanese people and the peoples of the Arab countries because of his support for the anti-Arab maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the Israeli aggressors. He is now trying to escape from this through alienating the Arab peoples from us.

We also have something to say about Seoul radio. Seoul radio has fabricated this groundless fact and has spread it unhesitatingly. This has shown the ugly features of the reptile bugler serving the puppet clique as its mouthpiece. This time, too, the puppets have earned nothing. They have only become losers. Indeed, the South Korean puppet clique is a group of swindlers and political brigands who will do any base and dirty thing to realize their wicked objectives. The act of the puppets in attempting to entangle us groundlessly reveals this to the world.

DPRK-GDR ECONOMIC, CULTURAL AGREEMENT PRAISED

SK121018 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1010 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Text] Pyongyang June 12 (KCNA) -- MINJU CHOSON today dedicates a signed article to the 30th anniversary of the signing of the economic and cultural agreement between Korea and the German Democratic Republic. The article says that economic and cultural exchange and cooperation between the two countries have daily expanded under the agreement which was signed when the great leader President Kim Il-song visited the German Democratic Republic in June 1956. The paper goes on to say:

The friendly and cooperative relations between Korea and the German Democratic Republic have developed in depth with the signing of the treaty of friendship and cooperation between the two countries in 1984 and the agreement on developing economic and scientific-technological cooperation till 1990.

The government and people of our republic are satisfied with the friendly and cooperative relations between the governments and peoples of the two countries developing on good terms on the principles of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism.

The GDR people, standing firm on the Western outpost of socialism, are striving to defend peace and security in Europe and the world against the imperialists' policies of aggression and war.

The Korean people congratulate the fraternal people of the GDR on their achievements registered in the revolutionary struggle and the work of construction under the leadership of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany headed by Comrade Erich Honecker and express firm solidarity with them in their just cause.

The Korean people are convinced that the traditional relations of friendship and cooperation forged and cemented between the two peoples in their struggle for the common goal and ideal will be in fuller bloom in the future.

VNS ON CHONGWADAE TALKS BETWEEN CHON, YI MIN-U

SK111346 (Clandestine) Voice of National Salvation in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 5 Jun 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] How are you, everyone? This is an hour for station commentary. Today, in this hour, I will speak about the so-called Chongwadae talks held between Chon Tu-hwan and NKDP President Yi Min-u on 3 June. On 3 June, so-called exclusive talks were held between Chon Tu-hwan and NKDP President Yi Min-u. At the talks, which continued for nearly 2 hours, Chon Tu-hwan reiterated what he said at the talks held on 30 April between the representatives of the three political parties, and presumptuously told the opposition party to do this and that. He also implicitly intimidated the opposition party.

Chon Tu-hwan's remarks and acts at the talks held on the day, views were allegedly exchanged in an open-minded atmosphere, were entirely for the purpose of overcoming the difficult political situation with appeasement and trickery and with intimidation and threat, and at paving a way for power security. Chon Tu-hwan's remarks and acts at the talks held on the day fully show this.

On that day, regarding the question of constitutional amendment put forth by the president of the opposition party, Chon Tu-hwan repeated his former stand to the effect that he would not oppose constitutional amendment if the ruling and opposition parties reach an agreement in the National Assembly. On the question of constitutional amendment, he even said that the sooner, the better. As has already been made known Chon Tu-hwan formerly said that constitutional amendment could be discussed in 1989, following the great national events. As a rationale for this, he said that debate on the question of constitutional amendment will create social disorder and disrupt the national consensus. Why is the Chon Tu-hwan group, which formerly incriminated those discussing constitutional amendment, now hurrying the discussion of the question of constitutional amendment, as if it has suddenly become an angel?

The U.S. paper THE WASHINGTON POST said that observers opine that the opposition party will win victory if a free and fair election is held in South Korea.

It is crystal-clear that the Chon Tu-hwan group, which seeks to prolong its power, will not support constitutional amendment for a direct presidential election system that will allow the eligible voters to exercise their voting rights. Furthermore, it is all too clear that they, who enjoy a majority in the National Assembly, will refuse it. In the final analysis, Chon Tu-hwan's remarks that he would not oppose constitutional amendment if the ruling and opposition parties reach an agreement are a trickery to placate the growing mass movement and the pressure of public opinion waged and exerted for constitutional amendment. At the same time, these remarks are for the purpose of seeking their power security by playing a game of words and killing time by bringing the campaign of constitutional amendment into the National Assembly.

At the talks held on that day, Chon Tu-hwan insulted those who have been detained and then raved that lenience will be extended to the greatest extent possible in accordance with the degree of their offenses and repentance. This is indeed an absurdity similar to the act of giving medicine after causing an illness.

As for those who have been detained, they are the patriots who have struggled to achieve independence and democracy and to bring about a new world on this soil. They have no reason to be detained and they have offended nothing and no one. The Chon Tu-hwan group, which reigns over the people and imposes despotism and dictatorship on them, must be judged by the people for its crimes. Nevertheless, Chon Tu-hwan is attempting to punish the detainees by charging them with having committed violence and arson. This can never be allowed.

Moreover, he said that the investigation of the United Masses Movement for Democracy and Unification [Mintongnyen] will continue and the detention of Rev. Mun Ik-hwan will also continue. This is indeed a crime that can be committed only by the Chon Tu-hwan ring, the group of fascist dictators and military hooligans. On the question of amnesty and reinstatement, Chon Tu-hwan has, it can be said, also disclosed his nature as a hooligan. In a nutshell, Chon Tu-hwan indicated that those who are not obedient to the dictatorial system will not be freed or reinstated.

In addition, at the talks, Chon Tu-hwan presumptuously babbled about the line of the NKDP, and said that the NKDP must sever its relations with someone else. Maybe Chon Tu-hwan mistook the NKDP for the DJP; otherwise, how could he presumptuously tell the opposition party to do this and that? This is indeed a brigandish act that can be committed only by the fascist Chon Tu-hwan group, which indulges in a single-party dictatorship and in fascist despotism.

Thus, Chon Tu-hwan's remarks and acts at the talks on that day were a stereotypical sophism that had no value to consider, and can be taken only as an absurdity to bridge over the crisis of power and to further strengthen the fascist colonial rule through appeasement and deception and through intimidation and threat. If Chon Tu-hwan tries to overcome crisis with such appeasement and deception and with such intimidation and threat, this is only a foolish dream. He must know this clearly. Our people will never be deceived as a result of such clumsy trickery by Chon Tu-hwan, but will continue their unyielding struggle by further raising the anti-U.S. and antifascist banner for national salvation.

NODONG SINMUN ON CHON'S SUPPRESSION OF DISSIDENTS

[NODONG SINMUN 9 June commentary: "Knife Wielding by a Dictator Who Has Turned His Back on the People"]

[Text] A noteworthy situation is developing in South Korea which is similar to the last stage of the former dictator's Yusin rule. While engaging in tactics of appeasement and deception to hide its treacherous nature and to win the people's favor, the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique, which is undergoing a serious political crisis, confronted by the just anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle of the South Korean students and people, is making a frantic attempt more than ever before to find a way out of it through political machinations and knife-wielding.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring, having purposely fabricated the so-called Inchon riot incident with a view to making an excuse for an all-out suppression of the movement of students and people for independence and democracy, is making a big violent fascist gale of arresting, detaining, and searching for many students and figures of various strata, involving many mass organizations including such off-stage opposition organizations as the League of Mass Movement for Democratic Reunification, the Minmintu, the League of Mass Buddhist Movement, the League of Seoul Labor Movement, and the League of the Inchon District Social Movement.

South Korean universities and colleges are now under the seige of armed police, and suppressive armed forces are deployed in the streets and alleys even with armored cars directing their guns at the residents. The military fascist elements are not only suppressing with bayonets the demonstrating students calling for independence and democracy, but are pouncing on them after suffocating them with chemical bombs, arresting them collectively.

Branding Mintongnyon [the League of Mass Movement for Democratic Reunification] as an antistate organization, storming its office with an armed police unit, and setting up a special period for arresting the manipulators of the Inchon riot case, the fascist clique is making a big fuss daily, conducting a search operation, rummaging the campuses, streets, inns, and boarding houses. Because of the violent and brutal suppressive steps of the military fascist clique, South Korea has been turned into a medieval land of darkness rampant with violence under various evil fascist laws and is filled with a terrifying warlike atmosphere. This is, in fact, a state of an undeclared martial law and a second advent of the 17 May fascist violence.

The desperate maneuvers of the Chon Tu-hwan ring, which has fabricated the Inchon riot case and which is conducting an all-out suppressive offensive against Mintongnyon and other patriotic democratic forces, involving them in the case, remind us of the wicked political intrique in which the Hitler's Nazi clique, half a century ago, fabricated the incident of arson at the National Assembly building and used it as an excuse to suppress the communist party and all other progressive forces. It is a stereotypical tactic of dictators who have turned their backs on the people to fabricate an incident of intrique whenever they have a serious crisis, confronted by the people's mass resistance, and use it as an excuse for a massive suppressive operation.

In order to justify its violent politics and to paralyze and obliterate the people's will for constitutional revision and aspiration for democratization, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is now making a fuss as though it intended to conduct politics of dialogue, putting forward a theory of grand mutual concession between the ruling and opposition parties and raving about a constitutional revision on the basis of the people's agreement.

Constitutional revision on the basis of the people's agreement can be realized only in the condition in which the masses of all strata can discuss constitutional revision at will free from the social and legal binding forces and in which they can freely participate in social and political life. Then, in order to obtain the people's agreement, it should not suppress the students and the people calling for a revision of the fascist constitution, but should listen to their demands and assertions and take steps to accept them.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring, however, is branding the peaceful rallies and demonstrations of the students and the people calling for constitutional revision for a direct election as a radical leftist riot, tightening the ropes of suppression to block such rallies and demonstrations, deploying many police on the campuses and streets, arresting those who have staged demonstrations calling for a constitutional revision, and persistently refusing to release them, saying that they are procommunist and leftist. It is empty talk and political trickery for them to babble about the people's agreement, while they are putting into practice suppressive politics of not allowing the people even the elementary freedom to express their will and of trampling upon their demands for constitutional revision.

The violence rampant in South Korea is worse than that under the Yusin rule of the previous dictator. Under the Chon Tu-hwan ring's military dictatorship, there is no room for discussion of constitutional revision on the basis of the people's agreement or of politics of dialogue.

The fascist clique is attempting to threaten the people and to frustrate the advance of the people calling for independence and democracy with mean political machinations, but this is a futile attempt.

Forcing the U.S. agressive forces out of South Korea, restoring national sovereignty, and achieving peace and reunification is the consistent aspiration of all the Korean people in the North, South, and overseas, and terminating the military dictatorship and realizing the democratization of society is the urgent and spontaneous demand of the South Korean people themselves. The anti-U.S., antiwar, antinuclear, and antidictatorship struggle of the South Korean students and people is a just and patriotic struggle to realize this, and, therefore, it has nothing to do with the so-called radical leftist riot.

The South Korean people's anti-U.S. struggle for independence and antifascist struggle for democratization are not prompted by someone's directive or behind-the scenes manipulation, but are the road indicated by the stern South Korean reality and life. Mean political machinations and knife-wielding cannot stop the advance movement of the South Korean people who have realized the truth, united among themselves, and launched into a struggle. Instead, it will only encourage the resistance of the people for freedom and democracy and further heighten their enthusiasm for struggle.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring should abandon the foolish idea of sustaining the dictatorial power with the rule of bayonets, stop the suppression of the people's movement for independence and democracy, and immediately release the students and figures of various strata who have been unjustly arrested and detained.

NODONG SINMUN CONDEMNS SUPRESSION OF PROFESSORS

[NODONG SINMUN 11 June commentary: "The Oppressive Attempt Which Has Disclosed the Fascist Nature"]

[Text] The fascist Chon Tu-hwan military clique, with regard to the statement that South Korean university professors issued on 2 June, is atrociously attempting to intensify the suppression against them. On 7 June, the puppet Ministry of Education said that the professors' statement was a united and organized political act and, in terms of its content, repudiated the system and supported the violence of the radical students. In so doing, the ministry used as intimidation the threat that it would seek so-called countermeasures, including one for individual reprimands.

Earlier, on 3 and 6 June, the puppet clique defamed the professors' statement as a declaration to oppose the system and to disturb political and social stability and deepen campus leftism, as well as an act against the state, thus openly disclosing its oppressive attempt.

The assertions of the university professors, which the fascist Chon Tu-hwan military clique is trying to use as an excuse for suppression, can never become offenses. As has already been reported, in the statement, 265 professors of 23 South Korean universities demanded the rescission of the present fascist Constitution and the establishment of a democratic Constitution. They also called for the establishment of a self-reliant national economy, the fair distribution of wealth, and freedom of the campus and freedom of the press.

Because the Chon Tu-hwan ring has established an atrocious dictatorial regime on the sea of the people's blood and is relentlessly trampling upon the people's freedom and rights, the professors charged the hangmen with violation of human rights and demanded the rescission of the fascist Constitution and the establishment of a democratic constitution to guarantee the people's rights. At the same time, because the fascists are fattening themselves and driving the economy into the corner of submission and bankruptcy by expressing adulation to foreign forces and by selling the interests of the nation, they expressed sympathy with the anti-foreign struggle of the youths, students, and people and demanded the establishment of a self-reliant national economy and the masses' right to existence. In addition, they demanded freedom of the campus and freedom of the press because the fascist group is trampling upon the campus and suppressing the press.

In the statement, the professors said that they were expressing their desire for democracy not to gain the attention of the people or to earn their applause but to fulfill their responsibilities.

At a time when the spirit of the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle is growing among the South Korean youths, students and people, the professors who love justice and truth added their voices to the people's assertions. This is entirely just, and is an exercise of their rights that no one can block. The professors' assertions are what is unanimously demanded by the people in South Korea, where dictatorial politics and foreign forces are dominant, and are the questions that have become a focal point of world public opinion.

Because of the correctness of its assertions, the professors' statement is arousing great reverberations at home and abroad, and is winning warm support from the South Korean people and the compatriots abroad. Those with sound thinking and reason should lend an ear to the professors' patriotic assertions, which agree with the aspiration of the nation and the voice of the era.

Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is hatching a plot to suppress the professors, while bringing charges against their just assertions. This just shows once again that the Chon Tu-hwan ring is a group of heinous traitors who persistently challenge the aspiration of the nation and the demand of the people, and is a group of fascist hangmen who maintain power by wielding guns and bayonets.

The fascist clique has answered with bestial oppression the demand for independence and democracy put forth by the professors, who have nothing but their bare hands and books. This is by no means an act of the strong but a fit of the weak. By intimidating the professors, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is trying to block the escalation and development of the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle of the youths, students, and people into a mass movement with the participation of broad strata of the intellectual circles. However, the Chon Tu-hwan ring must clearly realize that no oppression can solve problems and its rampage will only arouse even stronger indignation and resistance among the people and accelerate its self-destruction.

All political prisoners who have been unjustly arrested and detained in South Korea must be released without delay, and fascist dictatorial system must be dissolved, and freedom of press, publication, assembly, and association, as well as freedom of political activities, must be guaranteed.

The one that must be condemned and punished in South Korea is the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique which is selling the country and nation by suppressing the people and showing adulation to foreign forces. The Chon Tu-hwan ring must not act recklessly but step down from power without delay, as demanded by the people.

VNS ASSAILS SPEECHES BY NO TAE-U, NO SIN-YONG

SK121238 (Clandestine) Voice of National Salvation in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] In this hour I will talk about the absurb remarks made by No Tae-u, DJP chairman, at the National Assembly. On 9 June, DJP Chairman No Tae-u delivered a speech at the National Assembly. In his speech he babbled that democratization is a task of the times and the DJP will make all sincere and patient efforts to reach an agreement on constitutional revision and achieve satisfactory [word indistinct] in exercising politics for the people and by the people. With regard to the campus issue, he also prattled that, under the banner of new reforms, the DJP will earnestly listen to the youths' sound discussion of reform and widely accept their discussion.

In a report on state affairs made on 7 June, prior to this, Prime Minister No Sin-yong also stated that he will do his best to realize the so-called will of the dictator for democratization, pretending as if Chon Tu-hwan had made a certain determination to rewrite the Constitution within his tenure on the basis of an agreement between the ruling and opposition parties. This is an utterance of a jackal mimicing the cry of a sheep and a contradictory speech and behavior. The speeches and acts of high-ranking figures of the government and the ruling party at the National Assembly are nothing but a mask burlesque of dictators paying no attention to and turning away from realities.

As you know, our people demand the abolition of the current Constitution and the revision of the Constitution into one providing for a direct election system; they claim the release of all prisoners, amnesty and reinstatement, and other most primary rights of democracy. This notwithstanding, Chon Tu-hwan and those concerned with the government and the ruling party have indiscriminately arrested and jailed youths and students, off-stage and opposition party figures, religious figures, and other masses of all walks of life who have demanded the abolition of the Constitution, the revision of the Constitution into one providing for a direct election system, and democracy, and who have rejected aggression by foreign forces. They have arrested and punished by branding them as procommunist and leftist-leaning elements.

To give an example, the Chon Tu-hwan group premeditatedly fabricated the so-called Inchon riot incident and, with this incident as the opportunity, kicked up fascist rackets of arresting, imprisoning, and searching for countless youths, students, and figures of all walks of life by implicating many mass organizations -- the United Masses Movement for Democracy and Unification and the Anti-Imperialist and Antifascist Fighting Committee for the Nation and Democratization, off-stage organizations -- in this incident.

What is worse, they set a special period for the arrest of the behind-the-scenes manipulators of the Inchon riot incident and have raised dins every day, conducting search operations of rummaging through campuses, streets, inns, and boarding houses. Because of the Chon Tu-hwan group's tyrannical and outrageous suppressive measures, this land has been reduced to dark medieval world, in which many kinds of fascist evil laws and illegalities are rampant, and which has been enveloped in a terror-stricken atmosphere. Talking about politics for the people and the will for democratization while exercising the suppression-ruled politics of not permitting even the people's primary freedom of expression and of even trampling underfoot their demand for constitutional revision is a downright lie and political deception.

The Chon Tu-hwan group, not content with suppression by bayonets the students crying for independence and democracy, fired chemical bombs at them, suffocated them, pounced upon them, and arrested them en masse, stated that under the banner of new reforms it will eagerly listen to the youths' sound discussion of reform and will widely accept their discussion. It is fully understandable what this means. This cannot be viewed other than meaning that it will label even a slight move by students as a procommunist and leftist-leaning move and suppress it without mercy.

The Chon Tu-hwan group is camouflaging this arbitrary and unilateral attempt with the cloak of democracy and talking as if it will create something soon. This is aimed at pacifying antigovernment sentiment and at coping with crises in its rule by redirecting the people's attention elsewhere. Talking about democracy without throwing out the dagger carried in one's bosom is empty talk and raving about politics for the people while being bent on the politics of violence is also a swindling burlesque. The Chon Tu-hwan group must clearly recognize that with tricks it cannot stop our people's will for independence and democratization and mislead public opinion.

FURTHER REACTION TO ATTEMPT TO SEIZE U.S. EMBASSY

Radio Commentary

SK121045 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1150 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Commentary by station commentator Kim Kyong-pok: "An Outrageous Act Revealing the True Colors of a Flunkeyist Traitor"]

[Text] According to a report, the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique arrested nine Korea University students who attempted to seize the American Embassy building in Seoul on 8 June on charges of violating the so-called law on assembly and demonstration. Embarrassed by the anti-U.S. struggle for independence and the antifascist struggle for democracy by South Korean youths and students, the Chon Tu-hwan clique not only arrested en masse all students who rose up in the struggle of seizing the American Cultural Center in Pusan, but also imposed 1 to 3 year prison terms on the 10 students involved in the struggle of occupying the American Cultural Center in Kwangju last year. Such outrageous fascist acts by the Chon Tu-hwan clique are further intolerable criminal acts revealing its true colors as flunkeyist traitors and fascist maniacs.

Speaking of the students who rose up in the struggle to seize the American Embassy in Seoul this time, they are patriotic students. Their attempt to seize the embassy was aimed at appealing to the South Korean people to further strengthen the struggle for the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces from South Korea and against the Chon Tu-hwan dictatorial regime.

The American Embassy, under the signboard of a diplomatic organ, is the headquarters and stronghold of the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule over South Korea. The South Korean students' attempt to seize the American Embassy in Seoul and to call on the U.S. imperialists to withdraw their aggression forces from South Korea was a very righteous and just act reflecting the South Korean people's desire and aspiration not to live any longer under the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule.

The South Korean people have been groaning for over 40 years in a dark society where national dignity and even primary democratic freedoms are being mercilessly trampled underfoot due to the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule and the Chon Tu-hwan treacherous clique's military fascist dictatorship.

Today the South Korean people are standing at the crossroads determining whether they will be continously forced to live under colonial fascist rule and under a state of colonial bondage, or whether they will safeguard their national dignity and win freedom and democracy through struggle.

In today's reality, in which the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule and subjugation and the outrageous fascist dictatorship have become more unscrupulous as years pass, our youths and students who are burning with patriotism and who do not tolerate injustice cannot sit with folded arms. Staging the anti-U.S. struggle against the U.S. imperialists' organs in South Korea, including the American Embassy in Seoul, constitutes a sacred struggle for national salvation to rescue the country and the nation from crisis. Therefore, this cannot constitute a criminal act, but should be evaluated as a patriotic one.

This notwithstanding, clinging to foreign forces, the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique is making up to its U.S boss like a puppy wagging its tail in a bid to maintain its dirty life while pouncing, like a pack of fierce wolves, on the people who oppose foreign forces and who want to live independently.

Recently the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique perpetrated the vicious atrocity of arresting and imprisoning 14 cadre members of the Union of Labor Movement in Seoul, who had indicated to the world the patent fact that the U.S. imperialists beasts perpetrated the rape of a pregnant woman teacher in North Chungchong Province, on charges of spreading so-called vicious false rumors. Such being the situation, as long as the South Korean treasonous and treacherous rascals are left as they are, the independence and democratization of South Korean society cannot be achieved. This is why the South Korean people are struggling against the Chon Tu-hwan clique's dictatorship.

Recently Rev. Mun Ik-hwan warned the Chon Tu-hwan clique, saying that the present government in resorting to violence will perish by violence. In a joint statement on the present political situation, 265 professors from 23 universities throughout South Korea called for the abolition of the current constitution, established to trample underfoot democracy and to systematically legalize the long-term office of the present military gangsters, and bitterly condemned the Chon Tu-hwan clique's crimes of having turned South Korea into a colony and military base of the U.S. imperialists and into a living hell for human beings.

Although the Chon Tu-hwan clique is trying to maintain the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule over South Korea and to maintain its remaining life through fascist suppression, this is indeed a foolish act. Today, the South Korean people are strongly calling for the withdrawal of the U.S. forces from South Korea, declaring that the stationing of the U.S. forces in South Korea is precisely the obstacle to national reunification. This cannot be blocked with anything. Traitor Chon Tu-hwan should not run wild foolishly, but should step down from power as called for by the people.

VNS Commentary

SK110920 (Clandestine) Voice of National Salvation in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 10 Jun 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] As has already been reported, the Chon Tu-hwan clique illegally arrested the patriotic students who attempted to occupy the U.S. Embassy in South Korea at 2120 on 8 June.

They are nine patriotic students, including Pak Song-pok, senior in economics at Korea University, and five other male students and Kim Hae-kyong, junior in the statistics department, and two other coeds who attempted to climb the iron fence around the Embassy to occupy it and stage a sit-in strike, carrying with them anti-U.S. leaflets, placards, and a torch.

Prior to this, on 6 June, Yi Ui-sop, a student of the Seoul Municipal College, was arrested and taken to the police while attempting to occupy the U.S. Embassy, carrying with him printed material, including a statement of struggle for democracy and THE NATION and the STARS AND STRIPES.

The occupation, sit-in, raid, and arson directed atainst buildings and facilities of the U.S. public organizations that have been continuing ever since the sit-in at American Cultural Center in Seoul last May are an eruption of the resentment and indignation against the United States and an expression of our masses' firm anti-U.S. will to end the U.S. occupation of South Korea and the colonial rule and to establish the nation's sovereignty. The attempt of the patriotic students to break into and occupy the U.S. Embassy is a display of our masses' anti-U.S. sentiment and is part of the anti-U.S. struggle for democracy that is daily increasing and expanding.

As is known to every one, through the U.S. occupation of South Korea and its colonial rule, which has continued for the past 40 years, our masses came to realize that the United States is the enemy of our nation, our masses, and democracy. In particular, they again confirmed their will for the anti-U.S. struggle prompted by the Kwangju massacre. This is shown by the fact that the anti-U.S. sentiment is further increasing among the students and the masses from all walks of life, that the anti-U.S. outcry calling for expelling the U.S. imperialists is resounding throughout the country, including Seoul, Pusan, and Kwangju, and that the U.S. buildings have been occupied and raided one after another.

The students' attempt to occupy the U.S. Embassy this time clearly demonstrated our masses' spirit for the anti-U.S. struggle at home and abroad. Although the intentions of the patriotic students who strove to demonstrate our masses' firm will and aspirations for the anti-U.S. cause for democracy after occupying the U.S. embassy were not achieved, their act is a just patriotic struggle that reflected the popular will, and is praiseworthy.

Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan military dictatorial regime arrested the patriotic students and is cruelly interrogating them. This revealed once again the antipopular nature of the Chon Tu-hwan regime, which only adheres to the nation-selling treacherous maneuvers betraying the nation and running counter to the popular will, and the pro-U.S. flunkeyist nationl-selling system of the Chon Tu-hwan fascist regime, which is attempting to prolong its power under the U.S. patronage. The fascist dictators who are trying to maintain their lives by betraying the popular will and depending on outside forces will not last long. If the Chon Tu-hwan regime continues maneuvering to prolong power by depending on the United States and repressing with guns and bayonets the bloody outcries of the students and masses who shout "Let us revive with the anti-U.S. cause the nation that collapsed through the pro-U.S. cause!", it will face a more miserable end than that of preceding dictators.

The Chon Tu-hwan regime should unconditionally release the patriotic students who were arrested while struggling for the nation's sovereignty and democracy at the vanguard of the anti-U.S. and anti-fascist struggle for democracy, including those who attempted to occupy the U.S. Embassy. It should immediately step down from power in accordance with the unamimous demand of our masses. The United States should withdraw from this land without delay. The students and the patriotic masses from all walks of life should more courageously wage the anti-U.S. national salvation resistance struggle to expel the U.S. aggressors and to recover the national sovereignty.

SOUTH'S THEORY OF ECONOMIC GROWTH CRITICIZED

[NODONG SINMUN 11 June special article: "The Bankruptcy of the Theory on Economic Growth Stages in South Korea"]

[Text] Voices criticizing the theory of economic growth stages, which has been a so-called theoretical basis of the puppets' economic policy, have recently been increasingly raised in South Korea. The theory of economic growth stages, which has spread to South Korea, is a reactionary economic theory which the U.S. imperialists had Rostow, a special-class errand boy, fabricate a long time ago with a view to cunningly beautifying and embellishing their neocolonial policy.

Comrade Kim Chong-il, member of the Political Bureau Presidium and secretary of the party Central Committee, has noted: The imperialists are tenaciously seeking the policy of plundering and enslaving the peoples of other countries in a more crafty and insidious manner while adhering to neocolonialism. The U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets have actively spread the theory of economic growth stages and other theories on developing underdeveloped countries and have adopted a theoretical basis to justify their colonial economic policy.

On the basis of a reversed social and historical viewpoint, the theory of economic growth stages classifies the course of social economic development into several stages, such as the stage of preconditions for take-off, the stage of take-off, and the stage of the drive to maturity; it arbitrarily assigns countries to these different stages in conformity with the interests of U.S. monopoly capital. Also, the theory contends that those countries in the backward stages can develop when they introduce capital from those countries in the advanced stages, employing the determination that the United States and a series of capitalist countries belong to higher stages and that other countries, including the socialist countries, belong to backward stages.

This theory is the imperialists'anticommunist strategic theory cooked up for the purpose of preventing the underdevloped countries from advancing along the road toward socialism and of subordinating them to the capitalist economy. Proceeding from their recognition that, by introducing foreign capital even through selling the country and the nation, creating the impression that the economy seems to have grown is a way to maintain their rule, the South Korean puppets have actively adhered to the theory of economic growth stages. The reactionary nature of this theory, which has spread in South Korea, is, first of all, expressed in contending that the South Korean economy can grow only through U.S. aid. Those who advocate this theory argue that a basic way to achieve economic growth lies in the introduction of foreign monopoly capital, changing white into black and brazenly clamoring that preconditions for economic growth are not provided at home, but are given through the impact caused by more developed countries' infiltration from outside. In addition, they say that since savings and accumulation are insufficient because of the vicious circle of poverty, investment should be expanded by introducing foreign capital. It goes without saying how reactionary and treacherous it is to find a basic method for achieving economic development in the introduction of foreign monopoly capital.

That infiltration by monopoly capital precisely brings about political and economic enslavement and tramples national sovereignty underfoot is a principle fully proven by history. When one's capital and technology are bound to others, the life of one's economy is subjected to others' grasp, and later one cannot avoid the fate of colonial slavery. No one but the nation-selling and treacherous South Korean puppet clique and its patronized spokesmen advocate the theory of finding a way for economic development through the introduction of foreign capital, which leaves the country and the nation utterly at the mercy of foreign monopoly capital.

The reactionary nature of the theory of economic growth stages, which has spread in South Korea, is also expressed in stressing the advantages of an economy giving top priority to exports. Today the South Korean economy has been reduced to an abnormal [kihyongchok] and subordinate economy which gives top priority to exports and which cannot be maintained without exports. This is the natural outcome resulting from the infiltration of foreign monopoly capital.

Essentially, exports and foreign trade should aim at developing the national economy and should serve it. When an economy becomes an export-oriented one as seen in South Korea, this economy will have to depend on foreign monopoly capital and foreign markets. Thus, the economy will be subject to the various unfavorable conditions of foreign markets and cannot avoid crises, subjugation, and bankruptcy.

Those who support the theory on economic growth stages in South Korea advocate the advantages of an export-oriented economy. This is nothing but a plot to justify the results of the South Korean puppet clique's policy of a colonial economy that has been reduced to a subordinate object of foreign monopoly capital.

The reactionary and preposterous nature of the theory of economic growth stages is being fully revealed in the phenomenon of crisis in the South Korean economy. Today the South Korean economy has been reduced to a subordinate economy, and to an economy of debt. Thus, it has become a model of a colonial subordinate economy.

The phenomenon of crisis in the South Korean economy can be found from the growth of the South Korean economy raved about by the enemy. In mid-1960's, the spokesmen for the theory of economic growth stages raved that South Korea achieved economic growth and had entered the take-off stage, and that the development of agricultural production and the realization of the foundations for developing transportation, communaications, and the power industry represented the very data to prove such growth and take-off. However, their assertions were proposterous and cannot serve as material proving economic growth. South Korea's agriculture has been reduced every year due to implementation of the U.S. imperialists' policy for forcible sale of their surplus agricultural products. As for transportation and communications, they were not part of the growth of the national economy but an act of opening a wide road for the infiltration of foreign capital.

The thoery of economic growth stages noted that a precondition for economic growth is the construction of railways, harbors and roads. However, it is clear that this is a means for the infiltration of the imperialists' capital and for their colonial plunder, and is aimed at achieving essential conditions for turning such facilities into military bases. The fact that the construction of railways, harbors, and roads is a precondition for colonial rule has been proved by the history of the Japanese inperialists' aggression against Korea and by much other history of the imperialists' aggression.

The preposterous nature and the phenomenon of crisis in the theory of economic growth stages have been more clearly shown by the fact that the South Korean economy dashed along the road of crisis in the 1970's and 1980's. We can note this from the GNP growth rate raved about by the enemy. The growth rate of the South Korean economy did not show an increase but dropped every year. In the 1970's it dropped to half the average annual growth rate marked in the 1960's. In the 1980's it dropped to a lower level than one-third the rate and even marked a minus 6.2 percent absolute reduction.

This eloquently shows that the high-speed growth that the rascals loudly raved about is bankrupt. In order to conceal the bankruptcy of such high-speed growth, the U.S. imperialists and the traitor Chon Tu-hwan replaced the slogan of high-speed growth with the words of stable growth and maneuvered to justify such words. With the forcible implementation of the policy of high-speed growth, the South Korean economy has been reduced to the status of comprehensive crisis.

With the infiltration of foreign monopoly capital, including U.S. monopoly capital, the national economy has been obliterated and foreign and domestic comprador enterprises that are in collusion with them are rampaging. Thus, the economy has become a nation-ruining economy and a thoroughly subordinate economy which cannot be maintained without introducing 7 to 8 billion dollars of foreign capital every year.

With the introduction of enormous sums of foreign capital amounting to more than $60 billion, the South Korean economy has been comprehensively caught in the trap of U.S. monopoly capital and has been reduced to an economy with the greatest debts in the world, one obliged to pay principal and interest amounting to $6 to 7 billion every year. However, the seriousness lies in the fact that such debts are not decreasing but are rapidly increasing every year. The phenomenon of crisis in the South Korean economy has been shown by the fact that it has been reduced to a subordinate and export-oriented economy. The subordinate and export-oriented economy is a new phenomenon of a colonial economy and has appeared as the result of the extensive introduction of foreign monopoly capital by implementing the policy of high-speed growth, and is an extremely abnormal economy which cannot be maintained without exports.

In order to demonstrate the so-called growth of the South Korean economy, the U.S. imperialists had the (?outlets) of products produced by U.S. monopoly capital that they introduced to South Korea depend on overseas markets, and taking advantage of this, they have gripped the windpipe of the South Korean economy. This is shown by the fact that late last year, the U.S. imperialists forced South Korea to liberalize imports in order to stabilize their economy, which has been driven to a crisis, thus intensifying restrictions on imports of South Korean products as the means for the liberalization. They increased pressure to open the insurance market and to protect intellectual property, and so forth.

With the subordinate nature and weakness of the South Korean economy, large enterprises, not to speak of small and medium enterprises, are going into bankruptcy and are collapsing. As the result of this, an enormous group of unemployed constantly exists, and the people's livelihood is going to ruin with each passing day. Thus, it is not accidental that the South Korean people often make remarks ridiculing the slogan of the U.S. imperialists and the puppet clique on economic growth, branding it as the growth of foreign capital, the growth of foreign debts, and the growth of poverty.

Realities clearly prove that with the introduction of foreign capital, the South Korean economy has neither grown nor strengthened its self-reliant nature but rather has become a thoroughly subordinate economy and an extremely weak one whose structure has been destroyed.

In order to conceal the overall bankruptcy of the South Korean economy, which is in ruins due to enormous foreign debts, and of the theory of economic growth stages, the U.S. imperialists and traitor Chon Tu-hwan are more frantically running amok to embellish and decorate the South Korean economy by bringing those who advocate this theory to the fore. However, they have not been able to upgrade their economic growth stage any higher today, when 20 years have passed since they proundly claimed in the mid-1960's that South Korea was in the take-off stage. This is because the actual status of the South Korean economy is too critical.

Spokesmen for this theory, which is being driven to a corner, are attempting to make excuses about the phenomenon of crisis in the South Korean economy by noting that the South Korean economy depends on the trends of the worldwide economy, and in particular on U.S. economic policy and on restoring the growth rate of its economy. However, they cannot conceal realities with any attempt.

DAILY ON FUNCTIONARIES' ECONOMIC MANAGEMENT

[NODONG SINMUN 10 June editorial: "Let Us Further Raise the Level of the Functionaries' Economic Management"]

[Text] One of the important tasks facing us at present in implementing the party's demand for regularizing production at a high level is to raise the level of the functionaries' economic management. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: We should raise the quality of enterprise management and operation of guidance functionaries in our state and economic organs.

Raising the level of management and operation is an important requirement for our guidance functionaries in performing their mission and duty as commanding staffs of the revolution. Guidance functionaries in economic organs, plants, and enterprises are the commanding staffs of the revolution who directly organize and execute the work to implement the party's economic policy at their respective fields and units and who are directly responsible to the party and the revolution for the work of their respective fields and units. Accordingly, functionaries should have a great wealth of knowledge on economic management and operation and correctly manage and operate the economy with this knowledge.

No matter how well versed functionaries may be in modern science and technology, if the level of their economic management and operation is low, they cannot scientifically and reasonably manage and operate the large-scale economy of the country.

Production reality is very diverse and constantly varies and develops. With the experience they have attained in the past and their subjective views alone, functionaries can by no means correctly manage and operate the large-scale economy of the country, the fields, and units of which are closely connected. Only when functionaries are well versed in modern science and technology and constantly raise their economic management and operation level can they not only correctly organize and mobilize the masses of producers, the masters of the economy, in conformity with the developing economic conditions, but also establish dynamic plans in conformity with the demands of the socialist economic principle and correctly carry out the organizational and guidance work for production and supply in order to carry out these dynamic plans.

For functionaries to raise their economic management and operation level constitutes an imprtant problem because of the realistic requirement for highly displaying the superiority of complex enterprises. Our party has taken epochal measures to organize more complex enterprises in a reasonable manner and to enhance the sense of responsibility and initiative of functionaries. As a result, it has been possible for functionaries at complex enterprises to organize and operate the overall production and management activities in a responsible manner in accordance with the state planning.

In order to regularize production at complex enterprises by correctly conducting the independent economic accounting system in conformity with the transitional character of the socialist society, the materials supply work, cooperative production, and the transportation organizational work should be correctly carried out. To this end, the level of functionaries in their practical business should be enhanced.

Only when functionaries enhance their economic management and operation level and manage and operate complex enterprises in a scientific and reasonable manner can they not only constantly keep increasing production by mobilizing and utilizing undiscovered reserves to the maximum and enhance labor productivity, but also easily discover knotty problems and resolve them in a timely manner.

Knowledge is precisely strength. Without knowledge, functionaries cannot have an insight into the future, cannot correctly carry out their economic guidance work, cannot display their initiative and creative postiveness, and cannot boldly and broadly carry out all work with indomitable fighting spirit and revolutionary zeal.

All economic guidance functionaries and guidance functionaries at complex enterprises in particular should make active efforts to enhance their enterprise management and operation level. In order to enhance their enterprise management and operation level, functionaries should have lofty awareness and sense of responsibility as being the masters of economic guidance and management. The lofty sense of responsibility for the assigned task is precisely the basic trait that guidance functionaries should possess. This is also an important condition determining success of all economic tasks.

Functionaries who have a high sense of responsiblity profoundly and substantially grasp and master all problems arising in the management and operation of the economy in order to more correctly and properly carry out their assigned tasks. All functionaries at the economic organs of the state should raise their economic management and operation level from the stand and posture that no one will substitute for themselves in carrying out the revolutionary tasks assigned before their economic fields and units and that they should carry out the revolutionary tasks assigned before their economic fields and units and that they should carry out their assigned tasks by themselves with the spirit of being the masters.

There is no limit to raising the economic management and operation level. No matter how long functionaries may work in their economic fields, if they fail to steadily make efforts for raising their politico-administrative level, they cannot keep their level in conformity with the developing reality. Therefore, functionaries should steadily and sincerely make efforts to raise their politico-administrative level.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's masterpieces and the party's documents are the basic textbooks for our functionaries and the working people. They are also the classical works that functionaries should firmly adhere to in raising their level. These classical works extensively elucidate the political, economic, and cultural tasks arising in every period and stage of the revolution and construction and the methods of implementing these tasks. These classical works also include, in detail, not only the position and role of our functionaries as the commanding staffs of the revolution, but also the principles and methods in the work with the people, the work with facilities, and the work with books.

Therefore, profound study of the great leader Comrade Kil Il-song's masterpieces and the party's documents will make it possible for functionaries to extensively and profoundly grasp and master the theoretical and practical problems arising in the economic management and operation. All functionaries at economic organs should take it as the first step in their work to study the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's masterpieces and the party's documents.

In particular, economic guidance functionaries should deeply study the great leader's masterpieces and the party's documents regarding economic management and operation. They should also make efforts to obtain knowledge which is directly related to and suitable to the production and technology necessary for their economic fields and units.

Because the economic fields of functionaries are different and the production conditions and facilities in an enterprise are also different, functionaries should make efforts to firmly grasp and understand the economic work and the methods of the economic management and operation, in particular, in their fields and units. They should also deeply study reasonable economic management and operation methods for their economic fields and units. To this end, by steadily studying business economic, functionaries should have profound knowledge not only on the problems arising in the conduct of the independent economic accounting system, but also on economic leverage and the utilization of economic [word indistinct] including the establishment of economic plans, the establishment of contract for material supply, the calculation of cost prices, and the meeting of profits.

In particular, functionaries should rapidly grasp newly presented scientific and technological problems in response to the reality in which the work of making the national economy modernized and scientific is being accelerated. They should well know in modern machine facilities. At the same time, they should also deeply master the principles and use of technological means, including electronic computers. Functionaries should grasp and know in a timely manner the experiences attained by the functionaries of advanced and developed economic units and should thoroughly embody them in production.

Along with this, functionaries should deeply study the regulations and principles that should be abided by in managing and operating complex enterprises and in conducting the independent economic accounting system and should be well versed in this. At the same time, they should thoroughly embody these regulations and principles in the course of production.

Where the economic management and operation work is carried out is precisely production sites. Without participating in the reality, functionaries cannot raise their economic management and operation level nor can they find correct ways for raising their management and operation level. Functionaries should deeply participate in the sites where production and construction are being carried out as called for by the party. There, they should firmly and deeply grasp the situation. At the same time, they should find ways for improving their economic management and operation work and should actively struggle for the realization of the ways.

The responsibility and mission of the education organs in raising the functionaries' economic management and operation level are heavy and great. In an effort to enhance the economic guidance functionaries' economic management and operation level, our party has already founded many regular colleges and has provided them with all conditions under which they can study while working.

Today, our smooth management and operation of the large-scale socialist economy at a high level through our own national cadres is thanks to the fact that our party has fostered numerous national cadres kand economic guidance functionaries with farsighted plans. However, the developing reality demands that by further enhancing the role of the education organs we train and foster more functionaries who can manage and operate the economy of our country more scientifically and reasonably.

The education organs should profoundly and extensively teach all problems arising in the economic management and operation work by improving the education method and by correctly using various types of lectures at schools. At the same time, the education organs should produce more textbooks and other school materials necessary for the economic management and operation. It is important to enhance the role of party organizations. Party organizations at all fields and units of the national economy should properly guide and supervise economic guidance functionaries so that they can deeply recognize the importance of their mission for the party and the fatherland and constantly learn new knowledge. Party organizations should ensure working conditions for functionaries so that they can learn and possess a great wealth of knowledge regarding the economic management and operation work. At the same time, party organizations should also thoroughly establish measures to reeducate functionaries in a systematic way.

Raising the economic management and operation level is aimed at more properly carrying out the revolution and construction. It becomes valuable only when contributed to production. All economic guidance functionaries should deeply recognize that raising the economic management and operation level constitutes precisely the work for the party, the revolution, the fatherland, and the people and should constantly study and embody the economic management and operation in production, thereby effecting constant innovations in economic construction.

CONSTRUCTION OF MODERN HOTELS IN DPRK INCREASING

[Text] Pyongyang June 12 (KCNA) -- Many foreign guests are staying in Koryo Hotel. The hotel was built near Pyongyang Railway Station on the occasion of the 40th anniversary of national liberation (August 15, 1985). The total floor space of the 45 storied twin-tower style hotel covers 84,000 square metres and it stands 140 metres high. The hotel has a linkage between its two building at their upper parts and revolving restaurants on their top.

The construction of this kind of hotel is one more miraculous success in breaking new ground in assembling extra-high buildings. Dear Comrade Kim Chong-il indicated the direction of building the hotel on modern lines and took necessary measures for its acceleration. He personally examined a layout of the hotel and gave detailed instructions as to its location, style, height and formation of inner structure. Visting its construction site on several occasions he taught ways for solving new problems arising in its construction.

As the international prestige of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea is rising daily under the wise guidance of the great leader President Kim Il-song, a large number of guests are coming to Pyongyang in an endless stream from Asia, Africa, Latin America and Europe. The state, therefore, has directed great efforts to the construction of hotels. Pyongyang now has such well-appointed hotels as the Potonggang, Changgwangsan, Pyongyang, Taedonggang and Haebangsan Hotels. The tall Changgwangsan Hotel standing on the bank of the River Potong adds to the beauty of Chollima Street in well harmony with its surrounding monumental edifices, such as the People's Palace of Culture, the Pyongyang indoor stadium, the Changgwang Health Complex and the ice rink.

Hotels have been built in scenic spots in different parts of the country. Foreign guests spend pleasant days at world-renowned Mt. Kumgang, Mt. Myohyang and Songdowon and other scenic spots provided with all necessary conditions, lodging and boarding. In Mt. Kumgang there is the Kumgangsan tourist hotel for Koreans visiting the homeland from Japan.

SOUTH-NORTH OLYMPIC TALKS CONCLUDE; VIEWED

ROK To Consider IOC Proposal

SK130036 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 13 Jun 86 p 1

[Text] Sports Minister Pak Se-chik said yesterdawy that Korea is giving serious consideration to the proposal by the International Olympic Committee (IOC) that Nortn Korea host two events in the 1988 Seoul Summer Olympics. "We will seriously consider the IOC proposal," Pak told reporters.

Pak, who also serves as president of the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee (SLOOC), said South Korea would consider the IOC proposal only on condition that North Korea honor the IOC Charter and take part in the South Olympics without any conditions.

North Urged To Accept

[Editorial: "IOC Compromise Bid"]

[Text] Noteworthy is a positive mediation offer which the International Olympic Committee made at the inter-Korean sports talks in Lausanne this week in its strenuous efforts to make the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul successful, with the participation of all nations of the world. The proposal offers North Korea to stage two Olympic events -- table tennis and archery -- in return for dropping all claims to the Seoul games. In addition, the 100-km cycle road race would start in the north and finish in Seoul, and one of four groups in the soccer competition would play its matches in Pyongyang. Such an offer of splitting games, even partly, is virtually unprecedented in the annals of the Olympics, as the quadrennial world event is essentially awarded to a city, not necessarily to a country.

Yet, the compromise formula was worked out by the IOC in its obvious attempts to head off North Korea's threats to boycott the Seoul Olympiad and consequently free the Olympic movement, already twice crippled in Moscow and Los Angeles, from any further squabbles on political reasons.

Announcing the proposal at the end of the third round of talks with delegates from South and North Korea, IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch stressed that it was the committee's "final offer," setting a June 30 deadline for the two Koreas to accept.

Initial response of the Seoul delegation was affirmative, though the formal decision on acceptance would be taken later, with the expectation that the mediation offer, however unusual and unpalatable for the host country, would save the Olympic games for the good of all nations. Whether the IOC proposal will prove to be a real breakthrough or not thus appears to be dependent on Pyongyang, which previously made such absurd demands as the "co-hosting" of the 1988 Olympics or the "equal sharing" of its events with Seoul.

In this respect, North Korea is called upon to throw off its wayward attitude and comply with the mediation proposal, which must be the fruit of perseverance and compromise on the part of the IOC -- and, for that matter, of South Korea as well.

By participating in the Seoul Olympiad with a pledge to abide by the IOC charter and the 1981 IOC ruling that awarded Seoul the right to host the event, Pyongyang may contribute to the advancement of the noble Olympic movement and the international peace and understanding, let alone to reducing tension on the Korean peninsula. It should be noted that the staging of the World Olympics in Seoul, the age-old capital of Korea, is a source of pride for all Koreans, be they residing in the south or north, transcending the postwar phenomenon of ideological and political differences.

THE KOREA HERALD Analyzes Talks

[Text] The inter-Korean sports talks, designed to head off Pyongyang's boycott of the '88 Seoul Olympics, took a new turn toward uncertainity despite the fact that seemingly remarkable progress was made in the third round of meetings this week in Lausanne, Switzerland. Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), summing up two days of meeting in Lausanne Tuesday, announced that IOC has offered to let North Korea host two of the 23 Olympic events during the '88 Summer Olympics in Seoul. The two events are table-tennis and archery. In addition, Samaranch proposed that North Korea organize part of the soccer preliminaries and suggested a 100-km cycle roadrace as a "border crossing" event which would start in the north and finish in Seoul using a route through Panmunjom, a truce village astride the military demarcation line which now serves as the border. IOC officials set a June 30 deadline for South and North Korea to accept the IOC proposal.

If North Korea accepts the IOC plan, it will be tantamount to Pyongyang's dropping of its controversial demand to "equally share the '88 Olympics." But, this would not be enough to remove major stumbling blocks in the way toward a "complete agreement between the south and north on the '88 Seoul Olympics." In offering some of the Olympic sports to North Korea, the IOC president made it clear to the Communists that they would be allowed to host the proposed events only after they openly pledge to honor the IOC charter and the 1981 IOC decision to award the Olympic Games to the city of Seoul. He let it be understood that the events offered to the north would still be conducted under the Jurisdiction of the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee (SLOOC). The South Korean delegation praised the IOC plan but said the final decision would have to be made by the Seoul government.

The inter-Korean sports talks now seem to be in a cliff-hanging situation and whether the south-north sports talks will continue or not depends on the north. Kim Chong-ha, president of the South Korean Olympic Committee, has expressed contentment in regard to the new IOC proposal. After the meeting, he said that he was pleased with the progress from the latest round of talks. "We are very satisfied," he said.

North Korea's attitude shown during the meeting is also initially interpreted as being responsive to the IOC plan. It was especially noteworthy that the North Korean delegates used a new term when offering to "distribute the Games" instead of "co-hosting," the previous controversial word.

But, the future of the sports talks is still obscure. Before the 1964 Tokyo Olympics, there were similar inter-Korean sports talks to form a single team for the Games. At that time, considerable progress was made between the south and the north, as both sides agreed to name the Korean folk song "Arirang" as the official anthem of a joint Korean team. However, the talks bogged down at the last minute when the north tried to inject politics into the sports conference.

KYODO Views Negotiations

[By Masaya Kokubo]

[Text] Tokyo, June 12 KYODO -- The proposal made by the International Olympic Committee (IOC) at the end of the third round of talks between North and South Korea on the 1988 Olympic Games held in Lausanne, Switzerland, Wednesday will have extensive repercussions, IOC sources said Thursday. The proposal that both Koreas report to the IOC "by the end of June" on their response to the proposal on which Olympic sports North Korea can stage was intended to avert a possible outright refusal by North Korea, according to the sources. If both agree on the proposal, which calls for South Korea to grant the communist north complete table tennis and archery events, along with the preliminaries for soccer and cycling, the IOC will call further talks probably in July.

While top officials of both Koreas generally welcomed the proposal, the outlook remains clouded, the sources said. For South Korea, holding the Seoul Olympics transcends the realm of a mere sporting extravaganza and is a big national event. Since countries like the Soviet Union and China are expected to participate, South Korea can ignore North Korea if it really wants to, they said.

But participation of the communist north, from which Korea is divided at the 38 parallel, will have an effect of dramatizing the Olympics, while at the same time dissipating fears of a boycott by some East European countries. For its part, North Korea wants to avoid any unnecessary friction with Western nations at a time when the country is about to address itself to promoting its open economy policy. The communist country also does not want to be isolated from other Eastern Bloc countries by going ahead with a boycott for which few supporters are expected.

IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch of Spain, who is playing the role of mediator between the two Koreas, has his own ulterior motives, according to the sources. The Spanish port city of Barcelona is bidding against five other cities for the right to host the 1992 Summer Olympics and selection will be made at the IOC's General Assembly in October. Under such circumstances, it would be small wonder if Samaranch gave thoughts to protecting his IOC influence -- which would be severely damaged by a rupture of the talks, they said.

More rough sailing is in store in the fourth talks, if they materialize, as the parties concerned will have to discuss many ticklish issues purposely avoided in the just-ended talks. These issues are:

(1) Nomenclature of the Olympics.

While Article 58 of the Olympic charter clearly states that the name of the host city should be mentioned, North Korea is unlikely to use the term "The Seoul Olympics" for those sports events which it hosts.

(2) Free border passage.

If some events are held in North Korea, about 30,000 athletes, officials, journalists and fans are expected to ply between the countries. While ideas like connecting railroad lines between Pyongyang and Seoul and opening an air route between the countries were on the lips of North Korean sports officials, it would be unrealistic for them to be put into practice in view of the security problem between the two countries.

(3) Fees on television broadcasting rights.

NBC Television of the United States, which last March signed a contract to pay a minimum 300 million dollars for sole U.S. broadcasting rights for the 1988 Olympics, might require renegotiation of its payment if some sports events are transferred to North Korea. Since the fees will be the major financial source for the Olympics, South Korea would not yield on anything that might reduce the amount. For its part, North Korea does not seem likely to let the U.S. TV company broadcast the sports events free of charge.

(4) Formation of a unified team.

Although North Korea did not raise the issue in the just-ended talks, the country did bring it up in the previous two rounds of talks. Chances are North Korea will raise the issue in future talks.

NO SIN-YONG CALLS FOR SUCCESSFUL ASIAD HOSTING

SK120758 Seoul YONHAP in English 0742 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 12 (YONHAP) -- Prime Minister No Sin-yong Thursday called on the cabinet to gear up preparations for the successful hosting of the Asian Games, slated for Sept. 20 to Oct. 5 in Seoul. In a cabinet session over which he presided, No said that with just 100 days left before the opening of the Asiad, security measures should be stepped up around the Olympic stadium and other sports facilities.

He also pointed out that some public officials are formulating policies based on "desk statistics" and instructed the ministers to supervise the officials so that statistics and policies are produced on the spot. The prime minister said that a trend toward wasting energy, including gasoline, has emerged since oil prices began to drop, and that public organizations should take the lead in conserving energy.

USFK LABOR DISPUTE SETTLED, ACCORDS REACHED

[Text] The United States Forces Korea (USFK) and its Korean employees reached accords on major issues yesterday, winding up its two-week long labor disputes. According to the Korean workers' union, the US military authorities agreed to save some 300 Korean employees among 760 who were originally subject to layoff by this September. The two sides also agreed upon 6.9 percent wage hike for this year.

In protest of the layoff plan and other poor working conditions, some 23,000 Korean workers staged a one-day long walk-out on May 30.

Kang In-sik, president of the Korean workers labor union of the USFK, said that the U.S. side made a promise to do their utmost to meet other demands. He added that it was fortunate for the two sides to settle the disputes through dialogue.

General William J. Livsey, commander of the USFK was learned to have said that he would seek cooperation from the US Defense Department to deal with other unsettled issues. Concerning a demand of the trade union not to recruit family members of U.S. soldiers in violation of the local Employment Act, the U.S. side said it will submit the issue to SOFA (Status of Forces Agreement) for settlement.

OPPOSITION OBJECTS TO U.S. CIGARETTE, BEEF IMPORTS

[Text] A heated debate erupted between the government and opposition parties over the U.S. urged imports of American cigarettes and beef in a House questioning session about economic matters yesterday. Opposition lawmakers pressed the administration not to import foreign cigarettes and beef to protect farmers.

The controversy started when Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister Kim Man-che indicated that their imports would be inevitable in the face of mounting pressures by the United States. He said: "Taiwan allowed imports of foreign cigarettes 20 years ago, Japan 30 years ago, and most of world countries have opened their markets. It is true that Korea, as the 17th largest trading country on the globe exporting goods worth $30 billion a year, is being pressed by developed nations to open its door. The government will delay the opening for the imports as much as possible. The government will try to minimize ill-effects of the cigarettes import by limiting the scope of the market opening."

At this remark, opposition lawmakers shouted out their disapproval from their seat, some of them standing up. One of them said, "You should make a commitment now, and give us a clear-cut answer not to import them."

Rep. Ham Chong-han of the second opposition Korea National Party took the rostrum and said: "Should we import American cigarettes in order to protect American farmers? Should we import them in order to help American congressmen be reelected? You have to know that a no-smoking campaign is spreading all over the world, particularly in the United States. Are you going to make even our children smoke?" Then, he reminded Kim of students' slogan, "Yankee go home."

Kim stood at the rostrum again to explain: "We policy makers have to consider both economic and political aspects in formulating trade policies. The principle is to give and take. Our exports of footwear, electronic goods, automobles and garments should not be restricted due to minor things (imports of cigarettes and beef)." As to the import of beef, he made clear that it would not be imported until domestic prices of cattle and supply of beef are stabilized.

Earlier in the session ruling opposition Assemblymen inquired as to the problem of business conglomerates and other economic ills. They also questioned government officials on counter-measures on accumulating foreign debts, difficulties in the rural economy, and declining small and medium-size industries.

Taking the floor first, Rep. U Pyong-kyu of the ruling Democratic Justice Party pointed out: "The big business conglomerates encroach upon the proper areas of small and medium-size industries, while disregarding what they should do for the prosperity of the national economy." He demanded the government reveal measures to prevent the annexation of business firms and the plan to revise tax statutes, including the Inheritance Tax Law, to deal with "wealth bequeathal."

FOREIGN-INVESTED FIRMS ALLOWED ELECTRONICS SALES

SK130654 Seoul YONHAP in English 0623 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 13 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government plans to lift its restrictions on the domestic sale of electric home appliances manufactured by Korean firms incorporated by foreign investors.

Through the move, which will be implemented on June 16, the government hopes to expedite foreign investments. The lifting of the restrictions will be accompanied by the liberalization of imported color TV sets.

Under the decision, made Friday by the Trade and Industry Ministry, Korean firms established with 100 percent foreign investments will be able to sell their products on the domestic market without restriction. The Korean Government previously allowed firms set up with 100 percent foreign investment to sell up to 50 percent of their export totals on the domestic market and permitted companies established with 50 percent or less foreign equity and concerns with the exclusive right to use foreign trade marks to sell 100 percent of their products in Korea.

The Trade and Industry Ministry decided to completely remove the restrictions because they will be meaningless with the coming liberalization of imports and foreign trade marks, scheduled for July 1.

The firms that will be affected by the decision are Yisung Electronics Co., a cassette tape recorder manufacturer (87.25 percent of its paid-in capital is from U.S. investors); Quantronics Manufacturing Co. of Korea, a producer of black and white TV sets (100 percent of its investments are from a Hong Kong firm); and Korea Sharp, an audio goods maker (50 percent of its capital was invested by foreigners), according to the ministry.

Analysts said that the move is likely to spur direct competition between Korean and foreign firms on the domestic market because it will open the door completely for the advancement of foreign firms into the Korean market. They expressed particular concern about the entry of foreign firms into the domestic video tape recorder and compact disc markets because the importation of those products has not yet been liberalized. The ministry said that the foreign-invested firms will have to use domestically produced parts in their products as Korean companies are required to do.

CHON CALLS FOR FOSTERING OF SMALL ENTERPRISES

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan yesterday called for increased administrative efforts to stimulate the localization of component parts by small-and-medium enterprises. Both administrative organs and large scale enterprises are advised to preferentially purchase the component parts developed by small businesses, Chon told a briefing session for the fostering of small businesses. The two-hour Chongwadae policy briefing session was attended by Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister Kim Man-che, Science-Technology Minister Chon Hak-che, and the governors of some major banks.

The President told them, "We should lay the firm foundation for another economic take-off by further solidifying our economic structure through the fostering of small enterprises." President Chon predicted that the future economy of the world will be led by countries with many sound small-and-medium enterprises.

Chon then asked for increased administrative guidance to prevent small firms from recklessly expanding their business, which he said will be liable to collapse. The Chief Executive also told the relevant administration to work out measures to control the copying of products developed by other firms.

Later in the afternoon, President Chon gave a tea party to about 40 citizens who have much contributed to helping war veterans and their families.

[Text] About 50 members of the Urban Industrial Mission [UIM] in Seoul staged a four-hour sit-in from 10 p.m. Wednesday to protest the recent police searches of "Songmunbak Church." The church houses the mission headquarters. In a statement, the churchmen claimed that the police action was a repression of religious activities. Plainclothesmen entered the church in Yongdungpo twice last week in search of antigovernment leaflets. The search was reported to have stemmed from a confession by two female factory workers that they had obtained fliers from the church building.

STUDENT TO BE PUNISHED FOR BURNING SCHOOL FLAG

[Text] Seoul National University plans to take a stern punitive action against the student who burned a university flag Wednesday. A university source said yesterday that "burning a university flag is an act which cannot be justified under any circumstances and the student involved should receive heavy disciplinary measures."

The flag was lowered from a flag post and set afire during a rally staged by about 300 students who were protesting the removal of an altar the students had set up at the Student Hall in memory of some students who lost their lives in connection with rallies and demonstrations. The students also smashed more than 200 windows of the school main building. The source said the student in question has not been ferreted out. The school is expected to seek him out with testimonies by eyewitnesses and other reference materials.

ASA REPLIES TO LAO FOREIGN MINISTRY STATEMENT

BK120938 Bangkok NAEO NA in Thai 12 Jun 86 p 3

[Text] Asa Sarasin, permanent secretary for foreign affairs, has rejected Laos' proposal for talks, saying national-level talks can materialize only after local-level relations have improved. He said this during a meeting with newsmen on the evening of 11 June. This is the first reaction to the Lao Foreign Ministry's commuinique, issued on 6 June, by any senior Thai official.

Asa said the dispute with Laos over the three border villages has ceased to be a problem because Thailand withdrew all its soldiers from the area some time ago. Thailand does not regard the three villages as belonging to Laos but wants to avoid conflict. The two countries still have to settle the ownership of the three villages.

Asa said a climate of cooperation and improved ties at the local level must be achieved before national-level talks can begin because Thailand does not want to see Laos become a tool of Vietnam. "We are sincere and have a clear policy toward Laos. I want to emphasize our goodwill toward the Lao people. The Thai and Lao peoples have a similar culture and a common religion and language. Why, then, should we be hostile to Laos? But we can not accept Vietnamese exploitation of Laos to the detriment of relations between the Thai and Lao peoples."

On 6 June, commemorating what the Lao Foreign Ministry called the 2d anniversary of aggression against the three Lao villages, the Lao Foreign Ministry issued a communique calling for a meeting of Thai and Lao Foreign Ministry-level officials to prepare an agenda for government-level talks. The Thai permanent secretary for foreign affairs said, however, that preparing an agenda is not important. What is important is establishing a good climate at the local level first.

VIETNAM SAID RESPONSIBLE FOR 29 MAY SHELLING

BK130256 Bangkok Domestic Service In Thai 0000 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] The Supreme Command Information Office reported that military specialists have examined shells which landed at the Cambodian refugee camp, site 8, in Khlong Ht subdistrict of Prachin Buri Province on 29 May 1986 and the holes in the ground made by their explosion which killed and wounded several Cambodian civilians in the area.

The result of the examination indicates that shells were fired by heavy weapons of 85 and 122 mm caliber. Only the Vietnamese troops in Cambodia have such weapons.

The earlier denial made by Vietnam regarding the atrocities against the Cambodian refugees and the oppression of the Cambodian people inside Cambodia, by citing accounts given by officials of international relief agencies operating in the area, is groundless and constitutes a lie to the world community.

THAILAND TO RELEASE SOVIET AID TO LAOS 'SOON'

BK130155 Bangkok THE NATION in English 13 Jun 86 p 5

[Excerpt] Laos should notify Thailand in advance of the content of products it imports through Thailand to avoid any future complication, a senior Thai official said yesterday.

Asa Sarasin, the Permanent Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said Wednesday that Thailand has no intention to withhold foreign products destined for Laos. The permanent secretary said advance notifications is essential for the process of imported goods destined for Laos as required by Thai custom regulations. Asa was speaking to reporters in response to a report that Thailand was withholding 120 tons of asphalt sent from the Soviet Union to Laos.

An informed source said that Thailand will soon allow the asphalt to be transferred to Laos. No reason has been given for the withholding of the product but it is understood that it is considered to be of a "strategic nature." Thailand prohibits export of "strategic goods" to Laos for security reason.

Commenting on the current state of the Thai-Laotian relations, Asa said the people-to-people ties have been very good. "We want to see closer relations between the two countries," he said.

Vientiane last week issued a statement criticizing Thailand for the dispute over the three villages on the Thai-Laotian border which has entered its second year.

Asa said Thailand will not negotiate with Laos over the dispute because all the Thai troops had already been withdrawn from the disputed areas.

ASEAN TO RAISE U.S. FARM ACT ISSUE IN MANILA

[Text] Thailand and ASEAN will stress the negative repercussion of the Farm Act in the forthcoming meeting between their foreign ministers and those from the United States and Economic Community, an informed foreign ministry source told THE NATION yesterday.

At the post-ASEAN Ministerial meetings with dialogue partners, particularly the U.S. and EC, ASEAN will express its dissatisfaction with the U.S. Farm Act, which provides substantive subsidy for the U.S. agricultural exports and the measures adopted by EC to subsidize the farm industry, according to the source.

The source also said that Thailand will ask for support from ASEAN in holding a meeting here among non-subsidized agricultural export countries to further explore actions to counter the rise in protectionism and agricultural subsidies.

The source said that Thailand has agreed to meet U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz, who has proposed to meet ASEAN foreign ministers for 30 minutes each.

Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong, who will lead the Thai delegation, which will also meet Joe Clark, the Canadian foreign minister. Thailand is the ASEAN coordinator for Canada in the discussion to be held in Manila this year.

RADIO, TV BOARD ON FREQUENCIES, ELECTION CAMPAIGN

BK121000 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] The 5th annual meeting of the Radio and Television Administrative Board was held at Government House at 0930 today. The meeting, chaired by Deputy Prime Minister General Prachuap Suntharangkun, approved television frequencies for the Public Relations Department's eight television stations to be set up in the following provinces: Sakon Nakhon, Loei, Nakhon Ratchasima, Trang, Chiang Rai, Mae Hong Son, Nan, and Trat. It also approved television frequencies for the Mass Communications Organization of Thailand to use in setting up 25 relay stations of Color Television Channels 9 and 3 in the following provinces: Trat, Nakhon Sawan, Prachin Buri, Prachuap Khirikhan, Chiang Rai, Tak, Nan, Phitsanulok, Phrae, Mae Hong Son, Lampang, Nakhon Ratchasima, Phetchabun, Loei, Sakon Nakhon, Surin, Udon Thani, Chumphon, Trang, Nakhon Si Thammarat, Phuket, Ranong, Surat Thani, Satun, and Yala.

Concerning radio, the meeting approved an additional AM frequency of 1,179 kHz for the Supreme Command's Coordination Center for the Central Security Command radio station in Mae Chan District, Chiang Rai Province.

The meeting also studied the Public Relations Department's procedure on political campaigning on radio and television under the regulations set by the Radio and Television Administrative Board. The Public Relations Department has appointed a committee and a subcommittee to censor political campaign scripts from political parties both in Bangkok and the provinces. They are stationed at four centers -- in Khon Kaen, which is in charge of the northeast; in Lampang, which is in charge of the north; in Hat Yai, which is in charge of the lower southern part; and in Surat Thani for the upper southern part. Political parties may apply for radio time at the center responsible for the relevant province from now on. According to the Public Relations Department, each party must submit three different scripts in quardruplicate to the department for censoring. In Bangkok, political parties can submit their campaign scripts to the Legal Division, the Public Relations Department, Ratchadamnoen Klang Road. In the provinces, they can submit the scripts at the various centers mentioned above. The Public Relations Department will begin broadcasting election campaign items for the parties applying for radio time beginning 16 June. The service is free of charge.

The meeting then took up other topics and adjourned at 1100.

ROLE OF PARTIES IN JULY ELECTION DISCUSSED

BK121057 [Editorial Report] Three Thai language dailies -- THAI RAT, NAEO NA, and SIAM RAT -- on 12 June carry editorials on the 27 July election. The 800-word THAI RAT editorial, on page 3, entitled: "A Lesson for Political Parties," notes that several political parties have found it financially difficult to field the required 174 candidates, a problem that "causes some people to feel that the Constitution is not conducive to the existence of small parties." The editorial, however, says the Constitution aims at strengthening the political parties system by limiting the number of parties, "an abundance of which causes political instability."

The THAI RAT editorial continues: "The 27 July election will teach political parties a lesson. Small parties can grow bigger if they build up a popular base. Political parties must have clear and firm policies and must try to expand. They must not try just to fill membership ranks to meet the legal requirement, but must conduct regular political activities in order to broaden their bases. Political parties will face no financial problem if they have a broad popular base."

The 800-word NAEO NA Page 4 editorial, entitled: "Political Parties" notes the requirement that every party contesting in the 27 July election must field a minimum of 174 candidates, and says this requirement has forced some small parties to resort to "hiring people to run under their names." It says the leader of the Social Democratic Party reportedly will dissolve his party because he could not find enough candidates to meet the requirement. The editorial sympathizes with the small parties facing the problem but says: "Party administrators must try to establish a genuine popular base for their parties. Parties should not be merely a collection of a few people, who campaign only at election time to find candidates to run on their behalf, paying no attention to whether they agree with the parties' policies or philosophy."

The NAEO NA editorial concludes: "Political parties must have a popular base and act as a center around which to rally people having similar ideas, policies, and interests. They also must have a strong administrative system to enable them to expand step by step to eventually be ready to assume the task of national administration."

The 700-word SIAM RAT page 5 editorial entitled: "How Should People Use Their Right To Vote?" says the absence of a party having absolute majority in the parliament, which led to a problem in the formation of a government and appointment of a prime minister, should be avoided in the 27 July election. It points out that during the tenure of the Prem government, problems in the Parliament and the cabinet all resulted from the fact that no party had absolute majority in the Parliament. It says: "To prevent a government like the present one coming to power again, we appeal to voters to vote in such a way that will give any party a sufficient number of MP's to form a government by itself. If voters do this, they will have a prime minister of their choice who will work closely with them for a full 4-year term."

NO 'NOTABLE PROGRESS' IN U.S.-SRV MIA TALKS

[By Laurent Maillard]

[Text] Hanoi, June 13 (AFP) -- Vietnamese and U.S. experts ended talks here Friday on U.S. servicemen listed as missing in action (MIA) during the Vietnam war without making any notable progress. The two sides met for five hours Thursday and Friday in an atmosphere that was more tense and less cordial than previous meetings, observers said.

Colonel Joe Harvey, director of the Hawaii-based U.S. Armed Forces Joint Casualty Resolution Center, declined to comment on the discussions, saying only that they were "productive and positive."

"It went well," said Nguyen Can, interim director of the Vietnamese department charged with searching for MIA's, adding that no date for a new round of discussions had been set.

The talks did not uncover any new information on the 1,792 U.S. servicemen still listed as MIA's by Washington, and were restricted to previously-discussed cases, he said.

Vietnam supplied the U.S. team with information on 21 of the 70 cases that Hanoi has been following since the beginning of the year, Mr Can said. "of those 21 cases, 11 have not been solved, but some of the 10 others could produce results," he said.

The last round of talks, held in February, led to Vietnam turning 21 sets of remains over to U.S. authorities on April 10.

Mr Can confirmed that the possibility of conducting further joint excavations of sites where MIAs are believed to be buried had been raised during the talks. "Their date and place still needs to be discussed," he said.

In principle, meetings between U.S. and Vietnamese experts on the MIA question have been held every two months. But talks scheduled for April were cancelled by Hanoi as an official protest against the U.S. bombing of Libya.

There have been other indications recently that the talks are at an impasse, observers said, noting statements by Vietnamese officials in April that the search for MIAs was linked to a "more constructive" attitude from Washington. Hanoi has accused Washington of not cooperating in the search for MIAs and for refusing to make a formal commitment to Vietnam's two-year plan aimed at resolving the problem. It has also criticised the contention of some U.S. officials that MIAs were still being held in Vietnam.

Vietnamese officials, asked about the apparent stagnation of the talks, would only reiterate that "Vietnam considers resolving the problem of MIAs a humanitarian question."

The United States considers resolution of the MIA question a condition to an eventual normalization of relations with Hanoi. Vietnam has returned 128 sets of remains over to the U.S. since the MIA talks began in late 1982.

REACTION TO PRC SHELLING OF CHILDREN'S CAMP

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Report

BK111213 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] The army paper QUAN DOI NHAN DAN ran an article denouncing the Chinese expansionists' crimes against the Vietnamese children. On the International Children's Day, 1 June, Chinese troops fired hundreds of artillery rounds at summer camps of Vietnamese children and teachers in Quang Ba District, Ha Tuyen Province, killing two children and seriously wounding one teacher and five pupils. On that day, like children in other parts of the country and the world, the pupils and teachers of the Quyet Tien Basic General School celebrated the International Children's Day and was camping near a lake on the foot of a mountain 10 km deep inside the Vietnamese territory. Four colorful camps were set up on a bright sunny day and the children were playing, singing, and laughing and enjoying their games. They did not know that from the other side of the border, the enemy's artillery pieces were directing at them. At noon, the children took a rest so that they would attend a meeting to celebrate the International Children's Day in the afternoon.

Ms Nguyen Thi Loi, a teacher of the school, told us that when the children rehearsed the national anthem and the song of the Young Pioneer Brigade, Chinese troops opened fire. It was about 1500 that the first Chinese artillery shell hit a place only 300 meters from the camp. Hearing the explosion, the pupils were ordered to lay down and were directed to take shelter nearby. The second shell fell only 25 meters from the pupils.

Vang Thi Kim, a 10-year-old girl of the (M'nong) ethnic minority, was immediately killed by a shrapnel; and Tra Vu May, a boy of 8 years old of Dao ethnic minority, also lost his life. Teacher Luu Thinh Phu was wounded by the third shell when he was leading the pupils to take shelter. Hoang Xuan Phu, a 12-year-old boy who was tending buffalo nearby, was injured by eight shrapnels. His two buffalo were killed.

Within only 7 seconds, Chinese troops slammed the area with 16 artillery shells. Pham Van Tu, principal of the Quyet Tien Basic General School, said Chinese troops have on many occasions opened fire at the school. On 9 August 1984, Chinese artillery shells destroyed a classroom; and 5 days later, Chinese artillery shells hit the school campus.

The people in Ha Giang town and the Vietnamese people have not yet forgotten the killing of two pupils by Chinese artillery shells last year when they just returned home from their examination. Many children in the five border villages of Quang Ba District, Ha Tuyen Province, were kidnapped or brutally killed by Chinese troops. On 8 March this year, they kidnapped a 13-year-old son of village vice chairman (Cao Ma Po). They killed the boy and threw his body into a mountain pass.

The enemy is very brutal, but their brutality cannot frighten the people of all nationalities in Quang Ba District.

Vu Dinh Vinh Commentary

BK130539 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1400 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Station Editor Vu Dinh Vinh "feature": "Heighten Vigilance for National Defense"]

[Excerpt] Dear comrades and friends: The committee investigating Chinese expansionist-hegemonist crimes of aggressive war issued a communique recently denouncing the Chinese aggressors' barbarous crime of killing Vietnamese children in Ha Tuyen Province on International Children's Day, 1 June.

Our correspondent, Comrade Tran Thanh Vien, and QUAN DOI NHAN DAN and VNA correspondents have gone to the scene to get an eye-witness account of the incident, that presents an irrefutable fact about this wilful criminal act of the Chinese authorities.

On 1 June at 1500 [0000 GMT] at Quyet Tien village, located deep inside our territory, over 10 km from the Sino-Vietnamese border as the crow flies, in Quan Ba District of Ha Tuyen Province, where students and teachers of the basic general school were camping and enjoying themselves on International Children's Day, the Chinese authorities ordered their soldiers to fire repeatedly hundreds of artillery shells there. Chinese artillery shells killed two students -- Vang Thi Kim, a 10-year old girl of the Nung ethnic group, and Chao U-May, an 8-year old boy of the Dao ethnic group -- and seriously wounded one teacher and five other students. All of the students' camping equipment and tools were destroyed. Meanwhile, the Chinese soldiers wantonly shelled the Duong Tinh, Lao Giang, Dac Tun, Khau Kha, Tung, and Dang hamlets of Quyet Tien village, burning over 20 houses and killing a large number of domestic animals of the local compatriots.

This was not an act by mistake. In recent years, Chinese soldiers have fired artillery shells into the school of our children at Quyet Tien village on many occasions. For instance, on 9 August 1984, Chinese artillery shells destroyed a building of the school, and on 14 August 1984, Chinese artillery shells again landed on the school's playground.

We still remember that 2 years ago, during the last days of May 1985, Chinese soldiers fired artillery shells into Ha Giang City, killing many civilians, including students who were on their way home from an examination.

Apart from those killed by Chinese artillery shells, many other children in the five border villages of Quan Ba have also been abducted or inhumanly murdered by Chinese soldiers. For instance, on 8 March of this year, they abducted a 13-year old son of the vice chairman of the village people's committee, (Cao Ba Co). Later, they killed the boy and threw his body into a creek.

This frenzied artillery shelling killed our students and disrupted and threatened their normal and bright life on the northern border, especially on International Children's Day, 1 June. This new, extremely barbarous, and cruel crime of the Chinese authorities flouted all customs and international laws on caring for and protecting children.

On 1, 2, and 3 June, China also fired 3,000 artillery and mortar shells and conducted more than 10 armed intrusions into northern Vietnamese border areas. However, on 4 June, the Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman nonsensically stated that Vietnam had not stopped the shelling and at times had sent its armed personnel into China for harrassment purposes.

It is obvious that the Chinese side can in no way cover up its crimes in ordering artillery shellings to kill Vietnamese students and disrupting the life of the Vietnamese people along the Sino-Vietnamese border, as well as in continuing to pursue a policy of hostility against our people.

SINO-THAI SLANDER ON REFUGEE CAMP SHELLING SCORED

OW121307 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Station Commentary: "China and Thailand's Absurd and Slanderous Allegations"]

[Text] It is a wholesale fabrication; yet, people have continued to harp on it, with a very wicked political design in mind. It is a story concocted by the Thai authorities on 29 May about Vietnamese artillery in Cambodia shelling a Cambodian refugee camp in Thai territory, killing and wounding many.

We immediately refuted that slanderous allegation by the Bangkok authorities, and pointed out that by concocting that story, the Thai side has schemed to vilify Vietnam and distract world public opinion, which was following closely and welcoming the fifth partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia.

It would have been wise and sensible for Bangkok's slander to have stopped then and there, but it did not. China has chimed in, ridiculously echoing Bangkok's fabrication. More surprising is the fact that not only Beijing, but others in the region, flouting the truth, have also parroted Thailand's allegation.

The truth is that international relief officials, who have been working at Cambodian refugee camps in Thai territory, have said that the Khmer Rouge themselves shelled the refugee camp. The Thai paper NAEO NA on 30 May carried the following statement by a UN border relief organization official: There are indications that the shelling on Refugee Camp No 8 might be the result of fighting among the Khmer Rouge within the camp, or that the shelling might have come from other refugee camps, because the Khmer Rouge leaders in the two neighboring camps opposed Thailand's plan to move those two camps' refugees to Camp No 8. Therefore, they trained their artillery on Camp No 8 to prove that it was unsafe. That is clear, very clear.

The Thai authorities' insidious scheme is to place the blame on the Vietnamese side. And China lost no time in echoing Thailand's slander. China and Thailand's dark scheme is to seek, by all means possible, to stir up the Cambodian issue, to deliberately create tension in the region, and to check the trend toward dialogue, which is being promoted and welcomed in Southeast Asia.

Slandering and making fabrications against other people is nothing new to China and Thailand. They have resorted to that dirty, vile trick because they are unrighteous. Their act is aimed at undermining peace and stability in Southeast Asia. Resorting to slander and fabrication in attempting to vilify others, they end up smearing themselves.

Our consistent policy is to respect Thailand's independence, sovereignty, and territorial integrity. Along with the PRK and LPDR, we have always hoped for a stable and peaceful situation in Southeast Asia and dialogue with Thailand and other countries in the region to resolve the lingering problems. We hope the Thai side will act in that direction. That is in the interests of the Thai people themselves and in accordance with the aspirations of the peoples in the region.

INDEPENDENCE DAY MESSAGE BY PRESIDENT AQUINO

HK121541 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 12 Jun 86 p 15

["Message from Malacanang Palace, Manila" by Philippine President Corazon C. Aquino]

[Text] For the third time in our history, we have fought and won a war of independence. And for the first time in the world's history, it was done without bloodshed and in the spirit of peace and reconciliation. Our first war was won with the unwanted intervention of a foreign power, as a result of which we quickly lost what we had so painfully fought for. Our second victory was with the fervently awaited intervention of a foreign power again. But our last, and unprecedented in the world's history, victory was carried out by us all by ourselves so that to us alone goes the credit.

What our history teaches us is that liberty is not won once for all but every day by our vigilance and our commitment to make it meaningful to the vast majority of our people. For we lost our liberty the third time because it meant very little to the very many of our people who are desperately poor. It is true that these same people, in even worse straits now, fought for freedom. But that does not mean they do not care about the quality of their lives but that they value equally their dignity as free citizens. Let us not, those of us whose efforts can improve the lot of the poor Filipino, make them choose only either bread or freedom but rather endeavor to give all Filipinos the dignity and fulfillment that a free and progressive country can alone make possible.

In commemorating Independence Day let us remember the men and women who gave their lives that we might live in freedom and who, by so doing, imposed on us the obligation to make that freedom also real for all Filipinos.

AQUINO INDEPENDENCE SPEECH URGES SELF-RELIANCE

HK130309 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 12 Jun 86

[Text] President Aquino yesterday [12 June] called on the Filipino people to protect and cherish their freedom. The President's address highlighted the freedom day rites at the Luneta where an estimated one million people joined their leaders in observing the country's 88th freedom day. In her address, Mrs Aquino rallied the Filipino people to vigilance and commitment to make the country's independence truly meaningful. She also urged the people to join hands in coping with the country's development to bring out self reliance for the country.

[Begin Aquino recording in Tagalog] Let us not revert to the old come-what-may habits, allowing our nation's destiny to be out of our own hands, as though we have lost the will to pursue our goals. What we should do is dedicate each moment of our lives to continually give meaning to our independence so as to fulfill our desire to be free and be responsible for our future and liberty. [end recording]

President Aquino's address followed a 3-hour civic and military parade before the Quirino Grandstand. In the parade the military displayed its power, indicating readiness to cope with any threat to national security in upholding the country's freedom.

At a diplomatic reception at Malacanang later, President Aquino expressed appreciation to other countries for their support of her government. She said moral support by friends of the Philippines abroad is necessary to encourage Filipinos in their resolve for a better life. Mrs Aquino said the world can count on an amount of goodwill from the Filipino people.

Marcos loyalists also observed the country's independence day by listening to a taped message by deposed President Marcos. In that message the former president accused the Aquino government of imposing tyranny and dictatorship upon the Filipino people. He said the Filipinos have lost their dignity, honor and freedom under the Aquino regime. Proof of this, he said, were the abolition of parliament, the removal of the Constitution and the abolition of the Supreme Court.

AQUINO DEFENDS BREADTH OF CON-COM REPRESENTATION

HK120910 Manila THE MANILA EVENING POST in English 10 Jun 86 pp 1, 6

[Text] President Aquino has admitted that the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] suffers from lack of representation from many sectors of society and professions, such that its work may be susceptible to criticism. In a meeting with officers and members of the Philippine Medical Association (PMA) during a dull day at Malacanang yesterday, Aquino said that "with less than 50 seats, the commission can hardly accommodate representatives from all professions."

Aquino was reacting to a remark by an officer of PMA that the medical profession was ignored in the selection of Con-Com members because there is no physician among its 48 members.

The meeting with the PMA officers and members was the only item in the presidential calendar yesterday. Malacanang sources said Aquino cancelled several schedules for the day since the First Family moved to the so-called "White House" on Arlegui Street near Freedom Park.

For the first time, the street fronting this house was sealed off from pedestrian and vehicular traffic yesterday, indicating that the First Family wanted to be left alone when they moved.

It was not the first time that Aquino was informed of the fact that one profession or sector is not represented in the Con-Com. In her press conference to mark her government's first 100 days last week, Aquino was asked why leftists were left out in the Con-Com selection.

In response, she said the selection committee, which was composed of key cabinet members, decided that "there were others who could qualify, who could do better than the communists." On that basis, she said the choices were made.

Aquino sought to include a representative from the Iglesia ni Cristo (INC) in the Con-Com, but her offer was declined, as well as one of five slots allotted for the opposition.

Speaking for her, Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo announced over the weekend that the members of the Con-Com would be kept at 48 because "the sessions have started, and it will not be correct to name additional members at this stage." But Aquino assured the PMA that the "Constitution (to be drafted by Con-Com) will embody the law of the land in its broadest application."

The officers and members of PMA, led by its president, Dr. Fe Canlas-Dizon, presented a resolution offering support to the government by freezing their professional fees, bringing them back to their levels of five years ago. There are about 12,000 members of the association. Medical consultation fees range from P20 for rural doctors to P100 for specialists.

Dizon told Aquino that by going back to consultation fees five years back, the maximum fee to be charged by specialist would not be more than P50. The PMA also presented an adopt-a-barangay outreach program, wherein they would provide medical assistance to poor communities.

AUSTERITY MEASURES OUTLINED FOR CABINET

HK110854 Hong Kong AFP in English 0801 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 11 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino Wednesday banned ministers from flying first class and staying in luxury hotels saying her government should practise the austerity it preaches.

The war on lavish perks was decided at a cabinet meeting Wednesday, after ministers had debated the "credibility of the government" and the "dignity of government officials", Presidential spokeswoman Alice Villadolid told reporters.

Mrs Aquino decided that "austerity requirements" should prevail and ruled that government officials should not travel "first class" and should hire "modest cars" instead of limousines while travelling abroad. The directive also bars officials, including ministers, from staying in suites of luxury hotels. Instead they should stay in "reasonably priced" rooms and members of official missions should be trimmed to the barest minimum, she added.

Mrs Aquino, who assumed power following a popular uprising which toppled Ferdinand Marcos in February, has shunned the notoriously lavish lifestyle of the Marcos family, whom she accuses of plunering the country's wealth. She has vowed to live simply and exhorted her 55 million countrymen to follow her example.

SPECIAL TASK FORCE TO TACKLE SQUATTER PROBLEM

[Text] President Corazon C. Aquino formed yesterday a special group to tackle the problems of the urban poor, particularly the more than 2.5-million squatters living in more than 600 "squatter colonies" in Metro Manila.

The President asked the special group to meet with Metro Manila Commission officer-in-charge Joey Lina, National Housing Authority administrator Lito Atienza, and head of the various urban poor organizations. The President issued this instruction during yesterday's cabinet meeting in Malacanang.

Mrs Aquino said the group will pay particular attention to squatters living along the banks of esteros [open drains] in Metro Manila. She expressed concern for the plight of the estero squatters who are affected by the perennial floods during the monsoon season.

There was a consensus among the cabinet members that the squatters' problem is a difficult one. Some ministers felt that squatters should be asked to vacate their shacks only if there are adequately prepared and acceptable resettlement areas ready to accommodate them.

Minister Luis Villafuerte said in the last five years, 24,000 squatters were moved to resettlement areas outside of Metro Manila, but some 37,000 people migrated and became squatters in the Metropolis over the same period.

SALONGA COMMISSION TO APPEAL U.S. COURT ON WEALTH

[By Rene M. Alviar]

[Text] The President Commission on Good Government (PCGG) said yesterday it would try to regain the $7 million in cash, jewelry, and other belongings which a U.S. court had decided to return to deposed President Marcos. The Marcos assets were seized by the U.S. Customs Service from the former President's entourage when it arrived in Hawaii last Feb. 26.

At the same time, the PCGG reacted with caution to the reported offers of some of Marcos' cronies to return home and cooperate in recovering the alleged illgotten wealth of the deposed President. But it warned that "they (the cronies) should not come home if they would serve as ploys in destabilizing the present government."

Minister Jovito Salonga, PCGG head, told newsmen that while the Philippine government was not a party to the case decided in Hawaii recently, it will either intervent or act as friends of court so that the Philippine government can present its side on the issue.

The case arose when Marcos' son-in-law, Greggy Araneta III, filed a mandamus suit against the U.S. Customs Service seeking the release of the $7-million belongings. Last June 6, U.S. Federal Judge Harold Fong ordered the release of the goods on the ground that the U.S. customs service has no authority to hold the items.

Salonga said that the United States government has asked the Federal Court of Hawaii to reconsider its decision. He said that he was also informed of the filing of a notion to stay the court order by U.S. Government representatives.

He also said that State Department Undersecretary Michael Armacost, one-time U.S. Envoy to the Philippines, has filed a manifestation with the federal court that the claim of the Philippine government over the Marcos' goods should first be heard in order to establish their real ownership.

Meanwhile, PCGG commissioner Raul Daza said that the reported six or seven cronies of Marcos who have sent feelers to cooperate with the commission are welcome to return home because that it is the right of every citizen.

Daza, however, said that the returning cronies should meet the terms and conditions of th PCGG to erase doubts on their real motives. These are: The returnee should disclose all the illegal wealth fully; the immunity from suit would only be on violations of the law relating to the ill-gotten wealth; the amount of wealth to be surendered should be substantial; and the return should not be a ploy to destabilize the government.

Daza told members of the Public Relations Society of the Philippines (PRSP) that out of the 218 companies afected by the PCGG sequestration moves, 85 percent of the shares of stocks was found to be owned by at least 12 or 13 cronies of Marcos.

Some of those whose shares of stocks have been sequestered are Antonio Floreindo, Roberto Benedicto, Bienvenido Tantoco, Rolando Gapud, and Eduardo Cojuangco.

CON-COM MEMBERS PUSH FOR MINDANAO AUTONOMY

HK120248 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 10 Jun 86 pp 1, 6

[Excerpt] Prominent members of the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] are pushing for the establishment of an autonomous government for Mindanao through an explicit provision in the Constitution. Two blocs -- one led by Muslin delegates in the Con-Com and one from the opposition -- are preparing separate resolutions, both seeking the establishment of an autonomous government for Mindanao.

Opposition Con-Com member Blas F. Ople said the Muslim problem is a special case and its "uniqueness merits a special and explicit mention in the new constitution."

Con-Com member Ahmad Domocao Altonto said he will also file a resolution seeking the establishment of the autonomous government next week. Hopeful that the proposed resolution will sail smoothly in the Con-Com, Alonto, a former senator, said the resolution will be largely based on the provisions contained in the Tripoli Agreement. He said that agreement, which was signed in the Libyan capital in 1976 has the provisions needed for autonomy but lacks the force of a constitutional provision.

Alonto said the move to establish an autonomous government in Mindanao has the full and broad support of his constituents. The Tripoli Agreement provided for an autonomous government in Mindanao. The agreement also recognized the Muslims' right to put up their own courts, and judicial and educational system. Limited powers to collect taxes and form their own security units were also given to the Muslims under the agreement.

Political leaders from Mindanao, however, have charged that the Marcos government had either ignored or set aside most of the agreement's provisions and this has fanned the secessionist war there. Ople and Alonto said an explicit provision in the new Constitution will help bring peace to the troubled region.

A resolution along this line was earlier filed by two colleagues of Ople in the opposition. Con-Com members Regalado Maambong and Rustico de los Reyes filed the resolution seeking the establishment of an autonomous region in the Cordilleras.

Meanwhile, Malacanang's refusal to act on an urgent appeal to appoint one more opposition member to the Con-Com is rekindling partisan feelings in the body. "We are at a loss. We do not really know what happened to the nomination of former MP Zosimo Jesus Paredes Jr.," the opposition, led by Ople, said.

The nominatin of Paredes, a former military officer, was sent to Malacanang last week, according to them, but no action has been taken. He was named to replace former Davao del Sur MP Alejandro Almendras who begged off from the Con-Com because of his political ambitions.

Opposition stalwarts said Malacanang officials are wary of Paredes' background. A graduate of the Philippine Military Academy, Paredes was a member of the Batch 1971 from which the core of the military reformists was drawn.

Col. Hernani Figueroa, a leading member of the reformists, earlier threatened to "lynch" several high officials in the Aquino government, including Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo, who is believed to be in charge of the Con-Com appointments if Paredes' appointment is not approved.

CON-COM DISCUSSES CANCELING PRESIDENTIAL IMMUNITY

HK120337 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 11 Jun 86 p 21

[By Melchor Parale]

[Text] Members of the Constitutional Commission called yesterday for the scrapping of immunity from suits of present and future Presidents. The proposal was embodied in a resolution introduced by Jose M. Nolledo Jr. and endorsed by both members of the majority and minority in the assembly.

The measure, docketed as Resolution No. 67 and referred by Con-Com President Cecilia Munoz-Palma to the committee on executive powers, would also apply to former President Marcos and persons who acted on presidential orders.

The measure was immediately endorsed by former Labor Minister Blas Ople, Hilario Davide Jr., chairman of the legislative committee, Floorleaders Napoleon G. Rama, Jose Bengzon Jr., Assistant Floorleader Jose Calderon and Rustico de los Reyes.

Proponents justified the proposal by citing the country's experience during the 20 years former president Marcos was in power. "The provision proposed for incorporation in the new Constitution is made specifically applicable to Ferdinand Marcos being the most immoral provision of the Marcos constitution," Nolledo told the assembly in his explanatory note.

Another resolution introduced in the assembly sought the incorporation of a provision in the new charter on the separation of the church and state.

Gregorio Tingson and Cirilo Rigos, main proponents, explained to the body that making the proposal formal would allay fears that the traditional separation of church and state in Philippine government affairs might be abandoned because of the predominance of clergymen in the charter assembly.

Mrs Palma referred the measure, docketed as Resolution No. 70, to the committee on general provisions.

Still another resolution was presented to the body seeking to constitutionalize the power of the state to sequester properties of the president and his officials established to have been ill-gotten. The measure, docketed as Resolution No. 61, proposes safeguards so that the state sequestration powers would not be abused.

Other measures introduced in the assembly:

-- Resolution No. 55, authored by Hilario Davide Jr. seeking to limit the presidential powers to grant pardons. It was referred to the committee on executive;

-- Resolution No. 56, introduced by Davide seeking to clip the presidential powers to make midnight appointments. By midnight appointment is meant the previous practice where an outgoing President would make hasty appointments before leaving office;

-- Resolution No. 60 also authored by Con-Com member Jose Suarez, Jaime Tadeo, Jamir Ascona, seeking a ban on block voting.

-- Resolution No. 65, seeking to allow private citizens to possess firearms as a self-protective measure against lawless elements.

Members of the committee on judiciary, headed by former Chief Justice Roberto Concepcion, arrived at a consensus for the adoption of a resolution limiting the martial law powers of the President.

OPPOSITION SEES COUP ONLY AS REMOTE POSSIBILITY

OW111241 Tokyo KYODO in English 1218 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 11 KYODO -- President Corazon Aquino was warned by the opposition Philippine Nationalist Party (PNP) that the impending talks for a ceasefire between the government and leftist insurgents may strain the "uneasy civilian-military" coalition, but told that a coup d'etat is only a remote possibility.

The PNP central committee said in a statement issued Tuesday that the government and the military might become "unduly complacent" because of "false hopes and expectations" created by negotiations between emissaries of the Aquino government and the Communist Party of the Philippines. The statement was issued on the same day that a former newsman and political detainee, Satur Ocampo, formally accepted his designation as the official negotiator of the Communist Party and the underground leftist umbrella, the National Democratic Front (NDF).

The PNP said that a proposal for a "coalition government" that included the Communist Party and its military arm, the New People's Army (NPA), put forward by erstwhile Communist Party Chairman Jose Maria Sison, has seee off "a wave of anxieties" in military ranks under Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel Ramos.

The PNP, headed by former Labor Minister Blas Ople who served under deposed President Ferdinand Marcos, said that the Aquino government's "discreet silence" on this proposal "may simply be misunderstood as acquiescence." A coup d'etat, however, is extremely remote at this time "because of the prohibitive cost of such an enterprise and the stabilizing influence of the United States, which backs up the Aquino government," the PNP said.

Aquino announced last week that "preliminary talks," which could lead to the end of the 17-year insurgency, would soon be held between her emissaries and a representative of the outlawed party.

Ocampo said in an open letter Tuesday that "implicit in this acceptance (as negotiator) is President Aquino's acknowledgement of a mutual desire for a genuine and lasting peace and national unity." He said the ceasefire talks "would not be easy" for him and the government panel because "there are elements within and out of the government who would rather not see the negotiations proceed or succeed."

He did not identify these elements but past statements by the outlawed party have identified them as Marcos loyalists and Enrile and Ramos, the two men who led a civilian-backed military revolt that ended Marcos' 20-year rule and installed Aquino. Enrile had served as Marcos' chief administrator in the 1972-1981 martial law period while Ramos headed the Philippine Constabulary, a major branch of the Armed Forces and the main counterinsurgency force accused of numerous human rights violations.

MILITARY DIRECTED TO INSTALL ILOCOS SUR GOVERNOR

[By Ding Marcelo]

[Text] President Corazon Aquino has directed the military to install Mrs Sally Villanueva as governor of Ilocos Sur after her attempt to assume the governorship last week was thwarted by followers of Gov Luis "Chavit" Singson who barricaded the provincial capitol building in Vigan. Mrs Aquino's directive was conveyed yesterday by Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo in a letter addressed to Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Gen Fidel Ramos, Armed Forces Chief of Staff. Mrs Aquino asked Enrile and Ramos to submit a written report on the progress of her order on June 13.

The President's directive was apparently in response to the appeal of Mrs Villanueva for the national government to directly intervene in her bid to assume the governorship. When she first attempted to take over the duties of governor last June 2, her motorcade was stoned by followers of Singson. Mrs Villanueva suffered minor injuries as a result of the attack.

Tension has built up in Ilocos Sur as Singson and his followers defied an order from the Ministry of Local Governments (MLG) removing him from office. At the same time, Mrs Villanueva has asked that the entire Ilocos Sur PC [Philippine Constabulary] command be relieved for its failure to stop the violence last June 2.

Court martial proceedings have likewise been filed against Col Wilfred Nicolas, Ilocos Sur PC provincial commander, and his men for dereliction of duty.

President Aquino also met with top military officials headed by General Ramos to Malacanang to discuss what appears to be another brewing controversy regarding the appointment of officers-in-charge [OICs] in Sulu province. Minister Enrile was present during the meeting. The conference was called after the President was informed that incumbent mayors in Sulu, most of whom are former rebels who have returned to the fold of the law, have refused to vacate their positions in favor of OICs. Since the problem is reportedly political, military officers are seeking political solutions to the problem.

President Aquino also met with representatives of the urban poor who sought her help for a possible moratorium in the demolition of squatter homes in Metro Manila, particularly those built along the banks of esteros. Mrs Aquino has ordered that shanties along the esteros be cleared to prevent flooding in the Metro Area and to avoid loss of lives expected to be caused by floodwaters.

ENRILE STRESSES PRESERVATION OF FREEDOM, INDEPENDENCE

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile says the Filipino nation should not rely on other countries to preserve its freedom. Enrile said this during his speech at the 88th Independence Day anniversary rites held at the National Heroes' Cemetery at Fort Bonifacio, Makati. Enrile said that the defense of its freedom is the principal wish of the Filipino nation. However he said that the country will abide by its treaties with other countries, adding that the Philippines has a defense treaty with the United States.

RAMOS GUARANTEES SAFETY OF COMMUNIST NEGOTIATORS

HK130446 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 0400 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] Armed Forces of the Philippines Chief of Staff General Fidel Ramos said that the Philippine Armed Forces will guarantee the safety of communist emissaries in projected ceasefire talks with the new government. He added that the 250,000 strong armed forces will do whatever the president assigns to them.

Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo said the government negotiators have been named by the president but their identities were being kept secret for security reasons. Earlier, the communist rebels have appointed Satur Ocampo as among its emissaries in the yet unscheduled ceasefire talks.

MILITARY IDENTIFIES 'KEY' COMMUNIST FIGURES

HK110644 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 10 Jun 86 pp 1, 6

[By Cecilio Francisco, Jr]

[Text] The military yesterday identified 13 key personalities, among them former newspaperman Antonio Zumel, who belong to the higher echelon of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP]. Also named were 13 others who implement plans and programs of the Politburo in the provinces and regions.

Sources who requested anonymity said this present crop of leadership in the hierarchy of the CPP/NPA either belongs to the second or third generation as most of their founding members have been killed or captured by government forces in the course of intensive government counter-insurgency operations.

Defense and military analysts also indicated that these leaders in the Central Committee of the CPP are intelligent, cunning, wily and violent. This was confirmed by Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile in a recent speech saying that "they want to turn this country into another New Khmer Rouge should they be able to wrest power from the government."

The Central Committee, according to the source, is the highest policy making body of the entire CPP/NPA organization. Its present members are Rodolfo Salas, Juanito Rivera, Rafael Baylosis, Benito Tiamzon, Ignacio Capegsan, Romulo Kintanar, Antonio Zumel, Prudencio Calubid, Roberto Tacbad, Ericson Baculinao, Santiago Sta Romana, Luis Jaladoni, and Ibarra Tubianosa.

Of these Central Committee members, Salas and Baylosis are believed to be the "think tank" of the party. The two, however, has fallen the good graces of the party resulting in the appointment of former newsman, Satur Ocampo, as the chief negotiator in the forthcoming peace talks that hopefully would put an end to the insurgency problem in the country. He was among the leaders of about 150 armed NPA members who left for Digoyo, Palawan, Isabela, to unload 3,500 Armalite rifles and other military hardware from the MV Karagatan I. Prize for his capture is P175,000.

Kintanar alias Commander Rolly, is a member of the Central Committee. He is the present chairman of the KOMMID [expansion unknown] with Jose and Benjamin de Vera as first and second deputy secretary respectively . He is credited with staging several ambuscade and disarmings of military and paramilitary units as well as liquidating barangay officials and suspected government informers. He has a prize of P150,000.

Zumel alias Ka Tony, a former newsman, heads the National Democratic Front [NDF], the political front of the CPP. In a recent interview he said that the party is open to ceasefire on the condition that the military stop its use of violence and that the government restore its true democracy. He further said that should the CPP/NPA win in its armed struggle, the party would be willing to establish diplomatic relations with the U.S., if it would stop meddling in the country's internal affairs. Reward for his capture is P125,000.

Calubid alias Commander Eliot, is the overall commander ofthe NPA in Samar, and carries the reward of P150,000.

ARMED FORCES SEEK INCREASED U.S. MILITARY AID

HK130606 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 12 Jun 86 p 24

[By Joel D. Lacsamana]

[Text] The United States government is inclined to grant more military aid to the New Armed Forces of the Philippines (NAFP), which earlier proposed a $55-million grant package for 1986, military sources said yesterday.

An increase in the sought 1986 military aid is more likely because of the U.S. State Department's perception of "the increasing seriousness of the Communist-backed insurgency in the country," military sources added.

The U.S. government's apparent change of heart stemmed from two factors: the replacement of the past "repressive" regime of former president Ferdinand Marcos with the ostensibly democratic government of President Corazon C. Aquino, and the alarming inroads by the Communist Party of the Philippines/New People's Army (CPP/NPA) in the past three months after the February revolution, sources told BUSINESS DAY. The sources noted that prior to the February revolution, the U.S. Government was poised initiate drastic cutbacks in its arms aid to the Philippines because of widespread reports of human rights violations of the Armed Forces under the Marcos regime.

The sudden ascent into power of Mrs Aquino last February via a bloodless revolution and the escalating insurgency activities prompted the US to "rethink" the substance of its arms aid package to the Philippines, the sources added.

The proposed $55-million military aid package consists of $10.15-million vehicle, arms and equipment and $44.85-million maintenance and other support requirements.

High on the NAFP list of priorities, which is still subject to revision, are light armored vehicles to be used for the military's antiinsurgency campaign in the countryside: 10 Commando V-150's, or off-road Armored Personnel Carriers (APC) and nine Commando Rangers or Urban APCs. The V-150's cost $3 million each, while the Commando Ranger has a $1-million price tag per vehicle.

Other items included in the list are 250,000 M16 magazines, $1.25 million; 40 sets of FCI and TE sighting systems for mortars, $400,000; armor kits, $55,000; tactical communications equipment, $3.062 million; and health services equipment, $1.383 million.

The maintenance and other support requirements package include: ground maintenance program, $23.185 million; Air Force maintenance program, $13 million; Navy maintenance program, $6.665 million; and aviation and marine maintenance program, $2 million.

The sources added that initially, the U.S. had indicated its willingness to provide a squadron (12 to 18 planes) of F-5E fighter jets costing $5 million each to the Philippine Air Force (PAF) and to help the NAFP sell its existing squadron of F-8's to interested buyers.

The F-8's are considered by the PAF as expensive gas-guzzlers, and are constantly hampered by nagging spare parts problems. Nothing definite, however, has yet come out of this reported aircraft arrangement, the sources said.

The sources noted that a majority of the NAFP top brass think that increased airpower may not be that necessary in the Armed Forces current anti-insurgency campaign. They added that acquiring new fighter planes would only hasten depletion of the U.S. arms aid package which could be put to better use through other needed items.

The sources said the immediate arms requirements of the NAFP to contain the communist-backed insurgency in the countryside -- and possibly in certain urban areas in the future -- should be forcused on three factors: increased or at least, consistent firepower, increased mobility through more helicopters and armored land vehicles, and improved communications systems for NAFP field units.

2 NEWLY-APPOINTED MUSLIM OICS KILLED IN MINDANAO

HK120537 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 11 Jun 86 pp 1, 5

[By Tony Rimando]

[Text] Cotabato City -- Two newly appointed Muslim officer-in-charge in the autonomous region of Central Mindanao were gunned down by unidentified armed men in separate incidents Sunday, it was learned here yesterday.

Sketchy reports received by lawyer Zaracia Candau, acting chairman of the Regional Executive Council of the Autonomous government, identified the slain officials as Datu Guiapal Nando, 43, OIC of Datu Paglas, Maguindanao; Datu Blu Ismael, 46, OIC of Kapatagan, Lanao del Norte.

Nando, together with two companions, was on his way to a mosque to pray on the occasion of the end of Ramadan in Barangay Danalusay, Datu Paglas, when armed men deployed on both sides of the road fired at him. Nando suffered multiple bullet wounds in the body. He died on the spot.

His two unidentified companions were seriously wounded and taken to a nearby emergency hospital. They were given a slim chance to survive.

Nando was to proceed Monday to Cotabato City where he and five other OICs were to take their oath of office before Chairman Canado.

Ismael was walking in downtown Marawi city where he was temporarily residing when a young man approached him and shot him pointblank. Ismael was hit twice in the head and died on the spot.

Candao said the reports did not mention the motives behind the killings. However, investigators, are looking into politics or personal grudges as possible causes.

About a month ago, another newly appointed Muslim OIC was shot dead in Pagadian city. The victim, Capt. Abdul Capar Lutian of the police, was gunned down by two motorcycle-riding men inside a store barely two weeks after he was designated OIC of Alicia, Zamboanga del Sur.

NATIONAL LIVELIHOOD PROGRAM TO STOP LENDING

HK110649 Manila THE MANILA EVENING POST in English 9 Jun 86 pp 1, 8

[Text] The Kilusang Kabuhayan at Kaunlaran (KKK) [National Livelihood Movement] movement will no longer continue its lending program to recover the P1.5 billion loans released during the past administration.

This was disclosed yesterday by Romeo David, chief of staff of the KKK national secretariat, in GMA [expansion unknown] 7's "Interaction" TV show hosted by Gerry Espina. With him were Eduardo Lucero, administrator of the KKK, Federico Ricafort, Manila Public Teacher's Association (MPSTA) chairman and Iluminada Cabigas, vice president of Land Bank.

David said the KKK in the past projected itself more as a lending program rather than an initator of livelihood programs, the concentration of which should be on bringing about production oriented programs instead of being a lending institution.

He revealed that only 18 percent of the P1.5-billion loans have been recovered and that KKK officials have agreed not to grant new loans because this would mean more problems, particularly the high cost per delivery of livelihood. He added that the government has not also released new funds for the KKK and that it is still operating on the budget released by the former administration.

The KKK was one of the most controversial programs under the past regime. It caused conflict among former Cabinet ministers who questioned the big allocation given to the project. The KKK program conceived as a self-reliance project was given a budget allocation of P1 billion annually.

David said the initial fund of P1 billion appropriated by the national budget as seed capital of the KKK was divided into the Puhunan Fund where P300 million was invested as equity in Land Bank, Development Bank of the Philippines, and the Philippine National Bank, while the remaining P700 million was lent as a loan computed at 12 percent. [as published]

Cabigas said that once the projects and the borrowers are identified, loans are processed and invested in the bank whose role is merely supportive to the KKK in terms of collection efforts.

The KKK is being evaluated by a task force from the Presidential Commission on Government Reorganization headed by Minister Luis Villafuerte.

David said the KKK officials are reorienting the program to redeem itself and make it more livelihood-oriented. He said that in the past, the livelihood program was interpreted as enterpreneurship and trapped people to enter more loans. Thus, instead of reducing the unemployment and poverty problems, the KKK gave more problems to the people. Reports also said many political leaders used KKK money to support their campaign programs but never intended to pay back.

ABE ON PROGRESS OF GRAVE VISITS, ISLANDS TALKS

OW131225 Tokyo KYODO in English 1216 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] Kushiro, Hokkaido, June 13 KYODO -- Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe said here Friday that the government is now sounding out the Soviet authorities' reaction to a Japanese request that visits to family graves on the four Soviet-held small islands off Hokkaido be realized by August. He said, however, that he would not make any statement on this issue, because working-level negotiations are now going on between Japan and the Soviet Union over details of the proposed grave visits by former Japanese inhabitants of these islands.

As regard the return of the Soviet-held islands of Kunashiri, Etorofu, Habomais and Shikotan, over which Japan claims sovereignty, Abe said that the Soviet stand on this issue has not changed, but that great progress has been made inasmuch as this issue can at least now be brought up for talks at the negotiating table. He said he would continue to grapple with this issue, no matter how long it might take to resolve it.

Among some 120 people who were present at a meeting to hear Abe's report on his recent trip to Moscow were Kushiro City Mayor Toshiyuki Wanibuchi and Nemuro City Mayor Isoo Terashima. They also included fishery industry people from Kushiro and Nemuro and former inhabitants of the Soviet-held islands. They explained to Abe the difficulties being experienced by local fishery industry people, and asked him to make efforts for an early return of the Soviet-held northern islands as well as for early realization of visits to ancestral graves on these islands by former island residents.

NEW SOVIET AMBASSADOR ARRIVES IN TOKYO

OW140301 Tokyo KYODO in English 0248 GMT 14 Jun 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 14 KYODO -- New Soviet Ambassador to Japan Nikolay Solovyev arrived in Tokyo Saturday to assume the post. Answering reporters' questions in fluent Japanese on the arrival at the new Tokyo International Airport, Solovyev said that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is placing emphasis on relations with Japan. "It is difficult to give you a specific example, but emphasis is placed on all aspects of the relations," he said.

TOKYO POLICE DOUBLE ANTITERRORIST STAFF

OW160229 Tokyo KYODO in English 0159 GMT 16 Jun 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 16 KYODO -- The Tokyo Metropolitan Police Department Monday doubled its anti-terrorist activities staff to 500 in response to a National Police Agency order following the recent series of guerrilla missile attacks by radical groups. The agency also plans to increase the size of anti-terrorist activities sections in Osaka, Chiba and Kanagawa Prefectures. The agency said that radical groups are most likely to launch guerrilla activities in these prefectures because of a projected new international airport in Osako, expansion of the new Tokyo International Airport at Narita in Chiba and U.S. military installations in Kanagawa.

The Tokyo Metropolitan Police Anti-Terrorist Section will see the number of its staff further increase to 600 this fall, according to the agency.

The agency said, 21 incidents involving missiles launched by radical groups have occurred since a number of gasoline bombs were fired into a government building in Osaka in September 1984. Six of the incidents took place this year, including rocket and mortar attacks in protest against the 60th anniversary celebrations of Emperor Hirohito's ascension to the throne and the May Tokyo summit.

NAKASONE UNSURE ABOUT DEFENSE BUDGET CEILING

[Excerpt] Takamatsu, June 15 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said here Sunday he will "try" to uphold the policy of holding down Japan's defense spending to below 1 percent its Gross National Product (GNP). But he added, "It cannot be said for sure (if Japan's defense budget will stay within the GNP ceiling)" because GNP figures are subject to change due to the economic situation of the world. The government budgeted 3.3 trillion yen for defense spending for the current fiscal year or 0.993 percent of Japan's GNP projected for the year ending in March 1987.

The government of Prime Minister Takeo Miki decided in 1976 to hold down Japan's defense spending less than 1 percent of GNP "for the time being." "I will try to maintain the policy," Nakasone told a press conference. Japan's defense spending rose 6.58 percent this year, much larger than a 3 percent increase in the overall budget for fiscal 1986. The government is tightening its belt to restore its fiscal health. The defense spending hike pleased the U.S. Government but angered Japanese opposition parties.

REPORTAGE ON JULY DIET ELECTION CAMPAIGN

Nakasone Approves TV Debates

OW131111 Tokyo KYODO in English 1102 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 13 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone Friday gave qualified support to a Japan Socialist Party (JSP) proposal to hold public policy debates between the ruling and opposition parties prior to the July 6 Diet elections. Nakasone took the offensive on taxation policy, the subject of the JSP challenge, by pledging to lower the burden of income tax for salaried workers with annual incomes ranging between 4 and 8 million yen. He told a gathering of Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) supporters in Yokohama that the government plans to implement a tax cut policy this fall.

Speaking to reporters before leaving for his campaign tour, Nakasone said he welcomced the idea of televised policy debates, but would prefer widening the scope of discussion. He said public debates between the ruling and opposition parties should include education, finance, privatization of the Japanese National Railways and welfare policy instead of simply taxation as proposed thursday by the JSP.

Three other opposition parties -- the Komeito, Democratic Socialist and the United Social Democratic Parties -- backed the JSP proposal Friday, submitting a joint proposal to the LDP asking for such debates.

Specifically, the opposition parties said they want the LDP to clarify its stand on the "Maru-yu" tax-free system for small savings accounts and a government proposal to raise budget revenues through indirect taxes. Shin Kanemaru, the LDP secretary-general, said the LDP would give its answer to the opposition parties next Monday, but indicated that the LDP would accept the opposition challenge. "There is no way we can dodge the issue," he said. Kanemaru, however, said he also wants to expand the scope of debates to include areas of policy beyond taxation.

Indirect Tax Discounted

OW141319 Tokyo KYODO in English 1001 GMT 14 Jun 86

[Excerpt] Tokyo, June 14 KYODO -- With the dual Parliamentary elections less than a month away, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone Saturday ruled out the introduction by the government of large-scale indirect taxation. Nakasone emphasized this in a meeting at the headquarters of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party to encourage party candidates running in the elections of both houses of the Diet, scheduled for July 6. "I have no intention of introducing what is called a large-scale indirect tax which is opposed by both the party and the people," the prime minister said.

His remark apparently was directed at opposition parties which have been trying to make the possibility of such a tax an election issue. His statement is certain to become an issue within the ruling party, which has decided to study the possibility of introducing such an indirect tax.

Opposition Signs Pact

OW131203 Tokyo KYODO in English 1154 13 Jun 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 13 KYODO -- The Japan Socialist Party (JSP), Democratic Socialist Party (DSP) and United Social Democratic Party (USDP) Friday signed a campaign pact pledging mutual support in the July 6 Diet elections. The Pact follows similar arrangements made Thursday by the Democratic Socialist Party and the Komeito in a parallel move aimed at strengthening the opposition challenge to the ruling Liberal-Democratic party. Under Friday's deal, the USDP pledged its support to JSP candidates in 18 electoral districts in the lower house election and five in the upper house poll.

The agreement concluded between the DSP and USDP calls for the USDP's support of DSP candidates in 15 lower house districts and three upper house constituencies in return for DSP support of USDP candidates in two lower house districts. Both DSP and USDP are JSP offshoots, with the larter DSP breaking away from the JSP in 1960. The JSP, which controlled 110 seats in the 511-member lower house at the time of dissolution, is planning to field 139 candidates for the enlarged 512-member lower chamber.

The DSP, which controlled 37 lower house seats, is planning to run 56 candidates, and the USDP, which had three lower house members, will field five candidates. The election deal reached by Komeito and the DSP Thursday involves mutual cooperation in 20 lower house districts and three upper house districts. Komeito plans to field 61 candidates in the lower house election. The party had 59 seats in the lower chamber.

The upper house poll, with half of the 252 seats at stake, is contested under a dual electoral system -- district elections with votes going directly to specific candidates and a parallel proportional representation system with votes going to the parties. Election cooperation between the opposition parties involves only the district elections.

Poll Predicts LDP Win

[Excerpts] Tokyo, June 14 KYODO -- The ruling Liberal-Democratic Party appears to be heading toward a comfortable victory in the upcoming Diet elections, with a chance of clinching a crucial 14-seat majority in the key lower house, according to a KYODO news service survey. The study also indicates that the LDP should retain its comfortable majority in the House of Councillors.

A district-by-district analysis undertaken by KYODO indicates that the LDP will win more than 257 seats for a simple majority with the hoped-for goal of a "stable majority," or 271 seats, also within reach. Around 180 LDP incumbents are expected to have no trouble in retaining their seats, but a tough fight is expected in 36 constituencies for seats left vacant as a result of retirements or deaths of incumbents, the study showed. A stable, 14-seat majority would enable the LDP to command all the standing committees in the Diet where the main legislative business is conducted.

The top opposition Japan Socialist Party is defending 110 seats in the lower house, and the KYODO survey shows that only half the JSP incumbents have definite prospects of victory.

Komeito, the second-largest opposition party, which had 59 pre-election lower house seats, will secure at least 40 seats, according to the KYODO poll.

The Democratic Socialist Party, which is troubled by a bribery scandal, may have trouble in attaining its 40-seat target. The party won 37 seats in the 1983 election.

The Communist Party is aiming to bolster its lower house strength beyond the 27 seats it won in 1983, while the New Liberal Club, the LDP coalition partner, has said it wants to increase its lower house strength from eight to 10.

PAPER CITED ON TRIANGULAR ALLIANCE AGAINST DPRK

SK160535 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0518 GMT 16 Jun 86

[Text] Pyongyang June 16 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN June 15 says the Democratic People's Republic of Korea is taken as the first target of the aggressive U.S.-Japan-South Korea triangular military alliance.

In a signed article titled "arrow of triangular military alliance" the paper notes that the U.S. imperialists' manoeuvres to provoke another war of aggression in Korea pose an increasing danger due to the schemes to form a U.S.-Japan-South Korea three-way military alliance. It continues:

This tripartite military alliance is a collective anticommunist military bloc aimed to invade the DPRK and other socialist countries in Northeast Asia.

This alliance is aimed to effect the military integration of the United States, Japan and South Korea and bring the Japanese "Self-Defence Forces" to the Korean front for joint operations with the U.S. imperialist aggression forces and the South Korean puppet army in case of war on the Korean peninsula, make Japan's military and economic potentials fully serve the U.S. imperialists in their Korean war of aggression and convert Japanese territory into a forward base, relay base, launching base and supply base of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces.

Through this military alliance the U.S. imperialists plan to use the South Korean puppets and the Japanese militarists as their agents in Korean war of aggression, and the Japanese militarists, on their part, scheme to realise their wild ambition for comeback to Korea with the backing of the U.S. imperialists and, further, make a breakthrough for overseas troops dispatch, zealously partaking of their war strategy. The South Korean puppets, dancing to the tune of the war program of their master, the U.S. imperialists, try to realize their dream of "unification by prevailing over communism" and "unification by vanquishing communism" with the support of the U.S. imperialists and the Japanese militarist forces.

For the concerted and common purpose and interests of the U.S. imperialists, Japanese reactionaries and South Korean puppets, the moves to knock into shape the three-way military alliance are now stepped up at the final stage.

To this end, the U.S. imperialists are now working to realise a military collusion between Japan and the South Korean puppets, the last of the three sides of the triangle, and strengthen it.

What is particularly noteworthy in the schemes for the triangular military alliance is that their moves for three-way joint military action have been intensified.

The schemes for the military alliance stepped up by the U.S. imperialists, Japanese reactionaries and South Korean puppets are a criminal move to freeze the division of Korea, provoke another war of aggression, a nuclar war, in Korea and launch a collective intervention in it. They are a factor further aggravating the situation in the Korean peninsula and other parts of Northeast Asia.

NODONG SINMUN ON ANTI-U.S. STRUGGLE IN SOUTH

[NODONG SINMUN 14 June Commentary: "Is It Not Time for the United States To Take its Hands off South Korea?"]

[Text] Since the first day of their occupation of South Korea by force of arms the U.S. imperialists have disguised themselves as liberators, protectors, supporters, and friends. Even now, they are still disguising themselves as such. However, in South Korea, the anti-U.S. struggle has been increasing recently. The anti-U.S. struggle is being waged every day throughout South Korea with the participation of a greater number of the masses of all strata, including youths, students, workers, farmers, off-stage democratic personages, professors, and religionists. This struggle is becoming increasingly vehement with each passing day.

Following the struggle of occupying the U.S. Cultural Center in Seoul last year, the struggle of occupying the Seoul office of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the office of the Bank of America in Pusan, and the U.S. Cultural Center in Kwangju was waged in successiion. This year, following the struggle of occupying the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan, the workers' struggle of occupying the branches of American banks in Souel was also waged.

Effigies of Americans were burned throughout South Korea. Threatening telephone calls calling for the Americans to go home are being made to American residence. In the streets and plazas of struggle, the South Korean people unanimously call for the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialists, the abolition of nuclear bases, and the suspension of U.S. support for the dictatorial regime. The anti-U.S. struggle in South Korea, which began to turn vehement following the popular uprising in Kwangju, today has beome the firm mainstream in the mass movement in South Korea. Even under a stringent circumstance in which the bayonets of fascism are rampant, the South Korean people are rising up in the anti-U.S. struggle for independence without being afraid of imprisonment and death. This vividly shows how strong is their desire to honorably live in their own country and land, devoid of aggression and interference by foreign forces, with the just rights and dignity as an independent nation.

The South Korean people's grudge and indignation against the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule have reached the point where they can hardly endure any longer. This is a due consequence. In South Korea, the United States has been portrayed as an ally and friend. However, the South Korean people's view of the United State has changed today.

When the U.S. imperialists ordered the Kwangju genocide and manipulated the massacre there behind the scences, the South Korean people clearly witnessed that the United States is not their friend. Even now, the U.S. imperialists are acting as the enemies of the people in South Korea.

Youths, students, and people of all strata in South Korea are now waging the signature collection campaign for constitutional revision and antigovernment struggle through demonstrations while calling for the dictatorial regime to step down from power. However, the United States is actively supporting traitor Chon Tu-hwan's military fascist rule and is trying to make the democratic forces stumble.

While directly witnessing the miserable situation in which the people calling for independence and democracy were being suffocated by tear gas and were felled by fascist clubs, U.S. Secretary of State Shultz, who visited South Korea recently, patronized the Chon Tu-hwan regime by saying that there are no human rights violations in South Korea and that the Chon Tu-hwan regime has done outstanding work toward democray. Such patronage is an example showing this.

In retrospect, the South Korean people have waged many struggles for their freedom and rights over the past 40 years. They have shed blood in these struggles. In the course of their struggles, there were some events that overthrew the dictatorial regime. However, the fruition that was achieved at the cost of the people's sacrifice was infringed upon by the United States.

As seen in the course of establishing the Chon Tu-hwan military dictatorial regime, whenever the United States faced a crisis of ruin in its colonial rule, it perpetrated a switch of power using the military gangsters, its stooges, thereby trying to maintain dictatorial politics.

The United States is clamoring about the protection of South Korea. However, this is virtually protection of the national interests of the United States. The U.S. pressure on South Korea to open its markets is aimed at suffocating the South Korean economy and at breathing vitality into U.S. monopoly capital, while its clamoring about protection under the nuclear umbrella on the pretext of someone's threat of southward invasion is a trick designed to turn South Korea into a site of nuclear war. Precisely here is the reason why the South Korean people have been so strongly angered at the U.S. pressure on South Korea to open its markets and why they have so strongly called for the withdrawal of U.S. nuclear bases from South Korea.

The U.S. has clamored to date that the stationing of its aggression forces in South Korea is due to the request of the South Korean people. However, the deceitfullness of its clamor has been completely exposed to the world.

The South Korean people are not going to allow the U.S. imperialist aggression forces to continuously hold on to South Korea, to infringe upon its sovereignty, to obstruct its democracy and reunification, and to impose a nuclear holocaust on our nation. Recently South Korean students have gone so far as to wage such an extreme struggle as setting themselves on fire in calling for withdrawal of the U.S. imperialists and opposing military training as hired mercenary troops for the U.S. imperialists. This vividly proves that the United States has lost its ultimate justification for staying in South Korea.

The United States has indicated a plan to relocate its embassy building, which is located in the central area of downtown Seoul, and which is under a tight security guard by the police, into a safe area. When the students waged the struggle of occupying the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan, the United States directly commanded the suppression operations against the occupation struggle. This itself reveals the fact that the United States is being rejected by the South Korean people.

Recently Livsey, commander of the U.S. imperialist forces in South Korea, stated before the soldiers of his aggression forces: In South Korea there are people opposing the United States. But, they are only a few. Soldiers should have a keen understanding of this. This reveals itself that waves of asking shaking are taking place within his aggression forces. It is only too clear that as the anti-U.S. struggle becomes intensified, the uneasiness of those who committed crimes will further increase.

The day when the U.S. policy of occupying South Korea by military force will end is not too far off. The United States must put an end to its illegal occupation policy, withdraw its aggression forces from South Korea, and take its hands of intervention off South Korea. It is indeed a foolish act for the U.S. imperialists to support the Chon Tu-hwan ring, which has been rejected by the people, and to patch up the crisis in its colonial rule by means of violence. It has long since passed when rule by force has worked. The poeple's advance toward the road of independence has become an irresistible trend of the times today. The South Korean people also have awakened and have gallantly risen up in the anti-U.S. struggle for independence. They are not going to retreat from this struggle until their just demands have been realized.

Let us revive the country, which has ruined due to pro-U.S. attitudes, through anti-U.S. struggle. This is precisely the faith and indomitable will of the South Korean people.

The United States had better act discreetly if only for its face.

KCNA NOTES PORT CALL BY U.S. BATTLESHIP

[Text] Pyongyang June 16 (KCNA) -- The U.S. Seventh Fleet battleship "New Jersey" is expected to make a portcall at Inchon on June 19 [as received; four U.S. warships, including the "New Jersey," docked at Inchon port on 14 June], according to the Japanese paper SANKEI SHIMBUN.

This pirate ship attached to the Seventh Fleet at the end of last month will reportedly visit Inchon port with three warships after concluding a two-week military excerise in the sea off the Philippines.

The battleship whose main task is to strike at targets on the ground by cruise missile "Tomahawk" and 16 inch artillery is notorious for its record of aggression and piracy in different places.

On the eve of the day when the U.S. imperialists provoked the war of aggression in Korea 36 years ago they try to send this pirate ship to Inchon port and encourage the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique to the provocation of war against the north.

STUDENT OPPOSITION TO SEOUL OLYMPICS CITED

Socio-Political Environment Worsening

SK131020 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1006 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] Pyongyang June 13 (KCNA) -- The Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique feel serious uneasiness over the prospect of the "Seoul Olympics" owing to the daily worsening socio-political environment.

After students of Seoul and Songgyungwan Universities declared their "determined opposition to the Olympics" in February, a voice rang out in March demanding "co-sponsorship of the Olympics by the north and the south".

Entering April, the students cried "boycott the Olympics which adds to the foreign debts" in their anti-U.S., anti-"government" demonstrations. Opposition organisations and many dissidents declared that "the people do not exist for the olympiad," sharply denouncing the scheme of the Chon Tu-hwan group to reduce the Olympics to a tool for its long-term office.

In this connection, the South Korean paper "TONG-A ILBO" said: "It seems now essential to answer the questions whether the course of the inducement of the Olympics is reasonable, or not, how the side effects and after effects would be remedied in case it is promoted by the present method and how the students' slogans strongly opposing the olympics should be appraised and accepted."

Even the chairman of the south Korean sports association did not conceal uneasiness about the olympiad when he said: "If the present instability of the political situation and social confusion continue, the destiny of the south itself would be a matter of concern, let alone the display of the 'national power' through the Olympic Games."

VNS Dialogue on Opposition

SK140756 (Clandestine) Voice of National Salvation in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Dialogue between Madame Yun Chong-won and unidentified male announcer from the feature program "Hour for Youths and Students": "The Seoul Olympics and the Students' Stand"]

[Text] [Announcer] In defiance of the opposition by the youths, students, and the patriotic masses of all walks of life, the military dictatorial group of Chon Tu-hwan is now running riot in a scheme to hold the two great sports events in 1986 and 1988 at all cost. I would like to discuss this issue in this hour. With the 1986 Asian Games and the 1988 Olympics approaching, the Chon Tu-hwan group is running riot more frenziedly than at any previous time to prepare for these sports events, is it not?

[Yun Chon-won] That is right. Under the pretext of building a new Olympic stadium and beautifying the environment, the Chon Tu-hwan group is now demolishing the quarters of the urban poor and outlawing street vendors, while at the same time increasingly squeezing more taxes from the people in order to secure the enormous amount of funds ncessary for the Olympics. Also, the group is turning this land into a kingdom of foreign debts, to the point where it is impossible to emerge from the debt by randomly borrowing foreign funds. Because of this, the urban poor have either lost their homes or are roaming the streets after being evicted from their houses. What we cannot overlook in particular is that our masses' aspirations for independence and democratization are being more ruthlessly trampled underfoot under the pretext of the Olympics to be held in Seoul in 1988. So the students and masses of all walks of life are raising their voices in protesting and denouncing the Chon Tu-hwan group, which is bent on holding the nation-ruining festivals in 1986 and 1988 on the strength of taxes collected from the people. Saying that democratization is a more pressing problem than the Olympics, they are calling for death-defying opposition to the Olympics and for Chon Tu-hwan's resignation. This has been eloquently demonstrated by the fact that a majority of the people opposed holding the Olympics in Seoul in a recent poll.

[Announcer] Not only our masses, but also the international community is opposing the Seoul Olympics. From the beginning, the sacred ideals of the Olympics has been to promote peace, harmony, friendship, and cooperation among various countries of the world through sports events. In view of this fact, South Korea cannot be said to be an appropriate venue for the Olympics. What do you think?

[Yun] Simply put, it is filled with the constant danger of war and a murderous terrorist atmosphere, not a peaceful atmosphere for sports events. For example, some 40,000 U.S. troops and some 1,000 nuclear weapons have been deployed in South Korea. Also, aggressive war exercises are conducted endlessly against the North. Because of this, the danger of a nuclear war capable of igniting at any time hovers on this land. On top of this, fascist suppression and acts of abusing human rights are being committed without let up. Holding the sacred Olympic festival in Seoul under such circumstances is simply out of the question. In its 25 May issue, the U.S. paper (?DAILY NEWS) in an article concerning the 1988 Olympics stated that since South Korea is typical of such places where political unrest and terrorism are rampant, not only is it inappropriate as a venue for the Olympics, but it is also a de facto war zone as well as a dangerous place. Thus it called for moving the venue for the Olympics from South Korea to somewhere else.

[Announcer] Now, my question is why the military dictatorial group of Chon Tu-hwan is so determined to hold the Olympics in Seoul in 1988, which is opposed not only by our people, but also by the international community, at all cost?

[Yun] We should regard the holding of the 1988 Olympics in Seoul as an outcome of U.S. scheme for two Koreas, whose aim is to perpetuate the division of the country and people. This point of view can be well observed in the remarks of Prime Minister No Sin-yong made at a National Assembly session held toward the end of March. He said that the key to South Korea's entry into the United Nations and having it cross-recognized rests with the successful holding of the 1986 Asian Games and the 1988 Olympics. This remark can be said to be a revelation of their intentions to use the two great sports events in 1986 and 1988 for the criminal purpose of keeping the country divided forever. As you may know, ideas of having South Korea admitted into the United Nations and having it cross-recognized are the ideas of keeping the country divided advanced by the United States to have the two Koreas legally recognized in the international community. For this reason, under U.S. instigation, the Chon Tu-hwan group is now trying to keep the country divided forever by making South Korea appear not to be a U.S. colony, but an independent country, and by making the Korean peninsula appear to have practically two states and having it recognized in the international community through holding the Olympics in Seoul.

[Announcer] I believe that the 1988 Seoul Olympics are also linked to military dictator Chon Tu-hwan's scheme to prolong his stay in power.

[Yun] Yes. It is true that the Chon Tu-hwan group is, in fact, trying to use the Olympics for its impure political purpose, while exuding ear-pleasing words about the Olympics being a great national festival.

Until quite recently the Chon Tu-hwan group opposed constitutional revision, arguing that the issue of revising the Constitution can be discussed in 1989 in order to hold the 1988 Olympics successfully. However, as the struggle for constitutional revision expanded among the youths, students, and the masses of all walks of life, including off-stage personages, and as the struggle continued to surge forward across the country, including Seoul, Pusan, Kwangju, and Inchon, the Chon Tu-hwan group recently declared that the revision of the Constitution can be carried out even before the current presidential term expires -- an attempt to bring discussion of constitutional revision into the forum of the National Assembly.

However, is not the National Assembly Chon Tu-hwan's brideman, dominated by DJP lawmakers? Therefore, this means that the Chon Tu-hwan group plans to placate the people engaged in the struggle for the revision of the Constitution by confining discussion of the issues related to constitutional revision to the National Assembly and to prolong its stay in power by delaying the discussion through tantalization.

[Announcer] In this way the Chon Tu-hwan group is intent on using the Olympics for its impure political purposes. The group cannot be left to do so by standing aside while it attempts to carry this on.

[Yun] You are right. Since the Seoul Olympics are an outcome of the U.S. imperialists' scheme to fabricate two Koreas and Chon Tu-hwan's scheme to prolong his stay in power, we cannot affort to watch them with our arms folded. If we do nothing to stop them, the Chon Tu-hwan group will trample underfoot our people's aspirations for independence, democratization, and reunification more ruthlessly and will run faster on road of perpetuating the division and of fabricating two Koreas. If and when this happens, the country and people will be kept divided forever, and our masses will be forced to suffer more misery and misfortune than they are now suffering.

This being the case, opposing the holding of the 1988 Olympics in Seoul can be said to be part of a struggle for national salvation to regain national independence and to achieve the democratization of society and national reunification. So, our popular masses should courageously oppose and reject the Seoul Olympics, and the youths and students should especially take the lead in this struggle.

[Announcer] At the same time, they should also strongly call for cohosting the 1988 Olympics by the North and South.

[Yun] That is right. I believe that the Olympics should be held in such a way as to make a positive contribution to peace on and peaceful reunification of the Korean peninsula. In this context, it is quite reasonable to cohost the 1988 Olympics in the North and South. Doing so will provide a breakthrough for hastening national reunification. For this reason, some patriotic students, including those from Seoul National University, are calling for cohosting the Olympics. I believe that this is a correct attitude, as it represents the public will.

[Announcer] We now have to end our talk for today. Thank you.

KCNA: 'SEOUL OLYMPICS' BOUND TO GO INTO 'RED'

SK150412 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1506 GMT 14 Jun 86

[Text] Pyongyang June 14 (KCNA) -- The Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique finds itself in a predicament as the "Seoul Olympics" is bound to go into the red.

The fascist clique planned to earmark a total of 3,000 million dollars for the Olympics -- 920 million dollars of direct expenses and 2,080 million dollars indirect expenses.

But the puppets are disbursing a huge amount of money for the arrangement of back alleys which has no direct connection with the Olympics under the spurious name of "enhancement of national prestige", with the result that the amount of indirect expenses for Olympics has nearly doubled.

And the amount of direct expenses has grown from 920 million dollars at first to over 1,600 million dollars at present.

As a result, sports officials and businessmen of South Korea are now crying that the total expenses of the Olympics would amount to over 5,000 million dollars, not 3,000 million dollars. And the International Olympic Committee and sports personages of various countries predict that "the Seoul Olympics is bound to go into the red unless there are huge TV relay fees and special sales income".

DISCUSSION OF REVISION CONTINUES IN ASSEMBLY

No Hopes for Agreement

SK101230 Seoul YONHAP in English 1219 GMT 10 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 10 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Prime Minister No Sin-yong said Tuesday that the government hopes the ruling and opposition parties agree on a single and unified bill on the planned revision of the Constitution, regardless of the forms of government. "The constitutional revision, I am sure, will be agreed upon between the ruling and opposition parties in the same direction as the Korean people want," he said in a special session of the National Assembly, adding that he has never thought of the opposite case.

In a report to the Assembly, No said that neither direct or indirect voting system could be perfectly good or wrong, noting any political system is liable to contain some merits or demerits. He went on to say that the choice of policy should be based on particular situations of a country, including historical and cultural backgrounds.

The prime minister also noted that, in the nation's history of constitutional changes, not a single constitution has been changed through a consensus or agreement. He said that the government will respect a bill on the constitutional revision prepared by the National Assembly.

Asked whether he views the current situation as a crisis, No said that the government sees some difficulties although it has not reached a critical point. "Accordingly, in an effort to tide over the current situation, President Chon Tu-hwan had clarified his will to accept the revision of the Constitution and is trying to lead into the right path the students who committed an error," No explained. For the remaining term of the current president until the first ever peaceful transfer of the government, he will instruct the civil servants not to have slackened public discipline and make utmost effort to make the government one in which the people confide, he said.

DJP To Prepare Amendment

[Text] Seoul, June 10 (AFP) -- South Korea's ruling party will prepare its own constitutional amendment bill by August, a high-ranking party official said Tuesday. Deputy chairman of the Democratic Justice Party's (DJP) Policy Making Committee Yi Chong-yul told the foreign press that the bill, to be put to a special parliamentary committee on constitutional amendments, would be based on a "broad spectrum" of national opinion. The party began to work on the bill after president Chon Tu-hwan agreed last month that parliament should consider revising the constitution.

Mr. Yi said he expected difficulties in the launching of the parliamentary bipartisan committee because the opposition was insisting on the release of all political prisoners as a pre-condition. He also said that the major opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP) and the DJP differed over the formation of the committee, with the NKDF wanting an equal number of seats and the DJP wanting percentage allocation according to parliamentary seats.

The parties agree to rewrite the constitution but differ on how the government should be structured, with the NKDP favouring a presidential system with a direct election and the DJP reportedly for any system excluding direct presidential elections. Mr. Yi said many DJP members liked the parliamentary cabinet system.

No Calls for Committee in House

SK110832 Seoul YONHAP in English 0812 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 11 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Prime Minister No Sin-yong Wednesday expressed the hope that the rival political parties will draft a unified revision of the constitution paving the way for the so-called "democratization" of Korea. In testimony before the National Assembly, No called on lawmakers from both the ruling and opposition parties to form a special committee on constitutional revision in the Assembly as soon as possible in order to reach a consensus on the matter.

No made the remarks in response to questions from legislators on the second day of a six-day interpellation session. He recalled that President Chon Tu-hwan recently said that the constitution could be rewritten before the end of this year if the rival parties reach agreement on the matter.

Chon's statement opened the door for the rival parties to revise the existing constitution, which had established an indirect presidential election system, he pointed out. Emphasizing Chon's firm determination to bring about democratization, No urged the lawmakers not to mistrust the government in dealing with the issue of constitutional revision.

No warned that North Korea may try to hamper the 1988 Seoul Summer Olympics because it realizes that the success of the Seoul Olympiad could lead to the simultaneous admission of south and north Korea into the United Nations and to the cross-recognition of the two Koreas by the four superpowers surrounding the Korean peninsula -- the United States, the Soviet Union, China and Japan. The prime minister urged the people to unite in preparation for the possibility that north Korea will miscalculate the current political situation in south Korea.

In response to the opposition camp's demand that the basic press law be abolished, No said that the government has no intention to scrap the law and added that the rival parties agreed to change some regulations of the law last year.

Meanwhile, Korean Defense Minister Yi Ki-paek told legislators that there is a good possibility that north Korea will provoke terrorist attacks or will launch an all-out invasion into South Korea before the 1988 Seoul Olympic Games. Yi said that the South Korean Armed Forces are ready to repel any possible north Korea provocation, in order to ensure the success of the 1986 Asiad and the 1988 Olympiad, both to be held in Seoul.

Floor Leaders To Decide Details

SK110958 Seoul YONHAP in English 0940 GMT 11 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 11 (YONHAP) -- Secretaries general of south Korea's three major political parties agreed Wednesday to entrust the floor leaders of their parties with a job of determining the name, membership, and schedule of the projected special National Assembly committee on the constitutional revision. They agreed, however, to extend every possible support to the floor leaders in handling the task and to join the floor leaders meeting if necessary, while continuing the consultations among themselves on the release of detained dissidents.

The agreements came in a meeting among Secretaries General Chung Sun-tok of the ruling Democratic Justice Party, Yu Che-yon of the leading opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP), and Kim Yong-saeng of the minor opposition Korea National Party.

Chung said after the meeting that they exchanged wide range of views on the pending political issues, including the formation of the special National Assembly committee, the release of detained dissidents, and the amnesty and reinstatement of Kim Tae-chung and other dissidents.

During the meeting, the NKDP reiterated its demand for the release of detained dissidents saying that "it is difficult for the NKDP to participate in the special committee, although it wants to, because the dissidents were arrested for demanding democratization."

In response, DJP Secretary General Chung said that it is not the scale of the release. He said it would be fair to leave the matter to the government because President Chon Tu-hwan said in his meetings with opposition leaders last week that the government will consider the release of the detained dissidents, except for radical leftists or pro-communist activists, depending on the degree of repentance.

The KNP urged the NKDP to cooperate without any precondition in the formation of the special committee on the constitutional revision during the present special plenary session of the National Assembly, noting that there would be no other way but to keep the present constitutional system if the rival parties fail to reach an agreement for the constitutional amendment.

NKDP's Yu drew keen attention during the meeting by suggesting a meeting between DJP Chairman No Tae-u and Kim Tae-chung. Yu said No should have dialogue with "all influential figures who can resolve the present political stalemate" because No had said he would do so for a "grand compromise." Chung suggested that he and Yu would meet separately to discuss the proposal.

No has expressed his willingness to meet with Kim Yong-sam, another opposition leader, who is serving as permanent advisor to the NKDP. A source said, however, the meeting between No and Kim Tae-chung would hardly be realized unless the amnesty and reinstatement are granted to Kim.

Yu said after the meeting that the DJP was apparently trying to resolve the present political situation by promoting wide-range of dialogue with opposition parties.

Future System Discussed

SK110017 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 11 Jun 86 p 1

[Text] The form of government to be adopted in the planned revision of the Constitution was the top issue in the first-day questioning session of the National Assembly and lawmakers were engaged in a hectic argument over which system would best suit the nation. A lawmaker of the ruling Democratic Justice Party formally proposed a parliamentary cabinet system as the power structure in the new basic law.

On the contrary, lawmakers of the opposition New Korea Democratic Party and the Korea National Party called for the revival of the direct presidential election formula to guarantee the people's free choice of government.

Rep. Cho Ki-sang of the DJP said, "The most important question in democratizing the nation is how much presidential power should be transferred to the Assembly." "Taking over power from the president, the parliament will play the pivotal role in national politics reflecting the diverse public opinions," he said. "In one word," he said, "a system under which the Assembly can produce the government is desirable for the democratization."

Then, he urged opposition lawmakers to join "the grand march towards the democratization of the nation" by reintroducing the parliamentary cabinet system. The parliamentary government system was briefly in practice in 1960-61 until the May 16 military coup.

Cho said that he could hardly understand the NDP's choice of direct presidential election system, claiming that many NDP lawmakers actually favor the parliamentary Cabinet system. "It is in fact your very dream," he said toward the opposition seats. Explaining why he opposes the direct election of the president, Rep. Cho insisted that a state of internal disturbances may be created during the election period. Some forces may attempt to snatch power through violent means, he cautioned. "It is often said that the presidential system ensures a strong government while the parliamentary cabinet system produces a weak government," he said. But, a government formed by the majority party must be strong, he said.

Rep. Sin Pyong-yol, a member of the New Conservative Group consisting of defectors from the NDP, voiced support for the parliamentary cabinet system. He claimed that the direct election of the president would only bring about the malady of localism, dictatorship and endless acts of political revenge between winners and losers. "The fastest and most accurate way to remove dictatorship is to throw away the presidential government system," he said.

NKDP Insists on Popular Vote

[Text] Rep. Kim Yong-pae of the New Korea Democratic Party told a plenary session of the House yesterday that the Assembly should forge constitutional amendment in an earnest manner of following the people's wishes. He said that the current Constitution which was enacted in disregard of the people's opinions under martial law "is not a Constitution of the people." The basic law has not been based on the people's consensus since the Yusin (Revitalizing Reforms) period, he noted.

The 1972 Yusin Constitution introduced presidential election by the National Conference for Unification, a kind of electoral college of over 2,000 members. "We demand the retrieval of what we were deprived of, that being the direct presidential election system," Kim stressed.

He maintains that the people's preference of the direct popular vote was evidenced in the 1985 general elections in which candidates of opposition parties who called for the system collectively were supported by 57.9 percent.

Shifting to the matter of political prisoners, he strongly demanded that the government set them free immediately. "It is preposterous to keep in jail those who were arrested for calling for the constitutional revision at this point since the government has announced its willingness to revise the Constitution."

Rep. Choe Chi-hwan of the minor opposition Korea National Party asserted that the amendment to the basic law in the direction of reintroducing the direct popular vote is the way to reestablishing people's unity.

Floor Debate Continues

SK120157 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 12 Jun 86 p 1

[Text] The second-day questioning session of the National Assembly yesterday saw fierce arguments between ruling and opposition parties over constitutional amendment and other political issues.

Lawmakers of the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party maintained that the new basic law should provide for the direct presidential election system to restore the people's right to free choice of government.

However, members of the ruling Democratic Justice Party claimed that the form of the government has nothing to do with the democratization of the nation, and that direct elections are not the sole way of ensuring the people's right to choose their governmental leaders.

Two lawmakers from each party took the floor to discuss the amendment issue, the release of political detainees, the projected enforcement of local autonomy, campus problems and other matters.

Rep. Kim Hyong-nae of the NDP alleged that the election of the president through popular vote is the consensus of the people, which was proved by the results of the previous general elections. "It is deceiving the people (for the DJP) to talk about decentralization of powers and so on at this juncture, and to reject direct elections," he argued.

He asked if the government and the ruling party are seeking to play a trick on the people while claiming that they have no preconceptions about the form of government to be adopted in the new constitution.

"The government and the ruling party are already riding on a bus called the parliamentary cabinet system," he said. He demanded that the government clarify whether it will propose a revision bill of its own if the rival parties fail to produce a compromise version.

He also demanded that the government release all persons who were detained in connection with their political activities, to help create an atmosphere for a "grand compromise."

Rep. Ho Chong-il of the DJP, denouncing the NDP's demand for the release of "political prisoners" as a precondition for the formation of a special House panel on the revision, asked the party to reveal its true objective behind such calls.

He also claimed that the NDP, being a moderate party, should no longer provide a stage for activities of left-leaning radicals.

Referring to the NDP's planned exchanges with the Japan Socialist Party, he asked if such a project could benefit the country, pointing out that the Japanese party does not recognize the Republic of Korea.

CROSS-BORDER ATTACK ON THAI PATROL REPORTED

It was further revealed that these Vietnamese and Heng Samrin soldiers destroyed the car before crossing the border back into Cambodia.

HANOI'S DENIAL OF SITE 8 SHELLING RAPPED

BK090204 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2300 GMT 8 Jun 86

["News commentary": "The Hanoi Vietnamese Aggressors Can Never Conceal Their Recent Artillery Shelling To Kill Cambodian Refugees in Thai Territory"]

[Text] On 5 June in Bangkok, Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son bluntly denied that Vietnamese troops shelled the Cambodian refugee camp in Thai territory. He said that this shelling was done by the Heng Samrin troops. This is another deceitful trick to deceive others. The Vietnamese aggressors have never admitted their abject acts committed against the Cambodian people and their neighboring countries.

The shelling of the Cambodian refugee camp at Ta Ngok or Site 8 Camp is a crime committed against the innocent Cambodian people by the Vietnamese aggressor troops in Cambodia in accordance with the Le Duan clique's policy to exterminate the Cambodian race. But the Le Duan authorities have not admitted this crime. They have repeatedly denied committing this crime. At first they said that this shelling was done by the Cambodian resistance forces. After it was clearly proved that the shells that landed in Ta Ngok camp belonged to the Vietnamese troops, the Vietnamese enemies then blamed the Heng Samrin soldiers in order to conceal their own genocidal crimes in Cambodia.

The Vietnamese aggressors, however, can never conceal this savage and criminal act. It is widely known that the so-called Heng Samrin regime does not have a big army. All Khmer soldiers forcibly recruited by the Vietnamese enemies are attached to the Vietnamese Army units under Vietnamese control and supervision. The Vietnamese dare not allow these Khmer soldiers to possess any big guns. These Khmer soldiers are mainly used for transporting food and ammunition to the Vietnamese troops and guiding the Vietnamese troops to the battlefield. Therefore, the Vietnamese enemies cannot conceal their crime in killing the Cambodian people by putting the blame on their lackeys in Phnom Penh.

The world community is well informed of the Vietnamese enemies' tricky nature and their aggressive, expansionist, and genocidal policy in Cambodia. The world community will certainly continue to condemn the Vietnamese crimes and exert greater pressure on the Vietnamese. All people in the world realize that only by forcing the Vietnamese to end their war in Cambodia and to withdraw all their aggressor troops from Cambodia can peace and security be restored in Cambodia, along the Cambodian-Thai border, and in the whole of Southeast Asia.

REPORTAGE ON UNSTABLE BORDER SITUATION WITH LAOS

Pathet Lao Raid

BK160818 Bangkok BANGKOK WORLD in English 16 Jun 86 pp 1, 2

[Text] Phayao -- Thirty-five Laotian illegal immigrants were killed and another 14 seriously wounded when Pathet Lao soldiers attacked a Thai border village on Saturday night in what was seen as a move against Laotian deserters or traders, intelligence sources told the WORLD this morning.

The village of Ban Huai Pong, located at 15 kilometres west of Chiang Kham, was virtually burned down in the attack at 9:20 p.m. on Saturday night by 30-40 heavily-armed Laotian soldiers, the sources said.

The soldiers, who were equipped with rocket launchers, grenades and assault rifles, completed their mission in about 10 minutes and subsequently retreated on foot, the sources said. The Pathet Lao soldiers had walked 10-12 kilometres into Thailand in their action against some 104 Laotian illegal immigtants who form the bulk of the population of Ban Huai Pong, the sources added.

The Interior Ministry has been informed of the incident and authorities are now preparing to suggest a protest to the Laotian Government over the trespassing into Thai territory, official sources said. In the meantime, the Third Region Army has sent in troops to bolster security in the area, intelligence sources said.

According to the sources, the Laotian illegal immigrants slipped into Thailand 2-3 months ago. Since many were teenage boys, it was possible that they were deserters whom the Pathet Lao were seeking. The sources, however, did not rule out the possibility of a trade conflict following reports there might have been a difference over buffalo trafficking across the border.

At the time of the incident, a Thai Border Patrol Police [BPP] outpost located some way from the scene heard the sound of gunfire, the sources said. The BPP outpost, however, was unable to take actiion as it could not pinpoint the exact position under the cover of night, the sources noted. But a BPP team moved into the area yesterday morning and launched a clearing operation. They cremated the victims on-spot and sent the 14 seriously wounded to Chiang Kham Hospital. Four others were slightly injured, the sources said. The Laotians who survived the attack fled to take shelter close to a BPP outpost, the sources said.

These illegal immigrants slipped into Thailand in groups of 5-10. Thai authorities have tried to push them out but they kept escaping the official dragnet, the sources added.

Little now remains of the village of Ban Huai Pong which was largely a community of make-shift thatched huts. "They opened fire wildly as soon as they arrived, without thinking of women or children," an intelligence source noted.

They walked more than 10 kilometres into Thailand in a journey that must have taken them hours, the source added.

According to the source, the Pathet Lao soldiers walked overland into Thailand crossing the border at a point not marked by the Mekong River.

Village Conflict Cited

BK131321 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1200 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] The Foreign Ministry today issued a statement marking the 2d anniversary of the controversy over the three villages in Uttaradit Province. The statment says:

On 6 June 1986 the Lao Foreign Ministry issued a statement on Thai-Lao relations related to the dispute over the three villages. It accused Thailand of not responding to Laos' proposal for negotiations at a high level -- that the Thai and Lao Foreign Ministries appoint their respective officials to prepare for negotiations at the government level. On 7 June 1986 KPL organized a press conference during which Thailand was verbally attacked on the issue of the three villages. It also circulated documents reviewing Thai-Lao relations over the past 10 years.

The Foreign Ministry wishes to point out the following:

1. Laos proposed that the Foreign Ministries of the two countries appoint their respective officials for a meeting, and claimed that this was a new and constructive proposal. How can it be called a constructive and sincere proposal since, along with the proposal, Laos made verbal attacks on Thailand over the three border villages which ceased to be a political problem between them a long time ago, thereby damaging the good atmosphere between the two countries. The fact that Laos has revived the issue seems to come from the fact that Laos is being used by another country as a tool to serve that country's interests -- as has happened in the past -- and create differences between the Thai and Lao people who are like brothers.

2. Over the past 10 months, Thailand has noted with satisfaction the friendly attitude of the Lao people toward Thailand. The Thai Government has been trying to expand cooperation with Laos in various respects. It has taken into consideration, on the spirit of friendship, all requests from Laos. To cite examples, the Thai Government allowed Laos to take back its aircraft brought by Lao defectors to Udon Thani Province in July 1984. It even agreed to handle all the costs involved on behalf of Laos. Laos, however, declined to take the plane back. Thailand complied with Laos' request for an additional supply of aviation fuel for Laos.

What is important is the fact that, in addition to Thailand's proposal of March 1986 for talks at the local level by the Thai-Lao border committee under the agreement between the two countries, the Thai foreign minister proposed that Laos send its high-level officials to discuss with Thailand problems of mutual concern which are vital for the development of relations between the two countries. Laos, however, rejected Thailand's proposal.

3. Thailand wishes to appeal to the Lao Government not to let itself be used as a tool by foreigners who harbor ill intentions against it, and to stop its campaign of propaganda attack on Thailand by its mass media. Instead, Laos should be sincere and cooperate with Thailand in seeking ways to improve and restore bilateral relations, promote contacts between officials and the peoples on either side of the Mekong River. This is what the Thai Government has persistently been trying to achieve out of sincerity.

4. Thailand wishes to appeal to the fraternal Lao people to try to convince their leaders not to become the tool of foreigners who only wish to destroy the friendship between the Thai and Lao peoples, so that we can coexist peacefully as brothers.

Foreign Ministry Official Interviewed

[Text] Bangkok, June 14 (AFP) -- Thailand has called on Laos to change its attitude in order to improve relations and settle a dispute over three hamlets on thier common border, a Thai Foreign Ministry spokesman said here on Saturday. Spokesman Pratyathawi Tawethikun said in a telephone interview that Thailand had had no territorial dispute with Laos since Thai forces had withdrawn from the contested area, which Laotian troops subsequently "reoccupied."

Mr Pratyathawi said Thailand was not unwilling to negotiate with Laos about any territorial dispute that Laos claimed still existed, but that this should be done through consultations at local level. He reitereated Thailand's rejection of a call by Laos for consultations between officials of the two countries' Foreign Ministries in preparation for government-level negotiations to settle the dispute over the three villages.

Laos made the call on June 6 in a statement released on the second anniversary of the beginning of the dispute. It accused Thailand of ignoring previous Laotian proposals for talks to end the dispute.

Mr. Pratyathawi said his ministry, in a statment issued on Friday, had rejected the accusations, and had urge Laos to change its attitude by refraining from launching attacks against Thailand through its mass media. He rejected Laotian allegations that some 800 Laotians, forming more than half of the villages' total population, were being detained in Thailand, where Thai troops had forcibly taken them when they had pulled out of the hamlets. He said the villages had refused to return home after Laotian troops took over and had since been alloted farmland and new homes in Thailand.

Lao Smuggling Detected

[Text] Laos plans to support black marketeering and narcotics smuggling across its frontier into Thailand, a Supreme Command press release said. It said Vientiane plans to support black marketeering along the Thai-Laotian frontier and the smuggling of opium and marijuana across the border from Laos into Thailand.

The release said the Laotian forces have dispatched troops into the Laotian-Thai border areas in Sayaboury Province to lend armed support and refuge to the Thai communist insurgents operating across the Thai-Laotian border in the areas.

It also said Laos plans to deploy Vietnamese troops along the Laotian side of Mekong River bank in Khammouane Province, replacing the Laotian soldiers.

It reported that a Thai villager was shot dead by the Laotian troops in the forested area in Khong Chiam District of Ubon Ratchathani last week. Two clashes between the Thai soldiers and the Laotian intruders were also reported in Tung Chang District of Nan Province.

MEASURES TO DISPERSE KHMER, LAO REFUGEES TAKEN

Khao I-Dang To Close

[By Sinfah Tunsarawuth]

[Text] In another tough move against Kampuchean and Lao refugees, the government yesterday announced that Khao I-Dang camp in Prachinburi, now housing about 25,000 Kampuchean refugees, will be closed at the end of this year and Khmers who are rejected for resettlement in third countries will be transferred to border camps.

Squadron Leader Prasong Sunsiri, Secretary General of the National Security Council (NSC), also said the government through the Ministry of Interior will strictly enforce its immigration law against illegal Laotian immigrants who are found not to be genuine refugees and are waiting for repatriation. He said the Laotians will be "sent back to Laos overtly."

He told a press conference that during the remaining six months when interviews are carried out to select Kampucheans at Khao I-Dang for resettlement, any refugee who tries to sneak into the camp "will be arrested by officials of the Task Force 80 and be sent back to the border immediately." "We will never allow anyone to slip into Khao I-Dang," he said.

He said only Kampucheans who entered the camp before August 1984 will be allowed to be interviewed by officials of resettlement countries.

The eligible Kampucheans are divided into two groups: refugees of Khao I-Dang and family card holders. According to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), the first group comprises 14,000 persons while the second numbers 4,300. The third batch which lives in an annex near Khao I-Dang camp will not be interviewed and will be moved to the border camps at the end of 1986, according to Prasong. These ration card holders number 7,100.

He said the government will permit only the ration card holders who can substantially prove that they are close relatives to the first two groups to go to third countries. However, "those who claim to be relatives will be examined by Thai authorities. We will not accept claim without proof," he said.

The secretary general held the press conference after his 90-minute meeting earlier in the day with ambassadors of five major resettlement countries, the U.S., Canada, Australia, France and New Zealand at the NSC's headquarters. Gerald Walzer, representative of the UNHCR, and his deputy Eric Moeris also attended the meeting.

Prasong said the embassy and UNHCR officials "agreed" with the measures to deal with Khoa I-Dang's refugees and illegal Laotian immigrants.

The embassy officials were asked to speed up their intake of 126,000 Indochinese refugees left in Thailand, according to him. "They said they would report the matter to their respective governments."

Foreign Envoys Consulted

[Text] Thailand is concerned about the 123,649 Indochinese refugees now being stranded at various holding centers in the country because the number of refugees bound for resettlement in third countries has declined since 1980. During the first 4 months of this year, 12,329 refugees were resettled in third countries. Squadron Leader Prasong Sunsiri, secretary general of the National Security Council [NSC], anticipates that not more than 30,000 to 31,000 refugees from Thailand will be resettled in third countries and that Thailand will face the problem of stranded refugees in the future. To find a solution to the problem, the NSC secretary general invited the ambassadors of the United States, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand and representatives from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to attend a consultative meeting at the NSC office this morning. The NSC secretary general asked the meeting's participants to find urgent solutions to two crucial problems concerning the refugees at the Khao I-Dang holding center in Prachin Buri Province and the illegal immigrants from Laos.

[Begin Prasong recording] The meeting agreed on the screening of Cambodian refugees at Khao I-Dang center from now to December 1986 or over the next 6 months. The refugees who cannot go to third countries will be sent to live with those at the border. [end Prasong recording] As a result of today's meeting, it is believed that Thailand's immigration law will be fully enforced and that no refugees will be left at Khao I-Dang center after December of this year.

PREM CANCELS WEEKLY ECONOMIC MINISTERS MEETING

[Text] Deputy Premier Phichai Rattakun said yesterday the caretaker government will not convene any more meetings of the Council of Economic Ministers except on urgent matters. He said during the last meeting of the council when Premier Prem Tinsulanon was absent, it appeared that the ministers might make "a wrong decision." Phichai did not elaborate but said that he subsequently proposed that the council should not hold any more meetings until after the general election.

Phichai said Premier Prem agreed with his proposal to cancel all the meetings of the economic ministers for the time being. The Council of Economic Ministers has been meeting every Monday to debate and approve important economic issues. Besides, Phichai said, several ministers were preoccupied with other work and could not attend the meetings. "Some ministers may come into the meetings with strong emotions and any decisions may not be positive," he said.

The deputy premier said the council will however meet to discuss urgent matters, such as the Sixth National Economic and Social Development Plan.

NHAN DAN VIEWS NEW USSR PEACE PROPOSAL

OW150743 - Hanoi VNA in English 0714 GMT 15 Jun 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA June 15 -- "The Soviet Union's program for 'peace among stars' reflects its peace-cherishing policy expounded in the resolution of the 27th CPSU Congress and the Soviet People's tireless struggle for peace, international security, and the happiness of all nations in this planet", says NHAN DAN in a frontpaged article today. The natinal daily, after recalling the topical significance of the new peace initiative elaborated in a letter sent to the UN general secretry by Soviet Chairman of the Council of Ministers N. Ryzhkov on June 12, says that the Soviet Government and people have done all they can to prevent the bellicose forces from preparing for "star wars" and promote international cooperation in the conquest of outer space in service of peace and mankind.

The paper says:

"After making a series of unilateral efforts including the suspension of deployment of intermediate-range missiles in Europe, the reduction of the number of these missiles, and the moratorium of nuclear explosions, the Soviet Union has once again put forth a new important peace initiative. Its "peace among stars" program demonstrates a high sense of responsibility towards the destiny of all nations and the whole humankind".

"Together with the master plan advanced by CPSU General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev on January 15 for the elimination of nuclear weapons by the end of this century." NHAN DAN notes, "the new peace initiative of the Soviet Union has formed a great program for the elimination of nuclear weapons and the prevention of the arms race both on the earth and in the outer space, thus extricting humanity from a nuclear holocaust."

The paper denounces Washington's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) program as a scheme aimed at accelerating the arms race and the militarization of the outer space which, it says, hangs a danger of nuclear disaster over all nations. The paper remarks that the U.S. administration's SDI program has been condemned by all progressive and peace-loving people in the world as it has further exacerbated the international situation and pushed the world to the brink of a nuclear war.

It says:

"The Vietnamese people highly value and warmly welcome and fully support the Soviet Union's new and great peace initiative. The world people desire and ask for 'peace among stars' and determinedly oppose 'star wars'."

LAO RALLY AGAINST THAI ACTIONS REPORTED

OW101716 Hanoi VNA in English 1459 GMT 10 Jun 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA June 10 -- A 3,000-strong rally was held in Paklay District, Sayaboury Province, marking the 2nd anniversary of Thai aggression and occupation of the three Lao hamlets (June 6, 1984). Addressing the meeting, Phonsay Phouangoudom, chief of the district, recalled the crimes committed by the Thai troops during their attack and occupation of the hamlets of Kang, May and Savang on June 6, 1984. He denounced that part of the Thai troops had withdrawn from the three hamlets proper, but they are still stationing themselves at various heights from 200-500 metres inside Lao territory. These Thai actions, the district chief said, are gross violations of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Laos and a denial to the strong desires of the Lao and Thai peoples who want to restore their good neighbourly relations. Their actions also run counter to the trend of peace and security in the region. The meeting demanded that the Thai side withdraw all its troops out of Laos, allow Lao citizens to return to their homeland, compensate for the losses caused by its troops and stop all its hostile acts against the Laos in order to normalize Lao-Thai relations.

ARMY PAPER ON SECURITY WORK IN HO CHI MINH CITY

BK111409 Hanoi QUAN DOI NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 26 May 86 p 2

[Bui Van Bong report: "Ho Chi Minh City Creates New Change in Security Work"]

[Text] In promoting and consolidating the mass movement to maintain political security and social order and safety, Ho Chi Minh City has concentrated especially on firmly grasping the local situation by placing tight control over the human factor, weapons, equipment, population and household management, and temporary residence and absence registration. Various localities have developed both broad and deep activities aimed at maintaining security. The consolidation of neighborhood cells and people's security cells, which was originally experimented with in 15 wards and 8 villages, has now become a city-wide practice. The city's more than 300 wards and villages have set up thousands of neighborhood cells and people's security cells which are operating on a regular basis and with ever-improving efficiency. Since the 4th quarter of 1985, thanks to the promotion of the movement at the grass-roots level, the poeple have supplied the administration and public security organs with 2,786 pieces of valuable information, thus helping public security organs promptly discover and deal with more than 500 cases involving speculation, smuggling, goods counterfeiting, and illegal business activities; recover tens of millions of dong for the state; and detect more than 400 criminal and political cases and hundreds of cases of infringement on state law. The public security services of Nha Be, Duyen Hai, Cu Chi, Hoc Mon, and Binh Chanh Districts have actively set up people's security cells for production collectives and agricultural cooperatives to closely link production plans with plans to maintain security and public order locally and have provided training to 450 cadres in charge of security at various cooperatives and strategically important areas. The districts have made 174 lagging people's security cells improve their performance. Security cells belonging to coastal villages of Duyen Hai District have closely coordinated with naval self-defense units in carrying out night patrol and guard duties and helping the Border Defense Forces and the local security units maintain political security and social order and safety in border and coastal areas.

In Nha Be, Cu Chi, Thu Duc, and Hoc Mon Districts, district security cadres have worked regularly with the grass-roots level to standardize and improve all activities of people's security cells in the villages. Thanks to the active participation of the masses belonging to the people's security cells, a total of 436 cases involving violation of market management regulations and hundreds of criminal cases have been uncovered and dealt with in the various localities. The efficient operation of the people's security cells at agricultural cooperatives and production collectives has led to the discovery of 278 cases involving corruption and theft of collective property and agricultural supplies.

In the city proper, the precinct and ward public security services have satisfactorily performed their role as a staff of the local party committee echelons and administrative organs. They have paid attention to forging and controlling security cadres and combatants with regard to discipline in order to gain more confidence and prestige from the people. The public security service of Go Vap Precinct -- a heroic unit -- has intensively guided the various wards in carrying out population and household management and in making 100 of the neighborhood cells firm and strong. The 1st, 3d, 4th, and Tan Binh Precincts have assigned street teams to join the local people and administrative organs in checking population records and permanent household members and in closely and systematically carrying out the registration of temporary residents. Through this work, the localities have detected more private traders from other places residing illegally in the city. The public security service of the 4th Precinct has mobilized forces to coordinate with the self-defense and civil guard units at Nha Rong Port in maintaining order and safety at the port area. They have discovered more than 200 cases involving theft and misappropriation of state property, recovering a lot of valuable goods for the state.

NHAN DAN ARTICLE VIEWS PARTY CONTROL WORK

[Unattributed article: "Control Work and Maintenance of Party Discipline"]

[Text] Last year, control work by the party in general and work performed by the control commission at various levels in particular produced good initial results. This work has been stepped up in numerous ways. Fine changes have also been made in the examination of party members who violate discipline and the settlement of complaints. In general, the enforcement of discipline among party members has been carried out in accordance with the party's guidelines and principles. All party committee echelons have paid attention to enforcing strict discipline in cases involving acts that run counter to the party's policies and resolutions or violate the state's laws and the party organization's principles and activities, as well as against those who show a decline in revolutionary quality. To date, all party committees at the provincial, municipal, and special zone levels; 90 percent of the party committees at the district, precinct, and city levels; and 36 percent of the party committees at the grass-roots level have applied the system of leadership with control over the execution of decisions. The formulation of the method of "leadership with control" has initially enabled the higher echelon to stay closer to the lower echelon, as well as to help the weak units in a practical way and advance the movement to make grass-roots party organizations firm and strong.

Through actual activities, the control commissions at various levels have been further consolidated and streamlined. The control commission of the party Central Committee and the control commissions of the local party committees have rearranged their management machineries to accommodate various specific tas,s thus creating favorable conditions for regulating work in a concentrated and uniform manner, improving the professional skills of control cadres, and gradually specializing them.

However, in general, the task of scrutinizing the maintenance of discipline and execution of the party's resolutions and directives is still far from meeting requirements and still has not produced substantial results. Many party organizations still do not take the initiative in scrutinizing party members who have violated discipline or have degenerated in terms of revolutionary ethics, and still seek to avoid unveiling or wrestling with the errors of cadres in high positions. Many localities still fail to promptly settle written denunciations and complaints or regularly examine the enforcement of discipline among party organizations at the lower level. As a result, at every level and in every sector, the enforcement of discipline among party membes has not yet been carried out in a just, accurate, and prompt manner.

More than ever before, it is necessary to intensify and improve the efficiency of control work. First of all, party committees must examine the implementation of various policies and the resolutions of the party Central Committee's eighth and ninth plenums and Resolution No 28 of the party Central Committee Political Bureau. It is particularly necessary for them to investigate, verify, and clarify written complaints and reports on various cases involving shortcomings of cadres and to examine the correction of the errors by leading cadres and party members in the self-criticism and criticism drive. Control work should be performed in such a way as to maintain discipline, ensure unity of will and action, and strengthen internal solidarity, thereby realistically and effectively serving the convening of party organization congresses at various levels in anticipation of the sixth national party congress.

It is necessary to take the initiative and develop a combined strength in the party's control work. Experience gathered by various localities shows that the improvement of the quality and efficiency of the party's control work must be undertaken in close combination with the improvement of the effect of the inspection work of the state and control work of various mass organizations and people's inspection networks. Leadership without control is no leadership. We must ensure close coordination between the control commissions and various sectors and echelons concerned right from the beginning as well as throughout the process of investigating, verifying, examining, and reaching a conclusion on a matter in order to achieve a high level of indentity of views on each matter.

We should thoroughly understand and scrupulously and correctly implement the guidelines, policies, principles procedures, methods, and regulations concerning control and disciplinary action stipulated in the various party regulations and directives. We should primarily and sternly control and deal with cases of unscrupulous or intentional violations of party lines and policies and state law; deviant and degenerate cadres and party members; and especially cases of theft, corruption, and illicit business which cause disunity, lead to reprisals against cadres and oppression of the people, and encroach on socialist assets. We should correctly implement the principle of democratic centralism in perfoming control work and in taking disciplinary action. Party organizations are authorized to listen to the views of those charged with wrongdoings before deciding on a disciplinary action against them, especially when the action involves a purge from or a confinement in the party. Moreover, we should satisfactorily investigate and clarify all cases to arrive at correct conclusions with authentic proof in order to ensure the justice and trustworthiness of the party. Moreover, we should also emphasize the ideological task in order to create a high degree of indentity of views on the assessment, analysis, and conclusion of various cases. In case subordinate party organizations take incorrect disciplinary action and fail to settle party members' complaints about discipline, authorized higher level party organizations should decide on corrective action after carefully considering and specifically clarifying the cases, and subordinate party organizations must comply with the decision. At the same time, prompt action should be taken to consider the restoration of rights to vote, elect, and stand in election for those party members disciplined with confinement and to recognize that disciplined party members have corrected their shortcomings.

Party organizations should continue to enhance the quality and effectiveness of controlled leadership and further extend it to all echelons and sectors, especially to basic party organizations. All party committee echelons, sectors, control committees at all levels, cadres, and party members should profoundly realize that the system of programmed, planned, and effective controlled leadership involves conscious activities and a scientific method of leadership. We should simultaneously pay attention to the preliminary and general reveiw of experiences in order to improve the quality of the controlled leadership system and extend it to all echelons and all basic party organizations. Within the sphere of their responsibility, control committees at all levels should actively and positively fulfill zbblogt prescribed tasks in order to serve the preparations for the party congresses at all levels. As an immediate step, they should take some measures to serve the first drive of self-criticism and criticism of all party organizations, control the quality and bearing of cadres and party members in the performance of their duties and the implementation of cadre policies with emphasis placed on the control of remedial action taken, and put forth plans to develop good points and increase the militancy of party organizations. Moreover, control committees at all levels should positively help party committees guide subordinate party organizations in implementing the system of controlled leadership and formulating the method of establishing and operating the control program and plan.

They should coordinate with various party committees to guide the grass-roots level party echelons in all state-run economic units in controlling the activities of management agencies and unit chiefs in order to promptly prevent and control violations of the production and business principles and systems which hamper the promotion of autonomy on primary economic units.

In order to effectively implement these tasks, it is important to enhance the quality and effectiveness of the party's control work. Through the party congresses of party organizations at all levels, along with perfecting the various party committees, we should perfect and consolidate the control committees at all levels, especially at the precinct, district, town, and equivalent levels. We should continually perfect and systematically implement the work regulations of control committees in order to help enforce the maintenance of party discipline.

SRV POPULATION GROWTH RATE SAID 'ALARMING'

OW130803 Hanoi VNA in English 0722 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA June 13 -- Vietnam is one of those countries whose population growth rate is the highest and becoming alarming, said Dr. Nguyen Cong Thang, vice minister of public health and secretary general of the National Commission for Population and Family Planning.

Children under 16 years of age make up 45 percent of the population and people in the 20-45 age group, 26.4 percent. If the present population growth rate (3.04 percent in 1983) continued through to the year 2000, the number of new-born babies would be three million a year.

This alarming situation was mentioned by chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong when he said at a family planning conference in 1983: "Our present population growth rate is a serious, alarming and urgent problem".

So far, almost all provinces, cities and special zones have taken practical measures to carry out the population policy. Many enterprises, offices and cooperatives have offered awards to those who have abided by the regulations on family planning. This has quickly helped to bring the population growth rate from more than 4 percent down to below three percent or even 2 percent in many localities throughout the country. The number of mothers who bear the third child or more has dropped from more than 50 percent to below 30 percent.

Many provinces and cities have achieved kthe birth control norms set for them. Most noteworthy among them is Thai Binh Province, which thanks to helpful guidance and practical measures, has succeeded in reducing its population growth rate from over two percent down to 1.7 percent.

AQUINO'S INDEPENDENCE DAY THEME 'PEOPLE POWER'

HK131542 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 13 Jun 86 pp 1, 16

[By Ding Marcelo]

[Text] President Corazon Aquino yesterday told an independence Day crowd of over half a million that the freedom won by the people through the exercise of "people power" has given the nation a new feeling of hope and the courage to face the challenge of the future. "Let this day be a celebration of people power," she told the gathered multitude many of whom had stood for nearly five hours under hot and humid conditions to hear her speak.

Addressing the crowd in Pilipino at the Rizal Park grandstand, Mrs Aquino said the Filipino nation can do anything and everything "as long as we are united."

"If you're looking for the formula for success, do not look at me as I speak to you," she said. "Look at yourself and the one beside you. More than anyone else, it is you who will decide your future and this country's as well."

She said she had no policy statement to make or program of government to announce. "I am here to give you hope and an understanding of your own strength and for you to believe in your own ability."

Mrs Aquino spoke for only 10 minutes but she watched a parade for nearly four hours, standing three times to acknowledge the passing of three government delegations. She sat clapping or extending the "L" (for laban) sign to other delegations. She was supposed to speak at 3:30 p.m., since organizers thought the parade would have finished by then. But there were so many who reportedly insisted on joing the parade. It finally had to be stopped to enable the President to address the gathering one hour behind schedule.

Mrs Aquino asked the crowd to be ever vigilant to protect their freedom and independence. The first two times that the Philippines got its freedom, in 1898 and 1946, lasted only briefly she said. This time, she enjoined the people to work together "so it will last forever."

The parade, however, lacked the cohesion and organization that characterized other Independence Day parades, though this one was supposed to be more meaningful than those held the past 14 years. The parade was able to get the crowd's attention at the beginning, the level of enthusiasm then being high. But as each delegation did nothing better than wave their hands or release yellow balloons and some pigeons in the air, it soon became dragging.

But the range of participation was interesting. Government officials took the lead position, displaying themes that revolve around reconciliation. The Ministry of Defense float showed rebels and soldiers embracing each other.

Along the line were some groups waving red banners. There were ati-atihan groups with their drums and dancers. There were so many of them that the sound of their drums overlapped one another.

But it was a joyous occasion with Mrs Aquino uniting the diverse elements of society in a huge and lengthy parade that showcased members of the urban poor, the teachers, the workers, and officials of government.

Mrs Aquino was the star, no doubt, as chants of "Cory, Cory, Cory" swept the crowd on her arrival, at the start of her speech, and when she ended her brief talk.

Those who thought that her appeal might have faded after 100 days, had only to see her at the Independence Day delebration to be convinced "people power" is alive and well.

AQUINO ADDRESSES APPOINTED MAYORS, GOVERNORS

OW131157 Tokyo KYODO in English 1140 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 13 KYODO -- President Corazon Aquino asked local officials she appointed to replace mayors and governors loyal to deposed President Ferdinand Marcos not to use guns, goons and gold in the next elections.

Addressing a meeting of the league of mayors and governors in Manila Friday, Aquino reminded provincial, town, and city "Officers-in-Charge" (OICS) that she had very little money and no guns or goons when she fought Marcos last February.

The OICS who are acting governors and mayors until the next local polls, supported Aquino's presidential bid in the February 7 snap presidential election that preceded a civilian-backed military revolt which toppled Marcos and installed the Philippines' first woman president.

Aquino replaced more than 1,500 mayors and 73 of 74 provincial governors soon after she took power to remove the vestiges of graft and corruption that had characterized local politics during Marcos' 20-year rule. Critics said the removal of incumbents was a wrong decision that created unnecessary political conflict and instability, particularly because some of the OICS were unpopular politicians while others have been accused of various offenses in court.

Violence marred the takeover by Aquino's appointees in some townhalls and provincial capitols where supporters of incumbent officials camped in, openly defying the new government and pledging continued support to Marcos.

"I think that most of us are concerned about the coming elections and ...I would like to remind all of you -- plase don't come to me and tell me when election time comes around, 'you know Cory, we don't have money, we don't have guns, we don't have goons,'" she said.

"I'd like to remind all of you that in our biggest battle of February, I had very little money....definitely I had no guns, I had no goons.

"But I know I have something more important than any of these three. And that was the faith and confidence of the Filipino people...and I think the same should work for you."

Elections are expected to be held late this year or early next year, as soon as a new constitution that is being drafted by a 48-member commission is ratified in a plebiscite.

CENTRAL BANK GOVERNOR REPORTS ECONOMY IMPROVING

HK140056 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] Signs of improvement in the economy of the Philippines are already visible. This was reported by Philippine Central Bank Governor Jose Fernandez, Jr. He said the chances of economic recovery in the country have brightened. He said the Philippines earned more than spent foreign exchange during the 1st quarter in the year, resulting in a balance of payments surplus of 330 million [currency not stated], or nearly twice the surplus realized in the same period last year.

Fernandez traced the improvment to the current and non-monetary capital accounts, together with the rescheduling of some foreign loan payments. Fernandez said the gross international reserves of the Central Bank stood at 1 billion 268 dollars [as heard], or $207 million higher than the end of 1985 level.

CON-COM AGREES ON LIMIT TO PRESIDENTIAL POWER

[By Miguel Genovea]

[Text] The Executive committee of the Constitutional Commission agreed in principle yesterday to limit the power of the President to proclaim martial law and to suspend the privileges of the writ of habeas corpus. Headed by Chairman Lorenzo Sumulong, the committee used Resolution No 9 authored by member Hilario Davide Jr, as the basis for deliberation on the issue.

The commission also approved on second reading after two days of deliberation, a 73-word preamble of the new Constitution. The preamble is the first provision in the new charter that was approved by the commission after eight days of session.

The preamble reads as follows:

"We, the sovereign Filipino people, imploring the aid of Almighty God, to build a just and humane society and to establish a government that shall embody our ideals and aspirations, promote the common good, conserve and develop our patrimony, and secure to ourselves and our prosperity the blessing of democracy under a rule of law and a regime of truth, justice, freedom, love, equality and peace, do hereby ordain and promulgate this Constitution."

The new preambe has 13 more words than the 60-word preamble under the 1973 Constitution. Among the words that were replaced from the original preamble were the words "Divine Providence" for the words "Almighty God." During the period of amendment the proposed "participatory" before the word "democracy" was deleted.

Earlier, former labor Minister urged [as published] the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com], in a general debate on the preamble to the Constitution, to adopt a principle that the people has the right to revolt against tyranny. Ople said the right to revolt is the ultimate expression of "people's power" which a significant number of Con-Com members wanted to institutionalize through a new Constitution.

He objected, however, to the use of "participatory democracy" in the draft preamble presented by a committee headed by Member Decoroso Rosales, saying it made democracy, as a generic concept, "self-limiting and constricting." He said the proper place for the concept of "people's power" was in the declaration of principles, but presented in its ultimate form as the right to revolt of an oppressed people.

Floorleader Napoleon Rama recommended favorably the move to transfer the Con-Com deliberation at the Philippine International Convention Center which, Rama said, has the best facilities and has no security problem. Rama, head of the committee that looked into the matter, said that "public participation" will be enhanced should the Con-Com decide to move from Quezon City to Manila.

Con-Com President Cecilia Munoz Palma, however, said that the 369 employes of the Con-Com will first be consulted before final action is taken in the transfer move.

Under the Davide resolution, the President, "in case of invasion, insurrection or rebellion or imminent danger thereof, when public safety requries it, may, for a period of 60 days and subject to the concurrence of the majority of the members of the legislature, suspend the privileges of the writ of habeas corpus or place the Philippines or any part therof under the martial law." The legislature, by a vote of majority of the members in a regular session or special session, may revoke such proclamation.

The resolution also provides that the basis for the proclamation of martial law or suspension of the writ of habeas corpus may be inquired into by the Supreme Court in an appropriate proceeding.

Sumulong also said that there are proposals to eliminate the phrase "imminent danger thereof" to prevent abuse by the president. He said that the U.S. Constitution does not carry such a phrase.

FORCED REMOVAL OF ELECTED OFFICIALS FOUGHT

HK160700 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 0400 GMT 16 Jun 86

[Text] Opposition members of the Constitutional Commission asked that safeguards be set up to protect duly elected officials from forced removal from their posts. Former Labor Minister Blas Ople and Regalado Maambong said that it is necessary to include such provision in the projected constitution in order to protect the popular choice of the people for local government offices. According to the two opposition members, the forced replacement by officers in charge should only be implemented if the incumbent is found to be guilty of offenses.

Meanwhile, decision on this resolution is still pending as the commission awaits results of hearings held all over the country on the constitution.

OPPOSITION CLAIMS FREEDOM OF SPEECH VIOLATED

HK131548 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 13 Jun 86 pp 1, 16

[Text] The opposition accused the Aquino government yesterday of violating the freedom of speech guaranteed by its "Freedom Constitution."

The reason: A new public affairs program featuring opposition leader Blas F. Ople on government television was cancelled by the station management.

As a result, four opposition members of the Constitutional Commission led by Ople joined the Kilusang Bagong. Lipunan (KBL), the so-called Marcos "loyalists," and other political groups opposed to the Aquino administration in boycotting the Independence Day ceremonies at the Luneta yesterday.

Ople, together with Con-Com members Teodulo C. Natividad, Rustico de los Reyes, and Regalado Maambong, stayed out of the Malacanang reception for the diplomatic corps to which all Con-Com members were invited. They also decided not to join the Independence Day march at the Rizal Park. "This may or may not be related to freedom of information but the sudden cancellation of the television program, already covered by a signed contract, gives rise to fears there was an attempt to block the opposition from expressing itself on the government channel," Ople said.

The new talk show would have featured Ople as its initial guest, with Tony Santos, Rolando Fadul, and Ric Valmonte as panelists. A spokesman said that when Ople arrived, studio 5 whose facilities had been contracted for the show was locked.

Ople was informed on arrival at the studio that the contract for the show had been cancelled the evening before. "I do not want to draw any hasty conclusions, but the program organizers themselves believe a gross violation of the freedom of speech guaranteed in the freedom Constitution had been perpetrated," Ople said. "This will hardly jibe with the freedom rhetoric that rang yesterday on Independence Day from the Luneta grandstand," he added.

MARCOS DENIES OFFERING TO RETURN $2.1 BILLION

[Text] The Aquino government is not considering at the present time the reported offer of deposed President Marcos to return $2.1 billion out of the wealth his family allegeldy amassed during his 20-year rule. But Marcos loyalists said the ex-president made no such offer. This was revealed yesterday by Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo after the regular Cabinet meeting at Malacanang yesterday.

Earlier, lawyer Juan T. David said Marcos had told him during their five-day talk in Honolulu that the former president would like to "buy peace of mind for himself, his family and grandchildren."

Deputy presidential spokesperson Alice Villadolid, quoting Arroyo said while the government is aware of such report, the Marcos offer as claimed by David, was not brought up in yesterday's Cabinet meeting. Villdolid said the government considers David's meeting with Marcos as a "self-imposed mission. Attorney David might have talked about ex-president Marcos's $2.1-billion with some Cabinet members but not with the President." She also stressed that David's mission in Hawaii was not authorized by the government.

Vice-President and Foreign Affairs Minister Salvador H. Laurel also told newsmen yesterday the government would "not make a decision on the basis of press release." Laurel confirmed that the Cabinet did not discuss Marcos's offer. However, Laurel posed to the newsmen two questions. "Is it a genuine proposal? What percentage of the Marcos assets is he offering to return to the government?" Laurel asked.

"Chicken feed," said Presidential Commission on Good Government [PCGG] Commissioner Ramon A. Diaz in reaction to a report that ex-president Marcos was willing to turn over $2.1 billion out of his $3 billion to "buy peace of mind."

The more serious response came from PCGG Minister Jovito R. Salonga. He said he would like to "check on the truth of the report," stressing that the report raises "very delicate" considerations. Salonga observed that the offer attributed to the former president is a "virtual admission" that he amassed a great personal fortune.

The PCGG chief also declined to comment on the reported offer of close Marcos associate Eduardo M. Cojuangco Jr. to return to the country and face mounting ill-gotten wealth charges.

Salonga noted that Cojuangco's offer -- as made public by his spokesman lawyer Gabriel Villargeal -- appears to be subject to terms and conditions that apparently have to be negotiated.

The matter of dealing with Cojuangco -- and more so, Marcos -- however may provoke debate. In a press statement, for example, the Bagong Alyansang Makabayan warned against applying anything less than "the full force of the law" in the case of Cojuangco. Bayan said the return of the "foremost Marcos crony" is a "possible move towards regaining direct control of profitable and deeply-rooted interests in the country."

Meanwhile, the Marcos Loyalist Movement [MLM] said in a press statement that former president Marcos in overseas calls from Honolulu denied making such an offer. "There is absolutely no truth" to an AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE report attributed to lawyer Juan T. David that he offered to turn over d2.1 billion of his alleged hidden wealth to the Aquino government, the MLM statment said. "Oh my God, I do not have that kind of money; if you find it, you can have it," Marcos was quoted by MLM as saying.

The former president made the statment in overseas calls to friends and supporters in Manila. These include former members of parliament Arturo M. Tolentino, titular head of the Kilusang Bagong Lipunan (KBL), former speaker Nicanor Yniguez, acting party president; Rafael Recto, Marcos's personal lawyer; Leonardo B. Perez, Antonio G. Tupaz, Salvador B. Britanico, Manuel Garcia, KBL secretary-general; members of the KBL central committee, and leaders of the Marcos Loyalist Movement.

Marcos said, "This false report is part of the continuing worldwide hate campaign feeding international media with fabricated and destructive information designed to destroy me and my family, and to wreck the spirit and morale of our friends and supporters.

"Instead of me and my family being continuously maligned and convicted by publicity, I should be allowed to return to face all charges in court in our country," Marcos said.

Yniguez said, "Marcos told me he never discussed with Mr David such an extremely delicate subject of negotiating with the Aquino government. When he (David) brought up the subject of money being asked to be turned over, the President said he did not have that kind of money."

He stressed that "such a very delicate matter could have been handled by his personal lawyer, atty Recto, or a very close relative."

Recto himself said he was called by the former president very early yesterday morning "when I read out to him the newspaper accounts of his alleged proposal. His first reaction was to state that Mr David was not telling the truth and that he has the tapes and notes to prove that he was lying, if he indeed made such a statement to AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE," Recto stated. "The president himself would send appropriate messages to local and international media, and is studying the possibility of filing suit for damages," Recto said.

VIRATA DENIES REPORTS MARCOS STOLE STATE FUNDS

HK131605 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 13 Jun 86 p 28

[Text] Kawit, Cavite -- Former prime minister Cesar Virata described yesterday as "not true" published reports that ousted president Marcos stole government money. "That is not true. There are rumors about that. But that is not true," he told newsmen covering the Independence Day rites here. Virata is a grandson of Gen Emilio Aguinaldo, president of the first Philippine Republic.

Reports said Marcos, ousted in a church-backed military mutiny last February, has reportedly plundered the national coffers of about $10 billion during his 20 years in power. Virata said he was not aware of the alleged irregularities of Marcos during his incumbency.

In his statements, Virata attributed the government's critical financial position to poor tax collection, weak business activities, boycotts and other economic uncertainties. He said the government has ways of "raising resources" to cope with its budgetary requirements. These included, he added, taxation and borrowing.

On the reported possible return of Marcos from his exile in Hawaii, Virata said, "His return will depend on the present government."

Virata also said he has no plans to aspire for a public office in the next elections. At present, he added, he is managing a consultancy office at the Development Academy of the Philippines in Tagaytay City.

LOYALIST GROUPS LAUNCH MOVE FOR MARCOS RETURN

BK130805 Manila PNA in English 0639 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 13 (PNA) -- Three national organizations have urged the Aquino government to allow deposed President Ferdinand Marcos to return to face all charges against him in court instead of continuously convicting him by publicity. The move was launched by the Kilusang Bagong Lipunan (KBL), the Marcos Loyalist Movement (MLM), and the Youth Acting Development Organization (YADO), following Mr Marcos' demand to return when he debunked reports he offered to turn over 2.1 billion U.S. dollars to the Aquino government.

Marcos said the report is false and is part of the continuing worldwide hate campaign to destroy me and my family, and to wreck the spirit and morale of our friends and supporters. He said the campaign was being pursued by feeding international and local media with destructive and fabricated information.

KBL officials led by former member of Parliament Arturo Tolentino, party titular head; former Speaker Nicanor Yniguez, acting president; and Manuel Garcia, secretary-general, also urged the punishment of the guilty in the violation of human rights marchers to Freedom Park on J.P. Laurel Street last Sunday.

Newspaper accounts said five marcher died and thousands were hurt when policemen and soldiers attacked the demonstrators with tear gas, smokebombs, water cannons, and truncheons and erected barbed wire barricades to prevent them from entering Malacanang Palace.

Lawyer Rafael Recto, deposed President Marcos' personal lawyer, said there never was any move to enter Malacanang Palace because we all agreed to continue with our demonstration and march only up to Freedom Park.

Alexander Villalon, [words indistinct] general, confirmed Recto's statement and replored destructive efforts of anti-Marcos forces continuously fabricating destructive information fed to international media to destroy him and his family.

MLM members led by Nemi B. de Pedro II as secretary-general dared the Aquino government to prove its sincerity and determination for national reconciliation and unity by just giving President marcos his day in court in his own country.

RAMOS BRIEFED ON USAF OPERATIONS AT CLARK

BK130715 Manila PNA in English 0650 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 13 (PNA) -- The objection by United States Air Force (USAF) to allow Philippine Customs, Immigration and Quarantine (CIQ) officials to board incoming aircraft at Clark Air Base is causing irritants in the implementation of the Philippine-U.S. Bases Agreement.

Col. Jose de Leon Jr., deputy commander of the Clark Air Base Command (CABCOM), made this disclosure during a briefing for visiting Deputy Foreign Minister Jose Ingles. The briefing was also attended by Deputy Defense Minister Mafael Ileto, Deputy Defense Ministrer for Munition Wilson Gamboa and Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos.

De Leon said USAF authorities have objected to quarantine operations by Philippine officials. Another problem is the entry to CABCOM of third country nationals sponsored by U.S. military personnel without prior clearance by Philippine authorities.

De Leon also said there were some instances of unauthorized use of the Crow Valley gunnery range in Tarlac Province. Crow Valley is used by both Filipino and American pilots in target bombing runs. De Leon did not elaborate during the briefing to what extent was the unauthorized use of the Crow Valley gunnery range.

Although there is also a need for prior consent on matters regarding contractors doing business inside the base, there is non-compliance on the party of the Americans.

Under the Military Bases Agreement of 1947, Clark Air Base and Subic Naval Base are limited ports of entry. Only American military personnel in active service are allowed to come or get out of the country using Clark. Retired American servicemen who are in the Philippines are not allowed to come in or out of the country through Clark or Subic.

ENRILE REPORTS COMMUNIST THREAT TO PHONE COMPANY

BK140157 Manila PNA in English 0146 GMT 14 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 14 (PNA) -- Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile Friday said the communists are eyeing to infiltrate and take over the Philippine Long Distance Telephone (PLDT), the country's biggest communication network.

In talks with newsmen, Enrile said the infiltration plot was recently uncovered by military intelligence operatives.

He said the plan was reportedly hatched by the National Democratic Front (NDF), the propaganda arm of the underground Communist Party of the Philippines.

Enrile refused to say the extent of the NDF's infiltration plan, except saying we could not just close our eyes on those things. The defense minister had earlier warned the government against communist infiltration as part of its destabilization and takeover plan. He admitted, however, that the degree of communist infiltration in government is not yet widespread at this point in time. But, he added, the PLDT case suggested to us that there really must be an earnest effort to do something like that.

He said the military as been closely monitoring communist activities in the country. Part of the uncovered NDF plan, Enrile said, is to forge an alliance with a PLDT stockholder whom he did not identify.

Sison: CPP Will not Disarm for Legalization

HK131308 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 7 Jun 86 pp 1, 6

[By Jose Maria Sison]

[Text] Crazon Aquino signed on December 26, 1984 the Declaration of Unity together with other opposition leaders. This declaration pledged the legalization of the Communist Party; the redress of all legitimate grievances of all who have resorted to armed struggle; and the general and unconditional amnesty of all political detainees and all political offenders.

In the course of the electoral campaign for the presidency in January 1986, however, Mrs Aquino downplayed the pledge to legalize the CPP [Communist Party of the Philippines] and played up the pledge to call for a 6-month ceasefire concomittant to negotiations for CPP legalization, general amnesty and a lasting truce in the event of her victory. She adjusted her position in view of attacks from Marcos that she was pro-communist.

Due to the failure of the so-called military solution to the problem of rising armed revolution, Marcos himself and Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile had been making pronouncements on the wisdom of CPP legalization on certain conditions -- including the dismantling of the New People's Army -- since 1980.

Marcos was not a stranger to the tactics of offering legalization to the CPP in exchange for the dismantling of the NPA if we consider that he had actually recognized and legalized the Lavaite "Partido Komunista ng Pilipinas" [PKP] as early as October 1974 in exchange for the surrender of arms and collabortion in suppressive activities against the CPP, NPA and the NDF [National Democratic Front].

In 1976, Marcos further accommodated the Lavaite PKP by supplanting with Presidential Decree [PD] No. 885 the original Anti-Subversion Law Republic Act 1700 explicitly outlawing the Communist Party and all related organizations from 1957 onwards.

Under PD 885, the original target of the Anti-Subervision Law -- the old merger party of the Communist Party and Socialist Party -- was formally legalized under the cover of dropping explicit reference to it, redefining subversion as a crime in complicity with ANY [word published in capitals] foreign power (not necessarily socialist) and expanding the scope of organization which may be called subversive and whose officers and members may be accused of subversion.

Since the issuance of PD 835, there had been subsequent decrees regarding subversion. These did not change the legal status of the Lavaite PKP. However, this pro-Marcos and pro-fascist party did not grow in strength due to its legal status but dwindled further into the status of a minor sect.

Under conditions that the CPP was the most consistent force fighting the fascist dictatorship and was a worthy ally in the broadest possible united front, all the major legal opposition parties endorsed the idea of legalizing the CPP upon the rise of a new government to replace the U.S.-Marcos regime.

But, of course, the unexpected calculation of most conservative opposition leaders ran in the following manner: the CPP would continue to be a problem for a new regime if it would not be enticed to become legal and the armed revolution would proceed.

Some opposition leaders openly expressed the view that legalization would bring the CPP to an arena where it would lose in a free and peaceful democratic debate. They hoped to have a situation where the CPP would be reduced to a minor legal party rather than be a major party that builds up its armed force to smash the Armed Fores of the Philippines, the main component of the reactionary state.

Marxist-Leninists know that if the CPP were legalized under the terms and conditions of the reactionaries, it would become a minor party not because it is going to lose in any democratic debate because it is going to run up against the reactionary monopoly of the military, the civil bureaucracy, the mass media, the Church, the electoral inspectors and so on.

The CPP would have to contend not only with adversaries on valid current issues but also with accumulated biases and misrepresentations against it by the U.S. and the local reactionary ruling classes. And if ever the CPP would gain a significant share of the electoral vote despite tremendous odds, it could easily become the victim of provocations and incidents designed to rationalize the armed destruction of its exposed personnel and machinery.

So, the CPP cannot be baited into accepting legalization and the dismantling of its armed forces. It knows that it has become a major force because it is thriving on the tendency of the ruling system to disintegrate and its is capable of creating all the necessary forces for a people's democratic government through revoluntionary struggle.

Through bitter experience, the CPP knows that without a people's army, the Filipino people have nothing. The CPP itself would be nothing without the New People's Army.

The Communist Party [CP] was legally and openly established in the Philippines in 1930. But soon the U.S. colonial authorities simply dispersed a rally of the party and then arrested its leaders on the charge of sedition. The CP leaders were convicted in 1932 and the party went underground.

The CP was legalized and its imprisoned leaders were released in 1936 because the Commonwealth government recognized the necessity of a broad popular front in the face of growing social unrest and the threat of international fascism. In 1938, the CP merged with the Sociaist Party of the Philippines [SP].

In the course of the struggle against Japanese fascism during World War II, the merger party of the CP and the SP as well as its army, the Hukbong Bayan Laban sa Hapon [People's Army Against Japan] (Hukbalahap), became strong in Central Luzon. To carry out its reconquest of the Philippines and to secure neo-colonial advantages, the U.S. unfolded a series of moves to destroy the old merger party, the Hukbalahap and other related organizations.

A civil war would develop between the Philippine neocolonial state and the Hukbong Mapagpalaya ng Bayan (the erstwhile Hukbalahap) [Nation's Liberation Army] led by the old merger party; and would result in the defeat of the revolutionary forces due to errors of their leadership and the massive inflow of U.S. military assistance to the side of reaction.

With the clear intention of destroying the old merger party and all related organizations once and for all, the U.S. and the local reactionaries pushed the enactment of RA [Republic Act] 1700 or the Anti-Subversion Law in 1957. But this law, which threatened to execute CP leaders, could not deter the reestablishment of the CPP.

As the crisis of the ruling system worsened, the revolutionary mass movement surged in the sixties and early seventies. The new crop of young communist cadres saw beyond doubt the logic of armed struggle, especially in the face of the Anti-Subversion Law.

To the delight of the U.S. and the local reactionaries, Marcos went on an unbridled anti-communist rampage from 1972 onwards. But eventually the fascist dictatorship would prove to be counterproductive to the ruling system.

Because it has built its strength through revolutionary struggle and at so much sacrifice, the CPP will never accept legalization if it means giving up its military strength and baring its chest to the bayonets of the reactionary state.

COMMUNIST PARTY 'OFFICER-IN-CHARGE' NAMED

HK131300 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 7 Jun 86 pp 1, 6

[Text] Communist Party leaders have designated an "Officer-in-Charge" of the country's biggext rebel organization to keep house while fugitive newsman Satur Ocampo and possibly two other panel members negotiate a delicate but historic ceasefire with the new Aquino government.

MALAYA sources said a former University of the Philippines [UP] scholar, described as a "dark horse", has been picked to oversee the 30,000-strong CPP and 15,000-strong New People's Army (NPA) through this crucial stage.

The CPP-NPA reorganization followed scathing criticism by their 15-men politburo of the boycott policy stand of former chairman Rodolfo Salas and party secretary-general Raphael Baylosis, both former UP students. It was reported, however, that Salas -- also known as "Commander Bilog" would remain in the executive committee of the central committee for the meantime.

The acting CPP chief, known in the underground movement as "Ka [Short for Kasama, meaning comrade] Percy," was a veteran of the historic 1970 first quarter storm. He later worked with the underground trade union movement in Manila and the guerrilla movement in Samar. The CPP "OIC," sources said, was chosen over more well-known members of the Politburo, including an escaped detainee who was said to be secretary-general in the early 1970's, and National Democratic Front spokesman Antonio Zumel.

In the late 40's Huk chairman Vicente Lava was also pulled down from his top slot over criticism for his retreat-for-defense policy during the war. He was, however, retained in the policy body inspite of this.

There are also moves in the CPP-NPA to expand their ongoing "rectification movement" to past debacles, including the failed attempts to smuggle arms into the country on the MV Karagatan and Dona Andrea from 1972-74.

The CPP-NPA has said in new documents that it would like to see a revitalized party where members are equipped with keener political sense and are able to seize initiatives without having to wait for the official party directive on issues. The CPP-NPA has been accused of dogmatism and inflexibility in their interpretation on Marxist theories.

The new rebel OIC is expected to set the stage for a "democratic congress" six to 12 months from now which will choose new leaders for an expected "new stage of struggle" following ceasefire and negotiations, sources said.

The CPP-NPA is also reportedly investigating brutal treatment used against suspected military penetration agents in the rebel ranks of Mindanao Island, including torture.

The CPP-NPA leadership is now entertaining beliefs that armed struggle may not be the only tactic available to redress their grievances and pursue their social demands. However, CPP sources said they would not yet surrender their arms.

If successful, negotiations with the rebel groups will end the 17-year nationwide rebellion which drained the past government of vital resources and military men. The terms and mechanics of the possible ceasefire, however, remain to be agreed upon. Already, former NPA commander Bernabe Buscayno has exchanged sharp public barbs with Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Armed Forces Chief-of-Staff Fidel Ramos over their alleged moves to hamper peace initiatives.

Military officers, on the other hand, accuse the CPP-NPA of taking advantage of the President's offer of reconciliation to further their infiltration and "subversion."

Rebel negotiator Ocampo, meanwhile, has come down to Manila to prepare for his sensitive mission. The government is expected to assure him of "safe conduct".

NEW SOUTHCOM CHIEF VIEWS SITUATION IN MINDANAO

BK140343 Manila PNA in English 0256 GMT 14 Jun 86

[Text] Manila, June 14 (PNA) -- Newly promoted Southern Command (Southcom) chief Maj Gen Jose P. Magno Jr. has vowed to diffuse the volatile situation in Lanao Del Sur, warning that once the shooting war erupts, there is no stopping it. The moment Lanao Province will explode, other areas like Jolo and Tawi-Tawi will follow suit, he added.

Magno was promoted to Major General by President Aquino Thursday in recognition of his meritorious achievements as commander of all military units in Mindanao. In an interview, Magno said the military will use a two-pronged approach to persuade ousted Lanao del Sur Gov Ali Dimaporo to surrender his government-issued firearms numbering more than 500.

He said Brig Ben Mariano Adalem, northern Mindanao regional commander, has been tasked to convince Dimaporo to surrender his guns. Magno said the military will provide security to Dimaporo, his family and relatives, including his property. This is because for years, he (Dimaporo) has been identified with the government and his enemies are just waiting to shoot him down Magno said. The 68-year-old Muslim politician has adamently refused to surrender his high-powered firearms for security reasons.

Although Dimaporo turned in 127 assorted firearms last Tuesday in Binidayan, Lanao Del Sur, most of these are unserviceable. General Magno said the military is duty-bound to account for all firearms issued to Dimaporo.

He said Brig Gen Rodrigo Gutang central Mindanao regional commander, was ordered to enforce the law in the region, including the recovery of firearms in the hands of Dimaporo.

Magno admitted, however, that it would be hard to retrieve the firearms from the Muslims because guns have been the way of life for them. This has been an age-old tradition, Magno said. He explained that when a Muslim family has a feud with another family, the man in the family is also involved in the conflict.

Magno said that because of this tradition, the Muslim with the firearms will resist if his gun is confiscated since that would expose him to danger. But, Magno said, the military would work out a plan for these people to yield their firearms peacefully.

With regard to the Dimaporo problem, Magno said I would like also that this thing would be settled fast so that we could concentrate on the MNLF and CPP problem in Mindanao. He said he does not want the soldiers would be tied down to one problem, leaving a vacuum in other areas.

Magno said that in fairness to Dimaporo, the Muslim leader has been cooperating with the military going from one CHDF [Civilian Home Defense Forces] commander to another to convince them to turn in their firearms. The firearms issued by the government to Dimaporo had been distributed to CHDF and mayors in Lanao Del Sur.

Dimaporo assured the military that he will continue to help and encourage other Muslims in his area to turn in their firearms to achieve peace and unity in the region. Dimaporo said he has a hard time collecting the firearms since he was only the guarantor of these issued firearms.

However, he is willing to furnish the military the names of persons to whom the guns were issued and assured that he would lead the military in recovering them.

Magno also disclosed the plan by armed lawless groups in Mindanao to assassinate military commanders, including himself. There are plans to assassinate all of us. It is just a matter to be careful of, Magno said. It is an occupational hazard that has always been on our persons since we became military commanders, he added.

DIMAPORO ON DETERIORATING LANAO DEL SUR ORDER

HK150758 Quezon City DZFM Radio in English 0700 GMT 15 Jun 86

[Text] The peace and order situation in Lanao del Sur is deteriorating. This was disclosed early this afternoon by former Lanao del Sur Governor Ali Dimaporo. Dimaporo deplored the reported impending police action by the military, which could trigger violence in that area.

[Begin Dimaporo recording] [Words indistinct] pull back in the region and all will be peaceful, [words indistinct] all will be all right here. But if any one of them will be placed there, I cannot help keep peace in that area. Any Ilocano will be all right. That brigade commander [words indistinct]. The rebels are establishing checkpoints on the roads, if you will only go around and see, that the roads are all, there are several checkpoints, and the military is doing nothing. [end recording]

LABOR GROUPS AGREE ON STRIKE MORATORIUM

HK130800 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 12 Jan 86 p 2

[Text] The Labor Advisory Consultative Council (LACC) yesterday expressed confidence that the "elusive industrial peace will now be finally achieved" with the reaching of an agreement with the country's organized labor for a strike moratorium.

Paterno D. Menzon, LACC member and spokesman, said the agreement was reached during an emergency session held Tuesday night at the Manila Hilton. Menzon, who represents the independent unions in the LACC, said the strike moratorium will last for three months.

"It is conditioned on a simultaneous commitment on the part of the employers, through the Employers Confederation of the Philippines (ECOP), to a moratorium on retrenchments, layoffs and dismissals. The ball is now in their hands," Menzon said.

Saying President Aquino deserves all the support from both labor and the employers as she steers the nation to stability, Menzon explained that the agreement "is the Independence Day gift to the nation of organized labor."

The proposal for a moratorium on strikes originally came from Menzon, an officer of the Katipunan ng mga Manggagawa sa Daungan [Society of Dockside Workers] (Kamada), an independent labor federation of stevedores.

Menzon made the proposal when the LACC, which previously included the Trade Union Congress of the Philippines (TUCP), called on President Aquino at Malacanang and requested her to be the guest speaker at the Labor Day celebrations held last May 1 at the Rizal Park. Since that time, however, and despite the personal appeals of President Aquino and the efforts of many at the last national tripartite conference held last May 28-29, no agreement has been reached on the strike moratorium.

It was only after Tuesday night's long emergency session of the LACC that the leading labor groups finally agreed to a strike moratorium, Menzon said.

Among those present in the meeting were the Federation of Free Workers (FFW) through Ramon Jabar and Felicisimo Joson; the independent unions represented by Menzon; Leonardo Desierto and Danny Edralin of the National Union of Hotel Restaurant and Allied Industries; the Philippine affiliates of the World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU) through Vladimir Tupaz of the Trade Unions of the Philippines and Allied Services (TUPAS); and the Kilusang Mayo Uno (KMU) through Ernesto Arellano and Popoy Flores.

IMF RELAXES STANDARDS FOR ECONOMIC PROGRAM

[By Samuel Senoren]

[Text] The International Monetary Fund has indicated that it would give the Philippines more leeway in drawing up a new short-term economic program based on the social and economic priorities of the government of President Aqunio.

Informed sources said the IMF relaxed its standard prescription for ailing economies following the consultative meeting for the Philippines in Tokyo two weeks ago where key officials of the Aquino government presented prevailing economic conditions in the country. The Philippines hopes to sign a new 18-month standby arrangement with the IMF sometime next month to replace one which was discontinued in April.

The new program which has been approved by the Aquino government is a far departure from the one worked out with the IMF by the government of former President Marcos two years ago. The program under the Marcos regime called for austere measures and a contractionary monetary policy which led to a 10 percent negative growth in the economy during the past two years.

In contrast, economic planners in the Aquino government have opted for a growth-oriented program with an expansionary monetary policy using agriculture as a staging area.

Rather than rely on an export-led growth which has been the experience in other debt-ridden countries, the Philippines under Mrs. Aquino has decided to expand opportunities in the agriculture sector and hope it would spur the recovery.

Sources said the IMF was also sympathetic to the Philippines' problems on debt service but it was not known if it had new specific recommendations.

The Philippines which has a debt service close to 50 percent of its annual export revenues, has asked creditors for easier repayment terms on its $26 billion foreign debt but has not officially come up with any figure.

The more vocal members of the Aqunio Cabinet are batting for "selective repudiation" of unwanted debts as a way out of the heavy debt burden.

The idea however, although a highly populist measure, has been opposed by traditional bankers and monetary officials on the ground that the Philippines would lose its credit rating in the international financial community once it attempts to take such action.

DPRK SAID READY TO ACCEPT IOC COMPROMISE

OW170559 Tokyo KYODO in English 0554 GMT 17 Jun 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 17 KYODO -- North Korea is presumably ready to accept a compromise proposed by the International Olympic Committee (IOC) over the 1988 Seoul Olympic Games, according to a Japanese table tennis official. Ichiro Ogimura, acting president of the International Table Tennis Federation (ITTF), who returned here Monday after attending the ITTF's Executive Board meeting in Dobrovnik, Yugoslavia, said Tuesday North Korea believes that holding even one event out of the total 23 Olympic events in the North can be classified as cohosting of the games.

Ogimura also said North Korea will not be insistent over the title of the Seoul games, quoting a top North Korean Olympic Committee official he met as saying it is up to South Korea to name the games. Ogimura separately met IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch and delegates of both South and North Koreas right after a third round of sports talks held in Lausanne, Switzerland, last week. Both Koreas are due to report the results of their study on the compromise plan, which envisages letting North Korea stage four Olympic events, including table tennis, to the IOC by the end of this month.

ROK TO OPEN PERMANENT TRADE CENTER IN OSAKA

OW170417 Tokyo KYODO in English 0316 GMT 17 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 17 KYDO -- The South Korean Government will set up a 1,000-square-meter permanent trade exhibition center in Osaka by November to promote trade with Japan, government officials said Tuesday. It also plans to hold a series of trade fairs throughout Japan in September next year to promote the sale of Korean products. The moves are part of an attempt to reduce South Korea's chronic trade imbalance with Japan.

The South Korean Government also plans to switch from Japanese to European and North American suppliers for 26 imported items, including auto parts and production equipment.

FURTHER COVERAGE OF ASDF FIGHTER CRASH

OW160317 Tokyo KYODO in English 0312 GMT 16 Jun 86

[Text] Fukuoka, June 16 KYODO -- Two F-4 "Phantom" fighter planes of the Air Self-Defense Force (ASDF) crashed, Monday, apparently after running out of fuel, an ASDF spokesman said. All four crewmen parachuted to safety, he added.

One of the two aircraft went down in a rice paddy at Buzen, east of here, while the other crashed into the sea nearby, the spokesman said, adding the pilots had said in an emergency radio communication that they were running out of fuel. Along with two other F-4s, they were returning from a training session to the ASDF Nyutabaru Base in Miyazaki Prefecture, about 200 kilometers south of the scene of the crash, when the accident occurred, the spokesman said.

KPA SUPREME COMMAND ISSUES CALLS FOR TALKS

SK170646 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 0500 GMT 17 Jun 86

[Text] Information of the KPA Supreme Command:

Recently, the tense situation on the Korean peninsula has been extremely aggravated. The Armed Forces, which confront one another with the Military Demarcation Line between them, have today reached the highest level since the cease-fire and the mutual distrust and military confrontation created by this have reached the most serious stage. At present, on all fronts along the Military Demarcation Line, the U.S. troops in South Korea and the ROK Army [Kukkun] established high combat postures which ahve never been seen in the past so that they can go into war at any moment and, countering this, the KPA units, too, are maintaining a high vigilance posture.

In the frontline areas where the huge armed forces of the North and the South are tensely confronting one another, an acute situation in which even a small accidental incident can explpode the kindling of war is being created. Today, neither side is denying the imminent danger of war and the peoples of the world are unanimously expressing deep concern.

In order to prevent the situation from reaching this stage, in recent years, the government of the republic has made all possible efforts. As the fundamental measure to firmly guarantee peace on the Korean peninsula, we have put forth various ways for a political solution and, in the frame of the Military Armistice Commission as well, have repeatedly put forth rational proposals to eliminate the danger of armed clash.

Proceeding from the ardent desire to alleviate tension and create a favorable environment for dialogue, after entering this year, too, the government of the republic put forth the proposal to halt large-scale military exercise and to cease all military exercises during dialogue, and proposed that the U.S. Government and the South Korean authorities respond to this. Nevertheless, all our efforts have earned no due response; instead, contrary to our expectation, the United States and the South Korean authorities, loudly raving on the bogus threat of southward invasion, have invariably sought the policy of confrontation and war.

In recent years, in South Korea, the U.S. troops and the Armed Forces of the ROK Army [Kukkun Muryok] have been notably beefed up and war preparations aimed at invading the northern half of the republic have been rapidly made in all areas.

In accordance with the so-called "quick war, quick conclusion" operational plan they have set forth, the United States and South Korea have carried out the forward deployment of the Armed Forces, have drastically bolstered their maneuverabilities, have strengthened nuclear combat capabilities, and have drastically beefed up the commando forces.

Moreover, 1st April, the United States and South Korea, at the annual Security Consultative Meeting, decided to maintain the presence of U.S. toops in South Korea, to epochally beef up their combat capabilities, and to further intensify the "Team Spirit" joint military exercise in the future.

In accordance with this agreement, it is foreseen that new types of military equipment, including missiles, rockets, tanks, armored vehicles, F-16 fighter-bombers, and helicopters for launching attacks, as well as new military tropps, will be additionally deployed. Even new-type chemical weapons will be deployed anew in South Korea, and U.S. naval forces will be stationed permanently in the waters off the Korean peninsula in the near future.

This is an open military threat to our republic and a new development further aggravating tension on the Korean peninsula. The military threat against us is coming not only from South Korea but also from all U.S. military bases located in the area around our country. The U.S. Armed Forces on the U.S. mainland and in Asia and the Pacific are ready to be mobilized to the Korean frontline at any time, and the U.S. nuclear weapons deployed in the area around the Korean Peninsula are aimed at the northern half of the republic.

The "Team Spirit" joint military exercise, the largest one in history, which has been staged in South Korea annually is precisely a preliminary war and a nuclear test war exercise to complete the joint operations of the armed forces of aggression deployed in this broad area with the Korean peninsula as their target.

Such a policy of confrontation and war by the United States and the South Korean authorities today has not only brought the hard-won North-South dialogue to a state of suspension [chungdan sangtae] and has extremely clouded the prospects for its resumption, but has also driven the situation into a more extremely acute state.

The facts show that a war on the Korean peninsula has become a realistic threat of today, not a problem of tomorrow.

If a war breaks out, it will not only drive the entire Korean peninsula into the holocaust of nuclear war, but will also drive Asia into the disaster of war and, further, will cause grave destruction to world peace. The tense situation on the Korean peninsula should be alleviated rapidly, and war should be prevented at any cost.

Our people in the North and the South should live peacefully, and our country should be reunified peacefully without fail. This is the unanimous desire of all the Korean people who have lived through the sufferings of national division and the enduring danger of war during some 40 years and who, in particular, suffered innumerable disasters in the war that lasted for 3 years.

What is emerging as an acute issue under the grave prevailing situation is to relax the acute tension and to remove the status of confrontation. For this, measures for easing tension should be taken in the military domain. Only when the relaxation of tension in the military domain is realized can we resume the dialogue which is in the status of suspension, in an advantageous atmosphere and find a clue to realizing peace and reunification on the basis of mutual trust.

The historic experience in contacts and dialogue between the North and the South clearly prove that under the uneasy situation in which the danger of an armed clash and war is heavily overhanging, distrust and antagonism will not be eliminated to even a slight degree and not even a step forward will be taken in the North-South dialogue and in resolving the issue of national reunification.

This is the reason why the government of the republic consistently called for concluding a peace agreement with the United States and for adopting a nonaggression declaration with South Korea in order to prevent the danger of war, to relax tension, and to provide a turning point favorable to the peaceful reunification of the nation. This is why we repeatedly put forth a series of proposals in the Armistice Commission to prevent armed clashes. However, the basic question regarding peace on the Korean peninsula remains difficult to resolve and the Armistice Commission failed to reach agreement even on minor issues for observing the particulars agreed on in the Armistice Agreement.

Although the basic settlement of the issue of peace is difficult, impending measures that are of help in easing tension should be worked out to prevent the danger of war which is drawing near [tagaonun chonjaengui wuihom] in the current situation, and under the circumstances in which the Armistice Commission cannot practically perform the rightful functions, we should seek measures to resolve the problems even outside of its framework.

Proceeding from such an urgent demand, the Supreme Command of the KPA decided to propose to hold talks of the military authorities between the minister of the People's Armed Forces of the DPRK, and the commander in chief of the UN forces [YONHAPKUK Kun] in South Korea and the South Korean minister of defense, recognizing that the meeting between those who hold real military power [kun silkwonjadul] in the North and the South is of earnest necessity. In connection with this, the Supreme Command of the KPA took a measure of sending letters containing concrete proposals to the opposite side respectively.

Arranging a meeting of the persons holding military authority is the most reasonable way to realize detente [wanhwa] in the military field at present. In this meeting all possible military measures arising in easing the present tense situation and the state of confrontation should be discussed and any proposals that are helpful to detente put forward by the United States and the South Korean side will be discussed.

Our People's Armed Forces are a credible bulwark that prevents aggession and war and defends the nation's security and peace. No one should doubt this sacred mission of the KPA and dare to test our defense capabilities.

If the United States and persons in authority in South Korea are genuinely concerned about the relaxation of tension and peace, they should come to the site of the meeting of the persons holding military authority and solve problems with us, instead of shouting the theory on threat of southward invasion while remaining idle. The attitude that is assumed toward this peace proposal of ours will be an important touchstone that will show which side -- war or peace -- the United States and the South Korean side choose.

O CHIN-U SENDS LETTER TO UN FORCES COMMANDER

SK170752 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 0519 GMT 17 Jun 86

[Text of letter from O Chin-u, first representative [cheil taerin] of the KPA supreme commander and minister of the People's Armed Forces of the DPRK, to the commander in chief of the UN Forces [yonhapkukkun] stationed in South Korea]

[Text] To William J. Livsey, commander in chief of the UN Forces stationed in South Korea [namjoson]:

Proceeding from an aspiration to ease the tense situation and guarantee peace on the Korean peninsula and to create a favorable environment for dialogue, I am seending this letter to you. As you may know, last year various forms of dialogue were conducted between the North and South of our country and the realization of visits in some fields brought joy to the people of the world. However, such moves that were advancing toward detente [wanhwa] and peace instantly disappeared and the situation on the Korean peninsula is becoming acute with each passing day.

Under circumstances in which war means, including nuclear weapons, are being increased on a large scale, the movement of military forces and their deployment in forward areas are being continued, and large- and small-scale military exercises are being conducted without interruption, the state of military standoff between the two sides is approaching the gravest phase since the end of the Korean war.

In fact, on the Korean peninsula today the danger that the outbreak of a war, a nuclear war, could be caused through the slightest accidental incident between our two hostile sides [choktae ssangbang] is being created.

The reality in which tension is being unprecedentedly exacerbated on the Korean peninsula, with the result that all forms of North-South dialogue are in the state of suspension, and the approaching danger of a new war is now causing deep concern among the world's people, along with our people.

The prevailing situation urgently requires that the tense situation be eased, that peace be consolidated on the Korean peninsula, and that military measures designed to create an atmosphere for a peace meeting be taken at an early date.

If we do not take measures at present designed to more the developing situation in the direction of detente and peace, it is clear that time, without waiting for us, will bring to us irrevocable war calamities. Not only would such an unfortuante development not be beneficial to our Korean people, but it would also bring nothing good to the United States.

Proceeding from this, I recognize that the initiative that the KPA supreme Command has put forth this time for the talks of the military authorities [kunsa tanggukcha] to be participated in by the minister of the People's Armed Forces of the DPRK, the commander in chief of the UN Forces in South Korea, and the minister of national defense of the Republic of Korea [taehan minguk], is very opportune and rational and, thus, cordially propose to you the holding of talks of the military authorities who are directly responsible for the aggravation of the tension on the Korean peninsula, and who have unavoidable duties for its alleviation.

The talks of the military authorities, above all, will have to discuss and settle the acutest and most urgent question presently arising in preventing the danger of war, which is approaching as a reality before the eyes of people, and in alleviating tension. Among such questions, the question of halting the military exercises and the military buildup that are the direct factors of the aggravation of tension and the danger of war, the question or reducing troops and military equipment [pyongryokkwa kunbi], and the question of respecting the Korean Armistices Agreement as demanded by its original content, etc can be included.

In addition, the talks can also discuss questions which you will put forth, if they can help the alleviation of tension on the Korean peninsula.

I think it proper to choose Panmunjom as the venue of the talks at the same time, another place that is mutually regarded as convenient can also be chosen. Concerning the date of the opening of the talks, I think it proper to open the talks sometime in July.

Recognizing that a preliminary contact is necessary to arrange the talks of the military authorities, I additionally propose the holding of the preliminary contact in Panmunjom on 27 June, between approximately three working-level delegates respectively designated and a reasonable number of suite members.

If those who hold real military power [kunsasilgwonchadul] in the North and the South of the Korean peninsula get together and take practical measures for the alleviation of tension, this will undoubtedly prevent the danger of war in Korea and provide a new turning point for alleviation of tension and peace. At the same time, this will create a good atmosphere for smooth progress of North-South dialogue, which is in the state of suspension [chungdansangtae].

I hope that you will direct deep attention and show an affirmative response to our new peace initiative, which will greatly contribute to the peace of Korea, Asia, and the world.

O CHIN-U LETTER TO SOUTH DEFENSE MINISTER

SK170722 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 0530 GMT 17 Jun 86

[Text of Letter from O Chin-u, Minister of the DPRK People's Armed Forces, to the South Korean Minister of National Defense]

[Text] To Yi Ki-paek, national defense minister of the Republic of Korea [taehan minkuk]:

The tense situation prevailing in our country today urgently demands that we, military authorities, rapidly take responsible measures for alleviating it before the nation and the world. As you know, for our nation, which has undergone the tragedy of national division for more than 40 years, there is no more important and urgent task than to achieve peace in the country and its peaceful reunification.

Last year, reflecting this ardent desire of the brethren, the door of dialogue was opened again and multilateral talks were held between the North and the South. At the same time, last year, Red Cross art troupes and the home-visiting groups, though they were limited in scale, were exchanged for the first time since the national division and, thus, served to alleviate the pains of the brethren.

To our regret, however, entering this year, the North-South relations have returned to the state that existed prior to the dialogue, and the tense situation has been further aggravated. As a result, not only have North-South dialogues been suspended all at once [ilsie], but the situation has also reached a dangerous stage in which a war may break out as a result of any accidental factor.

If a war breaks out in our country, it will devastate our national land and drive the nation into a nuclear holocaust. I believe you will not deny that if such a case took place, it would not be conducive to either the North or the South.

At an important time determining whether we can rescue the country and the nation from the danger of such a destructive war or not and whether we can again resume the suspended dialogue or not, all the brethren and mankind are keenly watching us, responsible military authorities.

Therefore, proceeding from the sincere desire to take practical and effective measures for alleviating tension in our country and for removing the danger of war there in accordance with the peace proposal put forward by the KPA, Supreme Command, I propose to you, with courtesy [chongjunghi], that military authorities' talks be held with the participation of the minister of the DPRK People's Armed Forces, the national defense minister of the Republic of Korea, and the commander in chief of the UN forces stationed in South Korea.

At the talks of the military authorities, we should, above all, discuss and resolve the most urgent and earnest inpending problems for preventing the danger of war, which is drawing near as a reality, and for easing tension. Such issues as the issue of suspending the military exercises and expansion of arms that serve as a direct cause aggravating tensions and the danger of war, the issue of reducing troops and armaments, and the issue of observing the Korean Armistice agreement in accordance with the damands of its original content can be included in these questions.

At the talks, we can discuss together issues you may put forward if they help in easing tension on the Korean peninsula. We consider Panmunjom to be the proper venue for the talks and we may designate any other place when we deem it mutually convenient. We consider it appropriate to hold the talks in the month of July.

Recognizing that holding preliminary talks is necessary for realizing the talks of the military authorities, I propose that a preliminary contact between approximately three working-level delegates appointed by each side and an appropriate number of accompanying persons be held on 27 June at Panmunjom.

If the talks of the military authorities are held and practical measures are taken to ease tension, a new turning point will be realized for easing tension and for peace in Korea and an epochal phase will be opened in the North-South dialogue. I express my expectations that you wil show an affirmative response to our new proposal for easing tension on the Korean peninsula, for elilminating the danger of war, and for expediting the cause of peaceful reunification of the nation.

PRIME MINISTER: NO PROGRESS IN INTER-KOREA TALKS

[Text] Prime Minister No Sin-yong told the National Assembly yesterday no progress has yet been made in the proposed inter-Korea talks. No denied previous foreign news repots that the south-north summit talks would be held before the end of this year.

The prime minister said, "Some press reports (concerning the inter-Korea summit talks) are not true." He was responding to lawmakers' questions on the fourth day of a six-day interpellation session.

Three lawmakers took the floor to concentrate their questions on economic issues involving imports and unemployment. They were Reps. Im Yong-tuk and Jun Jong-chun of the ruling Democratic Justice party and Rep. Kim Pong-chc of the opposition New Korea Democratic Party.

The Assembly will start to query the government on social and cultural issues today.

The prime minister said the government will conduct south-north economic talks in such a way as to promote trade and ecnomic cooperation, if the talks should resume.

He said the government will take utmost care in making agricultural imports in view of the nation's agricultural conditions.

The government will try to minimize the side effects of collecting donations and contributions by ensuring that people make donations voluntarily, he said.

In other testimony, Deputy Prime Minister Kim Man-che said prospects for employment are bright this year. The government, Kim said, will work out an institutional manpower management policy.

The nation's industrial structure will be improved to help increase job opportunities for college graduates. He said small-and medium-sized businesses will be promoted to expand employment opportunities.

Rep. Kim of the DJP asked the government about its measures to increase job opportunities. The government has produced an estimated 600,000 unemployed people in the past several years by pursuing a stringent monetary policy, he said.

The JDP lawmaker urged the government to cope effectively with foreign countries' trade pressures in accordance with the principle of reciprocity. Calling for a crackdown on capital drainage, he said overseas investments should be actively promoted.

Rep. Kim of the NKDP proposed that a grand debating forum be sponsored to discuss the nation's major economic issues. He suggested the forum be attended by domestic and foreign political scientists, economists and technocrats.

The opposition lawmaker demanded to know the government's plan to import foodstuffs including beef. Kim also proposed South and North Korea barter corn and beef in an effort to promote economic cooperation between the divided halves.

Referring to Japan's declaration of 200-mile economic zone, he demanded the government propose, to North Korea, a declaration of a joint fishing zone. He called upon the government to reinstate commercial broadcasting networks, which were merged into the Korean Broadcasting Sytem in 1980.

Rep. Chon of the DJP said the forthcoming constitutional reform bill should contain measures to protect the interests of farming and fishing people. The DJP legislator urged the government to buy as much barley as the farmers want to sell this summer.

ZAIREAN PRIME MINISER DISCUSSES TRADE WITH NO

SK170616 Seoul YONHAP in English 0707 GMT 17 Jun 86

[Text] Seoul, June 17 (YONHAP)) -- South Korean Prime Minister No Sin-yong and Zairean Prime Minister Kengo a Dondo Tuesday discussed ways to expand trade and economic cooperation between their two countries, Korean foreign ministry officials said. The two prime ministers also discussed the promotion of the participation of Korean businesses in Zaire's first five-year economic development project, scheduled to begin this year.

The Zairean prime minister arrived here Monday for a five-day official visit at No's invitation.

During the meeting, held at the government office complex, No and Kengo also discussed ways to strengthen diplomatic and political cooperation between Seoul and Kinshasa in international forums, especially in meetings of non-aligned, third world countries.

Kengo said the Zairean Government has enacted a new investment law to guarantee investments by foreigners and requested that Korea increase its investments in Zaire in accordance with spirit of south-south cooperation.

No replied that he will positively encourage the Korean business concerns to invest in Zairean businesses.

Kengo said that his government hopes to inroduce Korea's development experience and technology accumulated in the past 20 years. He also proposed that the two countries strengthen economic cooperation through the Korea-Zaire joint committee.

Referring to the Korean question, the Zairean leader said the Kinshasa government hopes the Korean question should be resoved peacefully through dialogue and negotiations between the two Koreas and that it supports positively South Korean Government's efforts for peace on the Korean peninsula.

No expressed gratitude to Kengo for Kinshasa's support of Seoul in international forums.

Following his meeting with No, Kengo paid a courtesy call on President Chon Tu-hwan and attended a luncheon hosted by Chun at Chongwadae, the presidential residence. Kengo is scheduled to meet with Deputy Prime Minister and Economic Planning Minister Kim Man-che and to visit the Pohang Steel and Iron Co. in the southeastern port of Pohang and to tour the Olympic stadium in Seoul. He will leave Korea on Friday.

STUDENTS STAGE DEMONSTRATION AT TAEGU BANK

SK171118 Seoul YONHAP in English 1039 GMT 17 Jun 86

[Text] Taegu, Korea, June 17 (YONHAP) -- Five students, who were staging an anti-American demonstration on the rooftop of a downtown building housing the local branch of the Korean-American Bank, were arrested Tuesday afternoon, police reported.

The incident ended some three hours after the students from two local universities occupied the rooftop at 3:10 p.m. (06:10 GMT) in this provincial city, some 300 kilometers southeast of Seoul.

The students, who gained access to the roof by climbing the emergency stairway, hurled two gas bombs down to the street to block the police approach. Before their capture, the students tossed anti-American leaflets to the streets and unfurled a banner calling for national self-reliance.

The police, backed by fire hoses spraying water from the street, successfully stormed the roof with some 60 men. Police said the five were taken into custody without injury and the investigation is continuing.

Police apprehended him at his rented room in Kumho-dong around 2 a.m.

MILITARY NEUTRALITY IN POLITICS SEEN AS 'SOLEMN'

SK170128 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 17 Jun 86 pp 1, 6

[Text] Prime Minister No Sin-yong yesterday expressed a negative view on the proposed meeting between President Choin and opposition leaders Kim Tae-chun and Kim Yong-sam. In testimony before the National Assembly, he said, "It is difficult for the head of state to meet him (Kim Tae-chung), taking into consideration his legal and political status."

Kim is now on a stay of execution of his 20-year jail term. He was sentenced to death, convicted of sedition with regard to the bloody 1980 riot in Kwangju, but the penalty was commuted to a life term and then to 20 years.

The opposition New Korea Democratic Party has called for the "three-way talks" as a means to bring about a breakthrough in the political confrontation.

No, however, stressed "I understand that the President is striving to have dialogues with as many persons as possible." He was answering a question by Rep. Kim Toing-chu of the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party about whether he intends to recommend the meeting to the President.

In the last-day questioning session, Rep. Kim also inquired of No as to his intention "to advise the President to quit his presidency of the ruling Democratic Justice party to help political parties discuss constitutional amendment frankly."

In reply, No said, "As far as I know, party-government cooperation on the administration of state affairs is in good shape, as President Chon holds the presidency of the party. I have no intention of making such a recommendation."

As to the controversial question of the NDP-demanded release of "political prisoners," he reiterated that the government is examining their release carefully, with a view to fostering national reconciliation within the confines of the legal order.

Asked to clarify whether or not President Chon will run in the next election, No did not give a direct answer, but said: "The President has often told me how happy he would be if he could drink 'makkolli' and enjoy chatting with farmers on the banks of rice fields after realizing a peaceful change of government for the first time in our history.

Rep. Kim claimed that now is the time for the military to declare its nonintervention in politics and asked for the prime minister's opinion.

No said the Constitution stipulates the solemn neutrality of the military, "therefore, it is meaningless for the military to declare non-intervention in politics anew." The premier further said that the government would push ahead with its policy of banning "private tutoring." "Instead, the government will take necessary measures to help university students suffering from financial problems by increasing scholarships and providing side jobs," he said.

Four lawmakers took the floor yesterday to question the government about social affairs, including campus problems and labor disputes. Rep. Kang Kyong-sik of the second opposition Korea National Party claimed that the wide gap between the rich and the poor and regional imbalance should be eliminatd as they hamper national unity and cause a "feeling of alienation" among the people. Touching on campus problems, he said that the college graduation quota system should be abrogated to help "campous autonomy" take root. He urged the government to give a free hand to university authorities in recruiting students. In particular, he claimed that the government should not take "retaliatory measures" against professors who issue statements on the current situation. He also claimed that "pure private tutoring" by college students aimed at earning school expenses should be allowed.

Rep. Kim of the NDP demanded that arrested "democratic figures" and students be released, irrespective of the nature of their offenses and sentences, to pave the road for a smooth debate on constitutional amendment.

Rep. Sim Chung-ku of the DJP argued, "Any extreme struggles through arson, violence and agitation can neither be beautified nor justified by any excuses." He urged the government to "work out substantial and comprehensive counter-plans against the left-leaning ideology spreading among students."

Rep. Son Tae-kon of the splinter Democratic Korea POarty demanded that the government show a positive and sincere attitude toward revision of the basic law.

In reply, Labor Minister Cho Chol-kwon said that the government is preparing for the revision of labor laws, including the Labor Union Law, Labor Dispute Arbitration Law and Labor Standards Law. He said, "The government expects that the three revision bills of the labor laws will be submitted by the ruling and opposition parties respectively, to be deliberated upon for revision, if possibly, within the ongoing House session." The labor minister also reported that a total of 120 business managers have been arrested for delinquencies in payment of wages and maltreatment of their employees during the past six years. But he did not make public how many employees have been arrested for labor disputes during the same period.

Home Minister Chong Sok-mo said that the government is carefully considering providing the local assemblies with the power of no-confidence motions against the heads of local administrations in the government's plan on local self-rule.

As for the treatment of film director Sin Sang-ok and his ex-wife Choe Un-hui, Justice minister Kim Song-ki said, "The government has expressed its position not to take issue with their activities in Pyongyang for the past eight years, because the government judged that their behavior in North Korea was inevitable for their survival."

BCP POLITICAL REPORT ON PAST 'REVISIONIST' LINES

BK081337 (Clandestine) Voice of the People of Burma in Burmese 1200 GMT 8 Jun 86

["Continuation of the Political Report on the Burma Communist Party Central Committee Presented at the Third National Party Congress" -- read by announcer]

[Text] Browder revised the basic Leninist thesis that imperialism is monopolistic, decadent, and moribund capitalism. Denying the imperialist nature of U.S. capitalism, he declared that U.S. capitalism retains some of the characteristics of a young capitalism and that there is a common interest between the proletariat and the grand bourgeosie in the United States. Thus he pleaded for the safeguarding of the system of monopolist trusts and dreamed about saving U.S. imperialism from inevitable crises by means of class conciliation. Basing himself on this wrong appraisal of U.S. imperialism and following a capitulationist line of class colloboration with monopoly capital, Browder in May 1944 presided over the dissolution of the Communist Party of the United States of America, the party of the U.S. proletariat, and formed a non-party organization, the Communist Political Association of the United States of America.

Such was the Browderist line. In essence, it reflected U.S. imperialism infiltration and erosion from within the labor movement in the United States. During World War II, Browderism spread to colonized countries like Burma and India. After World War II, it gave birth to the line of peaceful evolution through class collaboration; that is, attaining liberation of colonizied countries through peaceful means in colloboration with U.S. and British imperialism.

Browderism, or the line of peaceful evolution, first came to our country during te period of resistance against the Japanese fascists, and it became the official line of our party at the second party congress in 1945.

Under this policy, the party yielded its armed struggle line against British imperialism and worked above ground as an official party under the British colonialists. The fruits of victory gained during the resistance against the Japanese fascists were thereby surrendered; armed units were disbanded, a large quantity of arms were given up, and rural base areas were abandoned. The revolution in Burma suffered serious setbacks of this revisionist line. The Browderist line was abolished in 1946 [words indistinct] and the march continued with a correct line.

B. The 1955 Revisionist Line

The meeting held by the Central Committee in 1955 adopted the 1955 work program and the 1955 line of internal peace and stopping the civil war. The party Central Committee worked on that line for many years. [Passage indistinct]

HUN SEN COMMENTS ON FINAL SETTLEMENT PROSPECTS

PM121405 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 10 Jun 86 p 14

[Daniel Roussel report: "Open to Reconciliation"]

[Text] "I am sure that all the Vietnamese troops will be able to withdraw in 1990," Cambodian Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Hun Sen said during a press conference to mark the fifth partial withdrawal of Vietnamese units based on the southwest of the country. According to the Cambodian leader, more than one-third of all the Vietnamese troops have left Cambodia.

"In 1990 the Cambodian problem will therefore be solved without any need for a negotiated political solution, either with the coalition chaired by Sihanouk, with ASEAN, or with China. But the door is still open," the Cambodian leader said: "We are seeking a political solution to end our people's suffering and to enable us to build our country. This political solution necessarily depends on the dismantling of Pol Pot's political and military organization."

In an exclusive interview granted to L'HUMANITE at the end of the press conference, Hun Sen explained why "the situation is right and, if the sides concerned by the situation in the region really want to find a political solution, negotiations should start between 1986 and 1988. After that the problem will be nearing its own solution."

The minister's statements are based on his observation of the Cambodian Army's progress and, he said, "the strengthening of our forces in all spheres." "Although an overall solution to the region's tension involves China, it is the problems of peace not in Cambodia alone which are involved, but also in the whole of Indochina and the ASEAN countries."

[Roussel] Could Sihanouk return to Cambodia?

"Not if it means allowing a wolf into the fold." Hun Sen remarked, adding that, if he returns, "Sihanouk will have to be one of the sheep. At present he is one of the tigers. We intend to take off his tiger's skin and bring him back to the country. But the former monarch's fate is in his own hands."

Hun Sen reaffirmed that he does "not reject any negotiation with groups or individuals for the sake of national reconciliation and Pol Pot's elimination. But it is impossible to negotiate with the coalition chaired by Sihanouk, to which Pol Pot is central."

Hun Sen also accused the Thai army of "direct intervention" against Cambodia, which has necessitated the construction of a self-defense line which is now well under way. "We are going to hermetically seal the 700km of border with Thailand," Hun Sen stated.

With regard to relations with France, Hun Sen said they are "at a standstill. But we are waiting to see what the new government's policy toward our country is."

ARMY PAPER ON STRENGTHENED FIGHT AGAINST ENEMIES

BK140445 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Kangtoap PADEVOAT editorial: "Expand Past Victories, Advance Toward Successfully Fulfilling the Three Goals of the Cambodian Revolution" -- date not given]

[Text] During the past more than 7 years, our Cambodian revolution has advanced firmly on the road of progress toward socialism. These past more than 7 years were the time when the Cambodian revolution had experienced a most difficult period full of struggle and tests and trials but crowed with brilliant victories.

Each passing year, under the KPRP Leadership, our Army and people scored successive victories, particularly the resounding victories scored during the 1984-85 dry season which have enabled our revolution to gain a position of strength and victory and plunged the enemies into a weak position pending an inevitable doom.

Following the victories won during the 1984-85 dry season, our Armed Forces in close cooperation with the friendly Vietnamese Army volunteers have carried on their offensive against the enemies and could firmly defend all the positions along the Cambodian-Thai border. Many units of our regular force have gained a firm foothold there. They have attacked and blocked the enemies from various passages along the border.

For their part, our vigilant and combative people have taken part in national defense by making great sacrifice in carrying out the tasks of building a strong and long border defense line. At present, the plan for building our border defense line is almost completed. During this great campaign, the regular, special, militia, and [words indistinct] forces have made great contributions by joining with tens of thousands of young workers from all corners of the country in building the national defense line.

Inside the country, we have launched vigorous activities in all fields. In the military field, we have launched successive sweep operations against the enemies, thus causing instability and difficulty for the enemies. Due to our sweep operations, the enemy forces both along the border and in the interior of the country have suffered great losses. They were dispersed, lost contact and support, and suffered shortages of food, ammunition, medicine, and means to rescue their wounded or sick soldiers. Finally, many of them were compelled to surrender to us.

They have also suffered serious internal rifts. In the face of this serious defeat, the enemies have turned to ballyhoo about their victories won in this or that area in an attempt to boost the morale of their soldiers. More perfidious still, they have combined their scheme of distorting facts in Cambodia with their abject diplomatic maneuvers, such as their so-called 8-point proposal which is just a farce directed by Beijing in an attempt to fool both internal and international public. The enemies' remnant forces inside the country are insanely carrying out their activities to destroy our people's peaceful life and threaten our people in an attempt to forcibly create a state power under their order.

For this reason, our struggle against the enemies remains a very tense and fierce struggle. The most difficult task that our Armed Forces must fulfill with all their might is to successfully realize our current strategic tasks.

Therefore, in order to further expand our revolution's position of strength both along the border and in the interior of the country and to inflict greater defeats on the enemies, our Armed Forces must continue to attack the enemies both in the rainy and dry seasons by searching-out and destroying them, launching all forms of offensives against them, and attacking them with creative ingenuity, effectively,and with the use of aggregate forces. We must launch offensives against the enemies in all areas, from the bases inside the country to the border areas. We must know how to coordinate our offensives with political measures, particularly with the proselytization work persuading misled persons to return to the revolution and people.

In addition to the task of attacking the enemies, our Armed Forces must strive to help build genuine revolutionary forces especially in localities, communies and villages in which the enemies often carry out their activities. We must pay greater attention to the task of strengthening villages, including the soldiarity production groups which are the most important sources of our people's triple revoluntionary movement. They are the sources from which we recruit our Armed Forces and militia units for national and local defense. They are the sources of our forces for use in launching production drives to contribute to restoring and expanding our national economy.

Regarding this task, our Armed Forces must help stimulate the masses to join in building their localities, carrying out our triple revoluntionary movement, and establishing combat villages and communes and strong militia units capable of defending their localities, the revoluntionary administrations, and the people's right to mastery.

To counter the enemies' maneuvers to undermine the Cambodian-Vietnamese solidarity and weaken our forces, we must strive to enhance the strength of the Cambodian-Vietnamese alliance and uphold this soldiarity as the factor tht ensures the victory of the Cambodian revolution. Our armed forces must heighten their revolutionary vigilance and timely attack and frustrate all psychological warfare maneuvers and activities of the enemies. The special soldiarity between Cambodia and Vietnam is the sacred bond of relations. Our Vietnamese friends will always give us help whenever our people want in order to defend their lives and our beautiful land of Angkor.

Based on these main points, our Armed Forces should creatively carry out their tasks in accordance with the geographical settings at their respective positions. Only by so doing will we be able to successfully fulfill the three goals of our revolution set forth by our party's fifth national representative congress.

GENERAL POLITICAL DEPARTMENT ADVICE ON ARMY DAY

BK151149 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 14 Jun 86

[Text] At a time when our KPRAF and people are enthusiastically emulating to create new achievements to contribute to the celebration of the 35th anniversary of the KPRAF'S founding day and the Army-People Soldiarity Day, the KPRAF General Political Department has given supplementary advice on how to organize the celebration of the 35th anniversary of the KPRAF's founding and the Army-People Soldiarity Day -- 19 June 1951-19 June 1986 The advice is as follows:

By virtue of circular No 02 dated 6 November, 1985, of the party Central Committee dealing with the organization of the 35th anniversary of the KPRAF's founding day and the Army-People Solidarity Day and in order to ensure that the organization of this solemn festival proceeds smoothly in response to the objective and aspiration of the steadily growing KPRAF, the General Political Department would like to give out the following advice for concrete implementation.

I. Objective and Desiderata:

1. To make cadres, comatants and the general public clearly understand the tradition of courageous struggle of the Army which was born out of the people and truly fights for the people. At the same time, to make everybody expand the spirit of strategic and militant solidarity and cooperation between Cambodia and Vietnam, which is the norm guaranteeing all victories and the development of three Indochinese countries.

2. To constantly initiate the efforts to make cadres, combatants, and the general public happy with and proud of the victories and steady development of our Army and pledge to enhance their sense of patriotism and raise their spirit of responsibility in contributing to the emulation campaign to build the KPRAF, making them grow stronger and bigger in size and quality and sharpening their political grasp and tactical capability in order to advance toward fulfilling all the resolutions of the fifth party congress.

3. Therefore, it is required that the celebration be conducted in a grand way and its significance be spread broadly among the cadres, combatants, and general public with a sense of economy in mind.

II. Organization and Implementation:

1. Regional, divisional, regimental, provincial, municipal, and school general departments must hold courses to spread and teach the excellent traditions of our Army and poeple from the day this advice is received to the end of the year. Propaganda documents must concentrate on the followng topics:

a. Lessons and historical experiences aimed at exhorting the Army into fulfilling its duties.

b. Lessons on the characteristics of the Army described in political orientation programs.

c. Speeches read at state meetings and speeches by individual units.

Propaganda is organized through the life style meetings and get-togethers to discuss concrete issues with lessons and experiences being debated and explained and then marked down for thorough implementation by cadres and combatants. Movies must be screened during film weeks concentrating on the topic of serving the Army's 35th anniversary. The Army museum must put on display arms confiscated from the enemy and pictures witnessing the losses of the enemy and the victories of our Army. It is imperative that these exhibitions be organized properly for viewing by foreign guests and the general public. In particular, divisional, regimental, provincial, municipal, and school general departments must organize photo exhibitions, if possible. They must also organize sports competitions within the Army or with the frontline units in order to celebrate the day in accordance with prevailing conditions in each unit.

2. The organization of meetings: units must hold meetings. Such units include regions, divisions, provincial and municipal military commands, regiments, and equivalent units and levels. Speeches for the meeting of each unit must be written by the unit concerned on the basis of the content in the official central speech and based on political tasks of the unit as appropriate.

Following the meetings, groups of lecturers must be organized on the basis of the feats of units and invididuals and sent to tell the cadres, combatants, and general public about these feats.

3. As for units living with the people, they must organize get-togethers between the Army and the authorities and people in order to inspect, exchange opinion, and assist each other in implementing Army discipline vis-a-vis the people and authorities as well as in contributing to Army building and implementing the rear's policy toward the Army.

4. The General Politicial Department must consult with the KUFNCD National Council in order to send delegations to visit Cambodian Army units and Vietnamese Volunteer Army units both at the front and in the rear.

5. The regional, divisional, provincial, municipal, regimental, and school units must cooperate with local authorities in organizing visits and assistance to families of fallen and disabled soldiers under treatment or convalescing at hospitals as well as Vietnamese Volunteer Army units fulfilling their internationalist obligation in Cambodia.

6. Wherever there are tombs of Cambodian and Vietnamese cadres and combatants, work must be conducted to clean and weed the tombs in cooperation with the local authorities, women's associations, youth associations, students, and children.

7. Organize sanitation workers to clean up the work sites and living quarters of each unit during the celebration of this anniversary.

8. All units in the Armed Forces must organize short-term emulation campaigns in order to produce outstanding feats in contribution to the celebration of the day.

9. All Armed Forces units must heighten vigilance and combat readiness to prevent and block all enemy maneuvers and to ensure security. After all these steps have been taken, it is imperative to report the results to the Propaganda and Education Department before 30 June 1986 so that the latter can sum up and report to the General Political Department in time. Following are the slogans:

1. Hail the 35th anniversary of the glorious traditional day of the KPRAF and the Army-People Solidarity Day -- 19 June 1951-19 June 1986!
2. Enthusiastically celebrate the great victories of the KPRAF in the 35 years of struggle and construction!
3. Pledge to emulate in carrying out all the resolutions of the fifth party congress!
4. The bonds of militant solidarity among the armies and peoples of Cambodia, Vietman, and Laos last forever!
5. Long live the glorious KPRP!
6. Long live the glorious PRK!

SIHANOUK 'DEAL' WITH THAILAND ON TEMPLE SCORED

BK141230 Phnom Penh SPK in English 1120 GMT 14 Jun 86

["A Deal" -- SPK headline]

[Text] Phnom Penh SPK June 14 -- Several Thai papers on June 6 brought to light dark designs long nurtured by reactionary circles in Bangkok, and a shameful, criminal deal between them and Sihanouk, leader of the so-called "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea", on the Kampuchea's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity.

One article titled "Thailand Hopes To Get Back Preah Vihear," quotes statements made by Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon and Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila to the effect that "The Preah Vihear temple belongs to Thailand." Sitthi also recalled in an interview that Sihanouk, as "chairman of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea," had assured that "If the three factions retake Kampuchea the Preah Vihear temple will be common property of Kampuchea and Thailand." Sitthi said that the sharing of the temple would be just the beginning, after that Thailand will negotiate with the three factions for the return of the temple to Thailand," he added.

The reports shed more light on what has already been denounced and condemned by the poeple and the Government of the People's Republic of Kampuchea. Prem, Sitthi and other reactionaries in Bangkok, while working hand in glove with the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists in keeping the genocidal clique of Pol Pot and their associates to oppose the Kampuchean people, have all the time maintained their territorial designs on Kampuchea, in service of "pan-Thaiism", a expansionist policy doggedly pursued by all rulers in Thailand for eight centuries now. It should also be noted that Bangkok's designs on three Lao hamlets in Sayabury are also part of this reactionary policy.

By making such a deal with the rulers in Bangkok, Sihanouk has further revealed his despicable character. In addition to serving as a mask for the Pol Pot clique he is now prepared to carve off a portion of the national territory for "pan-Thaiism." That's and indelible shame.

Let there be no mistake that the People's Republic of Kampuchea is an independent, sovereign country. The Preah Vihear temple, illegally occupied by Thailand up to 1955, [was] returned to Kampuchea on June 15, 1962 following a ruling by the International Court in the Hague. The temple, like the rest of Kampuchea's territory, is under full control of the PRK Government. It is not to be infringed upon with impunity.

KHIEU SAMPHAN DISCUSSES VISIT TO AFRICA

BK071224 (Clandestine) Voice of the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 0500 GMT 7 Jun 86

[Interview with DK Vice President in Charge of Foreign Affairs Khieu Samphan by VODK AND VONADK correspondents -- recorded; place and date not given]

[Text] [Correspondent] Mr Vice President, you have just led a CGDK delegation on visit to a number of African states. What is the objective of this visit?

[Khieu Samphan] Geographically speaking, African countries are so far away from Cambodia. But morally and sentimentally, they are very close to our Cambodian state and people. We have very fraternal feelings for them, for they are as poor as we are and have suffered from foreign aggression like us. For this reason, they hate the aggressors and feel very much related to our people who are victims of Vietnamese aggression. They admire our people, who are a people of a small but courageous country daring to challenge and fight the Vietnamese aggressors, winning one victory after another. They regard our people's struggle as their own, considering it as a joint struggle of small and poor states in defense of their right to live with independence and honor. For this reason, every year, we call on these African brothers in order to say hello to them and inform them of the latest developments of our multiform struggle. Last year we visited Cameroon, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Meuritania and the Ivory Coast. This year we visited Egypt, Kenya, Rwanda, Burkina Faso, Senegal, Liberia, and Guinea. Egypt, Kenya, and Rwanda are in eastern Africa. Burkina Faso, Senegal, Liberia, and Guinea are in western Africa. This year, the CGDK delegation's visit is of even more significance, for it took place after our CGDK had advanced the 8-point peace proposal to settle the Cambodian problem politically, and these countries rejoined over the CGDK's 8-point peace proposal.

[Correspondent] How did these countries support our 8-point peace proposal?

[Kieu Samphan] They fully and completely supported it with enthusiasm. In Egypt, President Husni Mubarak personally received our CGDK delegation to express the support of the Republic of Egypt for our 8-point peace proposal.

The chairmen of the lower house and upper house also personally received our delegation. As for State Minister Butrus Ghali, he also met with our delegation for 1 hour. This shows the attention paid by the Arab Republic of Egypt to our struggle and to the CGDK's 8-point peace proposal.

Moreover, we had cordial talks with several high-ranking Egyptian officials who expressed deep admiration for our struggle and firm confidence that we would triumph. We can conclude that the stand taken by Egypt reflects the stand of African countries as well as that of Arab countries, for Egypt has influence on both African and Arab countries.

In Kenya, the fact that his country welcomed our delegation shows a gesture of clear-cut political significance as it expressed satisfaction with and unmistakable support for our CGDK's 8-point peace proposal. This support was clearly displayed in the welcoming speech by the deputy foreign minister delivered at a solemn banquet in honor of our delegation and in the remarks by the chairman of the Kenyan National Solidarity Party who voiced warm and cordial greetings and regards to our delegations.

He said that in the past he learned about our Cambodian people's struggle only through newspapers, documents, and letters exchanged from afar. He said we had never met before but now, we meet each other. This led him to have greater esteem for the Cambodian people and to understand the Cambodian problem better. He now clearly knows about the just cause of the Cambodian people and their courageous struggle. He has greater confidence in the victory of the Cambodian people. He also expressed hope that he would be able to visit Angkor Wat, the great and famous work of art of our people's advanced civilization, and to witness the beautiful scene of our Tonle Sap lake.

In Rwanda, the minister of foreign affairs and cooperation personally and cordially welcomed our delegation at the airport. During talks with our delegation, he clearly affirmed the Rwandan Government's support for our 8-point peace proposal. He also stressed his satisfaction with the three points in the proposal, namely the proposed direct talks between the two warring sides, withdrawal of foreign troops, and national reconciliation among all Cambodians.

The general secretary of the revolutionary party for the development of Rwanda also cordially received us and expressed strong feelings and attention to our Cambodian problem.

Burkina Faso also expressed deep feeling for our Cambodian people's struggle. Through their personal experience, the leaders of this country clearly understood that for Cambodia -- like Burkina Faso, which is a small and poor country -- to live with independence and national honor is a difficult thing to accomplish. For this reason, they have deep feelings for our Cambodia. These are feelings of friendship and fraternity.

When our delegation arrived there on 13 May, the minister of external relations and cooperation went to the airport to welcome our delegation as close friends. He met twice with our delegation and hosted a luncheon welcoming our delegation on 15 May. This luncheon was also attended by the minister of internal affairs and security and the minister of transport and communications. These two ministers asked us many questions about Camobida, thus learning much more about our problem. President Thomas Sankara also personally received our delegation. He attentively enquired about the struggle situation of the CGDK and Cambodian people.

As for the Mali Government, it also expressed support for our CGDK's 8-point peace proposal. When we made a brief stopover at the airport of Bamako, capital of Mali, on the night of 16 May, the acting minister of foreign affairs and international cooperation and his secretary came to welcome our delegation late in the night at the airport in order to assure our delegation of the Mali Government's support for our CGDK's 8-point peace proposal. Let me remind you that President Abdou Diouf is the president of the Organization of African Unity and Senegal is the president of the special committee of the International Conference on Kempuchea.

We left Senegal and arrived in Monrovia, capital of Liberia, on 20 May. At the airport, the vice president of Liberia, the vice chairman of the National Assembly, the chairman of the foreign relations commission of the Senate, and other officials of Liberia cordially welcomed our delegation. We held official talks with the foreign minister and also with the vice president.

On 23 May, the vice president hosted a reception for our delegation. In his speech, the Liberian vice president stressed that the Liberian Government and people warmly supported the CGDK's 8-point peace proposal, which is a most reasonable proposal. He also appealed to Vietnam and its accomplices to accept this peace proposal. Many other members of the government and officials of Liberia attended the reception. This visit was an opportunity allowing us to further strengthen bonds of friendship and solidarity between our CGDK and people and the Liberian Government and people.

The Liberian president also warmly received our delegation. He stressed that Lieria demanded that the Vietnamese troops be withdrawn from Cambodia unconditionally, thus allowing the Cambodian people to decide their own destiny. He also reiterated support for the 8-point peace proposal.

Our delegation's visit to Guinea was also an opportunity to strengthen friendly relations between our CGDK and people and the Guinean people and Government. When our delegation arrived at Conakry airport in the afternoon of 24 May, permanent secretary of the National Salvation Military Committee, the minister of foreign affairs, and other Guinean personalities welcomed our delegation.

After holding talks with the permanent secretary of the National Salvation Military Committee, we also met with other memebers of the Guinean Government. President Lansana Conte also received our delegation in a warm and cordial atmosphere. He reassured our delegation of the Guinean Government and people's support for our Cambodian people's struggle. He also affirmed full support for our CGDK's 8-point peace proposal, for he considered it very reasonable and said that Vietnam should accept it.

Our CGDK delegation's visit to Africa ended in Guinea with great success. Let me remind you that in all countries visited, we conveyed the warmest greetings of Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, DK president, to the heads of state of friendly countries, and President Husni Mubarak, President Sankara, President Samuel K. Doe, and President Lansana Conte also conveyed through our delegation their warm greetings to Samdech president of Democratic Kampuchea.

[Correspondent] What is your impression following this visit?

[Khieu Samphan] I see that our friends are happy that the forces of the three patriotic factions of our CGDK have the same views on important, fundamental political issues relating to our current struggle and to the future of Cambodia after Vietnam withdraws from Cambodia. They are happy to see that this unanimity of views on important political issues is the firm basis for the patriotic forces of the three factions to maintain unity forever. All friends are most happy to see that our delelgation truly represents the three factions of our CGDK, for it is composed of representatives from the three sides. This has made our friends confident that we will win.

The force of solidarity of the three factions and the force of the world supporting the CGDK's 8-point peace proposal are most powerful. This force is strong enough to prompt Vietnam to come to the negotiating table and start talking with our CGDK to find a political settlement for our Cambodian problem. Moreover, they clearly see that the Vietnamese are totally and completely cornered on the Cambodian battlefield and are experiencing a crisis in Vietnam itself. Therefore, if Vietnam continues to use tricks to avoid negotiating with the CGDK to politically settle the Cambodian problem in specific ways, it will be more inextricably bogged down both in Cambodia and at home.

As for the tricks and deception used by Vietnam, they are widely known in the world. If Vietnam refuses to negotiate with the CGDK, how can the Cambodian problem be settled politically? Who will believe Vietnam's claim that it wants to settle the Cambodian problem politically?

Our CGDK is so generous toward Vietnam. It accepts that Vietnam withdraws troops in two phases in an orderly manner and within a specific time frame. Regarding the Heng Samrin regime installed by Vietnam in Phnom Penh, we also agree to let it join in a quadripartite Cambodian coalition government in the spirit of national reconciliation among all Cambodians. What else do you want? Vietnam must agree to negotiate with our CGDK. This is the opinion of the overwhelming majority of African countries and of the largest segment of international opinion.

FIRE EXCHANGED WITH VIETNAMESE TROOPS AT BORDEN

[Text] Aranyaprathet -- About four Vietnamese soldiers are believed to have been wounded in a clash with a unit of Thai troops south of this border district yesterday morning, according to a report from the Burapha Task Force. They were among a group of 15 Vietnamese soldiers who crossed the border canal of Khlong Nam Sai at Ban Khao Din and had walked about one kilometre into Thai territory when they were spotted by a border defence unit. Thai troops tried to push them back but the intruders resisted, sparking an exchange of machine gun and grenade launcher fire that lasted for about 20 minutes before the Vietnamese retreated into Kampuchea.

Dressed in green fatigues and fully armed, the Vietnamese left a trail of blood stains, indicating that soldiers had been wounded and dragged back. The report said it was believed that the intruding troops had either strayed into Thailand by accident or were on an intelligence mission to find the location of Thai troops.

SUPREME COMMAND ON CAMBODIAN, LAO BORDER SITUATION

[Text] The Supreme Command's Information Office has reported on the situation at the Thai-Cambodian and Thai-Lao border.

In Cambodia, Vietnam last week moved troops and weapons to the central areas of Battambang and Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey. It is noteworthy that Vietnam sent large reinforcements from Phnom Penh to Battambang, and from Vietnam through Phnom Penh to Samlot Village in Ratanamondol District, Battambang Province, to replace the troops pulled out under the partial withdrawal from Cambodia. Vietnam also sent material supplies into Poipet, Sisophon, and Thmar Puok District in Battambang Province. Concerning the situation deeper in Cambodia, CGDK forces mounted offensives against Vietnamese bases in Mongkolborei, Battambang, Moung Russei, and Ratanamondol Districts of Battambang Province; and Phnum Kravanh District in Pursat Province. At the Thai-Cambodian border, artillery shellings landed inside Thailand in Ta Phraya District, Khlong Hat Subdistrict, Prachin Buri Province; Pong Namron District, Chanthaburi Province; and Khlong Yai District, Trat Province.

At the Thai-Lao border, Laos last week made plans to deploy Vietnamese troops along the Mekong River in Khammouane in rotation for Lao troops pulled from the area. In Sayaboury, Laos deployed troops at operational outposts along the Thai-Lao border. They provide weapon supplies for communist terrorists operating in the border area of Thailand. They also smuggle opium and marijuana for sale in black markets in Thailand to create problems for Thai civilians and officials. There were four border incidents caused by Lao soldiers. Lao soldiers opened fire on Ban Nong Kok, Tha Li District, Loei Province. Lao soldiers fired on Thai villagers while foraging in the forest in Dam Siam Pass, Khong Chiam District, Ubon Ratchathani. One Thai civilian was killed and another wounded. Lao soldiers crossed the border into Thailand and harassed the people in Ban Huai Kon, Thung Chang District, Nan Province. Lao intruders clashed with Thai officials in Ban Huai Sataeng, Thung Chang District, Nan Province. No losses were reported.

CHAWALIT SETS UP PANEL TO CONSIDER ARMY SHUFFLE

[By Phongsak Sisot]

[Text] Newly-appointed Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut has set up an eight-member committee to consider the annual army reshuffle which is expected to come about earlier than the usual timing in previous years, informed military sources told THE NATION yesterday. The upcoming shake-up is also expected to be sweeping, covering officers of both general and colonel ranks.

The army committee is also expected to announce the reshuffle soon after Supreme Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek retires at the end of August. An annual army reshuffle has been traditionally effected on October 1, covering only top-brass officers.

The sources said that the eight-member team is headed by acting Army Chief-of-Staff Lt Gen Wanchai Ruangtrakun. Other members on the board are Deputy Army Chief-of-Staff Lt Gen Charat Wongsayan, Assistant Army Chief-of-Staff for Operations Lt Gen Suchina Khraprayun, Assistant Army Chief-of-staff for Operations Lt Gen Ngamphon Nutsathitm Assistant Army Chief-of-Staff for Logistics Lt Gen Kasem Sa-nguanchatsorakrai, Assistant Army Chief-of-Staff for Civilian Affairs Lt Gen Charuai Wongsayan, Assistant Army Chief-of-Staff for Personnel Lt Gen Sirichai Laksaniyanawin and Army Comptroller-General Lt Gen Wichai Phoemsap.

The sources said that the wide-ranging reshuffle is expected as a result of the failure of Gen Athit to effect a mid-year shake-up covering the ranks of special colonels and below. The absence of a mid-year reshuffle was attributed to the controversy about the proposal calling for second term extension for Gen Athit when he was concurrently army commander-in-chief. The issue, according to the sources, has delayed April's reshuffle. But earlier reports said that Gen Athit had reshuffled about 40 army officers at the levels of deputy regiment commanders in May.

Gen Chawalit's order was seen as a revival of the former practice whereby the top five army generals jointly considered annual reshuffles. The officers were the army commander-in chief, his two assistant commanders-in-chief, and the army chief-of-staff. The sources said that the powers were centralized around Gen Athit when he headed the army.

Soon after he was appointed to the top army post in place of Gen Athit late last month, Gen Chawalit pledged that he would decentralize his powers to reshuffle army officers. He said he would order the formation of any army committee to handle the matter. The sources said that Gen Chawalit also said that the list of the army officers to be affected will be revealed to the public.

Gen Athit last year adopted a new policy in this regard by sending specific reshuffle orders separately to related officers only. The list of the reshuffled officers were however announced in the royal gazette later.

Meanwhile, about 20 Chunlachomklao Military Academy Class One graduates and their wives last night hosted a party for Gen Chawalit to congratulate him on the appointment at the Ambassador Hotel. Gen Chawalit has also graduated from the same class. The party was also meant to congratulate Khunying Phankhrua Yongchaiyut for the royal bestowal of the title on her.

CRACKDOWN ON CPT 'TOP PRIORITY' IN PREM ORDER

BK161003 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 16 Jun 86

[Text] The crackdown against the outlawed Communist Party of Thailand, or the CPT, and its United Fronts is given top priority in an order recently issued by Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon.

The order, No. 47/2529, signed by the prime minister on 24 March and now in force, reiterates the government's determination to wipe out the CPT and its offshoots in order to bring about peace and security in the country. The order states that the crackdown against the CPT, specifically the party itself and its United Fronts, must be given priority over other security menaces, such as the Communist Party of Malaya, organized southern bandits, and other outlawed elements.

To win over the CPT, the order states that efforts must be exerted by all ministries, departments, and government units to force the party to change its policy of violent armed struggle to peaceful struggle in accordance with the democratic system with his majesty the king as the head of state.

To win over the United Fronts of the CPT, the order states that the root cause of conflicts which create unfairness must be resolved and that unity must be enhanced to foster better understanding within society.

ATHIT REAFFIRMS MILITARY POLL GUIDELINES

[Text] Supreme Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek yesterday reaffirmed his order to encourage senior military personnel to participate in the July 27 general election. "I issued the order in my capacity as supreme commander, and not as army commander-in-chief," he said.

Gen Athit made the statement in the wake of reports which quoted newly-appointed Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut as suggesting that the so-called military election centre was dissolved. Chawalit also reemphasized that the army under his leadership will stay clear of politics.

But Athit was apparently upset with reports that his order to set up the military election centre was superceded. He said he was totally "surprised" by the report.

Athit ordered senior army officials, including former Deputy Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Chuthai Saengthawip, to see that the rank and file were encouraged to go to the polls before he was stripped of his post as army commander-in-chief late last month. "Gen Chawalit was also present when I instructed unit commanders to ask soldiers to get their domicile registration papers transferred to their garrisons so that they could exercise their voting right. I also ordered that soldiers be briefed on the election process," he said.

The six-point guidelines that he issued had nothing to do with politics, he asserted. "I don't understand why the Press blew up the matter out of proportion. Some newspaper wrote that the order was scrapped. How can an order to scrapped?" he said. Gen Athit also warned the Press against sensationalizing stories.

NEW CHAT THAI PARTY LEADERS TAKES OVER

To Improve Army Ties

[By Phanni N. Konkit]

[Text] Maj Gen Chatchai Chunhawan yesterday took over from Maj Gen Praman Adireksan as leader of the Chat Thai Party in what appeared to be a smooth transition of power. The unexpected move was aimed at "patching up" its relations with the military in light of the leadership change in the army, THE NATION learned.

The "succession" was announced soon before the July 27 general election. Although it was in line with a standing "family agreement" for Chatchai to replace Praman, the understanding, which was concluded long ago, had set next year as the time for the transition. Maj Gen Praman was moved up to a largely ceremonial post of chairman of the party's advisory board.

Informed sources said that Chatchai and Praman agreed on the smooth succession last week in the belief that with the former foreign and industry minister at the party's helm. The ties between Chat Thai and the military will improve. Chatchai also said that the chances of the party to join a post-election coalition government would be enhanced with him at the top if Gen Prem Tinsulanon is chosen prime minister after the general election, according to the sources. The sources said that Maj Gen Praman agreed to the assessment and promised to step down willingly during the in-house meeting.

"It's a matter of suitability. Maj Gen Chatchai is in a better position to coordinate with the military. While the party chairman has become so senior that it is not convenient for him to approach a military man, the new party leader can talk with even a lieutenant colonel," one source said.

The sources said that the leadership change was needed in the wake of the army change in which Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut replaced Gen Athit Kamlang-ek as army commander-in-chief late last month. Gen Athit retains his post of supreme commander.

The sources said the two brothers-in-law agreed that the party will back Maj Gen Praman as prime minister should it sweep the majority of seats in the House of Representatives, a possibility most observers consider remote. Maj Gen Chatchai is also a major financier of the party, the sources noted. The leadership change was announced at a news conference in which both Praman and Chatchai were present. Party Secretary General Banhan Sinnlapa-acha was also present.

They stressed publicly that Praman had voluntarily resigned from the post and that the change cannot be interpreted as an inter-party conflict. Chatchai told reporters that the party would not mind joining a post-election coalition government. "We can join hands with anybody," he said.

Asked about his attitude towards Cen Prem Tinsulanon, the new party leader said that if the majority in the new House of Representatives chose Gen Prem as prime minister, Chat Thai would not object. In principle, however, Chat Thai supports the proposal that the prime minister should be an elected MP, he said. Referring to his earlier statement that former Social Action Party (SAP) leader M.R. Khukrit Pramot should be prime minister, Chatchai said circumstances had changed.

He made the statement at a party on M.R. Khukrit's birthday at the former prime minister's Suan Phlu residence before the dissolution of Parliament on May 1. "The game is over and what I said then was only meant as a blessing for him," he said.

Praman said that he tendered his resignation to the executive committee yesterday on the grounds that he had accomplished his mission to recruit party candidates to run in the July 27 general election. The meeting unanimously endorsed the resignation and appointed Maj Gen Chatchai acting party leader. It also appointed him chairman of the party's advisory board. "I was not forced to resign and the resignation was in line with party regulation No. 18," he said.

The regulation stipulates that the executive members will leave their posts when the term of Parliament expires or it is dissolved. If Parliament's term expires, the executive committee will take care of party affairs until the election of a new committee within 90 days after the general election. Chatchai said that the party will be neutral in its election campaign.

But in a major rally at Suan Chatuchak last night, several Chat Thai candidates, including former Saraburi MP and Col Prachak Sawangchit, took the prime minister to task. Pongchon also castigated the Democrat Party in a heated rally speech.

Praman introduced the new party leader to the audience during the campaign -- and in a gesture of unity, he raised his younger brother-in-law's hand before the crowd of about 3,000 people.

Prachak said that Chat Thai has fielded candidates in Bangkok to counter allegations that it has no support among Bangkokians. The rally lasted about four hours.

New Leader on Policy

BK160125 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 16 Jun 86 pp 1, 3

[By The Chongkhadikit]

[Text] The Chat Thai Party intends to win the most seats in the House of Representatives and become the main force in a coalition, its new leader, Major-General Chatchai Chunhawan, told the BANGKOK POST yesterday. By electing him to replace Major-General Praman Adireksan as leader, Chat Thai members are throwing a challenge to the Democratic Party, turning the July 27 general election into an intensive contest between two chief rival parties.

Chat Thai (Thai National), which won the largest number of seats in the previous election but failed to form a government because it was outmanoeuvered by political manipulators in the Social Action Party, considers the Northeast its power base, and the Northeast having one third of the country's population is entitled to one third of the seats in the House. In a government formed with Chat Thai as the major partner, Maj-Gen Chatchai will open bids for the private sector to build highways to connect provinces, including a four-lane expressway between Bangkok and Nakhon Ratchasima, his own constituency, which will facilitate communications between the biggest region of Thailand with the capital.

The construction companies will be allowed to collect tolls for an agreed number of years to regain their investment with an acceptable margin and then turn the roads over to the Government. This project will provide employment all over the country, Maj-Gen Chatchai said, and giving employment to the people will be one of the most important items in the Chart Thai strategic plan for the country. "It is the only real solution to the poverty in the rural and urban areas and to the problem of migration from the provinces to the city and the resultant increase in slum areas," he explained.

Another major task that Chat Thai is setting itself calls for turning the Petroleum Authority of Thailand [PAT] into a nonprofit state enterprise. By making billions in profits, the PAT is causing suffering to all users of refined oil products, particularly those using the products for agricultural, industrial and transportation purposes, at a time when a global glut has caused oil prices to drop dramatically. A government headed by Chat Thai will price diesel and benzine at five baht per litre and premium gasoline at six baht.

Chat Thai would also like the Electricity Generating Authority of Thailand to cut down on profits and lower rates. Maj-Gen Chatchai noted that Thailand should be promoting tourism earnestly on this occasion when trade in the country's primary commodities has been severely affected by protectionism in Japan, Europe and the United States. The electricity rates charged hotels have become excessive and this situation adversely affects the tourist industry. Maj-Gen Chatchai would like to develop agro-industries so that Thailand does not have to depend on primary products and can gain "value added" by exporting processed products or goods manufactured from the country's commodities. Chat Thai will insist on all public utilities being made non-profit so that the public can benefit from lower rates.

To reduce violent crime, Maj-Gen Chatchai will require all persons possessing weapons used for war to turn all their arms over to the authorities within seven days. They need not come and identify themselves to the officials but they will be permitted to deposit the guns and ammunition in baskets to be placed outside police stations. "The existence of such weapons has made all the robberies, murders and gang wars possible, and we have to put a stop to all this violence," Maj-Gen Chatchai said.

To promote democracy and let the people understand the political, economic, social, security and military issues being debated, Chat Thai will work for broadcasts of parliamentary sessions. Such broadcasts will also let the constituents know how the representatives they have elected are conducting themselves, and this will help them in their judgment about voting in future elections. The broadcasts will make the MPs feel more responsible towards their duties to the people, Maj-Gen chatchai said.

DEMOCRAT PARTY CONDUCTS PUBLIC OPINION POLL

Athit Favored In Some Districts

BK140908 Bangkok SIAM RAT in Thai 14 Jun 86 p 2

[Text] According to a source at the Democrat Party's election center, the public opinion survey conducted on 9 June showed that the majority of people questioned in the Districts of Thon Buri and Phra Nakhon prefer Supreme Commander General Athit Kamlang-ek for prime minister over the incumbent, General Prem Tinsulanon. The poll indicated that the Democrat Party's popularity is still high and suggested that its general election candidates must improve themselves. The Democrat Party, according to the survey, might not win the general election in Bangkok Constituencies 1, 2, 10, and 11 -- Dusit, Phaya Thai, Bang Khunthian, and Bangkok Noi Districts respectively. In particular, Marut Bunnak ahs little popularity in Constituency 2. However, the party's popularity in Constituencies 4 and 5 was registered at 37.6 percent against 8.6 percent for the Prachakon Thai Party.

Phichai Comments on Poll

[Excerpt] Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon's popularity has drastically increased since he removed Gen Athit Kamlang-ek as army commander-in-chief last month, Deputy Premier Phichai Rattakun said last night.

Phichai, also Democrat Party leader, quoted a poll as showing that Prem was given a 32 percent popularity rate as against 18 percent prior to the top-level army reshuffle in which Athit was replaced by Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut as army chief. However, Phichai conceded that Prem's popularity in Bangkok has markedly declined. Prem was most popular in the south and northeast, he said.

Phichai was speaking to the Foreign Correspondent's Club of Thailand (FCCT) at Dusit Thani Hotel and was commenting on Prem's chance of retaining the premiership in the post-election government. "I'm not in a position to answer such a question (about Prem's future), but if the Democrat Party emerges the biggest party with the majority after the July 27 poll, I would inevitably have to take over the premiership. In case no party wins the majority, then it's up to the coalition partners to decide who among them will be premier," he said.

Refusing to predict the result of the poll, Phichai said he hoped the Democrat party would be one of the post-election coalition partners and assigned to take charge of the three key ministries: Finance, Foreign Affairs and Interior.

EDUCATION MINISTRY CONDEMNS PRC SCHOOL SHELLING

OW141553 Hanoi VNA in English 1532 GMT 14 Jun 86

[Text] Hanoi VNS June 14 -- "The artillery shelling by Chinese troops on Vietnamese school children amidst their festivities on the International Children's Day had laid bare the atrocious crimes of the Chinese authorities".

This comes in a statement issued here today by the Ministry of Education and the Vietnam Education Trade Union, condemning the Chinese artillery shelling on the primary school of Quyet Tien in Quan Ba district in the northern border province of Ha Tuyen on June 1.

The shelling killed two school children and wounded five others and one teacher, who were attending the shcool's summer camp in celebration of the International Children's Day.

The statement says: "This was not the first time that Chinese troops committed crimes against Vietnamese school children of the said school. On August 9, 1984, their shelling blew up one classroom, and five days later damaged another. On other occasions, Chinese troops' artillery killed two school children, natives of Ha Tuyen's provincial town of Ha Giang, while they were going home from their years-end exams."

"In the five border village of the Quan Ba District", it goes on, "many children have been kidnapped and brutally killed Chinese troops. On March 8 this year, Chinese soldiers took away a 13-year-old son of a vice chairman of Cao Ma village, then killed him and threw his body into a rock crevice".

"The Ministry of Education and the Vietnam Education Trade Union vehemently condemn the above-mentioned crimes of Chinese troops," stresses the statement." "We call on the educators, scientists, artists and all the people of conscience in the world to strongly condemn the brutal crimes of the Chinese authorities so as to stop the repetition of such crimes and to ensure that our future generations will be able to study in peace and happiness", the statement concludes.

He stressed that the shelling on pupils who were enjoying their International Children's Day (June 1) and other crimes against the children in the border areas committed so far by the Chinese authorities are extremely inhuman. He called on the people throughout the country and all progressive mankind to strongly condemn and resolutely stop these crimes of the Chinese reactionaries.

Radio Roundup

BK131109 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 13 Jun 86

[Text] In May 1986, Chinese troops fired nearly 70,000 artillery and mortar rounds on various localities inside Vietnamese territory, especially on Vi Xuyen Ditrict, Ha Tuyen Province. Also in May, Chinese scouts and commandos many times infiltrated into Vietnamese territory for espionage and sabotage activities. On 1 May alone, a platoon of Chinese commandos penetrated into Coc hamlet in Ha Tuyen Province, 800 meters deep inside our territory, taking away three Vietnamese civilians, including a child. Most seriously still, on 1 June, the International Children's Day, Chinese troops fired 16 artillery shells at the basic general school in Quyet Tien village, Ha Tuyen Province, about 10 kilometers deep inside Vietnamese territory. The shelling killed two pupils and seriously wounded five others and a teacher while they were organizing summer camp there.

HANOI MANDARIN VIEWS PRC BORDER SITUATION

OW120443 Hanoi International Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 11 Jun 86

["Rambling Talk With Listeners": "About the Situation Along the Vietnamese-Chinese Border"]

[Text] [Passage indistinct] Regrettably, shells were again fired into Vietnam from China as the International Peace Year began. Around the Spring Festival, a traditional festival for both the Vietnamese and Chinese people in mid-February, in particular the Chinese side continuously stepped up its nibbling attacks on and shelling of various northern Vietnamese provinces. It should be pointed out that every square meter of land in Thanh Thuy township in Ha Tien Province's (Noi Xuyen) County, an area that is called Laoshan by the Chinese, was bombarded with hundreds of shells. China calls this target area the (Shanggangling) of the 1980's. Then, the Chinese side continued its shelling and nibbling attacks on Vietnam's border areas in March, April, and may. At the same time, the Chinese side sent a number of groups of special agents into Vietnam to collect intelligence and carry out sabotage. Chinese troops were given due punishment for committing those crimes. One can also learn from Chinese newspapers and magazines that Chinese soldiers are killed in action along the Sino-Vietnamese border almost every day. However, Chinese propaganda machines have deliberately concealed the fact that Chinese soldiers were not killed by provoking Vietnamese troops on Chinese territory but given due punishment while committing the crime of nibbling away at Vietnamese territory.

Despite all this, the Vietnamese side has proposed to the Chinese side many times that the two resume their negotiations to normalize their relations. The Chinese side rejected this Vietnamese sincerity with the so-called two obstacles. Now let us analyze how the so-called two obstacles affect the process of normalizing relations between the two countries. The so-called first obstacle is the withdrawal of the Vietnamese volunteers from Cambodia. The Vietnamese Government's position on this issue is clear-cut. The Vietnamese Government has repeatedly stated that the Vietnamese volunteers entered Cambodia at this time to help the Cambodian people put an end to the Pol Pot clique's ruthless, autocratic, and genocidal system as they had done twice in the past. After the task is accomplished, Vietnam will withdraw its troops from Cambodia.

International reactionary forces are now doing everything possible to support the remnants of Pol Pot's forces and other Cambodian reactionaries in carrying out subversive activities against the People's Republic of Kampuchea. In view of this situation and in consideration of the request by the PRK, the Vietnamese volunteers will remain in Cambodia for the time being to help it stabilize the situation and protect the Cambodian people's revolutionary achievements.

In view of the fact that the situation in Cambodia has improved with each passing day and in accordance with an agreement by the Vietnamese and PRK Governments, a portion of the Vietnamese volunteers have withdrawn from Cambodia since 1982 and returned to Vietnam. It is estimated that all the Vietnamese volunteers will withdraw from Cambodia by 1990. This action fully shows the sincerity of the Vietnamese Government regarding the Cambodia question. Moreover, the Vietnamese and PRK Goverments have also pointed out that the Vietnamese volunteers will be withdrawn earlier if the Cambodia question can be solved sooner. This means that the Cambodia question will no longer exist by then.

Some Vietnamese volunteers successfully withdrew from Cambodia in late May. More than 30 foreign reporters witnessed moving scenes where Vietnamese volunteers and Cambodian people were reluctant to part from each other. Playing the same old trick, however, the Beijing authorities deliberately distorted the true meaning of withdrawal of Vietnamese troops instead of looking reality in the face. It is not at all surprising that Beijing did so. This is because Beijing is engaged in an anti-Vietnam conspiracy in the name of the Cambodia queston. [Passage indistinct]

The so-called second obstacle is the carrying out of provocations by Vietnam against China. Facts have proven and even Chinese media have pointed out that in the world there is no such thing as a small fish eating a big one.

At the beginning of this rambling talk, we summed up the situation along the Vietnamese-Chinese border since the start of the International Peace Year. We have every reason to reach the conclusion that the Beijing authorities are again playing the same old trick of a thief crying: Stop thief! Facts once again show that before the Beijing authorities stop their anti-Vietnam policy, there will be no peace along the Vietnamese-Chinese border, and it will not be possible to normalize relations between the two countries.

NHAN DAN EDITORIAL ON PRODUCTION ACCELERATION

[NHAN DAN 14 June editorial: "The Most Pressing and Basic Task Is To Accelerate Production]

[Text] After strongly affirming the fundamental spirit and content of the eighth plenum resolution to be of correct and profund revolutionary significance, the 10th plenum of the party Central Committee, fifth term, set forth a number of pressing tasks concerning prices, wages, and money with the aim of systematically stabilizing the socioeconomic situation.

The most pressing and basic measure is to accelerate agricultural, industrial, and small industry and handicrafts production along with renovating the mechanism of economic management and stepping up socialist trnasformation. Naturally, efforts must be made in every field of production to settle different issues simultaneously -- from forging an identity of awareness and ideology to improving management, applying scientific-technological innovations, building material-technical bases, and adopting rational policies on investment, prices, collection, and purchase. Nevertheless, as an immediate step, we must seek by every means to mobilize with maximum effort all the existing supplies and raw materials of all the various sectors and localities, production and business establishments, and of both the state and the people for use in production. Special attention must be given to encouraging and creating conditions for all sectors and localities, first of all the capital of Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City, to step up the production of grain and food, consumer goods essential to the people's life, and merchandise for export.

A decisive point is that we must do our best to balance in the planning process the various types of supplies needed in agricultural production, mainly all fertilizer and insecticides, as well as the energy, supplies and raw materials for industrial and small industry and handicrafts production. Supplies must be inventoried immediately to ensure enough supplies for production. The state must exercise unified control over supplies, claim a monopoly in the trading of strategic supplies, and definitely prohibit the various sectors and localities from dealing in state supplies under all forms, including through joint business and integration, to earn a profit from price differentials. The supply of various types of materials must be carried out by appropriate centers at both the central and local levels to ensure that they are distributed directly and promptly to production units according to plans via the shortest routes and at the least expense, without going to unnecessary intermediary links. This can be done by combining material supply with transportation. Material supply organizations are duty-bound to sign economic contracts and fully honor all the provisions therein to meet the production schedules, with priority given to key enterprises and major areas, including the capital of Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City.

Although our economy is still running short of supplies and raw material, if all that is readily available at home and through imports is placed under tight control and if all sectors and echelons adopt good work methods and a high sense of responsibility, production establishment may receive the necessary supplies and raw materials to maintain production.

Fully understanding the spirit of the party Central Committee's 8th, 9th, and 10th plenums and the various resolutions of the Political Bureau, all sectors, localities, and enterprises are responsible for putting to good use supplies and raw materials and for striving to accelerate production with ever-increasing productivity, quality, and efficiency to contribute to fulfilling the 1986 state plan successfully.

The organization and operation of the planning, material supply, home trade, foreign trade, financial, banking, price, labor, and wage sectors must be consolidated in order to realistically help the basic units step up their production and business activities. All sectors and echelons, the working class, and all laboring people in our country should respond to the appeal of the party Central Committee's 10th plenum by striving hard to carry out the emulation movement for productive labor and thrift, renovating management, and producing marketable goods in great quantities so as to contribute to stabilizing the market and prices and the socioeconomic situation and score achievements to welcome the sixth party congress.

MUSLIM PARTY 'ID AL-FITR GREETINGS MESSAGE

BK121338 (Clandestine) Voice of Malayan Democracy in Malay 1215 GMT 9 Jun 86

['ID al-Fitr greetings from the Muslim Brotherhood Party of Malaya Central Committee: "Let Us Further Develop the Patriotic and Democratic Spirit and Defeat the Barisan Nasional Regime")

[Text] May peace be on all honorable Muslim brothers and sisters. In conjunction with blessed 'Id al-Fitr on 1 Shawwal 1406 Hegira [9 June 1986], the Central Committee of the Muslim Brotherhood Party of Malaya, PAPERI, sincerely extends most honorable greetings to all PAPERI members, Muslim brothers and sisters, and Muslim soldiers of the 10th Regiment as well as from other regiments of the Malayan People's Army. We pray that the Almighty bestow his blessings on all.

We are proud to celebrate the blessed 'Id al-Fitr this year, because throughout this year of 1406 Hegira, the Muslim community, especially the Malays who support just policies and the patriotic and democratic struggle in the country, have advanced tremendously. The struggle against incorrect policies has spread to all parts of the country and is being carried out by supporters at all levels. Although the Muslim community in our country faces many obstacles in carrying out its struggle, its determination and tenacious efforts have emerged as the willpower of the firm and solid unity that is being formed among them.

On the other hand, externally the United Malays National Organization [UMNO]-led Barisan Nasional regime is depending on foreign monopoly capitalism and has contracted huge foreign loans. Internally, the regime has devastated the natural resources of the country and is going all out to promote the economy of comprador bureaucratic capitalism. As a result, the people must bear the burden of shouldering a heavy debt while the country's economy is weakening due to the economic crisis of the capitalist world. The plunge in prices of primary commodities has decreased the income of the people; especially the rural community. Life is becoming more miserable for them. Many factories have laid off their workers or cut their wages. The increasing number of factory closures has caused more unemployment. These factors have kept the Muslim community from celebrating 'Id al-Fitr joyously. We express our deep sympathy on this matter.

Experience has shown our Muslim community, expecially the Malays, the clear characteristics of the UMNO reactionary clique that oppresses and exploits the people. Specifically, the clique uses the Malays' name as an excuse for regulations, abuses its power, and uses corrupt practices and misappropriations to enrich itself. Moreover, the members of Mahathir's family and his trusted allies have seized the opportunity to fill important posts in the government, the armed forces, and the economic sector, making them multimillionaires. There is no denying the fact that the Mahathir clique is engaged in the abuse of power, corruption, misappropriation, and breach of trust by existing under the guise of its call for a clean, efficient, and trustworthy government. Our Muslim community, expecially the Malays, have realized that they must defeat the UMNO-led Barisan Nasional government so that the people in the country can live in peace, security, and prosperity. To achieve this objective, the various patriotic and democratic movements must join forces to form a broad united front and struggle to establish a patriotic and democratic coalition government in the country.

Honorable Muslim brothers and sisters! Our prophet Mohamed -- peace and blessings be upon him -- has reiterated that Islamic teachings are lofty, and no other religious teachings can be compared to them. Therefore, it is very important for us to hold on to the prophet's tradition. The prophet says, among other things, God places the Islamic religion above others by basing it on justice. God has ordered all rulers to be fair in governing the country. God has commanded that one should be just and be involved in activities to ensure welfare, and the concept of Islam is God above all and equality among men. Thus, from here, we can see that the true values of Islam are tolerance, living in peace with other groups, and eradicating poverty and corruption. However, the practice of the UMNO-led Barisan Nasional government is contradictory to these Islamic principles.

Since Mahathir and Musa [2-M] took over the government, they have been boasting about the so-called insertion of Islamic values in the implementation of government policies.

The main objective of the 2-M clique is to cheat the Muslims and the Malays in the country, strengthen its powers, suppress and oppress the people, and gain still greater power. As a result, the 2-M clique caused the BMF [Bumiputera Malaysia Finance] scandal, created friction over the constitutional amendment bill, tried to usurp the powers of the paramount ruler and his brouther rulers, suppressed religious leaders, and killed Muslims. Mahathir put power over the Islamic Center for Islamic Studies in the Prime Minister's Department and used it to intervene in the country's religious affairs. By doing this, he limited the paramount ruler's office in carrying out his responsibilities to the nation. Mahathir and Musa forced the people to respect them. Only those who support this clique are said to be true, faithful Muslims. On the other hand, those who do not agree with the Barisan Nasional are considered wrongdoers in the eyes of religion. All Muslims in the country who oppose reactionary policies are branded as following wrong teachings, slurred and disgraced, arrested and incarcerated,and even murdered. Anyone in his right mind will surely be greatly disturbed and angered by the cruelty of Mahathir and Musa in the Padang Terap by-election, where they ordered their hoodlums to beat, attack, and kill people who support the opposition party. To aggravate the people's feelings further, they ordered their armed police to carry out the bloody murder of Uztaz Ibrahim Mahmud, who was loved by the Muslim community, as well as his supporters. Most of the Muslim community thought Ibrahim Mahmud and his 13 followers, who were murdered by Mahathir and Musa, were martyrs who defended the Islamic faith. But the reationary regime that branded Ibrahim Mahmud a criminal and so on is only trying to cover up its misdeeds.

Even with the screening of the videotape on the Memali incident, the reactionary regime cannot hide its lies, the police forces' brutality towards women and children, and the murder of Muslims.

Through the Islamic center, Mahathir ordered the Kedah State Religious Council to issue an announcement that Uztaz Ibrahim Mahmud and his 13 followers did not die as martyrs and forced the National Religious Council's committee to support the announcement. By so doing, it disgraced the martyrs' brave deeds to defend the Islamic faith. However, the people of our country, especially the patriotic and democratic Muslims who treasure justice, totally disagree with the religious council's announcement. Moreover, all are aware that only God knows who has deviated from His teachings and who has followed the true course. God has said: Behold, those who are faithful! No group shall disgrace another, for those who have been disgraced are the most honorable of all! Muslims in the country belong to the Sahfi'ai sect whose leader, according to historical fact, was detained by the Yemeni authorities who framed him for spreading false teachings and tortured him. He was the sectarian leader who defended the Islamic faith.

Beloved Muslim brothers and sisters! Besides suppressing and oppressing the people, the reactionary UMNO clique is still preening its fathers over taking care of the people and their interests. They still consider themselves champions who have injected Islamic values and defended the Muslim community's interests as well as those of the Malays. But the Memali incident has shattered their so-called image as champions. Those faithful, patriotic, and democratic Muslims and the Malays who love this country very dearly can surely see clearly the role of the antipeople UMNO clique, who represent only the interests of the bureaucratic comprador capitalists. Mahathir and his kind are power crazy and look only after their very own interests. They even violate God's teachings simply to fill their pockets with riches. Corruption and deviation are obvious in the Barisan Nasional government, and Mahathir is clearly seen defending corruption. He exerted every effort to cover up the BMF loan scandal and obstructed investigations. This has been a continuous topic among the people and contradicts his slogan of a clean efficient, and trustworthy government. If the outcome of the loan scandal is not exposed to the people and those responsible are not brought to justice, no matter how Mahathir manipulates the issue he will surely face very strong opposition from the people. The UMNO bureaucratic comprador capitalist ruling clique will surely defend its greedy and heinous role for its own ends.

During the last general elections, Minister for Culture, Youth, and Sports Mokhtar Hashim murdered Mohamed Taha. Jalil Ibrahim, who knew of the nefarious activities regarding the BMF loan scandal, was also brutally murdered. There were numerous other political actions by previous prime ministers, including Malaysia's father of independence who ousted Agriculture Minister Aziz Ishak. Education Minister Abdul Rahman Talib abused his authority. Mahathir, too, had abused the power vested in him. The father of development also brought down the father of independence form his various political positions. Now the power struggle between Mahathir and Musa has resulted in a crack in the 2-M relationship.

After experiencing a terrible loss in the Sabah State Legislative Assembly general elections, Mahathir spontaneously announced his cabinet reshuffle to ensure that his trustworthy companions are strongly positioned in the cabinet so that at any time they can retaliate aggessively against the Musa clique. From various incidents, people are becoming more aware that Mahathir and Musa represent only the interests of the Malay bureaucratic comprador capitalists, and they will surely never defend the people's interests.

Patriotic and democratic power around the globe is widening. The Afghan mujihidin have strongly attacked Soviet troops and their puppet regime. Patriotic and democratic Cambodian forces and people are continuously driving out the Vietnamese intruders. The joint effort taken by the Philippine opposition parties had toppled the dictatorial Marcos regime. These actions form a strong encouragement for the patriotic and democratic forces in their struggle against any dictator.

The Parti Bersatu Sabah [PBS] dissolved its state Legislative Assembly to hold a general elections in a bid to [word indistinct] the Mahathir clique. Although PBS faced numerous obstacles, it finally achieved a resounding victory in the general elections by winning 34 of the 48 legislative assembly seats, indicating that it has secured more than a two-thirds majority. Candidates running for the PBS took some 57.17 percent of the vote. The Mahathir clique's conspiracy to topple PBS was unsuccessful, indicating that the people stand united to struggle strongly and topple the reactionary force.

Beloved Muslim brothers and sisters! In conjunction with the esteemed 'Id al-Fitr celebration, we must hoist high the banner of traditional Islamic socialism! We must kindle the patriotic and democratic spirit and further unite all patriotic and democratic forces, finding a common cause in toppling the Barisan Nasional government. We must form a broader united front along with a coalition government consisting of patriotic and democratic forces. Only by forming a coalition government will we be able to defend the people's interests and democratic rights. We must also abolish the iron-fisted acts that suppress the people, end the antipeople war carried out by the reactionary regime, create a prosperous and peaceful situation to improve the nation's economy, upgrade the people's living standards, and eradicate poverty.

Let us strongly unite and struggle for the sake of this joint effort and objective and may God shower His blessings on our effort. Unite and struggle and we will surely be victorious! May peace be unto you!

Signed: Muslim Brotherhood Party of Malaya Central Committee

GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION PROPOSAL SENT TO AQUINO

HK170744 Quezon City NEW DAY in English 16 Jun 86 pp 1, 15

[By Daisy Cl. Mandap]

[Text] President Corazon C. Aquino is expected to announce this week the abolition of several ministries and the creation of several agencies.

The revamp, recommended by the Presidential Commission on Government Reorganization [PCGR], involves the abolition of the Ministry of Human Settlements [MHS], the Ministry of Energy and the Ministry of Information; and the creation of various commissions for arts and culture, sports, the urban poor, rural development, the tribal minorities and the Muslims.

The PCGR's recommendations are contained in 30 volumes, while two other volumes discuss the general principles underlying the endorsements.

According to one of PCGR's top officials, education deputy minister Victor Ordonez, the two volumes on the general principles have already been submitted to Presient Aquino, but those on the recommendations will be turned over later. "We want the officials to agree on the general principles first before we submit the 30 volumes on the different ministries and offices," Ordonez said.

Among the guidelines used by the PCGR in adopting the recommendations, said Ordonez, was a determination of whether an officer or a ministry performs functions that strictly conform to its objectives.

Studies were also made on the different government agencies that can already be turned over to the private sector, said Ordonez. Privatization, according to him, is one of the primary thrusts of the reorganization scheme.

For these reasons, the MHS will soon be abolished to give way to a Ministry of Housing. Ordonez said the new ministry will limit itself to "just building houses."

Under the old set-up, at least 13 agencies were found to have operated under the direct control of the MHS. Of these, only six were involved in housing. The rest, were into an assortment of activities, like the Cultural Center of the Philippines, the Intramuros Project, the National Commission on the Role of Filipino Women, the Technology Resource Foundation and the Sacobia Development Authority. The result, said Ordonez, is that only about 20 percent of the MHS's functions will be performed by the new ministry.

The Ministry of Energy [MOE] is another office that will be abolished upon the approval of the PCGR recommendations. The plan is to turn the MOE into an agency attached to the Ministry of Natural Resources, "where it rightfully belongs." According to Ordonez, the energy ministry was formed during the oil crunch of the '70s, when the situation was so critical that its creation was deemed necessary. But having long passed that stage, the government needs to clip the ministry's powers a bit, said Ordonez.

Another office up for dissolution is the Ministry of Information. While official announcement of its fate is yet to be made, Information Minister Teodoro Locsin Jr. has informed the press of the plan. Locsin, told beforehand of the recommendations, reportedly asked that he be made to announce the dissolution himself, so as not to make it appear that he was being booted out.

As to why the MOI was recommended for dissolution, Ordonez said it was thought that its functions could be performed ably enough by a press office and a national communication agency that will be attached to the Office of the President.

Streamlining, from the point of view of the PCGR, does not only mean abolition of agencies or divestment of some functions. Ordonez said it also means the creation of commissions that will take care of concerns previously integrated into other ministries or agencies.

One of such commissions being pushed by the PCGR is that on arts and culture. Recently, talks had it that the President nixed the idea of a Ministry of Culture because "the government does not have money for it."

Ordonez is quick to dispel this. Lack of funds, according to him, was never considered a good enough excuse for not setting up an agency necessary for government organization. "With culture in particular, the government should not be considered a milking cow," he said.

It is also on the principle of sound organization that the other commissions -- on sports, urbon poor, rural development, the tribal minorities and the Muslims -- had been conceived. All these recommendations are but a small part of the work done by the PCGR over the last three months. Ordonez said the work was done mainly in consultation with the officials and employes of the offices concerned and the general public.

To get expert advice, the different organizations affected by each office under study were consulted. Letters were also sent to other interest groups, urging them to help formulate the recommendations. A national hearing on the planned government revamp was also held in Metro Manila to get as many diverse views as possible. Still, Ordonez said the PCGR recommendations will not result in immediate changes in the governmental set-up. "Only in the long run will some fundamental changes take place because of the recommendations," he said.

[Text] The Education Ministry is racing for three expected problems when schools open on Monday. Education Minister Lourdes Quisumbing said the problems are the threatened sectoral strike by students against the tuition fee hike, the shortage of textbooks, and the lack of classrooms to accomodate all public school students. Despite the problems, however, Mrs Quisumbing said she is hopeful that the opening of schools will be smooth. She said she has conferred with all concerned and was assured of their cooperation. She noted that public schoolteachers have agreed to defer their strike threat.

CON-COM TO FORMALLY DROP CLAIM TO SABAH

[By Tara S. Singh]

[Text] The Constitutional Commission (Con-Com) is set to drop the Sabah claim by formally adopting the provision of the 1973 Constitution on national territory, sources said yesterday.

Sources said a consensus was arrived at to incorporate the 1973 Constitution definition of national territory providing "all other territories belonging to the Philippines by historic rights or legal title" in the new constitution "within the week."

One commissioner who declined identification, said: "With the settlement of the Sabah question, our work will not be bogged down by noncontroversial proposals."

Earlier, several leading Con-Com members said the continued Philippine claim on Sabah is an "exercise in futility and the body does not have the necessary facilities to settle the issue." According to these commissioners, the earlier the Sabah issue is settled, the Philippines and Malaysia can achieve a better and closer relationship.

The Philippines laid claim to Sabah as being part of the Sulu Sultanate. The Philippine Congress declared in 1950 that Sabah is part of the country's territory. But former President Marcos renounced this claim in 1977. However, Malaysia insists that renunciation of the claim be incorporated formally in the Philippine Constitution.

The Sabah question was highlighted once again when Commissioner Hilario Davide Jr filed a resolution proposing that Sabah be expressly included a Philippine territory in the new Constitution.

Con-Com sources said the body is expected to approve the provision on the bill of rights and other noncontroversial proposals as soon as possible. The present bill of rights is one of the best and it cannot be improved upon, Con-Com president Cecilia Munoz-Palma said earlier.

The disposition of the two provisions will hasten the work of the Con-Com. Commissioners Christian Monsod and Gregorio Tingson believed that the bill of rights and the national territory provisions are "noncontroversial and can be disposed of immediately." The provisions are part of the noncontroversial matters to be included in the new constitution.

The Con-Com has adopted a system that will take up noncontroversial matters first and then tackle the controversial proposals later. In doing this, the Con-Com may meet its deadline set on Sep 2 to finish the drafting of the new constitution.

Another important resolution filed filed by Commissioner Felicitas Aquino seeks to define and reorient the role of the Armed Forces of the Philippines [AFP] by making the AFP the main force of the defense of the country and the army of the Filipino people." She explained that the AFP of the "old" was misused by the Marcos dictatorship to sustain years of plunder, despotism and misrule. Aquino proposed that the new AFP play a key and decisive role in national healing, reconstruction and insure public security and interest of the people.

2,000 MARCOS LOYALISTS CONTINUE SUNDAY RALLY

HK160446 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 15 Jun 86

[Text] Some 2,000 Marcos loyalists yesterday [15 Jun] continued their weekly protest rally at the Quirino grandstand at the Luneta. The loyalists, led by former Member of Parliament Rafael Recto, again demanded the Aquino government allow the return of deposed President Marcos, who is now in exile in Hawaii. Recto blamed the military and police authorities on the bloody dispersal of the peaceful rally last Sunday at the foot of the Ayala bridge. They accused the soldiers and policemen led by Brigadier General Ramon Montano of starting the violence, which resulted to injuries of many rallyists.

The loyalists were granted rally permit by acting Manila Mayor Mel Lopez to hold a protest action from 1 pm to 5 pm. They arrived at the grandstand on hired buses, jeepneys, and private cars carrying the usual Marcos-Tolentino streamers.

CONTRADICTORY REPORTS FROM AQUINO-GALMAN INQUIRY

'Fake Trial' Desired by Marcos

HK161233 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 1000 GMT 16 Jun 86

[Text] Deputy Tanodbayan Manuel Herrera revealed that former President Marcos asked the judge and prosecutors in the Aquino-Galman murder case to carry out a fake trial and that they would be rewarded if they followed orders. Herrera gave the account to a three-man commission formed to decide on the reopening of the Aquino-Galman murder case. He said that he and Justice Manuel Pamaran were among those summoned by Marcos.

Herrera stated that during their two hour meeting with Marcos, the former president requested that they conduct a moro moro [farce] trial. According to him, before they left, Marcos thanked them for their cooperation and reminded them that he knew how to repay a favor.

ENRILE, RAMOS MEDIATE DIMAPORO FEUD WITH MILITARY

HK170443 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 16 Jun 86

[Text] The Dimaporo-Gutang Feud, which had threatened to erupt into a shooting war in Lanao del Sur, has been settled. Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and AFP Chief of Staff General Fidel Ramos mediated the 3-month old dispute, which had threatened to worsen the peace and order situation in Lanao del Sur.

The controversy between Brigadier General Rodrigo Gutang, who is Region 7 Unified Command chief and former Lanao del Sur Governor Ali Dimaporo was over. More than 1,000 firearms allegedly are still in the hands of Dimaporo's men. Gutang had threatened military action against Dimarporo and the latter vowed to fight. The two protagonists were summoned to a meeting by Enrile at Camp Aguinaldo. In that meeting, they agreed to cooperate in solving the dispute in recovering the firearms and forget their animosity. In settling the dispute, Minister Enrile stressed the objective of the military.

[Begin Enrile recording] The military is not against our people, but rather is there to represent the people. On the other hand, we must equally realize that it is the mission of the military to regain stability in our land [words indistinct] and as much as possible see to it that obedience to the law must be observed by everybody, no matter who they are. HOUSES SAID BURNED BY TROOPS IN KALINGA-APAYAO

[Text] Baguio City -- Eight rice granaries and 10 houses were looted and burned during the search-and-destroy operation from May 24 to 30 allegedly conducted by the 17th Infantry Battallion in an Isneg village in Kagandungan, Luna, Kalinga-Apayao, the Cordillera People's Alliance (CPA) and the Northern Luzon-Human Rights Organization (NI-HRO) claimed.

The CPA and NI-HRO presented two surviving Isneg victims to reporters here Tuesday afternoon. The two, Lando Trompo and Marcelino Gudayan recalled their people's ordeal and human rights violations agains the villagers during the incident.

Aside from burning and looting, nearby villages were bombed and strafed by Tora Tora planes and helicopters last May 23, they claimed. "They (soldiers) poured crude oil on the houses and rice granaries and burned them. They threw into the river the rest of the rice they were unable to burn," the survivors claimed.

The victims said a farmer Pepe Andres, 33, was killed in Kagandungan, while he was feeding his pigs. Four persons were also arrested in that village. They were Purin Balus-ang, Galdo Balus-ang, Celso Mangibunong, and Celepe Magaway.

They also alleged that soldiers ransacked houses looking for food; others butchered two carabaos; and still others destroyed clay pots and other household items. The Isneg victims estimated the damage from the 10 houses which were burned at more than P10,000.

Crops ready for harvest were reportedly destroyed during the military operation, they said. Whatever is left of the crops remained unharvested becasue the farmers are afraid of the military operation, although food is scarce in the village. The Isnegs abandoned their village and settled to a nearby forest in Kagandungan.

Trompo and Gudayan traveled far to reach this city and to report to the members of the human rights committee here, headed by lawyer Guillermo Claver, the plight of the Isneg villagers. The Isnegs, they said, want the government troopers to leave and pay for the damage they did.

RAMOS ACCUSES CPP-NPA OF 'INTENSIFYING' ATTACKS

HK170600 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 0400 GMT 17 Jun 86

[Text] The Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP] and its military arm the New People's Army are taking advantage of the new government's reconciliation policy. This was the statement made by Armed Forces of the Philippines chief General Fidel Ramos in a speech read for him by Brigadier General Manuel Ribo, Regional Unified Command 3 commander, before the Kalinga Bodong Federation at Kalinga Apayao. Bodong is a peace pact aimed to end fighting among tribes in Kalinga.

Ramos said the CPP-NPA is intensifying its attacks in spite of the new government's efforts to achieve unity. According to Ramos, communist-launched attacks followed the half of demonstrations.

PANAY REBEL LEADER INTERVIEWED ON CONSOLIDATION

HK160931 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 5 Jun 86 p 14

[By staff member Benjie Guevarra]

[Text] Despite initial organization and recruitment difficulties, the Communist Party of the Philippines [EPP] and its military arm, the New People's Army, believe it can eventually consolidate its forces in the relatively comfortable island of Panay.

The CPP-NPA regional leadership, also dismissed claims that the February uprising has shifted the support of a majority of the rural population from the far left to the center of the political spectrum.

In an exclusive MALAYA interview, KA [Comrade] Kris, spokesman of the CPP Panay Regional Committee, said the lack of an extensive mass base among local traditional politicians will bar the new government fro winning back the farmers to the political center.

Ka Kris claims to have a strong influence over the regional party which controls 8 CPP districts covering between five to 13 towns each, and the regional operational command, which has jurisidction over three NPA fronts.

Starting its recruitment of NPA regulars only in 1981, or three years after those of the more advanced regional commands such as those in Samar and Negros Occidental, Ka Kris bared a moderate estimate of a company-size armed unit per front this year. This is equivalent to 100 regulars for each of northern, southern and eastern fronts, or roughly 300 armed guerrillas throughout the southern island.

The CPP-NPA spokesman said Aklan, Northern Antique and Western Capiz falls under the northern front; northern Iliolo and Eastern Capiz under the eastern front; and the Iloilo stretch from Lambunao to San Joaquino towns as falling under the southern front.

Ka Kris boasted that the regional CPP-NPA in Panay has political control over 25 to 40 percent of the island's some 1,000 Baranggay, equivalent to "a few hundred thousand of its 2.8 million population. But he conceded that the liberation movement encountered difficulties in mobilizing its forces during the late 1970s, particularly due to the island's self-sufficiency in most agricultural crops.

"It is relatively harder to convince the rural folks on the need to change the status quo in view of their more comfortable lifestyles, unlike in Samar and Negros where the repercussions of a depressed economy have long been severely felt," he said.

But the rebel command in the island is reportedly optimistic that the realignment cannot materialize in the coming months amid the absence of "progressive", non-traditional politicians who can offer to the rural folk a peaceful and legal but still radical alternative.

Citing Iloilo as an example, Ka Kris pointed to the emergence of what could be a moderately progressive group composed of civic and religious leaders like Namfrel [National Citizen's Movement for Free Elections] chief Tony Hechanova and Sister Gertrude Borres of the Assumption Convent. They will provide a credible alternative to the traditional political kingpins like ex-Member of Parliament Fermin Caram Jr. who, he said, has been formerly identified with fallen President Marcos.

"But it will take time for such groups to prove their mettle and wean away rural support from us," that is, assuming they can gather massive public support before endangered traditional blocs trim them down to size for political survival, he said.

Behind such optimism for survival lies, however, a general apprehension over an ambivalent government policy that is sowing a rift among the lower echelons of the rebel movement.

Ka Kris cited, for one, continued military offensive despite President Aquino's call for a six-month truce. The spokesman cited unconfirmed reports that the Regional Unified Command, under the leadership of "hardliner" Brig. Gen. Dionisio Tan Catue, is beefing up the local military strength with the 3d Army Battalion from Cebu. There are presently some 5,000 government troopers from two army battalions, 11 PC [Philippine Constabulary] companies and the local CHDF [Civilian Home Defence Force] units, he said.

Ka Kris claimed that, despite the truce request, military government troops have intensified their operations, such as those in Tapaz, Capiz; Ijajay, Aklan; and Miag-ao, Iloilo. He also described as "divisive" the President's move to hold ceasefire talks in the regional and provincial levels, which is seen as an attempt to sow intrigue among regional leaders and break the national leadership structure.

In Aklan alone, newly-appointed acting Gov Bonifacio Tupaz and his municipal officers-in-charge have started luring local NPA members through their families with a rehabilitation and job opportunity package in exchange for surrender, he disclosed.

These developments, Ka Kris noted, is "reinforcing our belief that the President, despite her 'leftist' leanings, is still vulnerable to pressures from both the U.S. government and local government and military blocs."

Many unit leaders in Panay are already raring to launch a propaganda campaign on the rising "U.S.-Cory dictatorship," he said, but we are restraining them to do so following our tactical error of assessing Cory (Aquino) as a reactionary and boycotting the election."

The CPP-NPA regional officer said local rebel leaders have adopted a sort of "wait-and-see" attitude, giving the President the benefit of the doubt that she is indeed working for national freedom democracy and liberation.

"But our cadres are getting impatient with her failure to implement sweeping reforms despite her revolutionary powers," Ka Kris said as he expressed fears that the failure on the part of Mrs Aquino to maintain popular support will lead to a civil war in one to three years time.

GOVERNMENT LENDING THREATENS ECONOMIC GROWTH

[By Juanito Concepcion]

[Text] The achievement of the targetted 1.5 percent positive economic growth this year will be threatened if national government lending to government financial institutions (GFIs) that will be used to settle their obligations will further increase, reliable government sources disclosed yesterday.

This was confirmed by Budget Minister Alberto Romulo who said in an interview the other night that positive economic growth for the economy is possible this year if the budget deficit will only be from P22 to P26 billion.

But if this deficit figure further rises in case of additional borrowings by GRIs from the government, he indicated that difficulties in achieving economic growth will be encountered as the non-productive portion of the budget to be used for settlement of obligations of GFIs will certainly increase, he said.

The bulk of the projected P22 to P26 billion deficit is being carried mainly to the huge P16.4 billion in equity and net lending that the national government will provide under the 1986 revised budget to the Development Bank of the Philippines, Philippine National Bank and the Philippine Export Guarantee Loan Corp.

When asked if the economy can still achieve positive growth in case of government failure to trim down its lending to GFIs, Romulo said, "We will certainly try. But the bigger net lending to GFIs, the bigger will the the debt service and the bigger will be the non-productive portion of the government budget."

Romulo said it is necessary to have a big slice of the P109.4 to P114 billion 1986 budget allocated for productive undertakings, like capital outlays, to enhance the achievement of growth this year.

Of the P109.4 billion disbursement level for this year, a P67.1 billion level of "economic demand inducing" expenditures have been provided by the government to contribute to the attainment of a P652.2 billion nominal gross national product this year of a 1.5 percent real growth. Romulo, however, indicated that any reduction in this productive portion of the 1986 budget to be used for net lending to GFIs for settlement of their debts can foul up the projected positive growth this year.

ARTICLE EXAMINES FUTURE OF SUGAR MILLS

[By Ma. Victoria A. Gochoco-Perez]

[Text] Only one of the 22 sugar mills financed by Philippine National Bank [PNB] will remain in oepration in the coming 1986-1987 crop year if the country will produce only 1.3 million metric tons of sugar, according to one of three recommendations of the National Economic and Development Authority [NEDA].

This would mean half of the country's 41 mills will be put out of commission. The only mill that NEDA will allow to continue in operation under this particular recommendation is Bukidnon Sugar Milling Cp., Inc. (Busco). The need to mothball many of the sugar mills is "urgent," said NEDA, "given the very low demand for sugar."

In an aide memoire prepared May 26, containing its recommendations on major issues affecting the sugar industry, the NEDA also said the country may opt to produce 200,000 metric tons more than the 1.3 million level for possible export to the world market because of effects of the Chernobyl nuclear plant accident.

In this case, it said, only 15 of the 22 PNB-financed mills will have to be idled: Only Busco, Southern Negros Development Corp., Passi (Iloilo) Sugar Central, Inc., Ormoc-Rosario in Eastern Visayas, Cagayan Sugar Corp., Pampanga Sugar Development Co., and Bicol Sugar Development Corp. are then recommended for continued operation.

For a higher level of reserve sugar of 500,000 metric tons, production will be 1.8 million metric tons and only eight of the 22 PNB-financed mills will have to close. In this case, 14 mills will be allowed to continue operating. In the addition to the previous list of seven mills, the others will be Batangas Sugar Central, Inc., Dacongcogon Sugar and Rice Milling Co., Inc., Calinog-Lambunao Sugar Mill, Inc., Tolong Sugar Miling Co., Inc., Northern Cotabato Sugar Industries, Inc., Davao Sugar Central Co., Inc., and Santos-Lopez.

At a production level of 1.3 million metric tons with 21 mills mothballed, the total rated capacity of the retained mills will be 2.12 million metric tons and the average capacity utilization rate of 61 percent.

At production level of 1.5 million metric tons with 15 mills mothballed, the total rated capacity of the retained mills will be 2.53 million metric tons and the average capacity utilization rate 59.2 percent.

At a production level of 1.8 million metric tons with eight mills mothballed, the total rated capacity of the retained mills will be 2.85 million metric tons and the average capacity utilization rate 60.9 percent.

"The immediate concern of mothballing is to reduce sugar production in crop year 1986-87," NEDA said. "What limits the exercise to this coming crop year is the fact that farms have already been planted to sugarcane."

The NEDA noted that this "condition" suggests a need to maintain, at least for the coming crop year, a mill in a given sugar district where no other mill or mills can absorb the cane supply if the mill is mothballed. The NEDA considered five factors in choosing which mills will be retained or mothballed. These are:

-- Only PNB-financed mills will be considered, because the government "cannot decide" for a fully private mill;

-- To minimize labor displacement, primary targets are PNB-indebted mills operating in "dense" sugar areas where their mothballing would only affect mill workers and not necessarily farm workers;

-- The mills to be retained are those with the highest farm productivity in terms of ton cane per hectare for the last six crop years;

-- The mills to retained also have the highest efficiency in capacity utilization and biggest yield in piculs of sugar per ton cane for the last six crop years; and

-- The mills to be retained should be financially liable in terms of net profit margin, debt service coverage, operating ratio, current and acid-test ratio for the past six crop years.

Under the NEDA's recommendations, eight sugar mills will definitely be mothballed, whichever of the three production targets will be adopted.

These are Nasudeco in Del Carmen, Pampanga which stopped operations this crop year; Asturias in Dumalag, Capiz, Bacolod-Murcia in Bacolod City, Negro Occidental, Sagay in Sagay, Negros Occidental, Agro-Industrial Development Co. of Silay-Saravia, Inc. in Silay, Negros Occidental, MA-AO in Bago City, Negros Occidental, United Planters Sugar Milling Co., Inc. in Majuyod, Negros Oriental and Hideco in Kananga, Leyte.

USSR TO NEGOTIATE GRAVES ISSUE, SAYS ENVOY

[Text] Tokyo, June 17 KYODO -- New Soviet Ambassador Nikolay Solovyev pledged here Tuesday that his country will negotiate seriously with Japan on an early resumption of visits to family graves in the so-called "northern territories" -- four Soviet-controlled islands off Hikkaido -- by former Japanese residents. He made the pledge in a meeting with Japanese Vice Foreign Minister Kensuke Yanagiya, who officially welcomed him to Japan on behalf of Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe, a ministry official said.

Yanagiya told Solovyev that the Japanese Government hopes for an early settlement of the dispute over the resumption of visits to family graves on the islands "from a humanitarian viewpoint," the official said. The issue was one of the key topics discussed between Abe and his Soviet counterpart Eduard Shevardnadze in Moscow last month, along with Japan's claim for the return of the islands, which have been under Soviet control since the closing days of World War II.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, in a meeting with Abe, proposed reciprocal trips to Soviet and Japanese graves in each other's country. Solovyev, 54, said the Soviet leadership spoke highly of Abe's recent trip to Moscow during a recent Politburo meeting, the Japanese Foreign Ministry official said.

Abe's talks with Gorbachev and Shevardnadze were held in "a frank and businesslike atmosphere," the new Soviet ambassador was quoted as telling Yanagiya. Solovyev handed Yanagiya a copy of his credentials, which will be presented to Emperor Hirohito at a future date, the ministry official said.

Solovyev arrived in Tokyo Saturday to take up the post, in succession to former Ambassador Pyotr Abrasimov. Solovyev worked in the Soviet Embassy here between 1966 and 1971, first as second secretary and later as first secretary.

NAKASONE, OPPOSITION LEADERS LAUNCH CAMPAIGNS

OW180401 Tokyo KYODO in English 0311 GMT 18 Jun 86

[Text] Tokyo, June 18 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone vowed Wednesday not to levy large-scale indirect taxes as party leaders kicked off an acrimonious campaign for the July 6 Diet elections. Nakasone, battling to boost the Diet strength of the Liberal-Democratic Party, also declared that he will retain the tax-free "Maru-Yu" system for small time-depositors as he launched the official upper house campaign for the ruling LDP.

The prime minister made the pledges during a start-off ceremony before party faithfuls at the LDP headquarters as he set off for two campaign stops in Tokyo. Official campaigning for the lower house begins on Saturday following candidacy registration.

Nakasone's pledge not to fiddle with the indirect taxation and the popular "Maru-Yu" system was made against the background of opposition strategy to focus on tax as one the major campaign issues.

Japan Socialist Party Chairman Masashi Ishibashi, who has set a direct confrontation with Nakasone as top priority in the JSP, took a swipe at the prime minister in a hard-hitting speech at Nakasone's native Gumma Prefecture. "I've come to Gumma because here [is] the main battlefield of the current campaign," Ishibashi told a crowd of about 1,500 supporters at Maebashi, the prefectural capital.

In a personal attack, Ishibashi called Nakasone "a liar" -- days after Nakasone called the opposition a bunch of "kindergarten kids" who has no way to gain power.

Democratic Socialist Party Chairman Saburo Tsukamoto also seized the tax system in launching the campaign for the centrist opposition party. Speaking before a crowd of morning commuters at the busy Shimbashi Railway, Tsukamoto vowed to stop the LDP from introducing large-scale indirect taxes for financing government deficits.

Leaders of both the ruling and opposition parties took to the road following official candidacy registration with the election management authorities. Both Komeito Chairman Yoshikatsu Takeiri and Japan Communist party Chairman Tetsuzo Fuwa launched their party's campaign from the capital, both training their guns at Nakasone.

In a speech before Komeito supporters Takeiri called for a "stop Nakasone" campaign to bring down the Nakasone government, while Fuwa branded Nakasone a "fascist" in a separate speech. About 500 candidates are expected to enter the race before the one-day registration closes at 5 p.m. At stake are half of the 252 seats in the upper house, 50 of them to be decided through a proportional representation system and 76 from the prefecture-wide local constituencies.

The most crowded field is the big Tokyo constituency where a total of 40 candidates are contesting for four seats, with most of the candidates fielded by minor single-issue parties. The upper house has a fixed six-year term and the remaining half of the seats are not due for reelection until 1989.

The LDP is defending 66 upper house seats in the upcoming election, the JSP 22, Komeito 13, and the DSP and the JCP seven each. The focus of the upcoming elections, political analysts say, is one the lower house, where the LDP faces a spirited challenge from the opposition. The LDP controlled 249 out of the then 511-member lower house at the time of dissolution on June 2. The lower house roster has been increased to 512 following a recent redistribution of Diet seats.

Nakasone, who called for the lower house poll 17 months before the end of its four-year term and timed it to coincide with the upper house election, is aiming to restore his party's Diet strength and its single-party rule.

JSP Stumping in Gumma

OW180407 Tokyo KYODO in English 0334 GMT 18 Jun 86

[Text] Maebashi, June 18 KYODO -- Japan Socialist Party (JSP) Chairman Masashi Ishibashi Wednesday said his party is aiming to put an end to Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's government by winning the July 6 double election of both houses of the Diet.

Ishibashi said the Gumma upper house election district is the major battlefield for his "new" JSP, which is trying to take power from Nakasone's ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP). Ishibashi kicked off his national campaign in front of the Gumma Prefectural government office before a crowd of 1,500 supporters for socialist candidate Giichi Tsunoda, 49, who is running in the two-seat Gumma upper house election district. Tsunoda is running against two strong LDP candidates -- Hirofumi Nakasone, 40, son of the prime minister, and Hiroichi Fukuda, 72, brother of former Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda.

It is the first time for a socialist chairman to kick off a national campaign outside Tokyo ince the "Lockheed" lower house election in 1976 when late JSP chairman Tomomi Narita visited Nagaoka of Niigata Prefecture, the home of former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka a Lockheed payoff trial defendant. Ishibashi said the Nakasone government has been expanding military expenditures in his three and a half years in power by cutting back spending on welfare and education. Ishibashi said the Nakasone government has cut pensions, and for civil servants, and subsidies for local governments while buying battle ships, cannons, tanks and missiles. [sentence as received]

The socialist leader said if the LDP wins the coming election, Nakasone will try to put an end to the "1 percent ceiling" on defense expenditures that limits defense spending to less than 1 percent of Japan's Gross National Product (GNP). He also said Nakasone is taking a passive attitude toward an alleged payoff scandal involving ousted Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos. Ishibashi also said he is against what he calls Nakasone's plan of introducing large-scale sales taxes to conduct direct tax reductions for wage earners.

DSP's Tsukamoto in Tokyo

[Text] Tokyo, June 18 KYODO -- Saburo Tsukamoto, chairman of the Democratic Socialist Party (DSP), kicked off official campaigning for the upper house poll Wednesday, voicing his strong opposition to any indirect tax. Speaking before some 500 people at Tokyo's Shimbashi station, Tsukamoto pledged his moderate opposition party will make all out efforts to prevent the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) moves to impose the across-the-board indirect tax as a new state revenue source to make up for a huge budget deficit that may result from an income tax cut promised by Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's government. Tsukamoto said the LDP will certainly introduce general excise tax if it wins July 6 double parliamentary election, citing remarks made erlier by Masayuki Fujio, chairman of the LDP Policy Research Affairs Council. Tsukamoto described Fujio's remarks as "tucking up his shirts and showing an armor beneath" and assuming a defiant attitude by spilling out his party's true intention to press the people to shoulder increased tax burden after the twin election.

He said the conservative government should carry out a drastic income tax cut to help workers increase their disposal revenues, and to create a new source of government earning by pushing ahead with administrative reforms aimed at reducing the bloated government structure. The DSP chairman also expressed his determination to realize welfare society paying attention to people in need and fighting moves to deteriorate workers' standard of living. Tsukamoto refrained from commenting on a textile industry scandal in which former DSP member Fumio Yokote was said to be implicated and questioned by prosecution authorities. Yokote has denied accepting 2 million yen in bribes from the Japan Federation of Yarn Twister's Association.

TEXT OF KIM IL-SONG'S ANSWERS TO YUGOSLAV PAPER

SK160212 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1200 GMT 14 Jun 86

[Text of DPRK President Kim Il-song's answers to questions raised by the editor in chief of the Yugoslav paper OSLOBODJENJE, given on 20 May 1986 -- read by announcer]

[Text] [Question] Respected Comrade President: From the historical viewpoint, a quarter of a century is a very short period of time. The past 25 years, since the Nonaligned Movement came into being, has been filled with many successful activities of this movement.

What do you think are the successes of the Nonaligned Movement during the past 25 years and what do you view as the most important thing about this movement? What do you expect from the eighth summit meeting of the nonaligned countries, scheduled to be held in Harare?

[Answer] Twenty-five years have passed since state leaders of various countries in the world, including Yugoslavia, raised the banner of the Nonaligned Movement in Belgrade, on the basis of the noble ideals of peace and progress.

As you noted, a period of 25 years is but a moment in the long course of historical development. However, during this period, the Nonaligned Movement has rapidly developed along with the strong tide of the times of independence, and has advanced far.

The Nonaligned Movement has expanded into a movement of a very broad scope converting the globe and has grown to become an organized and influential political force.

Throughout the entire course of its own development, the Nonaligned Movement has tirelessly staged an anti-imperialist struggle for independence. Through this struggle, the Nonaligned Movement has positively contributed to frustrating and crushing the imperialists' policy of aggression and war and to preserving peace in the world, while advocating the sovereign rights of the peoples of the newly emergent countries and vigorously encouraging the struggle of the oppressed people for national liberation.

The Nonaligned Movement is now playing an important role in the international political arena and is now vigorously propelling human history in accordance with the aspirations and demands for independence of the world's progressive peoples.

The stark fact that the Nonaligned Movement, which began its march together with the 25 countries that had obtained independence, has now been expanded into a broad global movement comprising some 100 newly emergent countries and that its influence over the course of the world's revolutionary changes and over the development of the international situation has been incomparably strengthened is a clear testimony to the great growth and development achieved by the Nonaligned Movement.

What is most important now in developing the Nonaligned Movement is for the nonaligned countries to firmly maintain independence and strengthen unity.

The Nonaligned Movement is a movement developing on the basis of the ideas of independence, as well as a movement designed to realize the people's aspirations and demands for independence.

Opposing domination and subjugation an aspiring for independence is the basis principle of the Nonaligned Movement. Under no circumstances should the nonaligned countries servilely follow or be dragged by any bloc, and they should respect each other's sovereignty and abstain from interfering in the internal affairs of other countres.

Only in this way can the Nonaligned Movement maintain its own inherent characteristic as an independent political force remainig outside any bloc and successfully realize its cause of imbuing the world with independence.

Unity is the source of all strength and a fundamental guarantor of all victories. Strengthening the unity of the Nonaligned Movement has emerged as a more important problem in connection with the imperalists' strengthened maneuvers to divide and create dissention among the nonaligned countries.

The nonaligned countries should give priority to unity, subject everything to this, and unite firmly with each other, transcending differences in social systems, political views, and religions. The nonaligned countries should always positively support and encourage each other and stay in step with each other in the internal arena.

The eight summit meeting of the nonaligned countries is to be held in Harare, the capital city of Zimbabwe, in August of this year. The world's progressive people, including the peoples of the nonaligned countries, are wholeheartedly welcoming, with great expectations and deep concern, the convocation of the eight summit meeting of the nonaligned countries in Harare, the capital city of Zimbabwe, which is vigorously marching under the banner of the anti-imperialist cause for independence.

The Harare summit meeting is to be held at a time when the world's proressive people, including the peoples of the nonaligned countries, are faced with such pressing tasks as further expanding and developing the Nonaligned Movement and, in particular, vigorously staging the antiwar and antinuclear peace movement. Because of the imperialists' policy of war and reckless arms race, agressive military base and many nuclear weapons are deployed in every corner of the world.

Some 1,000 U.S. nuclear weapons of various types have been deployed in South Korea alone. In fact, South Korea has been turned into a large U.S. nuclear storage base.

Under circumstances in which a large number of nuclear weapons have been deployed in many parts of the world, if a war breaks out, wherever it may be, it can easily escalate into a global nuclear war.

In order to prevent a new world war, a thermonuclear war, and to save mankind from a nuclear holocaust, it is imperative to dismantle aggressive militry bases in various parts of the world, including South Korea; remove nuclear weapons; and, going one step further, do away with all nucelar weapons completely. The Nonaligned Movement should, as a matter of course, pay closest attention to this important and pressing problem.

We hope that the Harare summit meeting will be held successfully through the joint efforts of all the nonaligned countries in a way that greatly contributes to settling such pressing questions facing or time and the Nonaligned Movement as adhering to the fundamental principle of the nonaligned movement, vigorously promoting the antiwar and antinuclear peace movement, and promoting South-south cooperation and establishing a new international economic order.

We also hope that the forthcoming summit meeting will be an important occasion to give powerful encouragement to the frontline countries and all the African people in their struggle against the policy of apartheid and the aggressive acts of the South African racists, for the complete liberation of Africa, and in defense of their national independence and sovereignty.

Our Government of the Republic is attaching great significance to the eighth summit meeting of the nonaligned countries to be held in Harare and will make every possible effort to make this meeting a success.

[Question] It is a characteristic of the present era that the aggressive maneuvers of the major powers for the preservation and expansion of their spheres of influence are expanding with each passing day. The nonaligned countries and developing countries are receiving the greatest pressure because of the major powers' maneuvers for competition.

What do you think is the most effective method to thwart the major powers' aggressive maneuvers for the preservation and expansion of their spheres of influence?

[Answer] In the international arena today, the major imperialist powers' aggressive maneuvers for competition for the preservation and expansion of their spheres of influence are continuing without interruption and they are further expanding with the passage of time.

The main targets of the major powers' maneuvers for competition for the preservation and expansion of their spheres of influence are the nonaligned countries and the developing countries, and it is none other than these countries that are the main victims of such maneuvers.

The imperialists are now committing, without letup, armed intervention in and subversive and destructive activities against the nonaligned countries and developing countries for the preservation and expansion of their spheres of influence, while cunningly scheming to hold onto these countries politically, economically, and militarily.

The barbarous U.S. bombing raid on Libya in mid-April, which provoked strong protest and indignation from the word's peace-loving people, clearly showed the ignominious and reckless stage reached by the imperialists' aggressive and interventionist maneuvers against the nonaligned countries and developing countries advancing toward independence.

Because of the imperialists' maneuvers to preserve and expand their spheres of influence, a grave situation in which national independence and the sovereign rights of the nonaligned countries and developing countries are successively being ruthlessly trampled underfoot is taking place. Also, because of this, peace and stability are being detroyed and the tense international situation is being exacerbated in various parts of the world.

I think the most effective way to check and frustrate the imperialist, aggressive maneuvers for the preservation and expansion of their spheres of influence is for the nonaligned countries and all anti-imperialist forces to form a broad united front and, in step with each other, vigorously stage an anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle.

Without the anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle, the nonaligned and the newly emergent countries cannot defend their own national independence and sovereign rights.

The nonaligned countries and newly emergent countries should never allow themselves to be taken in by the imperialists' tricks of diguise aimed at cloaking their nature as aggressors, nor should they reach unprincipled compromise with imperialism.

The nonaligned countries and newly emergent countries should thoroughly expose, condemn, and foil the imperialists' policy of aggression and intervention by standing firmly against imperialism, and give active support in every possible form, including military support, to the peoples who are fighting against imperialist aggression and intervention. They should also actively struggle to have the aggressive imperialist military bases in the territories of other countries and foreign troops withdrawn.

[Question] According to some preliminary estimates, the world will spend $1 trillion for the production of weapons and overall military expenditures this year. If this tremendous amount of material wealth were used for social delelopoment, poverty and destitution would be removed from the earth. What do you think the nonaligned will be able to do in this field?

[Answer] The imperialists, who invariably follow a wild desire for world supremacy, are heatedly bent on the arms race and escalating the expansion of armaments annually while undisguisedly adhering to the policy of strength. In particular, the United States recently further aggravated the arms race, even coming out with the Strategic Defense Initiative.

While a tremendous amount of wealth produced with the blood and sweat of peoples is being squandered on increasing destructive war means in some developed capitalist countries, including the United States, the peoples of many developing countries are languishing in extreme poverty and starvation at present. This is a serious contradiction of the present times and a grave problem facing mankind.

As you have correctly pointed out, if the huge amount of wealth disbursed in military expenditures were spent for social development, poverty and destitution would be removed from the earth. The arms race must no longer be continued. Furthermore, the social assets created by the popular working masses should be spent on promoting the welfare of the peoples and the common interests of society.

The nonaligned countries should unite and powerfully wage the joint struggle to oppose the war policy of the imperialists and to check and frustrate the maneuvers for the arms race and the expansion of armaments.

Military blocs are a constant factor that gives rise to the arms race. Under the condition in which military blocs confront each other, the arms race cannot but be continued. The nonaligned countries must actively struggle to dissolve all military blocs.

When the military blocs are dissolved and the maneuvers of the imperialists for aggression and arms buildup are ended, mankind will become free from the heavy burden of military expenditures and more of the wealth that has been produced by the creative labor of the peoples will be used for the promotion of their own welfare and social progress.

[Question] Countless unsolved problems, including even problems that are settled only by armed confrontations in some regions, have been handed down from the past to the present world. What do you think the nonaligned countries should do to remove or peacefully settle these disputes?

[Answer] The problem regarding disputes occurring between newly emerging countries in the international arena at present is an outcome of the colonial system. As a consequence of the colonial rule of the imperialists, varius disputes are frequently occurring between newly emerging countries and, within a region, they are bringing about a partial armed clash or even spreading into a war. Because of this, the Nonaligned Movement is being hindered from waging a joint anti-imperialist struggle for independence with a united force and peoles are suffering from disaster.

The problem regarding disputes between newly emerging countries should not be solved in such a way as to exercise armed force. However serious it may be, the problem regarding disputes between newly emerging countries is a problem between those countries that fight together for a common purposes. Therefore, the problem of disputes between newly emerging countries should be thoroughly [odikkajina] solved on the basis of the principle of mutual understanding and unity and in a peaceful way.

The nonaligned countries must refrain from any action that may aggravate the disputes between newly emerging countries or lead them to military conflicts. Also, they must not unilaterally support or oppose any one side in connection with the disputes between newly emerging countries.

If outside forces intervene in disputes between individual countries and support or oppose any one side, the disputes will be further aggravated and, furthermore, the grave result of dividing the Nonaligned Movement can be brought about.

The nonaligned countries should always take an impartial stand and help newly emerging countries settle their disputes themselves in a peaceful way in conformity with the interests of both sides and the demands of the unity of the Nonaligned Movement and the cause of world peace.

[Question] The nonaligned countries are making great efforts to establish a new and fair international economic order. What do you think are the most effective activities of the nonaligned countries toward realizing this purpose?

[Answer] The nonaligned countries have long struggled to smash the old international economic order and establish a new and fair international economic order. Thanks to the active struggle of the nonaligned countries, declarations and programs for action with regard to the establishment of a new international economic order have already been adopted and relevant measures have been taken at a special session of the UN General Assembly and many other international conferences; additionally, many kinds of international cooperative organs have been organized. This becomes an encouraging success in the struggle of the nonaligned peoples to establish a new international economic order.

Because of the wrong stand and attitude of the United States and other developed capitalist industrial countries trying to sustain the old international economic order as it is, however, the struggle of the peoples of the nonaligned countries has not attained deserving fruition.

The summit talks of the seven Western industrialized countries held in Tokyo some time ago clearly showed once again that, to maintain their monopolistic status and realize an aggressive wild desire, the imperialists are unhesitatingly perpetrating the brigandish act of encroaching upon the economic interests of other countries, including the developing nations, and of trampling sovereignty underfoot.

The struggle to establish a new international economic order is an international cause aimed at realizing the common interests of the peoples of the developing countries. Success in this struggle can be attained only by the united strength of the nonaligned countries.

The nonaligned countries must firmly unite with each other and staunchly struggle to smash the old inequitable international economic order and to establish a new international economic order based on the principle of independence, equality, and reciprocity.

We consider that the most effective way to remove the old international economic order and establish a new international economic order at present is to strengthen South-South cooperation. South-South cooperation is new international economic relations between developing countries. Developing countries have vast human resources, boundless natural resources, and more than a little good experience and technology that they can exchange with each other. If the nonaligned and other developing countries widely conduct economic and technological cooperation and exchange by correctly using this possibility, they will not only successfully build self-reliant national economics, but also build up collective strength to withstand any economic pressure from the developed capitalist industrialized countries.

If the nonaligned countries develop capabilities for countering and negotiating with the developed capitalist industrialized countries and struggle on the basis of these capabilities, they will make it impossible for the imperialists to continue to force the old unfair economic relations on the developing countries.

The developed capitalist industrialized countries cannot survive without relying on raw materials and fuel from developing countries. When the imperialists have no other way out of a predicament, they will be compelled to comply with the demand of the developing countries, whether they want to or not .

The nonaligned countries must adopt effective measures to strengthen South-South cooperation through joint consultation and make active efforts to implement them. it would be good to begin South-South cooperation first in the field of agriculture, which is rising as an urgent but solvable problem in reality, and expand it gradually, solving problems one by one.

The Government of our Republic will make all efforts to expand and develop South-South cooperation and to establish a new international economic order by pooling strength with the nonaligned countries.

[Question] The principle of self-reliance is becoming a dominant one in the economic policies of the nonaligned countries. The DPRK has achieved great success in the revolution and construction and the economic development of the country by thoroughly embodying the chuche idea, put forth by you, and by consistently adhering to the principle of self-reliance. What do you think are the most important successes attained in your country? What are the prospects for the future basic economic development in your country, and what are they based on?

[Answer] Self-reliance is, in a word, the revolutionary spirit of independent men pioneering their destinies with their own strength and a fighting principle. Self-reliance is a trait of the revolutionary people that is manifested on the basis of firm belief in the justness of their cause and revolutionary optimism.

Being self-reliant means solving all problems arising in the revolution and construction by believing in one's own strength and relying upon one's strength, and is basically the opposite of the weak attitude of depending on others, of yielding to difficulties, and of giving up struggle and the lukewarm attitude of idly waiting for the creation of favorable conditions.

If they are self-reliant, the people can carry out any difficult work; if they lose the spirit of self-reliance and depend on others, they can conduct no work. During the past, our party, the Government of the Republic, and our people have thoroughly embodied the chuche idea in all fields of the revolution and construction and have consistently adhered to the revolutionary principle of self-reliance, thus making it possible for them to achieve great success in socialist construction.

Our country, which was very backward in the past, has been changed into the independent, self-reliant, and self-defending socialist country of today. This is precious fruition attained as a result of our people's arduous but heroic struggle through the demonstration of the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance. The greatest success achieved by our people in socialist economic construction is that they have removed the root cause of age-old backwardness and poverty and have built a self-reliant socialist national economy for the prosperity and thriving of the nation and the happiness of all generations to come.

Our people's struggle to build a self-reliant national economy was waged under very difficult conditions. A backward and crippled colonial economy was handed down from the old society to our people, and even that was utterly destroyed by the war, which lasted for 3 years. After the war, we could not but newly launch economic consruction in the empty land where nothing existed. At that time, we lacked materials and funds, and did not have many technological cadres in the nation. This notwithstanding, our people have established heavy industry with the machine-building industry as a core, have constructed numerous light industrial plants, and have built towns and rural villages with their own strength and technology, bravely overcoming pending difficulties and obstacles by giving full play to the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance. We have further perfected the inner structures of the various fields of the national economy and have even further improved the level of its technical provisions by successfully carrying out many prospective plans.

Today the potentials of our country's self-reliant national economy are very enormous. Our country, which was not able to manufacture even a simple farm implement properly in the past, is readily producing such modern machinery and equipment as precision machines, large mining equipment, heavy-duty vehicles, large tractors, electric locomotives, large ships, a 10,000-ton power press, and a large oxygen plant. Also, our country guarantees the production of the equipment of modern plants and enterprises by units.

Our country is pushing ahead vigorously with the work environmental planning, including the construction of the Nampo lockgate, a project of building a dam over a sea of 20 ri on the basis of the firm foundations of a self-reliant national economy, while providing the people with material conditions sufficient for them to eat, clothe themselves, and make purchases. In fact, our people are very proud of having built from nothing such a mighty self-reliant national economy on the basis of their own strength and technology.

As for the prospects for our country's economic development, we are setting a very high goal with regard to it and we are optimistic about putting it into practice.

We are preparing a new prospective plan based on the successes that we have already achieved. We plan to realize the 10 major prospective targets of socialist economic construction put forth by the sixth party congress during the period of the new prospective plan.

The 10 major prospective targets of socialist economic construction are so planned as to produce within the near future 100 billion kwh of electricity a year, 120 million tons of coal, 15 million tons of steel, 1.5 million tons of non-ferrous metal, 20 million tons of cement, 7 million tons of chemical fertilizer, 1.5 billion meters of cloth, 5 million tons of fishery products, and 15 million tons of grain and to reclaim 300,000 chongbo of tideland within the next 10 years.

When the 10 major prospective targets of socialist economic construction are realized, our country will have solemnly entered the ranks of the world's advanced countries in terms of economic development and a decisive advancement will have been made in our people's struggle for the complete victory of socialism.

The 10 major prospective targets of socialist economic construction are scientific and practical targets of struggle established on the basis of the enormous potential for the self-reliant national economy that we have already provided, the rich natural resources in our country, inexhaustible scientific and technological resources, our people's revolutionary spirit of self-reliance, and their never-ending creativity.

For this reason, we are convinced that the 10 major prospective targets of socialist economic construction will be successfully carried out during the period of the new prospective plan.

[Question] The tragedy of the Korean people's national division has already continued for 40 years. We know about the principles for national reunification that you put forward at the Sixth WPK Congress. Your country has been exerting great efforts for reunification. The Korean question has remained an agenda item in the United Nations for a long time. What do you think is the most important question at present to put an end to the division of the Korean peninsula?

[Answer] In order to reunify our country, it is most important at present to thwart the U.S. scheme for the fabrication of two Koreas and create preconditions for reunifying it independently and peacefully in accordance with the aspirations and desire of the Korean people. The United States is responsible for the division of our country and it is the principle obstacle to the reunification of our country.

The United States, which has continued to occupy South Korea by force for 40 years, has not only enforced harsh colonial rule there, but has also schemed in various ways to perpetuate the division of our country by fabricating two Koreas.

The United States has put forth the fabrication of two Koreas as the basis of its present strategy toward Korea. Proceeding from this, the United States is actively protecting the puppet South Korean clique's anticommunist confrontation and fascist military policy, while keeping the situation in our country strained.

The United States has exacerbated the tense situation in our country to the extreme by conducting the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise, the largest ever, in South Korea this year, mobilizing for the exercise some 200,000 troops and a great number of modern war means. For our country to achieve independent and peaceful reunification, the U.S. troops must be withdrawn from South Korea. Under circumstances in which the U.S. troops remain in South Korea, it is impossible to tear down the wall separating the North and South, or to ease the tense situation on the Korean peninsula.

The 30th session of the UN General Assembly held in 1975 adopted a letter of resolution appealing to the parties directly involved in the signing of the Korean Military Armistice Agreement to withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea and to replace the truce agreement with a peace agreement. The United States, however, has not yet carried out the UN resolution. Instead, it is maneuvering to hold South Korea as a permanent colony and military base, while babbling about the nonexistent threat of southward invasion.

Out of a sincere aspiration to get rid of a fundamental obstacle to the settlement of the Korean question and to provide favorable preconditions for realizing an independent and peaceful reunification of Korea, the government of our Republic in 1984 put forward an epochal proposal for holding tripartite talks between us, the United States, and South Korea.

If a peace agreement is signed between our Republic and the United States and if a declaration of nonaggression is adopted between the North and South through the tripartite talks, the U.S. troops will be obliged to leave South Korea, tension on the Korean peninsula will be eased, and North-South relations will improve. Then, our people will be able to reunify the country peacefully be establishing a Democratic Confedral Republic of Koryo through the efforts of the whole nation and a North-South coalition, as proposed by the Sixth WPK Congress.

Still gripped by an anachronistic delusion, the United States ignores our proposal for tripartite talks. Even the persons in authority in South Korea, at U.S. instigation, are continuing to follow the road of betraying the nation by standing in the way of national reunification. However, history will follow the people's aspirations and the trend of the times, and those who go against them are doomed to failure.

Reunifying the country independently and peacefully is the unanimous aspiration of all Korean people. It is also the demand of the world's peace-loving people.

Not only people in the northern half of the Republic, but also all Korean people, including the South Korean people and compatriots abroad, are vigorously struggling to hasten the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland, and the world's progressive people are pospitsively supporting and encouraging this struggle. For this reason, we are firmly convinced that our people's cause of national reunfication will be realized without fail.

[Question] The ideals of the Olympic movement are to promote peace and friendship among peoples. The Olympic Games have embodied such ideas for a long time. What kind of expectations do you have for the Olympic games, which will be held on the Korean peninsula in 1988?

[Answer] As for the 24th Olympiad which is scheduled to be held in Seoul, South Korea, in 1988, they are not a simple sports affair, but are a serious political issue concerning Korea's reunification question.

The decision to hold the 24th Olympiad in Seoul, South Korea, is an outcome of the U.S. policy of two Koreas. Through the Seoul Olympics, the United States and the persons in authority in South Korea are pursuing the impure political goals of embellishing South Korea, a U.S. colony, as an independent state and of perpetuating the division of Korea. For this reason, participating in the Olympic Games to be held in South Korea means approving the U.S. occupation of South Korea and encouraging the maneuvers of the United States and persons in authority in South Korea to perpetuate the division of our country by fabricating two Korea.

In fact, South Korea is not an appropriate place for the Olympic Games. The Olympic Games, whose noble ideals are to promote the world peace and friendship among peoples, should as a matter of course be held in a place where the political situation is stable, democratic freedoms are guaranteed, and a peaceful atmosphere is ensured. However, South Korea is a place where the situation is most tense in the world, and the dangers of a new war constantly hover over it.
